FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Wednesday, October 28, 1992

Meeting — The Debate Club will be holding its weekly meeting at the Debate Trailer, located below Thompson Hall at 7 p.m. Anyone interested is welcome to attend.

Blood Drive — The American Red Cross is sponsoring a blood drive today in the Campus Center Room 101.

Meeting — Students Alliance For Israel meetings have moved to Wednesdays at 7 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Fundraiser — Delta Zeta is holding their second annual 24 hour See-Saw-A-Thon beginning at 8 a.m. at the campus pond and during the night it will move to the corner of Phillip and North Pleasant Street. Proceeds go to the hearing impaired.

Film — The Black Mass Communications Project will be sponsoring the movie, "Mo' Money" in the Campus Center Auditorium. The times will be 5, 7, 9 and 11 p.m. The first show will be $2. and all other shows will be $3.

Lecture — MassPIRG is sponsoring a lecture by Rich McClintock, Policy Analyst for the National Environmental Law Center titled, "Exposing the Lies," at 5:30 p.m. in Room 423B in the Campus Center.

Thursday, October 27, 1992

Lecture — AHORA is sponsoring a lecture by Dr. Antonio Martinez on "Purposes of Torture: Violations of Human Rights and Empowerment of Survivors," at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center room 101.

Group — Chabad House will be having their monthly women's Rosh Chodesh group at the Chabad House, 30 North Hadley Road in Amherst. Call Jill at 256-6695 for more information.

Blood Drive — The American Red Cross is sponsoring a blood drive in the Campus Center room 101.

Mass. police and fire stations operating in serious disrepair

By TRUDY TYNAN
Associated Press

HOLYOKE, Mass. — State legislators Tuesday declared the leaky, plastic draped police station here and the Revere headquarters among the worst in the state.

And they have viewed more than their share of decrepit buildings during visits to police and fire stations in 39 Bay State communities over the past two weeks.

"It's shocking to see what's out there," state Rep. Paul Cannon, D-Springfield, said Tuesday. "And it's not just buildings. We are sending police into the street in cruisers that have 150,000 miles on them and firemen into burning buildings with air packs that are 20 to 25 years old and patched together with spare parts."

Canon, who chairs the House Public Safety Committee said he and state Sen. James Jajuga, D-Methuen, chairman of the Senate Public Safety Commission, decided to take a look for themselves after getting a steady stream of pleas to help out individual communities.

Since the message of the tax limiting Proposition 2 1/2 in 1980 Massachusetts communities have been hard pressed to borrow money for capitol projects and have let public safety needs slide, he said.

The legislators have sent questionnaires to all cities and towns and expect to visit at least another 15 communities before completing their assessment, Nanon said. Eventually, they hope to put together a bonding mechanism, perhaps similar to that in place for school buildings, for public safety projects.

"Whether it is Taunton, Revere or Southbridge, it is clear there is a real need," he said. "It's a real tribute to the professionalism of the men and women that work under those conditions. In many communities we've seen them donate their time to build additions and make repairs."

Their findings so far are a dismal litany.

"When you stamp on the wood floor in the Fitchburg fire house, oats come out," Caron said pointing out that the century-old firehouse, like many others around the state, cannot accommodate the weight of modern trucks.

But the police stations in Holyoke and Revere stood out even against a backdrop of the worst the state has to offer.

"There was a general consensus among the committees that they are in a class of their own," said Ann Dawley, an aide to Jajuga.

"It reminds me of some bombed-out building in Beirut," Jajuga, a former state trooper, said after Holyoke Police Chief Robert Wagner showed the lawmakers around his moldy station Monday where the roof has been leaking since it was built 16 years ago.

Wagner pointed out light fixtures rusted by water running through them, flaking paint, rooms draped with plastic sheeting and decorated with buckets, and the hair dryer he keeps by the telephone in his office to dry off the telephone wires during wet weather.

The city faces a damage suit from a prisoner struck when part to the ceiling let go in a holding cell and several police officers have suffered injuries and illnesses blamed on the building, he said.

Your opinions and ideas are just as great if not far superior to those of your neighbors, so come down and start screaming.
The Collegian. A way to be heard.

UMass English Department Announces
OXFORD NIGHT
Wed, October 28
Bartlett Hall Room 206, 7:00pm

A slide lecture and student respondents to give and exchange information about the English Department's Oxford Summer Seminar. This is your opportunity to learn more about a program now in its 28th year.

◆ Six weeks of residential life (July 1 - August 12) at Trinity College, Oxford. Study English literature taught by British University dons in tutorials and small seminars.

◆ Read in the world-famous Bodleian Library, travel to Stratford and London to see Shakespeare produced by the Royal Shakespeare Company.

◆ Spend time in one of England's most beautiful cities, punt on the Cherwell, run on the banks of the Thames, relax in pubs with stone floors and thatched roofs.

Oxford Summer Seminar Office
Bartlett 378
Tel. 545-1914
Open Mon 2:30-4:30; Tue,Th 1:30-2:30; Wed,Fri 9:00-12:00

Aerobic Instructor Training Program
with Vicki Dailey
▪ 8 week program ▪
▪ Choreography ▪
▪ Motivation techniques ▪
▪ Cueing techniques ▪
▪ Safety ▪
▪ Elders ▪ Pregnancy ▪
▪ Nutrition ▪ Anatomy ▪
▪ Instructor training material ▪
▪ Cassette tape ▪
▪ CPR certificate ▪
Employment opportunities upon successful completion of course
Sunderland
Amherst • Deerfield
Call 549-3638 or 773-5851 for interview and audition
Program to be held Saturday, 12-3 pm at ATHLETIC CLUBS of AMERICA
659 Amherst Street
SUNDERLAND: (413) 549-3638
(Formerly Winners Athletic Club)

NOW YOU CAN GET DIRTY FOR A WHOLE LOT LESS.
TREK USA MOUNTAIN BIKES
ON SALE!
850 was $519.95 now $449.95
6000 was $659.95 now $519.95
All Other '92s On Sale!
'93 Bikes Rolling In Daily!
NORTHAMPTON BICYCLE
EST 1971
319 Pleasant St.
Northampton, MA
586-3810
800-464-3810
TREK USA

Local News

Food Science turns 75, starts $1M endowment

The department at the University of Massachusetts that helped make Cran-Apple juice a popular national beverage is celebrating its 75th anniversary.

The department has created a $1,000,000 "Campaign for Food Science" to create a departmental endowment for scholarships and equipment.

"Since 1918, the food science department at UMass has prepared more than 1,000 talented scientists for industry and government and academia," department head Fergus Clydesdale '66 Ph.D. told an alumni weekend audience earlier this month.

"UMass has the only major food science program in New England and its reputation for aiding industry innovation is almost legendary," said Clydesdale. "Our research runs the gamut from GI rations to wholesome packaging of juice and milk for children to food analogs made from inexpensive fish protein."

The tiny UMass department made one of the University's biggest contributions to the state's economy back in the 1950s when the Ocean Spray Cooperative — not yet a billion dollar sales organization — was looking for ways to expand its market.

One obstacle was the extreme tartness of the cranberry which did not lend itself to making a popular beverage.

Enter UMass food science doctoral candidate Kirby Hayes who was working on developing a stable blend of cranberry and apple juice for his doctoral dissertation. Using the department's lab, Hayes and Ocean Spray scientists collaborated to develop one of the company's most successful blended juice products.

"We don't want to take special credit for Ocean Spray's work," said Clydesdale. "It's just another example of our department helping distinguished scientists at a major company to accomplish their research objectives."

Much of the department's success is now represented by its 20-member Alumni Advisory Board, many of whom hold key scientific positions in industry.

Charles Feldberg, '54 B.S., chairman of the Alumni Advisory Board, is also vice president for health, safety and quality assurance of CPC International Inc., a leading food corporation in 51 countries.

"This campaign will provide the money for a margin of excellence in the food science program that will allow it to meet the scientific demands of the next century," said Feldberg.

Another Advisory Board member, Lawrence Kuzminski, ('67 Ph.D.) vice president of research and engineering for Ocean Spray, chaired the board's endowment fund subcommittee.

"Scholarships and fellowships are a top priority," said Kuzminski. "Tuition and fees are almost $9,000 for in-state students, which represents a substantial investment to many families."

Clydesdale added that some equipment and laboratory renovations will also be among the priorities for funding.

"Students need the latest equipment to keep pace with scientific requirements," said Clydesdale. "The Campaign for Food Science is a commitment by our faculty and alumni to maintain our leadership in the field of food science.

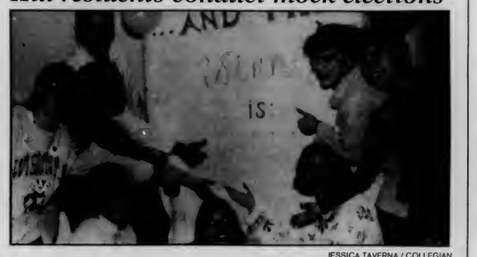
"New technology in food processing and in biotechnology will require graduates with advanced scientific know-how," said Clydesdale. "We average two calls a week from companies looking for food scientists."

Food scientists will face many important challenges in the 1990s. Clydesdale predicts that "as medical science identifies diet and disease relationships with more certainty, food scientists will be ready to mass produce appropriate foods to meet both health and aesthetic needs of consumers."

—UNIVERSITY NEWS OFFICE

Students back Clinton

Hill residents conduct mock elections



JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

These Clinton-hopefuls gathered in Dickinson last night for free food, free stuff, and to root for the Democratic Party.

By KELLY GEERS
Collegian Correspondent

Arkansas Governor Bill Clinton won a key victory in the 1992 race for president last night. He took the hill.

Webster and Dickinson Residence Halls' "Election Party" proved a rousing, if symbolic, success for the southern Democrat, who walked away with 186 of the available 257 votes in the mock election. Independent H. Ross Perot followed with 50 leaving President Bush with a mere 21.

But education, not results, were the important part of this election, according to Webster resident assistant Linda Forbes.

"The important thing was to educate people for the real election, not just to see who won here tonight," she said.

The election party, which was held after the mock voting in the lobbies of Webster and Dickinson from 5 to 7 p.m., was a collaborative effort from resident assistants in both dorms, the house councils, University Democrats, the Republican Club, MassPIRG and WMUA, Forbes said.

Carol Grady, resident director for Dickinson and Webster, said she was pleased with the mock election overall. "Much credit should be given to the RAs," she said. "I think we succeeded in educating our residents, and I hope there will be great voter turnout at the election."

University Democrats representative Joe Silva said he believes that if last night's party was any indication, the students will make the right choice in next week's election.

"We need change," he said. "We've seen what Bush has done to the economy. We all know that college [graduates] aren't finding jobs." Silva said the Republicans could do very little now to influence the students.

There were no representatives of the Republican Club present.

The race for the president isn't the only contest being decided this year, or last

Turn to ELECTIONS, page 6

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

THE LONELINESS OF THE LONG DISTANCE RUNNER - Joshua Andresen, a sophomore philosophy/physics major, cools off with a soothing ice pack after a brutal workout.

Guide makes off-campus easier

By JOHN WINCHELL
Collegian Correspondent

Are you wondering how students manage the sometimes harrowing move to living off-campus?

Some help is available in the form of the University of Massachusetts Off Campus Housing Office which is making copies of the town of Amherst's "Annual Guide to Understanding Your Rights and Responsibilities as a Landlord or Tenant in the Town of Amherst." This guide is available free of charge to the public, said Joanne Levenson, director of OCHO.

According to Levenson, 55 percent of all Amherst tenants are students. The booklet is intended to educate tenants and landlords of state laws and town bylaws affecting them and their legal responsibilities. This year, the booklet was prepared by the Town of Amherst Housing Partnership/Fair Housing Committee in cooperation with UMass Off Campus Housing Office.

"This booklet has been published for over a decade now," said Levenson. "Its main focus is on inappropriate security deposit handling by landlords, sanitary codes, alcohol bylaws, and the like." The booklet is an annotated summary of pertinent state and local housing laws.

The idea came up about 10 years ago at an Amherst town meeting. A local tenant activist group, the Amherst Tenants Association, suggested the booklet's creation and it was passed as a town bylaw. According to Levenson, the booklet is the sole example of literature of its kind. "We are unique. . . no other community produces a booklet like this," she said.

Jen Phillips, a junior in the School of Management said she thinks the booklet is a good idea pointing out a major problem with her off-campus apartment.

"My landlord didn't draw up a legal contract for our

Turn to GUIDE, page 6

Conference to study culture and medicine

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

A conference which hopes to address ways health care providers can provide proper care to people of color will feature speakers from across the region.

The conference, titled "Cultural Relevancy in the Delivery of Primary Care," will be held from Oct. 29 to Oct. 30 in rooms 101 and 168 of the Campus Center.

"There are enormous demographic changes occurring in the United States," conference organizer and assistant University of Massachusetts nursing professor Christine King said. "Health and human service providers will be seeing more diverse populations whose languages and cultures may be unfamiliar to them and with which they have had little or no clinical experience."

"There is a lack of services available for people of color. If you look across the state, many people of color have no services," King said. "There is a paucity of providers that are able to deliver care to their own communities."

The invited speakers have been able to find ways of approaching a culturally sensitive health care system. King has arranged for Dr. Sara Torres from the University of South Florida to speak at the conference. Torres, president of the National Association of Hispanic Nurses, is an expert in Hispanic health care. Dr. Leda McKenry, who is a visiting associate professor in the School of Nursing, will also be addressing the conference. McKenry is an internationally known health care consultant.

"You have to bring people from the outside in. We just can not do it by the resources in the community," King said. "[The conference] provides a way for us to help our graduates and undergraduates gain knowledge in cultural diversity skills. Students are welcome to drop by."

Prof. studies content of British, U.S. ads

In a recent Schweppes ad, comic John Cleese pedals his product in both a classically British style and a gonzo American one.

In the British version, he holds his cool glass of soda aloft, extolling its virtues and tastefulness, all the while wearing a conservative business suit. But in the American version, Cleese stands in swimming trunks on a beach, surrounded by bikini-clad women, shouting near the top of his lungs: "It's really wild."

It's classic Anglomania, a bit that appeals to our belief that the British are infinitely more subtle than ourselves.

And yet, according to University of Massachusetts marketing Professor Marc Weinberger, it's correct in only one respect.

"You would never see jiggling bodies in British commercials," says Weinberger. "It's simply out of character with the British experience. In general, U.S. and British ads reflect their respective cultural norms. Still, while some of these differ, many more are interchangeable."

For over eight years, Weinberger has made British advertising his area of expertise, and recently he has been focusing on that quality of advertising in which many think the British put the Americans to shame — humor.

"There's this myth that British ads are much more clever than American ads," Weinberger says. "But if you simply look at the humor in television commercials, you will find that by and large it's much more alike than different."

After months of watching hundreds of commercials, perusing countless magazines and surveying advertising executives in both countries, Weinberger has been able to create a profile of the similarities in British and American advertising styles.

Dividing advertising into categories — informational and entertaining — Weinberger shows that advertisers in both countries rely on relatively identical approaches depending on the product.

For instance, when it comes to routine purchases like Tylenol and Bayer, it's rare in either country to see pure entertainment ads. Typically, product benefits dominate the ad because that's what consumers demand. Likewise, in the group of low-risk "feel-good" products, such as beer, ads in both countries are predominately entertainment-oriented.

In America, a bar scene complete with funny one-liners (such as the Coors Silver Bullet ad) is common, while in Britain, a pub substitutes for these humorous exchanges (such as in the John Smiths Bitter ad).

Other ads bear comparable similarities. Higher risk products like microwave ovens and cars in both countries are sold most often by crafting messages that convey tangible features and benefits within an entertaining context.

Weinberger does acknowledge some subtle differences in the advertising strategies of the two cultures. One of the most striking of these, he says, is in the use of language.

"I don't know if it is to do with increased literacy or what, but there is much greater use of puns in British advertising than in American," Weinberger says.

Also dissimilar is our use of themes like patriotism and family togetherness. Love of country and family would be viewed as horribly out of place in a British ad.

This doesn't mean that sentimentality is a purely American vice, however. For instance, American ads for Cottonelle toilet tissue focus on soft cuddly kittens and adorable children, while the British Andrex toilet tissue ads features a frolicking, happy-go-lucky puppy.

Ultimatley, Weinberger concludes that British ads only seem more clever to us in America because when we happen to see them (such as on the Tonight Show) they are the cream of the crop and novel by definition.

"If we saw run-of-the-mill British ads day in and day out on TV, however, they would leave a very different impression," he says.

—UNIVERSITY NEWS OFFICE

■ Weld

continued from page 1

and Training, Bay State unemployment skyrocketed after Bush took office, peaking at 9.4 percent in March and May 1991. The low was 3.2 percent in February 1989.

For the four reporting quarters of 1991, Massachusetts saw unemployment rates of 8.9 percent, 9 percent, 9.1 percent and 8.8 percent. In 1992, unemployment has been 8.9 percent, 8.6 percent and 8.4 percent.

Weld, who took office in January 1991, blamed the unemployment figures on "massive tax hikes" by the Dukakis administration and spending by Dukakis and the Democratic Legislature. At the Republican National Convention in August, Weld told the delegates he had turned Massachusetts around.

"Other states have been going down while we have been going up," he said. "We were number one in the unemployment rate of the top 11 industrial states all of last year. This year we've been five, six and seven."

"George Bush and Bill Weld are so out of touch with the working families in America and Massachusetts that they are actually trying to tell us that the economy is on the upswing," Flynn said.

Weld and Cellucci, pointing to recent national polls showing Clinton's lead over Bush and independent Ross Perot tightening, said heavily Democratic Massachusetts and its 12 electoral votes were still within the president's grasp.

Some people don't like the Collegian. Well at least we've got our integrity. So there.

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA
$10 HAIRCUTS!
Make an appointment with Heather or Liz, between 9am and 1pm, and your haircut will be only $10!
Good Monday through Friday.
Expires 11/4/92

HOT! HOT! HOT!
See You On The Beach
SPRING BREAK 1993
with
CAMPUS GET-AWAYS
1-800-2-CANCUN
CALL NOW TO BE A REP AND EARN A FREE TRIP.

Despite some nasty rumors, Big Brother is NOT watching you right now. Nor will he be peeking over your shoulder on November 3. So once you saunter into that voting booth and draw the curtain, you will be shut off from the rest of the world - just you and those little levers. It's a fateful decision, friend, don't blow it off. The best thing you can do in the face of this new responsibility is to become an educated voter. Know WHY you are voting. Be proud.

Free Peer Counseling
Lesbian Bisexual Gay Counseling Collective
Need a Little Help with Life? Call us at the LBG Counseling Collective, 545-2645 or stop by 406G U. Mass. Student Union. Call for office hours, we're here to help!

ATTENTION! UMass Musi
the MINUTEMAN HOOP BAND
Good Guitar Player Needed!
Needs You!
First Meeting/Rehearsal for [illegible]
Monday, November 2 from 4:[illegible]
Old Chapel Auditor[illegible]
For More Information, Please Contact Thom Hannum, Director
Room 16, Old Chapel 2nd Floor or Call 545-6060/3410

Our friend Bob actually does not have a body. The reason he is always seen as a free-floating head is exactly that - there's nothing else to the poor guy. So if you've got any extra torsos lying around, the Collegian will gladly take donations.

Our Jeans Are Coming Down... In Price That Is!
3 Washes
3 Lengths
$36. from Union Bay
J•RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN
191 N. Pleasant St., Amherst • 253-2013
22 Masonic St., Northampton • 586-6336
Open 7 days • Thursday nights in Northampton

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Four more years? Yuck

Nathan CRICK

The presidential election is in one week. Yep, Nov. 3, 1992, will decide the fate of America for the next four years. Before pushing any electoral buttons, I thought maybe I should open my mind, give the conservative's opinion some credit and think about George Bush as America's president — again (oooow I just got the chills).

Anyway, here I am — mind open — yeah, just waiting for reasons to vote for Bush to enter my head. I never realized what a dark place this could be — wait was that an echo? Did I turn off the coffee machine? Maybe I should go downstairs and check. Chris will yell at me if it isn't. Chris is always yelling at me. Chris has a mouth like Perot has ears. Wait — Bush that's right. Okay, okay, I'm thinking. No pressure. Let's see, what would the world be like with Bush for four more years? Maybe I should play word association: abortion/wire hangers; women/ball and chains; jobs/Japan; Yugoslavia's civil war/L.A. riots; fam—Nah, word association is becoming too tedious. Let's try this: a random-in-no-particular-order-list.

Why we should vote for Bush:

- The economy is doing just peachy.
- The U.S. "must be a military superpower."
- The Rodney King verdict was proof that "the system works."
- Donnna Reed will conquer the drug lords of this country.
- Health care adequately covers all the people.
- Dan Quayle's Competitiveness Council has "saved" 2,000 auto jobs in Alaska (hold on a second, there aren't any auto jobs in Alaska).
- Women's bodies are only for breeding purposes and have only the mental capacity for cookie recipes.
- Oil is more important than the education of American youth.
- Separation of church and state is outdated.
- George Bush won't raise taxes (sorry, that echo was read my lips).
- The environment is as green and healthy as our economy.
- The Constitution should be recycled and used for toilet paper.
- The government should own our bodies — ovaries and larynx' come with the lease to the White House.
- AIDS is a homosexual problem.
- Sexual orientation is man and woman, just as family is husband and wife.
- The destruction of Saddam Hussein and Iraq's military power (wait, Saddam is still there and we gave them the weapons in the first place. . . scratch that one).
- With Bush's waffling, IHOP service might improve.
- Blistex and Chapstick stock will go up creating money for the economy.
- Late night talk shows won't have much material without Dan Quayle.

I have to stop, the pizza I had for dinner has decided to give my mouth a second taste. Well, I guess this open mind thing isn't working out the way I had planned. It's funny though, now that I think about it my mind seemed to get narrower and narrower as I wrote my list. In fact I began to feel rather claustrophobic. I wonder if that happens to other people when they consider voting for Bush. Kinda scary . . . I wonder how their minds breathe (ewww, I just got the chills again).

Well, I'm glad I went through that exercise, it was a little like a nightmare — but its good to confront your fears. Damn, I better go check that coffee machine.

E.C. Thomas is a Collegian columnist.

Matters versus money

My father was waiting in line at the gas station the other day, and our town's moderator (no, we have no mayor) walked up and got in line behind him. My father commented on the long lines, and our elected official said something to the effect of, "Well, Ross will take care of that. Nobody will be able to afford gas when he gets in. Heh heh heh." Funny man.

Not so unique though. Machiavelli said to punish a man while keeping his loyalty you can kill his family, but never take his land. He'll forget his family eventually. Of course back then Machiavelli was only dealing with men; if he did that to women today he'd be singing a different tune, and probably with a much higher voice.

Nevertheless his point is made. For most of us, little matters about our leaders next to how much money they can put in our pockets. George Bush. Did he coddle Saddam Hussein and then rape his country? Well, maybe. Did he sell arms to Iran? Long history. Has he ruined our inner cities? I don't know, I live in Cowpatch. How much has he abused the environment? Like I care about the spotted owl. Isn't his abortion stance a little too fascist? Maybe, but he means well. His son was involved in bank fraud! Hey, that's private. What about this supposed "war on drugs?" Sounds neat. Quayle? He's funny. But they've led us into a depression and given us a four trillion dollar debt! Yeah, that bothers me, but everyone else is going to raise our taxes. I will not pay ten cents more for a gallon of gas! That's ludicrous and I will not stand for that!

Push the right buttons. History will disappear.

Do we really care about anything outside of our realm of view? Most of us do, but it is just a concern tucked away in our minds that comes out in entertaining political discussions at the dinner table. When it comes down to it, we don't vote for imaginary debts or foreign wars or bank scandals or anything that we cannot touch. And for most of us not struggling against the system in our inner cities, the only thing we can touch is money. Well, not the only thing. In 1988 we could feel the fear of a black man named Willie Horton who was going to rape our daughters. That makes two.

I wonder if it's our fault though. We all seem resigned that most of what we are told is made up of lies and half-truths. Maybe we are so self-centered because we believe that the only things we can rely on are what we can see. When taxes go up we know taxes go up, we don't have to rely on the misinformation of our leaders. As long as everybody keeps track of themselves, everything will work out right. Kind of a nice way to go through life isn't it? In fact, for most places that seems to be the rule.

That's the problem with our society; you can't really blame anyone for being the way they are. People are either ignorant to begin with, brought up in a commercial world that makes them ignorant, or, if know what's going on, they're too nihilistic to care. And the ones that are concerned enough to shout, "I want change!" have no idea how to go about it, and eventually give up themselves. Especially when they have to compete against a candidate like Bush, who basically epitomizes the status quo, but insists on shouting the same damn thing. It's as if when people all get together and cry for change, politicians try to make what they shout for just more of the same in different words.

In my yearbook there was a Desert Storm layout in memory of our victory, and the first sentence read, "The first place Americans felt the impact of the war was at the gas pumps." Wow. Really gets you right there, you know? It made me want to scrawl something obscene on it, which I consequently did. I wonder if our country is ever going to change, if we are ever going to be able to look beyond our own noses when it comes to improving the world in which we live. But then I went home.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

Financial aid isn't much help

In order to obtain approved financial aid loan checks, all students are required by law to attend an information session. When are they? Who knows. An announcement is recorded on the forever-busy financial aid phone line on Friday for the following week's meetings — and each week the meeting changes location and time. How can we plan to attend? If you're lucky, you may not have a class when they meet, so you stop whatever worthwhile thing you're doing and rush over to the Campus Center. But you've come all the way only to be stopped at the door and told that the 15 minute meeting is full — you are out of luck. There are already 50 people crammed inside (and now there are that many people outside) and they can't run another meeting in 15 minutes because they supposedly they don't have enough forms for you to fill out (lie).

So what's the big deal?

1) Give multiple sessions that will accommodate the overflow.

2) Reserve a bigger room.

3) Give more than one week's notice.

4) Don't lie to students who are working hard, deserve their money and will find out that there were plenty of forms at the meeting, unlike what you told us.

See how easy that is? I understand you may have other constraints I don't know about and maybe it's more difficult than it seems. The bottom line is that students are here to study, attend all their classes and work to get by — not to run all over campus just to be lied to.

Beth Hunt
Northeast

Does Ques. 3 offer real answer?

The dispute between business and government has been fought many times throughout American history.

Question 3, the recycling initiative, has been described as a showdown between big business and government. The bill is hailed by supporters who feel government intervention in product development stages will be beneficial to the recycling cause. Both sides of this initiative are backed heavily by strong lobbies and high-cost advertising campaigns.

The problem is clear and unavoidable. We must conserve our resources to sustain an environment adequate for natural survival and economic growth. The objectives in Question 3 are well thought out and, if met, beneficial to society. However, must our only means of environmental protection come from a government agency? Should a watchdog commission to regulate and control the inner workings of a firm be the only option in handling this dilemma? If so, why bother with the free market system in the first place?

In a true free market economy, the bulk of regulatory power should be held by consumers. Instead of trying to solve our environmental problems through more conventional means (a commission to study and regulate from the outside) why not place that power in the hands of customers? Let them know who is complying with a list of environmentally attractive goals by providing incentives for those who do and ignoring those who do not. For example, allow companies to display a logo when the product in question complies with all the standards determined. When shopping, consumers can make the decision to avoid products which do not show the logo, thus providing provocation for corporations to develop environmentally sound products.

Using a system similar to this will force big companies to become more responsive to consumer needs and will also save a state government too far in debt from having to spend considerable effort meddling in these affairs.

Romin Thomson
Southwest

Rethinking what White guilt is

This is in response to Malkes Gomes' editorial [Collegian, Oct. 26]. I am moved by the eloquence of your statement of your and many others' opinion. While my experience lacks the root evil underlying the troubles others put me through, it puts the call to the administration to take responsibility, and the steps taken to do so, in a different light.

I had held a similar view to the Collegian's, though unwilling to float the same judgment with any Black friends. I have to rethink the aspects of what White guilt is, and the capability of the University to cure the disease that will continue to corrupt its pretenses to rationality. Much of the persuasiveness of your view, though, is the anticipation of the faltering defense the White community holds against the fact that the attitudes of people of color are not rooted in their own racism. There is an end to passing traditions of hatred, even if it be stilted, or deliberate, and it's been within society's reach for longer than a devoted effort should take.

Glenn S. Foster
Hadley

Harassment reports on increase

BOSTON (AP) — The number of sexual harassment complaints in Massachusetts has increased dramatically since confirmation hearings of then-Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas last October, federal figures show.

"Sexual harassment has been given wider play in our society recently, and it has given a lot of women courage to come forward," said Charles L. Looney, director of the regional office of the Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

"Of course, there has been a great increase in the number of complaints after Anita Hill."

Hill, who once worked for Thomas, alleged during testimony at his hearing that he had sexually harassed her. Thomas strongly denied the charges.

According to EEOC figures, 92 complaints of sexual harassment were filed in Massachusetts between October 1991 and June 1992, up from the 70 cases lodged in the previous 12 months. The increase nationally in the same period was 44 percent.

"I think that the continuing rise of consciousness and concern with working in an environment free from harassment have prompted more women to exercise their rights," Looney said.

He said another reason for the jump in the number of complaints is the flurry of cases involving domestic violence during the last year. He said more attention is being paid to battered wives and women.

Looney said the large increase in conplaints indicated that growing numbers of women will no longer tolerate being victimized by the behavior of co-workers.

"It is not an easy thing to enter a federal office and to lodge a federal complaint," said Looney. "It takes a lot of courage."

Looney said the EEOC looks into all complaints filed, although about 50 percent of its cases are administratively dismissed at some point. He said about 25 percent end with a judicial ruling, and the rest are settled without court intervention.

"Larger companies have been aware of the [sexual harassment] problem for a long time and have systems in place," Looney said.

■ guide

continued from page 3

rental agreement," Phillips said. "Plus, he will always go to our parents with a problem before dealing with us directly."

Steph Roselund, a senior psychology major, said, "There are so many landlords who will screw you just because students don't know their rights." She said she considers the booklet a good resource to protect student tenants' rights. She offered some practical advice for potential and new student tenants. "Keep good records — it's the only real way to avoid trouble in the long run," said Roselund.

Both students agree that living off-campus is well worth the hassles it can cause. "It's somewhere to come home to," said Phillips.

"Yes, it's cheaper; better food, quieter accommodations and more convenient," said Roselund. "I wouldn't live on campus again even if you paid me a million dollars."

■ elections

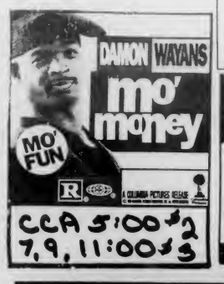
continued from page 3

night. MassPIRG is pushing Question 3, a referendum question calling for a new recycling law.

MassPIRG's Student Director Sarah Turk said, "Massachusetts is proposing one of the nation's toughest recycling laws. It is important we do everything we can [to see it pass]."

Turk said major out-of-state corporations, such Dupont, Exxon and Dow, are flooding Massachusetts media markets with advertising aimed at defeating Question 3. Turk said the statements made in the ads are, "outright lies."

Though the question passed in the Webster/Dickinson Election Party with a landside victory, Turk said it won't be as easy come Tuesday.



CCA 5:00 #2
7, 9, 11:00 #3

When you're as good as we are, you don't have to apologize.

COMPARE

AAC Amherst Athletic Club	ACA Athletic Club of America
• Owners in business since 1982	• ACA in business since 1991
• Locally Owned	• Based in Eastern Mass.
• 1,3,4,9,12 month memberships available	• Currently advertising 9 & 12 month memberships only.
• Complies with Massachusetts Consumer Protection Law	• Has not posted Insurance bond (according to Mass. Secretary of State) to protect members if the club at that location fails ... again

Amherst Athletic Club • 460 West St. • Amherst • 256-0080

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
TONIGHT
9-1
PIZZA SLICES
50¢
Drink of The Week
PEACH TREE PUNCH
$1.75
20 oz. Drafts
$1.75
Miller Lite • Miller G.D. • Rolling Rock
Watch all the sports on Satellite Dish
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

MIDNIGHT Madness SALE
Don't Miss The Midnight Madness Sale
Thursday, Oct. 29
10A.M. - 12 Midnight
ENTIRE CONTENTS OF STORE
20-50% OFF LIST PRICE
Guitars, Amplifiers, Strings, Sheet Music, ...EVERYTHING!
AMHERST MUSIC HOUSE
233 North Pleasant Street (Carriage Shops)
Amherst • 549-1728

Arts & Living

Pesci's performance opens Public Eye

By IAN CANADINE
Collegian Correspondent

In Howard Franklin's The Public Eye, set in New York in 1941, Joe Pesci plays seedy free-lance photographer Leon Bernstein, whose shots of life and death on the mean streets grace newspaper covers daily. Bernstein is also known as "The Great Bernzini" for his apparently magic ability to turn up at the scene of a crime before the police, and he is presumably based on the real life photographer Weegee, who was so named for the same reason.

His line of work means that he knows both "all the crooks and all the cops," and because of this he is hired by glamourous nightclub owner Kay Levitz (Barbara Hershey) to investigate a man who claims to be her late husband's business partner. In taking on this investigation Bernstein, a man who "never takes sides," becomes involved in a Mafia war and gets inextricably caught up in his own subject matter as the film draws towards its violent climax.

The first few minutes of the movie suggest that it is going to be simply an exercise in stylization with its period setting and obvious gangster/film noir influences, but what emerges is actually an impressive study in character and obsession.

Pesci's character is set up as decidedly amoral right from the start, as we see him rearranging a dead body to make a better shot, and the issue of his own voyeurism is made clear with black and white sequences which highlight the way that he can only look at the world as if through a camera. It seems that, as a friend says to him at one point, he can only express emotion when he has a camera in front of his face.

Bernstein is, by nature of his job, a parasite, and what this film is essentially about is his struggle to redeem himself by finding somethone to believe in what he does. He sees his photographs as art but he finds that they are too much involved with real life for the art world to regard them as anything but "vulgar." The subtext of this film is that being an artist makes you someone, but portraying everyday life on the streets brings you only contempt; the film suggests that finally maybe art and life are the same thing.

The interaction between Pesci and Hershey is central to The Public Eye, and Kay Levitz reflects Bernstein's parasitism in her own apparent role as a "cold-hearted bitch" who married an old man for his money. Like Bernstein she is searching for some kind of redemption, and Hershey's subtle performance means that we can never quite figure her out.

One of the most intriguing elements of the film is the constant suspicion that (as was the convention with the films that The Public Eye pays homage to) she will turn out to be more dangerous than she appears, and the film's closure revolves around this. It is to its credit that is doesn't go for the easiest option in its resolution, but manages to tread a fine line between a conventional portrayal of the femme fatale and a more subtle character reading, without losing its nerve and opting for the banal happy ending which looks dangerously imminent at one point.

As it is essentially a character study The Public Eye ultimately stands or falls on Pesci's performance, and he handles the role brilliantly, bringing it pathos without sentimentality. In the end this film is fairly modest in what it sets out to do, and perhaps too much in debt to its influences to really be striking, but it addresses its themes tightly and is a welcome relief form the glut of overblown landscape epics (e.g. A River Runs Through It, 1492, etc.) which Hollywood is currently churning out.

Don't you want to be a coolie?
Come down to the Collegian and Write for Arts.
Instant popularity.
Instant status.
Instant wealth.
And you get to hang out with all the hipsters.
113 Campus Center Dungeon. Tell them Bob sent you.

TRAVEL SMART THIS WINTER!
FROM NEW YORK

	Roundtrip	One Way
London	$305	$165
Paris	$398	$219
Rome	$525	$320
Oslo/Stockholm	$458	$229
Tel Aviv/Istanbul	$639	$329
Guatemala City	$390	$205
Costa Rica	$430	$225

Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Customs/immigration and departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*in NYC

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
FOUNDED 1966, THE ARTS COUNCIL FOSTERS EXCELLENCE & SCOPE IN THE ARTS ON CAMPUS did you know that...
• IN THE LAST 3 YEARS THE ARTS COUNCIL SUPPORTED
100+ OF GALLERY EXHIBITIONS.
100+ OF ARTFUL PERFORMANCES IN THEATER, DANCE & MUSIC.
100+ OF PUBLICATIONS, POETRY READINGS, SLIDE LECTURES & WORKSHOPS.
YOU...
• COULD ENRICH THE UNIVERSITY WITH YOUR CULTURALLY DIVERSE EVENT.
• SHOULD COUNT YOUR ART RELATED PROJECT INTO OUR NEXT 100!
• THE UMASS ARTS COUNCIL GIVES FINANCIAL SUPPORT TO THE ARTS.
• CALL AND ASK ABOUT AVAILABLE FUNDS FOR FALL & SPRING CYCLES DEADLINES: 11/20, 2/19, 3/26, 4/23.
• WE CAN HELP, CALL 545-0202, 209 Hasbrouck
• STOP AT OUR TABLE ON THE CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE ON 10/28-29

TWO WINNERS WILL BE CHOSEN BY RANDOM DRAWING!
COLLEGIAN CONCERT SWEEPSTAKES!
WIN A PAIR OF FREE TICKETS
MATERIAL ISSUE, TOO MUCH JOY, MIGHTY LEMONDROPS
at
PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB
Tuesday, November 3rd
TRIPLE BILL TICKETS/ OFFICIAL ENTRY FORM
Name _____
Phone # _____
RULES
Must be at least 18 years old to enter. Tickets are non-refundable.
Drawing to be held on Friday, October 30, 1992. No entries will be received after 3:30 PM on 10/30/92
Collegian staff are not eligible to enter. Winners will be contacted by telephone.
Drop off entries at Collegian business window, 113 Campus Center (basement), UMass, Amherst.
Winners are responsible for picking up tickets at the Collegian office before 3:30 pm on Tuesday, Nov 3rd
Only one entry per person will be accepted. Only official entry form from newspaper will be accepted

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton /Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

Captain's Log, Stardate 10-28-92, 1:03.35 AM. An early one for Collegian Night Graphics staff, but taxing nonetheless. It's a filthy, grimy, sinful job, but somebody's got to be there for the students of UMass. We LOVE it.

Understanding Eating Disorders:

Strategies for Friends and Family

Wednesday - October 28
6:30 p.m. - 8:30 p.m.
University Health Center - Room 304

I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?

I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest...Where should she go?

I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid...What can I do to help?

If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.

Family of Carol Stuart sues Charles' employer

BOSTON (AP) — The family of Carol DiMaiti Stuart reportedly has sued Back Bay furrier Edward F. Kakas & Sons, claiming it carelessly stored a revolver the victim's family says Charles Stuart used to kill her.

The wrongful death suit was filed in Suffolk Superior Court last week, two days before the third anniversary of the fatal shooting in Boston's Mission Hill neighborhood, the Boston Herald reported.

Charles Stuart, who also was shot, told police a Black man jumped in the car and robbed and shot him and his wife.

Stuart apparently committed suicide Jan. 4, 1990, after he was implicated in the killing by his brother Matthew.

The suit maintains that Charles Stuart took the revolver from an unlocked cabinet at Kakas after he was unable to get a gun elsewhere. Stuart was a $100,000-a-year manager at Kakas.

The civil suit said Stuart used the gun from Kakas "only when those other efforts proved to be unsuccessful and only because he knew that the gun was not likely to be missed due to the defendant's lax and careless handling of it."

The suit also said Kakas kept the gun in a manner that gave Stuart and other employees unrestricted access to it despite knowing that Stuart "was implicated in certain unlawful activity" before his wife was killed.

It was reported in the past that Stuart was among employees questioned in 1986 in an investigation of a suspected theft of furs from Kakas.

Matthew Stuart, is scheduled to go on trial Monday on charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice and hide evidence in the killing of Carol Stuart.

Clark professor slain signs of struggle found

WORCHESTER (AP) — Police are investigating the apparent murder of a Clark University professor found dead in her home on Tuesday.

Police said Dr. Margret Comer, 50, an associate professor of biology and adjunct associate professor of chemistry, probably was killed during the weekend.

Neighbors called authorities at about 9 a.m. Tuesday when they noticed all the shades in Comer's house were drawn. Police said one window was left open and there were signs of a struggle.

Investigators said they had no motives or suspects. Police were looking for Comer's car, a gray 1987 four-door Chevrolet Nova, which they said may have been stolen by the killer.

It was the fourth murder in Worchester in as many days.

Worchester Police Detective Lieutenant John McKiernan said Comer's body was discovered in the rear of her single-family home.

Comer served until summer 1992 as director of the university's biochemistry and molecular biology program. She taught graduate and undergraduate courses in molecular biology, molecular genetics, recombinant DNA, biochemistry and molecular bacteriology.

"This is a campus in shock right now," said university spokeswoman Kate Chesley.

Comer was a specialist in molecular genetics. She was a member of the institutional biosafety committee for the Worchester Biotechnology Park.

THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE AND WORLD SECURITY STUDIES
Presents:

PAWSS

"THE INTERNATIONAL RESPONSE TO THE HUMAN CATASTROPHE IN SOMALIA"

A lecture by:

HAZEL McFERSON, George Mason University's Commonwealth Professor of Conflict Resolution and Public Affairs

Monday, October 26th
8:00 PM
Converse Hall, Amherst College

This event is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible. For more information call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519

WANTED:

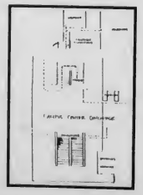
Assistant Advertising Representatives for the Collegian

We need:
- organized
- motivated
- ambitious
- responsible

undergraduate students with good communication skills

These positions are volunteer

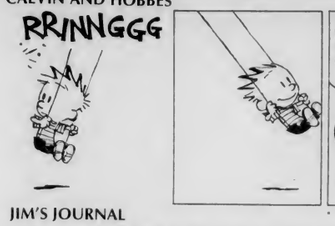
Call Pat at 545-3500 for more information or come to our office and fill out an application



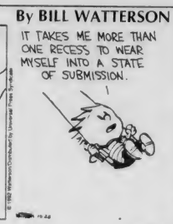
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003

The Collegian is an E.O.E.

CALVIN AND HOBBES



By BILL WATTERSON



THE FAR SIDE

By GARY LARSON

"Louis . . . phonecaw."

JIM'S JOURNAL

By JIM

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED

By CHRIS SHADOIAN

TANGENT COMICS

By KURT MATTILA

PRICE

By PRICE VAN RAY

TO HELL WITH MY BAEDEKER

By ZACHARY A. SCHLAPPI

Quote of the Day

"Why not go out on a limb? That's where the fruit is."

—overheard

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Conditions at home or work could be turbulent. Stay calm. Your social life is about to move into high gear. Domestic projects come together quickly and smoothly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your powers of persuasion should put you in the driver's seat now. Far-reaching business and financial plans begin to take off. New alliances are favored.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A rocky relationship or unwanted obligation may be getting you down. Do something new this evening. Go through your wardrobe with a critical eye before going shopping.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep sailing along in the spirit of achievement. If travel plans fall apart, look for an alternative. Improved communication with a child helps you restore domestic tranquility.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Plans concerning your home or family appear promising. Be willing to travel and work long hours to achieve full business success. Refuse to be tempted into altering your educational goals.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Domestic life is on an even keel, allowing you to pursue your career wholeheartedly. An investment begins to pay handsome dividends. Your social life accelerates.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A friend or relative could provide the answer to a business question. Domestic life looks much better following a candid conversation with your mate. Be an eager beaver when scooping mashed potatoes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Creative endeavors enjoy highly favorable influences. Make a bold fashion statement at attending a glitzy event. At work, postpone lab research undertakings and your own literary skills.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Complete pending business early in the day. Your physical batteries are recharged. The power of positive thinking gives you the winning edge.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Guard against unnecessary financial gambles. Cash in your chips before disaster strikes. If you're Irish, you're pretty cool.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb. 18): Use your own good judgement when purchasing a major item. Certain claims cannot be proved. Be sure to keep your promises.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your good taste keeps you from making a costly mistake today. Follow your intuition in romance. Acting too dependent on a mate could cause problems.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

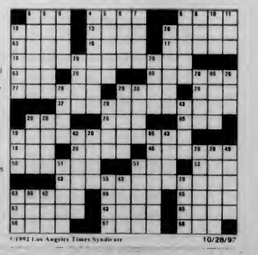
ACROSS
1 Man on the beat
4 Normandy town
8 Stravinsky ballet
12 Tree trunk
13 School dance
14 Uncultured
15 Make — succeed
16 Facility
17 Faced the target
18 Soprano born in Brooklyn
21 Before, in poetry
22 Chicago trains
23 Vinegary drink
27 TV street
29 Casino game
31 Yoko Lennon, nee —
32 Soprano born in Modena, Italy
35 Payable
37 Caviar
38 Sinnie center
39 Soprano born in Auburn, Ga.
44 Corrida cheer
45 Was in arrears
46 Refugee
50 Disposable handkerchief
52 Lamb's complaint
53 Bern's river
54 Mezzo born in Bradford, Pa.
58 Malay mammal
61 Actress Singer
62 Neither fem. or neut.
63 Join
64 Like a certain ranger
65 "— Rhythm"
66 "The Art of Fugue" composer
67 Reducing spots
68 Pro follower

DOWN
1 Stick
2 Martini garnishes
3 Rose or Fountain
4 School text
5 Servers
6 Casualty
7 Buddhist sacred mountain
8 Gre-d the dawn
9 Chewing matter
10 Canticle
11 Beatty or Sparks
12 Naive ones
14 London's "The — the Wild"
19 Do followers
20 Zhivago's beloved
24 Exits
25 Mrs. Leonowens
26 Reine's mate
28 Singer Ed
29 Overflow
30 "Gradus ad Parnassum" author
33 Seabird
34 Rajah's wife
35 Where to get a hero
36 Functions
39 Iota
40 "— My Sunshine": hit song of 1940
41 Pitcher, of a type
42 Nasty ones
43 Nanking nursemaid
47 Lincoln's home?
48 Release payment
49 Put up
51 Kate or Al
52 She played Nora Charles
55 Troubles
56 Pilot's maneuver
57 Neglect
58 Bucket
59 Collection of sayings
60 Snapshot, briefly

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

W	E	S	T		F	A	S	T		L	A	S	S	O
H	A	L	E		A	L	A	R		I	C	H	O	R
A	T	O	P		C	L	U	E		S	T	E	A	L
R	E	P	E	A	T	E	R		B	U	M	P	Y
F	R	E	E		D	O	M		S	H	O	A
			O	E	R	A	L		U	N	R	E	S	T
S	P	O	O	N		H	O	A	H		I	R	M	A
C	O	B	S		T	O	O	L	S		A	G	N	D
U	N	I	T		N	E	M	O		A	L	O	E	S
O	V	E	R	T		S	H	A	G
			O	R	O	S		G	R	A	S	P	E	D
A	G	A	T	E		A	S	S	E	R	T	I	V	E
B	E	L	O	W		I	T	I	C		O	P	E	N
A	N	I	M	A		N	A	D	A		L	E	N	S
B	E	T	E	L		T	R	E	S		E	R	S	E

10/28/92



© 1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 10/28/92

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Tami Monahan
Copy Editor ..... Mark "Eraser" Elliot
PhotoTechnician ..... Jessica Taverna
Production Supervisor ..... Alan Blagg
Production ..... Theresa Giammattei, Jim Ganley, The Dread Pirate Roberts

Menu

LUNCH
Duchess Meat Pie
Grilled Cheese

BASICS LUNCH
FALAFEL POCKET!!!
Grilled Cheese

DINNER
Chickenmeat Stir Fry
Fettuccini/Meat Sauce

BASICS DINNER
Veggie/Tofu Stir Fry
Fettuccini/Nomeat Sauce

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

notebook

continued from page 12

One of the best pure athletes on this year's UMass squad, Williams started three games at quarterback for the Minutemen last year, before moving to cornerback last spring. (Center) Maguire kicks towards record books

Minuteman placekicker/punter Jim Maguire has connected on all 31 of his point after attempts since landing his bare foot style in Amherst last fall.

The UMass record is 33 in a row, held by Sandro Vittello (UMass kicker during the heyday of Minuteman football in the late '70s), and barring the unexpected, Maguire should tie or break the record this weekend when the Minutemen face Eastern Mass rival Northeastern on Saturday at 1:30 p.m. here in Amherst.

Sweat
with Collegian Sports.
113 Campus Center Basement.

A-10 may merge with Great Midwest

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

Depending on who you talk to, discussions of a merger between the Great Midwest Conference and the Atlantic 10 Conference are either a new issue or old news.

The Philadelphia Daily News reported Monday that six schools, including the University of Massachusetts, have begun preliminary discussions about a possible merger. According to Mike Carey of the Saint Bonaventure University Bona Venture newspaper, the other schools are Temple University, Rutgers University, West Virginia University and George Washington University.

"The six schools do not include St. Joe's or St. Bonnie's because we didn't have football programs," Carey said. "If this happened, St. Joe's and St. Bonnie's possibly would merge with the MAC (Mid-American Athletic Conference)."

Tim Stephens, Great Midwest Conference assistant commissioner for media relations, said that there is communication between the two conferences.

"I don't understand what all the commotion is now," Stephens said. "There has been an informal exchange of information which started at the NCAA convention in January. We've requested information from the A-10 and they've given it to us. Nothing new has happened."

Ask the directors of sports information of different schools in the Great Midwest, however, and you might be surprised.

"That's the first I've seen or heard of it," said John Lanctot, DePaul, associate sports information director. "I wouldn't know about any possible proposals, we really haven't talked about it."

The breakdown of the most likely merger scenario would look like this: the six A-10 teams would merge with the Great Midwest, creating two divisions for most sports (with the exception of football). The two divisions would be broken up into East and West, and each team would play each team within their division twice, and play each member of the opposite division once, at least in basketball.

In minor sports, each team would only play other teams within their division until the conference championship, which would bring every team together. The purpose of the structuring would be to cut down on travel, which seems to be the primary concern of many skeptics in both conferences.

"I know there have been talks going on, but I don't think there's anything imminent," Cincinnati Sports Information Director Tom Hathaway said. "I don't see travel being a major problem to overcome."

In terms of UMass, the merger seems to make sense. The University already has the big-time facility (the 9,493 seat Mullins Center), which means they are at least partially committed to becoming nationally prominent in basketball.

A merger would mean a conference television market to 50% of the nation, giving all schools added exposure. A huge television package is being discussed. And while teams such as DePaul have exclusive contracts, the revenue for the A-10 teams would be much greater than what is available now.

One of the larger roadblocks is football. The Great Midwest's football teams are weak, but West Virginia, Temple and Rutgers have worked too hard to get into the Big East to pull out now. UMass and Rhode Island have Division I-AA programs, and George Washington does not even field a football squad. In all likelihood, a merger would not affect football.

"We anticipate a day when the Great Midwest Conference is bigger then it is now," Stephens said. "We're steadfast in our belief that when we grow, we want to get better, not just bigger."

TONIGHT
KARAOKE
$50.00 Cash Prize
Any Menu Nachos
$2.00
9:30 - 10:30
THE 24 PUB
CELEBRATES 24 YRS 1968-1992 IN AMHERST
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

Harriers finish third in A-10s

By GWENDOLYN McLAURIN
Collegian Correspondent

It is a crunch time for the University of Massachusetts men's Cross Country team. It started last weekend in Van Cortlandt Park, Bronx, New York and it won't end until Nov. 14 when the IC4A Championships are held in Lehigh University, Bethlehem, Penn.

Last weekend, the team competed in the Atlantic-10 Conference Championship and finished third behind St. Joseph's University and West Virginia University.

"I felt going into the meet that we had a chance to win and I would not have been surprised to come in second or third, but I was hoping to win the whole thing. I still think that we have the potential to run as well as the top two teams [in the Atlantic-10 division]," said Coach Ken O'Brien. "I've come away from the meet thinking that we can be a better team than both St. Joe's and West Virginia."

West Virginia finished the race with 48 points and UMass ended up with 61 points, which was the closest gap in scores for the entire field of teams. UMass ran very strong and by the four mile mark they held a lead over West Virginia. However, they were unable to hold the lead and faded slightly towards the end of the race. That, coupled with West Virginia's strong finish, finalized the scoresheet and forced UMass to settle for third.

"In some respects, I'm a little disappointed, but I like to focus on the positive parts of the team's performance." said Coach O'Brien. "We did have a good team effort. We just didn't finish it off the way we should have."

Coach O'Brien had high praise for some of the individual runners who ran strong races. Matt Simon finished first in team scoring while placing fifth overall with a time of 26:01.63. Kevin Greehalgh, a junior, finished eleventh overall right behind Simon with a time of 26:29.37. After that, UMass came together in a pack where, of the next eight spots, four of them were occupied by UMass runners. The pack included sophomores Rick Copley and Brian Cox.

"Those four guys I really feel had the best day of our entire group." said Coach O'Brien.

The team is now looking forward to their next meet which will be held this Saturday at the Franklin Park Zoo in Boston.

"The recent polls in New England show UMass in the second five. They haven't seen our best race yet. There has only been one race where we've had our top two runners (Simon and Erik Andelman) together and that was at Vermont," said Coach O'Brien.

"Most teams have not seen our best race and I'm the kind of person who believes that anything is possible. And I'm not saying that UMass is a longshot, either. I can accurately project that if we have five good races out of any of our top seven runners then there is a good chance that we could move up substantially in ranking."

AVENGERS

The world's mightiest heroes on sale monthly from Marvel!®
Available at:
Same Bat Channel
Comics, Cards, Games and more...
Hampshire Mall, Hadley 586-8775 Ingleside Mall, Holyoke 532-9797
... fly on your own wings of imagination....
Open Monday- Saturday 10 am- 9pm Sunday 12 pm- 5pm
COMICS TRADE PAPERBACKS GRAPHIC NOVELS
TM & © 1992 MARVEL ENTERTAINMENT GROUP, INC. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9)
Amherst • 253-5072

PERSONAL
Nice, Affordable two and three bedroom Apts., seeking quiet, responsible residents. Long and short term relationship possible.
Call 253-3834

HEY BANDS OUT THERE!!
SOUTHWEST AREA GOVERNMENT IS PROUD TO PRESENT THE 10TH ANNUAL BATTLE OF THE BANDS!
Interested bands should pick up an application outside our office (located in Hampden Commons, across from the Munchy Store in Southwest). Drop off application and a demo tape (2 songs)
NO LATER THAN 5 pm Thursday Oct. 29
Any Questions? Call 5-0960
BE PART OF THE ULTIMATE HYPE!
S.W.A.G. '92-'93, 'CUZ THAT'S WHERE IT'S AT!

Sukiennik

continued from page 12

Stanley Cup run. Last year, the magic wore off and the North Stars hit the middle of the road.

This years' Stars are 5-3-1, with an impressive 4-1 Smythe Division record. Could it be that the Stars are for real this time? Their goals for—goals against ratio is a pretty mediocre 35-33, so they're not winning games by much. But a 6-0 win looks like a 3-2 overtime squeaker in the win-loss column.

Go figure what happened to St. Louis and Chicago. They're holding up the rest of the Smythe from the cellar, behind Tampa Bay. Let me say that again, behind Tampa Bay. You know this won't last very long. Either that or the Lightning signed a pact with the devil (or the Devils) to be the first expansion team to make the playoffs since the NHL expanded from 6 to 12 in the 1970s.

Go back to the junior leagues, eh: the pathetic Ottawa Senators might consider AHL membership. They haven't won or tied since their surprising opening-night upset over Montreal. The Sens' big problem seems to be offense, sine they've only scored 18 goals in eight games. (Fellow expandee Tampa has rung up 32).

Greg Sukiennik appears every Wednesday on the Collegian Sports page.

Meditation. 禅
Mental Clarity.
Mystical Experiences.
Emotional Balance.
Spiritual Depth.
It will be with you for the rest of your life.
Learn How. Now.
A special program for people 18-29.
FREE Every Wednesday
October 21-December 9
UMass-Amherst • Campus Center • 7:30-9:00pm
Oct. 21, Rm. 903 Nov. 18, Rm. 911
Oct. 28, Rm. 174 Nov. 25, Rm. 803
Nov. 4, Rm. 905-09 Dec. 2, Rm. 803
Nov. 11, Rm. 803 Nov. 9, Rm. 803

New members only! Expires 10/30/92
BOYDEN RELIEF
2 FOR $45 (one month)
FLEX FITNESS CENTER
253-3539

the Vertex nightclub
FRIDAY OCTOBER 30
18 & Over
JOHN VALBY "Dr. Dirty"
DRINK SPECIALS
Hollywoods $1.50
Kami Kazi $1.50
Under New Management
Advance Tix Available
Route 9 • Hadley • 586-4463

UNIVERSITY FACULTY AND STAFF

The United Way campaign is about to begin and I appeal to you for your financial contribution.

This Fall, for only the second year, Advocacy Network is listed as an approved agency by COMEC (Commonwealth of Massachusetts Employees Contribution) to receive your contribution as a state employee through COMEC via United Way as the collection agency.

Advocacy Network is an all-volunteer group which advocates for the mentally retarded residing primarily in Western Massachusetts. We have achieved much success as evidenced by our lengthy record of significant accomplishments – including the involvement of the federal and state courts – and we are soon to achieve a historic first: the closing of the Belchertown State School by January 1993.

Through the years, Advocacy Network has been closely involved with thousands of University of Massachusetts students who have participated in the long-standing and successful Boltwood Project, a recognized student organization.

As you prepare your COMEC contribution form, please specify Advocacy Network. None of us is paid. We are dependent upon public contributions.

If you wish to learn more about Advocacy Network, please phone (413) 256-1313 and we will not only answer your questions, but we will mail you our handsome, updated flyer.

Thank you.

Sincerely
Benjamin Ricci
Professor Emeritus
UM/Amherst
Board Chairman
Advocacy Network

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Multicultural Night
International entertainment and cuisine needed for campus wide event (ingredients will be provided) Show UMass your culture! Call by Nov. 6th 253-0522

Tour of Wall Street & United Nations

November 6, 1992
Day trip to New York City $32
Call 546-3727 NOW!
Organized by the European Club

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Greeks and Clubs raise a cool $1,000 in just ONE WEEK!
Plus $1000 for the member who calls!
And a free HEADPHONE RADIO just for calling 1-800-932-0528 Ext. 65

Like Applied Science?
Try Food Science as a major
Call Dr. Chinachoti 545-1025

Need a locker? We have them at OCHO! 428 Student Union

PVOC OIL COOP. Purchase home heating oil at reduced cost. Register at OCHO, 428 Student Union or call 545-0865. Save money and stay warm.

COLLEGE PIZZA

College Pizza
Fall Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $6.00
Free soda with purchase of large sub salad or spaghetti
549-6098 549-6073
Must mention this ad

FOR RENT

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus
$899/mo 256-0741

Fridge rental free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Dot Matrix printer IBM compatible $120. Call 245-9542 after 5 ask for Don

Tandy 200 Portable computer
2 Power Pacs + case and manuals
Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O.

HELP WANTED

Alaske Summer Employment - fisheries earn $600+ a week in canneries $4000/month on fishing boats. Free transportation! Room and Board! Male or Female. Get a head start on this summer. For employment program call 1-206-545-4155 ext. A5001

BE A SPRING BREAK REP!
EARN FREE TRIPS and the HIGHEST COMMISSIONS! Cancun, Daytona, & Jamaica from $159. Call TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL today!
(800)32-TRAVEL

Couples – Property Manager Free Amherst apartment plus salary Debbie 256-0741

Evening Jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action $7/hr. On buslines. 584-9830

Earn $1,500 WEEKLY mailing our circulars! ... Begin NOW!...FREE packet! SEYS Dept. 121 Box 4000 Cordova, IN 380184000

$200 - $500 WEEKLY
Assemble products at home. Easy! No selling. You're paid direct. Fully guaranteed. FREE INFORMATION - 24 HOUR HOTLINE. 801-379-2900 Copyright # MA15KDH

$252.50 Sell 50 funny college T-shirst and make $252.50. No financial obligation. A risk ree program. Avg. sales time = 4-6 hours. Choose from 18 designs. Smaller/Larger quantities avail. Call 1-800-733-3265.

STUDENTS OR ORGANIZATIONS

Promote our Florida Spring Break packages. Earn MONEY and FREE trips. Call Campus Marketing 800-423-5264

WANTED: TRAVEL REPS for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SIESTA, ask for Bonnie

Work for Us
UMass Outing Club
Now hiring an
EQUIPMENT MANAGER
Applications avail.
at UMOC office
423 C Student Union
Due Nov. 9

HEY YOU

TV Times has UMass cable and town of AMherst cable listings customized for you. Pick it up on campus today. Valuable coupons inside!

LEGAL INTERNSHIPS

Spring 1993 internships with the Legal Services Center! Get hands-on experience in the legal field -- work directly with attorneys and clients. No experience in the legal profession necessary -- training provided. Contact Legal Services today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center. November 13 is the application deadline.

LOST

Lost: License at Friday's party
Please return in girls 546-2909

MUSICIANS

Guitar Lesson Berklee graduate 534-0163

PERSONALS

Anne Marie of Tri-Sigma
Only a few more hours and you will find out who I am.
You're awesome -- I'm so glad you're my little.
Sigma love and mine,
Your Big Sister

Gillian
Happy Birthday
Happy Belated Birthday Demetris

To the Best R.A. on the seventh floor.

Love the T.M.'s

Kim S. from Tri Sigma
Tonight is the night! Get Psyched!
Love Your Big Sis

Mary Bressin
Happy Birthday! You're my one and only. I love you very much. We have been and always will be "Always and Forever"
Love,
Michael

RIDE WANTED

Need a ride to North Adams Saturday and back on Sunday. Please call Laura at 546-1394

SERVICES

Free Peer counseling lesbian, gay, bisexual issues. Phone or walk in. LBG counseling collective, 406G Student Union 545-2645.

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops. 549-1906.

Resumes
Need Help? I have experience with Resumes. Quick service, free advice, excellent quality, and LOW prices. IBM laser printing service available.
Call Andy at 549-8463

Tarot Readings
Call Chris 256-0821

ROOMMATES WANTED

Female to share large room 167.50 call 665-7604

North Amherst female to share two bedroom nice clean. On bus route 200/month ASAP Call Holly 549-4259 eves

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed – Free cover page, spell check, laser printout. $1.50/ page. Brian 546-1795

Typing - Word Processing.
Resumes, Reports, Theses, Dissertations. Laser Printing
Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/PG 24hr turnaround 586-5268

WANTED

Are you moving out of Puffton?
Could we take over your lease?
2/Bedroom wanted Call 6-1993.

3 DAYS until MIDNIGHT MADNESS

Sports

B's are back, Tampa's hot, Ottawa's not

The Bruins are back.

The past two seasons have seen Boston Bruins' squads that have done well for the most part, but shown signs of weakness and inconsistency. No such problem this year. Even without Cam "someday I'll get healthy and when I do, Ulf Samuelson dies" Neely, the Bruins have streaked out to a 6-1-1, 13 point, 41 goals-scored start.

What's more impressive is that 4 of those 6 wins have come on the road. The opposition wasn't exactly Stanley Cup calibre (San Jose? Edmonton?). But hey, they're all wins. Who's complaining?

Bruins coach Brian Sutter is. It's obvious he knows what he's doing by his comments on the team's play. It's a long season, and 6-1-1 means nothing compared to the playoffs. When they get to where he wants them to go, the Bruins will be drinking champagne.

Greg
SUKIENNIK

That old Bruins competitive fire is back, too. Witness Darren Banks, man without fear. He couldn't catch on anywhere else, but Sutter and general manager Harry Sinden knew a big part of the Bruins mystique is intimidation. To date, Banks has 32 penalty minutes in eight games — that's roughly a five-minute major per game. Look out, Ulfie boy. Darren's coming for you.

Meanwhile, the Pittsburgh Penguins picked up where they left off last year — dominating the opposition. The undefeated Penguins (7-0-2) have rung up 49 scores, the most in the league, and are only allowing 3.16 goals per game. What's more, Mario Lemieux is healthy and dominating games again. Yes, it's still early, but the Pens look like contenders.

If and when the Penguins falter, both New York teams (no, the Devils don't count) will be there, beating the whatever out of each other. Everyone already knows what the Rangers can do — namely, choke big-time in the playoffs — but the Islanders are a relatively new story.

A year ago, the Islanders were hopelessly mired in the Patrick cellar. Suddenly they're in third. What happened? First, the players the Isles picked up in the Pat LaFontaine trade, i.e. Benoit Hogue and Pierre Turgeon, are no joke. Second, the Islanders' minor league system, which produced AHL playoff contenders the last three years in Springfield and Albany, N.Y., has finally paid dividends.

Ha ha ha: The Edmonton Oilers are a pathetic 1-8-1. Laugh now while you can, because they'll still probably win the Campbell Conference. What the heck, they always do.

Also in the Campbell: two years ago, Minnesota shocked the hockey world with a rags-to-riches

Turn to SUKIENNIK, page 11

New role, same result for Eddy

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

JOSH REYNOLDS/ COLLEGIAN
The University of Massachusetts women's soccer team defeated the University of Vermont Tuesday 2-0 to run their record 13-3.

Skye Eddy knows a thing or two about a soccer net. Mainly, what its like to play between the pipes.

Yesterday, Eddy proved she knew how to shoot between those same posts as she netted her first collegiate goal in the University of Massachusetts' 2-0 victory over Vermont.

Eddy has spent the last few seasons at UMass honing her skills as a goal keeper. She has proven to be one of the finest keepers in the nation and is a viable candidate for All-American honors this season.

However, Massachusetts (13-3) has another All-American caliber goal keeper in Briana Scurry and for most of this season playing time was split between the pair. At least until UMass coach Jim Rudy discovered Eddy's prowess as an attacker.

"Skye's a goal keeper but our attack has been missing something lately," Rudy said. "What we were missing we saw in her."

Rudy had recently seen his team's offensive attack stall out and half way through Saturday's game at Connecticut he sent Eddy in as a spark. She turned out to be the player of the game.

By yesterday, the skilled and experienced keeper had won herself a starting job, at forward.

"I'd rather play in goal but the team needed me to play up so I have to make the most of it," Eddy said.

The most of it has turned out to be an uncompromising style of attack. Eddy is more likely to go through a defender than around her.

"She fights and challenges and digs and pounces and does whatever she needs to do to gain control of the ball," Rudy said. "She's not as technical as most forwards but she makes up for it. She plays physical."

At this point the Minutewomen's goaltending rotation is on the back burner, Scurry is the starter in net and Eddy is in place on the front line.

"Skye came to me Monday and offered to play more up front if it would help the team," Rudy said. "It is a tremendous sacrifice for her. Skye's goal is to be the national team's keeper but for our team she is willing to step aside and do what she can to help. It is a sacrifice which I don't take lightly."

Eddy may still rather be in net for UMass' drive to earn an NCAA tournament bid, but scoring a goal helps make her new situation a little less difficult.

"Scoring was awesome, but it was weird," Eddy said. "I guess I probably enjoy scoring more than most players because I know how angry I get when I'm scored upon."

Whether she's trying to put the ball in or keep it out, Massachusetts has an unselfish athlete who is sure to be factor the rest of its season.

Minuteman gridiron notebook

By CHRIS CUDDY
Collegian Staff

While Villanova head coach Andy Talley was busy crying over spilt milk moments after the Massachusetts 13-9 shocker over his Wildcats on Saturday, the UMass football team was busy celebrating its fifth straight victory, and its revival from the controversy that threatened to break the team over the off-season.

Picked to finish seventh in pre-season Yankee Conference polls, the Minutemen refused to let the scandals and controversies of the off-season, including the resignation of then head coach Jim Reid, affect them on the field of play where the coach Hodges and company have bolted out of the gate to a 5-1 start.

That 5-1 start, coupled with the Minutemen's upset of Villanova (ranked eighth in Division 1-AA previous to the game) propelled UMass into the polls this week with the Minutemen holding onto the 20th spot.

In other polls, UMass moved up to third in this week's Lambert-Meadowlands Trophy poll, behind YanCon rivals Delaware and Richmond, the same two teams that the Minutemen are bottlenecked with near the top of the YanCon standings.

Defense comes up big

The UMass defense played the game of games this weekend against the 'Cats, three times stuffing the Villanova offense inside the Minuteman 20-yard line.

Mario Perry continues to play like a man possessed, as the Albany, N.Y. native made 10 tackles, while sacking 'Nova quarterback Tom Columbo two and a half times for 24 yards in losses.

Perry's defensive effort was good enough to take home this week's ECAC Div-1AA defensive player of the week award, but not the YanCon defensive player of the week award which went to UConn's Gary Bailey (who votes on these things anyway?)

If the YanCon award didn't go to Perry, it surely should have gone to Minuteman cornerback Tony Williams who recorded six tackles, three pass deflections (including one to save a touchdown), one interception and was responsible for breaking up a 'Nova punt early in the second quarter.

Turn to NOTEBOOK, page 10

Minutemen travel to Fairfield to face the Stags

JOSH REYNOLDS/ COLLEGIAN
The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team takes on the Stags of Fairfield today at 2:00 in Fairfield, CT.

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

In all sports, it is dangerous to look past an opponent and ahead to another. On Wednesday, the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team will try not to do that as they travel to Fairfield, Connecticut to take on the Fairfield Stags.

The danger for the 9-4-2 Minutemen is there because on Friday the team will travel to Washington to finish off their battle against the Colonials. What's at stake in that game? Oh nothing, except the Atlantic 10 regular season championship and No.1 seed in the A-10 tourney.

The Stags (5-5-3), a member of the Mid Atlantic Athletic Conference, have an opportune time to score an upset if the Minutemen aren't focused.

In their last performance, the Minutemen played a great game against Hartford, but hit the posts a couple of times and were forced to settle for a 2-2 tie. UMass coach Sam Koch said he was pleased with his team's play against Hartford.

"We played well, we deserved to win," he said. "We had to finish our chances, though, we just hit the crossbar a couple of times."

Koch also said that he knows Fairfield is a team not to be overlooked.

"Fairfield is a tough team," he said. "They beat Loyola (2-0 last Wednesday), so they are a good, tough team."

Leading that good, tough team at the offensive end is Jason Harmon. Harmon has three goals and four assists on the year, for a total of 10 points.

The real strength for the Stags, though, comes in the form of goalie Andy Tennant. Tennant has been a solid pillar in the net, posting three shutouts thus far.

For UMass the key will continue to be their solid defense which sets up their potent offense. Against Hartford, the Minutemen defense was strong. Junior Chris Merrill said that the defense played really well.

"I think our defense really pulled it together," he said. "We played some strong defense."

Game Notes: Randy Jacobs earned the Atlantic 10 Player of the Week award for the second straight week. With 32 points on the year, Jacobs is the scoring leader in the A-10. Hartford's much heralded (especially here in the Collegian) forward Elvis Thomas played a mere 10 minutes against UMass on Sunday and was held scoreless. After today's battle and the Friday finish at GW, the Minutemen wrap up their regular season on Sunday at Maine.

Thursday October 29, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 36

93 degrees and sunny. HA! Really...Mid-50s. Chance of rain.

Local News:
Federal mediator Marty Walsh says the administration and minority students are making progress in their negotiations regarding racial issues on campus. Page 3.

This Weekend:
Blood. Guts. Gore. Movies. Get ready and get your fill of the best horror flicks this Halloween weekend. Page W2.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Library to purchase books

Staff seeks increased budget to bring library up to par

By PAUL PRECHT
Collegian Correspondent

Four months into the new fiscal year, the University of Massachusetts Tower Library has ordered over 12,000 new books, already more than the 8,900 purchased during the last fiscal year, during which the library suffered from having its lowest-ever level of financial resources.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
After several years of cuts, the University Library has had funding restored. This additional funding allows the Library to renew subscriptions to important academic journals.

The increased book orders, which should total 25,000 by the end of the year, are the result of a three million dollar state special appropriation for libraries.

Administrators and staff say they feel the book purchases will put the library back on par with its peer institutions in terms of yearly acquisitions. The new budget allows the library to reestablish its regular purchase of titles from the university presses and for its Latin America collection.

The increased funding, up from less than $900,000 last year, is the result of "pressure" brought by the Faculty Senate Library Committee, the library staff and students, according to English Professor David Paroissien, a member of the committee.

The committee released a report last January saying the library was in "crisis." In April, faculty and library staff held a symbolic bake sale to raise funds for the library on the steps of the State House in Boston.

"The library became a symbol of the University's plight," explained Jeanne Kocsis, interim associate director for collection development. "The government more or less saw the light."

Funding for next year is "very much dependent on the economy," according to Richard J. Talbot, director of libraries at UMass.

Talbot said he views this year's increased appropriation as almost "accidental." The increase was the result of a conversation between Paul Marks, chair of the Higher Education Coordinating Council, and Gov. Weld in which Marks described the libraries of the state's five colleges as "broken."

"One year we have a famine. One year we have a glut — mostly famines rather than gluts," said history Professor Vincent Ilardi, chair of the faculty's library committee. "There should be a way whereby an institution is more or less assured of at least a minimum so that planning can take place."

Last year the collections divisions, working under predictions of level funding for the following year, prepared a plan to cancel between 25 and 40 percent of periodical subscriptions. In June, promises of an increased budget allowed the cancellations to be called off. The experience left the "selection staff limp, enervated and mistrustful of the future," according to the library's annual report.

The library is using over $600,000 of this year's budgetary windfall to purchase a number of expensive reference materials such as microfilms and indexes of periodicals. Such high priced items are necessary for a research library, according to Kocsis. As an example, Kocsis cited the cost of

Turn to BOOKS, page 4

O'Brien seeks investigation of UM official

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff and
Associated Press

The ongoing turmoil concerning the University of Massachusetts athletic department continued Wednesday when Chancellor Richard O'Brien announced he had written to the State Ethics Commission requesting the Commission's investigation of allegations of wrongdoing by a former administrator.

For the past seven months, a constant barrage of allegations have been raised by various newspapers concerning the travel and spending practices of personnel within the school of physical education and the athletic department, particularly exercise science professor Frank Katch and former Dean of the school of physical education David Bischoff.

Katch allegedly had a financial conflict of interest when he was the head of the University's exercise science department by having a financial stake in a company which bid for and received a contract from the university to provide equipment for the residential area fitness centers, or "body shops."

Writing the Ethics Commission concerning Katch, O'Brien said, "because of the extensive media attention and politicized context in which the issue has arisen, we believe a disinterested review or investigation by the Ethics Commission would be helpful."

With this referral to state authorities, O'Brien said it would no longer be appropriate for the University to continue its internal investigation of these specific allegations. However, O'Brien said the University will continue to review and respond to disclosures and information made available and will consider sanctions for improper conduct when warranted.

As a result of the media attention, O'Brien had announced an internal investigation, led by Provost Glen Gordon, which would investigate all questions which were raised by the press or by the House Post Audit and Oversight Committee, which saw fit to

Turn to INQUIRY, page 8

State faculty seek raises

University heads say need is critical

By JON MARCUS
Associated Press

BOSTON — Warning that the quality of higher education is eroding, the executives of all 29 state colleges and universities on Wednesday called for salary increases for their faculty and staff.

"The quality of our institutions and of the service they provide to the citizens of the commonwealth is severely diminished by the failure to remedy this critical problem," the presidents and chancellors said in a letter to Gov. William F. Weld.

Most Massachusetts colleges and university employees have not received a raise since 1988, while their share of the cost of medical coverage and other benefits has increased and in a time during which inflation totaled 19 percent.

"The morale on these campuses is horrible," said John Polidori, a spokesman for the Massachusetts Teachers Association.

"Never mind the sob stories, here's our most immediate problem: we're trying to rebuild these institutions," said David Lenson, president of the faculty union at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. "We're going to try to go out and recruit [new faculty] and tell them, 'Yeah, you'll love the place, and by the way, we haven't had a raise since 1988."

Top professors have been lured away, and new prospective faculty are going elsewhere. Budget cuts means those employees that are left are doing more work without an increase in their paycheck.

"Either that, or the customers are getting less," said Polidori.

Massachusetts has fallen from fifth to 21st since 1989 in salaries paid to faculty in the state university system, according to the American Association of University Professors. Pay for state college faculty has gone from 10th to 34th and for community college staff from seventh in the nation down to 26th.

"Those institutions themselves must contend with serious and, arguably, irreversible drains of qualified personnel," the presidents and chancellors said in their letter.

It would take an estimate $66 million in faculty salary raises just to cover increases in the cost of living, state officials said.

"The reason that employees in higher ed, like other state employees, haven't gotten a raise is that the state just couldn't afford it," said Ginny Buckingham, a Weld spokeswoman.

UM Republicans rally for change in Congress

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

Several local Republicans called President Bush the real agent of change in the United States and accused Congress of getting a "free ride" in a rally on the Student Union steps yesterday.

Approximately 50 students waved signs supporting their candidates at the rally. Although the Republican Club sponsored the event, the crowd was equally divided between Bush and Clinton supporters.

Anthony Ravosa, who is running for state representative in the 2nd Congressional District, blamed the state of the economy on Congress and accused legislators of taking pay raises and bribes.

"Congress is not going to get cleaned up unless we start at home," Ravosa, a Boston College graduate, said. "People are pointing a finger at the people in Congress."

Congress is raising taxes and overspending, according to state Senate candidate Joe Boynton. Boynton said Congress would try to institute "mandatory welfare."

"We need to reduce taxes and expand the tax base," Boynton said.

Former Republican Club President Kevin Jourdain, a senior political science major, also accused Congress of gaining "free rides," through doing little and spending taxpayers' money.

Jourdain said Bush was more of a candidate for change than Clinton, and he suggested voters replace incumbents in Congress.

"We do not have a congressmen that represents us," Jourdain said.

But Jourdain endorsed Ravosa, saying he would be a new kind of congressman.

"Tony Ravosa is going to offer change just like Bush," Jourdain said.

Noticing the group of about 12 students holding signs for Congressman John Olver, who currently represents the 1st District, Student Trustee Kevin Newnan said Olver was part of the gridlock in Washington. Olver is running against Republican

Turn to CONGRESS, page 8

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
Elizabeth Ragsdell, a Mt. Holyoke junior studying international relations, tells why she won't be voting for Bill Clinton this November.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editor .....
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inès Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

NOW YOU CAN GET DIRTY FOR A WHOLE LOT LESS.
TREK USA MOUNTAIN BIKES
ON SALE!
850 was $519.95 now $449.95
6000 was $659.95 now $519.95
All Other '92s On Sale!
'93 Bikes Rolling In Daily!
NORTHAMPTON BICYCLE
EST 1971
319 Pleasant St.
Northampton, MA
586-3810
800-464-3810
TREK USA

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day
Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

• University police are investigating an alleged acquaintance rape which took place this past weekend in the Southwest Residential Area. Police said a 19-year-old woman reported the rape on Tuesday.

No further information was available as of press time.

• A man working for the Physical Plant paint crew was struck by a woman driving a Physical Plant van on Tuesday and was brought to the University Health Services after one of the van's wheels ran over the man's left leg.

Thomas Thornton was struck in the chest and knocked to the ground by the rear bumper of the van while he was kneeling on the road preparing to paint traffic lines. The woman driving the van apparently did not see him when she backed the van down the road.

• University police discovered a shotgun in a vehicle parked near the Cage on Tuesday morning. Police contacted the owner and he produced a valid Firearms permit. The man was issued a warning and reminded him that it is illegal to have a firearm on campus.

• A vehicle operating on the sidewalk in front of Cashin Residence Hall struck a woman and then left the scene on Tuesday, according to police. The woman was not injured after the accident, which occurred at 7:40 p.m. She later provided police with information which led them to the owner and operator of the vehicle. The operator was cited for operating on a sidewalk, according to police.

• A woman lodged a Court Order with University police on Tuesday against her former boyfriend. The woman sought the order after the man allegedly assaulted her in another state this past weekend.

• Staff from Emerson Residence Hall discovered a lewd poster on the wall on Tuesday evening, according to police. The poster was located on the third floor of the dormitory, and apparently depicted Black and White males drawn onto the poster with emphasis on their genital areas.

• A woman reported damage to her car after it was allegedly struck by another car on Tuesday. At 4:40 p.m., the woman reported the accident to police, and a witness later furnished police information on the vehicle which left the scene. Police are now investigating the incident.

Hughes' legacy funds research

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press

BETHEDSDA, Md. — Just off the lobby in a nondescript office park in suburban Washington hangs a life-sized oil painting of a clear-eyed young man in a suit, tie and pilot's overalls.

Except for the name on the door, it is the only real hint of the source of a fortune that quietly has become a powerful force in medical science.

The portrait's subject is the namesake of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute, the biggest private philanthropy in the United States. With $7 billion in assets, it is second only to the National Institute of of Health — the federal government — as a sponsor of basic medical research.

It was after the settlement of Hughes' will in 1984 that his shadowy institute, long regarded as a glorified tax dodge, became the nation's richest private philanthropy.

Over the past eight years, it has spent lavishly, putting up buildings, fitting out labs and hiring some of the brightest people in U.S. science. And though it has not quite cornered the brain power market, it is working on it, especially in the area of genetics.

The Hughes has 223 investigators, including four Nobel Laureates, and a total of 2,130 employees at 53 institutions around the country.

Last year, it spend $250 million on research, or about 27 percent of the total private, nonprofit support for biomedical research in in the country.

"It's been a phenomenal boost to the biomedical science," said Rebecca Rimel, executive director of the Pew Charitable Trust. "It is a closed society. There is a lot of debate about whether that's in the best interests of science. But not many can take issue with the fact that it is a wonderful resource."

Dr. Maxwell Cowan, the institute's research director, is also its Michael Anthony.

Anthony, as those under the age of 40 might not know, was the gentleman in a 1950s TV show who tracked down strangers and presented them — out of the blue — with cashier's checks for $1 million, tax free, from a reclusive billionaire.

Cowan phones unsuspecting scientist and offers them a legacy from another reclusive billionaire. His proposal: a science job known as Hughes investigator. Even adjusted for inflation, it's probably better than getting a million bucks.

Hardly anyone refuses Cowan's offer, and the reasons are clear: Hughes investigators are a privileged elite.

Beyond the honor and mystique of the whole affair — one does not apply to be a Hughes investigator; one is chosen — there is all that money.

Science is expensive. Most of it is financed by the NIH, which gives grants to university-based scientist to conduct experiments. Writing one grant application takes months, and a good-size lab needs to win three or four of them to stay in business. The competition is fierce.

Hughes investigators don't worry much about money. Even though they remain on the faculties at places like Harvard and Duke, they are Hughes employees. The institute pays their salaries, hires junior scientists and technicians, stocks their labs with awesomely expensive equipment and spends whatever else it takes to do top-notch science.

Even better, the Hughes, as it is called, does not tell its investigators what to investigate. It likes to say that it supports careers, not projects, so its people are free to follow the scientific scent wherever it takes them, veering from genetics to endocrinology if the trail is promising.

TRAVEL SAFE, PLAY HEALTHY, READ HARD.
COLLEGIAN.
THE WORKS.

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8 A.M.-11 P.M.
Tel: 549-2692
Our Prices Won't Scare You!!!
BUD LIGHT 24-12 oz. cans $11.99 + dep.
NATURAL LIGHT 1/2 KEGS $32.99 + dep. (Permit NOT required to purchase kegs)
CAPTAIN MORGAN 1.75 Ltr w/free 2 Ltr Coke CO-PACK 16.99 *3.00 MAIL-IN-REBATE FINAL COST $13.99 750 ml.
KEYSTONE & KEYSTONE LIGHT 12 pack cans $5.39 + dep.
KAHLUA LIQUEUR WOW! $14.99 1.0 L.
DOMAINE STE. MICHELLE BRUT CHAMPAGNE $7.99 750 ml.
FOX RUN ITALIAN RED & WHITE 750 ml. 2 for $6.99
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
Tele-check for your personal check.
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
We now have all Mass. lottery games!
FULL SELECTION OF NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE & BEERS

TRAVEL SMART THIS WINTER!
FROM NEW YORK
Roundtrip / One Way
London $305 $165
Paris $398 $219
Rome $525 $320
Oslo/Stockholm $458 $229
Tel Aviv/Istanbul $639 $329
Guatemala City $390 $205
Costa Rica $430 $225
Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Customs Immigration and departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*In NYC

Local News

Nap attack

According to the president of Teikyo Marycrest University, college students should nap at least once a day, even if it is during class, according to a report in The Exponent, the student newspaper of Purdue University.

Joseph D. Olander, the president of the 1,400-student campus located in Davenport, Iowa, has encouraged his students to take a 10 to 15 minute nap sometime between noon and 1 p.m.

"Latin, Asian and Mediterranean peoples have long known that naps are very good for us, spiritually, mentally and physically," Olander said.

Olander even approves of napping in class.

"I would like to encourage faculty who are teaching during that hour to ask students simply to lower their heads at their desks with them and take a nap."

Take note, Dr. Hooker.

Door-to-door service

The bizarre story of the week comes once again from The Daily Texan, the student newspaper of the University of Texas at Austin.

In nearby Richmond, Texas a funeral home dumped the body of a man on his son's doorstep after the son was unable to pay the full price of cremation.

The body of George Bojarski, covered only with a sheet, was found Monday evening at the door of his son's apartment. Bojarski, 66, had died of cancer a few days earlier.

The body had been picked up by Evans Mortuary, but when the son, Larry Bojarski, paid only $299 of the $683 bill, the funeral home returned the body.

"I saw his head come out of the sheet," said the son. "I called the police and they said, 'How do you know it's your father?' And I told them, 'I see his face. I know what he looks like!' What am I supposed to do with the body? He's my father."

Newell Evans, owner of the mortuary, said he did return the body but it was not done maliciously.

"Who says I dumped him there? I left him there," Evans said. Asked if he thought the practice was unethical, Evans replied: "Who defines ethics?" When told other funeral homes considered it unethical, Evans responded: "They can run their establishments as they see fit and I will run mine my way."

Another local funeral home agreed to provide the service free of charge.

Police are uncertain whether charges will be pressed or if the act was even criminal.

What is still unanswered is whether or not the son got his $299 back. As I see it, since about half the money was paid, the mortuary owed it to the customer to cremate half of the body before returning the rest.

The bare facts

If you are looking to get close to White House frontrunners Bill Clinton and Al Gore, look no further than the Great Outdoor Underwear Festival, which took place last week in Piqua, Ohio.

According to the Daily Kent Stater, the student newspaper of Kent State University, a pair of boxer shorts autographed by Clinton and Gore were to be auctioned off.

Clinton signed one leg and Gore the other. The group was prepared to ask President Bush to sign a pair of shorts when he campaigned in Ohio later in the week.

Some of the other famous undies to be auctioned include a pair from singer Crystal Gayle and a pair from Bob Denver, who played Gilligan on television's "Gilligan's Island."

Beam me up — to Idaho

The big news at the University of Idaho this week appears to be the visit by James Doohan, who played Scotty on "Star Trek."

According to The Argonaut, the student newspaper on campus, Doohan pleased a large gathering of students with some humorous stories from the '70s television show. Apparently Doohan is no friend of William Shatner, who played Captain Kirk on the show, and took a number of shots at both the actor's book and temperament.

Students, administrators make progress in 'frank' negotiations

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

Administrators and minority students are making progress in "frank" negotiations over the issues that have led to racial tensions on campus, according to federal mediator Marty Walsh.

Yesterday the mediators met seperately with students and administrators who have been meeting this week in subcommittees to discuss student's demands for increased minority representation in the University community, key issues of safety and security and the general racial climate on campus.

The student's deadline for the administration to meet their demands, originally set for last Saturday's negotiation, is still being extended as of yesterday, according to Walsh, the regional director of the Justice Department's Community Relations Service. A date for the next formal session has not yet been determined.

Walsh said the "frankness" of the negotiations indicates both sides feel a sense of urgency in resolving the issues involved.

There is a history of distrust between students and administrators, Walsh said, adding that students feel promises have not been honored by the administration.

"But the most important thing now is that there is good faith on both sides and we're making progress," said Walsh.

The demands include an increase in minority students, faculty and staff, an increase in scholarship aid and restoration of the Upward Bound program for minority high school students.

Student leaders and administrators have agreed to work out their differences in mediation sessions administered by the Boston regional office of the U.S. Justice Department's Community Relations Service. The free service sponsored by the department provides conflict-resolution in racial disputes.

Since a recent assault on a Black resident assistant, which led to racial graffiti, threats and other incidents, students have been concerned about their safety, minority representation on campus and the administration's handling of such incidents.

"Both parties are in good faith and proceeding in a proper and effective manner," said Walsh. "There's a commitment from both sides to continue and we anticipate progress."

"I'm glad to hear there's progress by the University. Now that President Hooker is involved, the Chancellor is realizing he has to do something that will benefit the school," said junior Desiree Joseph, chairperson of the Public Outreach Commitee. "I'm sorry it took such a drastic measure, but I'm glad [the administration] finally opened their eyes."

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
Mediator Marty Walsh

Students and administrators involved in negotiations have agreed not to talk about the substance of the negotiations or ongoing communication between both sides.

"I think things are moving along in a positive direction," said Tom Robinson, vice chancellor for student affairs, who met with the mediators yesterday. "We're in the process of getting things accomplished."

Febiola Narcisse, president of the Black Student Union, was unavailable for comment as of press time.

Walsh said the students demands cannot be resolved on a "piecemeal basis" and that a final outcome will be announced when all the issues are resolved.

Though progress is being made on each issue, Walsh said both parties recognize there is a lot of work ahead of them. He said both parties are addressing and clarifying issues in a preliminary stage right now and in the interest of the negotiation process, will schedule a formal negotiation session when both parties are ready.

Acknowledging that both parties are under a lot of pressure, Walsh said he and the other mediator, Lawrence Turner, are trying to move things along as quickly as possible.

Walsh said a major question was how to develop a more inclusive climate that will benefit the entire community.

"It's fortunate we've had a lot of experience. We understand an end can be obtained through negotiation," said Walsh.

Newman Center achieves goals in fundraising drive

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

The Newman Center's recent Phonathon has demonstrated that fundraising can still be successful in spite of depressed economic conditions.

Judith L. Smith, coordinator of Phonathon, said the 450 volunteer callers were able to raise $139,679.55 in pledges. "I am shocked we made our goal and stunned at the generous response of our pledgers," she said.

Smith said she attributes the success of last week's Phonathon to the impact the Center had on alumni's lives while they were at UMass. "The Newman Center provided a homey atmosphere for alumni and they remember that when we call," she said.

Reverend Joseph Quigley, director of the Newman Center, said the money will help pay the estimated $450,000 operational costs of the building. "The Phonathon was a smashing victory for us," he said.

Smith said 95 percent of the volunteers were students and the other 5 percent were faculty, staff and members of the Newman community. "We couldn't have done the Phonathon without the support of the Greek community," she said.

Smith said the volunteers were given 20,000 names of alumni and 4,500 of these alumni gave an average pledge of $31.03.

Quigley said every year the University has given him a list of Catholic students who attended UMass. "We are indebted to the University because we couldn't have run the Phonathon without them," he said.

Smith said the participating fraternities and sororities were responsible for raising almost $53,000. She said the sorority that raised the most money was Kappa Kappa Gamma with $12,788.

According to Smith, Rick Bari, a 14-year resident of

Turn to FUNDRAISER, page 11

Kosher dining a tasty alternative

By STEPHANIE FOLLICK
Collegian Correspondent

If you want a place to eat that offers the intimacy and special preparation of a home-cooked meal, the Kosher Dining Commons may be the place for you.

The Kosher Dining Commons, located in the Hampden building, is in the Southwest Residential Area. The Kosher DC is a small program that provides kosher dinners Monday through Friday, from 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

Kosher Dining started in September of 1974 due to demand from the Jewish community, according to Richard Rossi, director of Food Services. Currently there are about 40 students that are on the program, which costs an additional $120 per semester. Students say this is a small price to pay for what they believe is the best food on campus.

Rossi said in recent years the attendance in the Kosher DC has declined from the approximately 100 students that were on the program several years ago. But in order for the Kosher DC to break even, says Rossi, there has to be 100 to 125 students signed up.

Rossi says that if the economy gets any worse, the Kosher DC will convert to Kosher TV dinners.

The meal plan works on a four-week cycle, which includes two cycles. There is a warm weather cycle which includes lighter meals for the warmer weather, and a cold weather cycle which includes heavier meals to help students survive the New England winters.

Dietician Joyce Friedman plans all of the menus. Rabbi Stanley Friedman oversees the operations to ensure all of the Kosher laws are followed properly. He visits the kitchen three times a week, or has someone as equally qualified to check for him.

Before the spring holiday of Passover, when the Turn to KOSHER, page 9

Literacy reconsidered

Linguistics prof. reads into 'knowledge'

By ANGIE POPOVICH
Collegian Correspondent

While literacy is commonly thought of as the ability to read and write, a University of Southern California linguistics professors says there is a great deal more to it than this.

James Paul Gee stressed the importance of relating popular conceptions of knowledge to the nature of langauge and literacy in contemporary schools in a lecture titled "Literacy: Tuning in to Forms of Life."

The lecture, part of the 1992-92 Literacy Speaker's Series, was held Tuesday in the Campus Center. The Series is sponsored by the School of Education and the Department of English at UMass.

Gee said there is a need to expand the traditional view of literacy beyond simply reading and writing. He suggested "any text can be read in many different ways," so there is a need to place more emphasis on other elements, especially "knowing."

"Multiple literacies are all embedded in different forms of life which have given rise to many problems with education," said Gee. "Since education has to do with knowing, we have to ask 'What does it mean to know?'"

He stressed a new theory in the process of knowing called the connectionist view. Unlike the standard view of cognitive science, it suggests there are networks, not sentences, in our heads which link ideas together.

"Experience and associations with many things" play a key role in this process, according to Gee. "The things stored are things experienced. Generalizations emerge from the information stored. Every experience you have gives you more information for generalizations. When you know something, you can link it together with others that relate to it."

"Gaining authority or trust before making a claim" is also essential to the learning process, said Gee. He said he feels that the learning environment has to be a community where students can make claims comfortably.

He voiced his concerns about whether or not students are able to get this type of feeling in the classrooms. "In most cases students can't gain authority and trust. They can't socially distribute cognition," Gee said. "Minority students are not the only ones being shafted when you push knowing. Most students are."

■ Books

continued from page 1

microfilm of congressional hearings from 1971-74 at $29,574.

"Things like that we'd better go for this year," Kocsis said. Last year's budget for these items was only $676.

The library is also using about $450,000 of university money that normally goes to acquisition of books and periodicals to pay for its share of a new computer system that will link the five college libraries. The library's annual report calls the system "absolutely necessary, if the library is to have any chance of providing competitive information services and remaining relevant to the academic enterprise."

Because of past budget cuts, the library's rating by the Association of Research Libraries has plummeted to 93rd out of 107. Last year's crisis may cause its rating to fall below 100, according to the annual report. Although improved acquisitions for this year should boost its rating into the 80s, the library will still be well short of the university's goal to place in the middle of the rated universities.

"That situation hasn't in any way been addressed," Paroissien said.

Talbot estimates the total library would have to increase from 9.2 million to between 11 and 12 million dollars to bring the ARL rating up to the median.

The library's budget constraints are complicated by the high inflation rate in publishing, according to Kocsis. Because of the exchange rate, the prices of books from abroad have gone "through the roof," Kocsis said. Periodicals are cancelled on an ad hoc basis if they become prohibitively expensive.

The library's current staff of 144 is almost a third smaller than the staff of similar institutions. There are 32 positions which are authorized but which remain vacant due to budget constraints. Only two positions will be filled this year.

"Either more staff will have to be added, or a permanent reduction in certain types of services will have to be accepted as 'normal,'" the library's report states.

"For people in the humanities and social sciences, the most important criterion for an institution is the library," Ilardi said. "You should have at least double the number of books we have, three times the number of periodicals. What is even more dramatic is the kind of institutions that are ahead of us — five state campuses in California alone."

Ilardi also looks to other universities for examples of how to raise money. Rutgers, a state university in New Jersey, raised $166 million in a recent capital campaign.

"Is Rutgers a rich man's school?" Ilardi asked. "If Rutgers can do it, we can do it."

Ilardi proposes having people pay to have study carrels and rooms in the library named after them. The library itself could be named after someone for a donation of around $10 million, he said.

"We should name our buildings, not to dead politicians, but to people who give us money," he said.

ANNOUNCING THE CREF GLOBAL EQUITIES ACCOUNT for SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING.

WE'VE PUT A NEW SPIN ON INVESTING WITH TIAA-CREF

At TIAA-CREF, our goal has always been to make your retirement dollars go farther. Now, they can go as far as London, Frankfurt or Tokyo—or anywhere else in the world where financial opportunities seem promising—with our new CREF Global Equities Account.

THE CREF GLOBAL EQUITIES ACCOUNT EXPANDS THE HORIZON FOR RETIREMENT SAVINGS.

The CREF Global Equities Account is an actively-managed portfolio of both foreign and domestic stocks selected for diversity and growth potential. As part of a wide range of annuity and investment alternatives already offered by TIAA-CREF, it can increase your ability to create a more balanced, well-rounded retirement plan. While returns may vary over time, the CREF Global Equities Account is based on CREF's already-existing strength and the long-term approach to investing that has made TIAA-CREF America's preeminent pension organization.

WHEN IT COMES TO FOREIGN INVESTING, WE'RE ON FAMILIAR GROUND.

We've been speaking the language of foreign investing for nearly twenty years. That's when we pioneered investing pension funds on an international level. All those years of research, market analysis and cultivation of regional contacts have given us special insight into the risks and rewards of today's global marketplace.

DISCOVER MORE ABOUT OUR NEW GLOBAL EQUITIES ACCOUNT.

The CREF Global Equities Account is offered through your TIAA-CREF retirement annuities, subject to the provisions of your employer's retirement plan. It is automatically available for TIAA-CREF Supplemental Retirement Annuities (SRAs).

To find out more about the CREF Global Equities Account or TIAA-CREF's other annuity and investment alternatives, send for our free brochure. Or call 1 800-842-2776.

You'll find that at TIAA-CREF, our world revolves around helping you build a secure and rewarding future.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

SEND FOR OUR FREE BOOKLET

The CREF Global Equities Account—A World of Opportunity and learn more about this exciting new CREF Account. Mail this coupon to: TIAA-CREF, Dept. QC, 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10017. Or call 1 800-842-2776.

Name (Please print)
Address
City State Zip Code
Institution (Full name)
Title Daytime Phone ( )
TIAA-CREF Participant ☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, Social Security #

CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800-842-2733, ext. 5509 for a prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

© 1992 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association/College Retirement Equities Fund

BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL OF AMERICA

If you are over 18, and would like to earn Full Time Income Working Part Time Be a Bartender

- Day/Evening 1 Week
- Local/National Placement
- Limited Openings Remain For September, October, and November Classes
- Make Your Move Today and Receive Additional Savings on Tuition Fees

Call Today! 747-9888 • 1655 Main St., Suite 202 • Springfield MC/VISA/AE

Aerobic Instructor Training Program with Vicki Dailey

▪ 8 week program ▪
▪ Choreography ▪
▪ Motivation techniques ▪
▪ Cueing techniques ▪
▪ Safety ▪
▪ Elders ▪ Pregnancy ▪
▪ Nutrition ▪ Anatomy ▪
▪ Instructor training material ▪
▪ Cassette tape ▪
▪ CPR certificate ▪

Employment opportunities upon successful completion of course
Sunderland
Amherst • Deerfield

Call 549-3638 or 773-5851 for interview and audition

Program to be held Saturday, 12-3 pm at ATHLETIC CLUBS of AMERICA

659 Amherst Street
SUNDERLAND: (413) 549-3638
(Formerly Winners Athletic Club)

UMass prof. receives degree from homeland

In 1956, Julius Fabos, professor of landscape architecture and regional planning at the University of Massachusetts, fled his native Hungary to escape political persecution and receive an education in the United States.

On Nov. 4, with a bit of irony and much satisfaction, Fabos will accept an honorary doctoral degree from the school he was never able to attend, the Hungarian University of Horticulture.

"I've gotten many awards, but this is the most meaningful for me," said Fabos. "It has taken me exactly seven times as long to get this degree than it would have if I had gone to the school when I planned."

Fabos's father was a "Kulak," a successful, independent farmer and community leader, and as such, a threat to the Communist collective movement.

Consequently, in 1949, Fabos was thrown out of his senior year of high school, the family farm was seized by the government and both he and his father were tortured and jailed, with his father receiving an 18-month sentence. Fabos was charged with dismantling the few acres left of the family farm.

Unfortunately, when Fabos inherited the farm, he also inherited his father's sabotage charges. At that time, all young men in Hungary had to serve in the military, but many that the government trust, Fabos included, were assigned to a labor corps, which Fabos describes as a "slave labor camp."

"In 1955, the hardliners took over the country. I talked too much, they arrested me and tortured me," said Fabos. He served 15 months of a two-year sentence, about a year of it doing heavy labor in a coal mine. "One day they just let me go," said Fabos.

The summer after he was freed, Fabos finally earned his diploma and went back to work as a manager on a state-run vineyard. He was scheduled to take the Hungarian University's entrance exam on Oct. 24, 1956, but on Oct. 23 Hungarians took to the streets in a show of sympathy for the plight of the Polish people and as a revolt against the Soviets.

"On Oct. 23, the clock radio alarm came on to wake us, but instead of music we heard gunshots," said Fabos. "We organized ourselves, had a meeting in the farm community. They decided I should lead the freedom fighters and gave me a pistol, a raincoat and a flashlight.

"Instead of bottling wine we bottled gasoline and sent trucks of Molotov cocktails to Budapest," he said. Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev sent in tanks and suppressed the uprising. "The revolution was crushed and we were numb. I had come out of jail just five months earlier and I was involved on the periphery of the revolution — it just didn't look like I would be safe."

Fabos, with the help of friends and some Hungarian soldiers, crossed the border, eventually reaching an Austrian refugee camp. "They asked us where we wanted to go. We picked America by process of elimination," said Fabos. "We wanted a country where foreigners were readily accepted and where we could practice horticulture.

"We were on the first refugee ship and got to New York harbor on New Year's Eve," said Fabos. "The lights by the hundreds, the thousands, the millions — it overwhelmed us." Fabos and the other refugees were taken to a military camp in New Jersey, where they spent two weeks. He received a scholarship to take language classes in Vermont and another to attend Rutgers University that fall.

After Hungary's political climate calmed down, Fabos returned in 1970 to see his family. The fourth time he went back, in 1976, Fabos was greeted not by his family, but by the police. "They got me at the airport, questioned me for three hours, and locked me up for the night." The next morning he was back on the airplane.

Since 1980, Hungary has become much more relaxed and Fabos goes back once or twice a year. His honorary degree follows decades of academic achievement and close work with the faculty of the Hungarian University since the 1970s. Fabos also serves as advisor to the Hungarian Minister of the Environment.

When he accepts his honorary degree, Fabos will give a speech on the role of landscape architecture in the 21st century. "My job is to help show the alternative ways the profession can go. I examine the forces that are affecting the field, nationally and internationally," he said.

Author of four books and more than 130 articles and chapters of books, Fabos has lectured at more than 60 institutions, including a semester in Portugal on a Fulbright grant. Over the years, he has received more than $2.5 million in grants.

Fabos received his diploma from the Junior College of Agronomy, Hungary, in 1956. He received his bachelor's degree in plant science from Rutgers University in 1961, his master's in landscape architecture from Harvard in 1964, and his doctorate in resource planning and conservation from the University of Michigan in 1973.

He has been a member of the faculty at the University of Massachusetts for 28 years.

—UNIVERSITY NEWS OFFICE

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

New! American Beer Exciting! $7.29 case cans
(Quantity Discounts Available)

S.S. Pierce Vodka $8.99 1.75 L

Rolling Rock $6.99 (12/pk. Bots)

BUSCH Bar Bottles $9.49 case

BECK'S Regular $7.99 12/pk bottles
Foster's Lager $7.99 12pk/botts.
Genuine Draft & Draft "Light" $12.99 cs./botts.

Gallo White Zinfandel $5.99 1.5 L

Bacardi Rum $9.99 Liter

Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits
Many More In-Store Specials
All Beers plus Deposit (especially on wines) Delivery Available

the Vertex nitedub
FRIDAY OCTOBER 30
18 & Over
JOHN VALBY "Dr. Dirty"
DRINK SPECIALS
Hollywoods $1.50
Kami Kazi $1.50
Under New Management
Advance Tix Available
Route 9 • Hadley • 586-4463

CHINA GARDEN
"The Collegian's choice in delightful dining"
$2.00 OFF with purchase of $15 or more with this coupon
MSG
Enjoy A Taste of Real Chinese Food
Sunday - Thursday, 11:30-10:00 pm
Friday - Saturday, 11:30am-11:00pm
Lunch Hour: 11:30am-3:30pm 7 days a week
FREE Delivery Service • BYOB
The Valley's only Dim Sum Brunch
• Dim Sum (Chinese Brunch-Mandarin & Cantonese Styles)
Every Day 11:30-3:30
Sample our New Vegetarian Menu
13 N. Pleasant St., Amherst,MA • 253-4280/4281

SQUISHY, LUMPY, OOZY, LOVELY
COLLEGIAN

CAFE DICARLO
5-College Student Dinner Special
Choice of:
- Shrimp Fra Diavlo
- Lasagna al Forno
- Chicken Primavera
- Eggplant Parmigiana

Complete Italian Dinner, including choice of entreé, salad, bread, soda or coffee for $6.95, with college I.D.
Sunday thru Thursday
Offer Expires October 29, 1992
Open Daily at 11:30 a.m.
71 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA
253-9300

PIONEER BOWLING CENTER, INC.
2 West Street, West Hatfield
Massachusetts 01088
247-9506
STUDENT SPECIAL
Every night
Call ahead for availability
99¢ per string with 5-College I.D.
Easy To Get To!
A Perfect Night Out For Friends & Dates
300 Club Lounge For Patrons • 21 yrs. w/I.D.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Hateful graffiti causes shock, disappointment — not fear

I should have gone back to bed. I could feel that it was going to be a bad day. My dooming prophesies unfortunately came true. The day dawned dark and rainy. I dropped my orange juice all over the Hasbrouck lobby, managing to spread broken glass everywhere, and while fleeing from the embarrassment, I lost my wallet. Depressed and thirsty, I complained my way through class, and went back to my room to mope. Little did I know that it was going to continue to become worse.

My sister tried to lift my sagging spirits by inviting me to lunch at the T.O.C. With such a fine atmosphere and good company, I felt my gloominess disappear and even began to believe that my wallet would be returned. After heartily enjoying the Puerto Rican buffet, we made our way back to our dorms, she to Gorman, myself making my way towards Brooks. It was then that I realized how much worse my day could get.

The first thing I saw when I reached my room was the big, ugly, black swastika that someone had drawn on my door with a marker. I was shocked, more than I ever thought I would be. A million things ran through my head, stood, dripping wet and staring at my door, hoping it would erase itself. When I realized it wasn't going to disappear, I went inside to call my sister, Rabbi Saul Perlmutter and the police. My sister got there first, and shared my horror and and disbelief.

Although we had both heard that there was an increase of the number of anti-Semitic acts on campus lately, to see something that represents such hate, directed towards me, was still a surprise. I thought that if it ever did happen to me, I would know how to react, that I would understand that it was simply graffiti meant to scare and intimidate me. Instead, all I could think of was leaving campus and hiding. Not a mature response, but one I felt immediately.

Andrea
SPITZER

The police were very helpful, kind, understanding and reassuring, which was exactly what I needed. They asked if I was scared for my safety, if I wanted security, if I had any idea who it may have been and explained what to watch for and what to do if anything happened. They took many pictures of my door, finally said I could wash the swastika off, and left me to think about many things I had never thought of before. In my three and a half (almost) years at UMass, I had never experienced such blatant anti-Semitism before.

The more I thought about it, the more angry I became. Why must people, if feeling powerless or angry, turn and make someone else feel the same way? I believe that these feelings are the ones that cause racist graffiti and tension, and are responsible for the incidents that have been occurring on campus the past few weeks. I wasn't scared for my safety or worried that someone was trying to scare me; I was disappointed that people feel the need to display such violence and hostility towards anyone, of any race, color, religion, gender, etc.

UMass is a big place, I have discovered, and it is full of countless types of people. The diversity of this campus is one of the things that I love, one of the things I couldn't experience at my high school or hometown. The fact that this diversity includes racists, anti-Semites, or just plain hostile individuals, is also something that I have now begun to learn. The important thing is that to know what you can do when such hatred is expressed.

The most important thing is to let someone know; contact your resident assistant or the police. If you are scared to report it, or feel unsure of what to do, call someone to talk about it and let someone know what happened. You can contact Hillel, the Everywoman's Center, or even me, here at the Collegian. It's an important issue, and it's been ignored too long. To stop it, we have to know about it.

Andrea Spitzer is a Collegian staff member.

What's with the stickers?

I've got sticker shock.

Have you noticed those annoying little stickers all over campus? Some of them are political, like the current pro-Question 3 yellow stickers or last year's "GEO is a union," which you can still find in various campus locations. Some have a message, like the "I won't celebrate violence" orange squares stemming from the Memorial Hall takeover/teach-in/pizza party. Others make unfounded charges and call student newspapers inflammatory names.

Greg
SUKIENNIK

Whatever these adhesive message-bearers say, they all have one thing in common: they're all litter. Trash. Eyesores on an otherwise beautiful campus.

It cost most of us $10,000 to enjoy the privilege of a year's worth of college. Out-of-state students and their families doled out even more money in tuition, room, board and fees. More than this place is worth. So what do we do with the campus we paid so dearly for? We vandalize it. Well, some of us do. In their quest to get their message across, some have chosen to leave their mark wherever they please, without regard for the rest of us.

What about the maintenance employees of this university? They're already working skeleton crews because of budget cuts. The administration treats them like dirt. Students treat them like dirt. They do work no one else wants to do, for peanuts, and some show their lack of respect and appreciation by leaving Chancellor O'Brien's quotes all over the place. Just what the maintainers need, huh? What the hell, they've got plenty of time to waste cleaning adhesive off the walls, right? What lack of consideration.

I get a real kick out of the pro-Question 3 stickers. Let's examine the logic, if you want to call it that. Question 3 supporters want a wasteful packaging initiative passed. They assessed their options, considered the effectiveness of each and decided to support environmentally cautious packaging by littering everywhere with tiny yellow stickers. That's like trying to put out a fire with a bucket of kerosene — it tends to blow up in your face. If Question 3 loses, someone better fetch the Bactine.

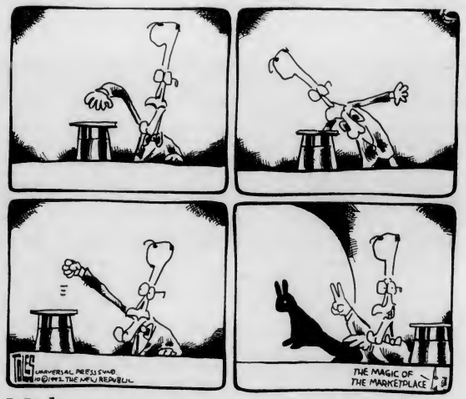
Then there's GEO. Ahh, GEO. Their orange and black "GEO is a union" calling cards still mar walls and railings, the backs of chairs, stairs, desks, pets that were tied on a leash and couldn't get away — you name it, GEO stickered it. A wiseguy friend of mine once made light of these paper and glue manifestoes, saying, "GEO is a pain in the ass." If only he knew how right he was.

Marshall McLuhan's often-quoted maxim, "The medium is the message," applies well in this case. If you want to be heard, you speak intelligently and clearly so everyone can hear you. If you're a coward, you write on walls or leave little stickers up for people to read. They don't say much — you can only fit so much text on a piece of paper — and they certainly don't hold much water in a discussion.

Really, is seeing the names "Bush/Quayle" repeatedly going to change the way I vote? No. Will I be apt to pay attention to Question 3 supporters because they covered the campus in neon? Of course not. Intelligent persuasion based on facts, however, has already convinced me that we should ban wasteful packaging.

If I see little pink squares everywhere that say, "Pete is a jerk," should I think Pete really is a jerk? No. Not if I see one, or 10, or 100. I would have to meet Pete first, get to know him and find out what he's all about before I made a decision. If it turns out Pete's a jerk anyway, fine. But otherwise, anti-Pete propaganda isn't going to impress me to change my mind one iota.

Greg Sukiennik gave up drawing on walls with crayons in the early '70s.



Make a statement: vote Marrou

Andre Marrou is running for president, with Nancy Lord for vice president, on the Libertarian Party ticket.

For those who don't know, Libertarians combine the left's emphasis on personal freedoms with the right's belief in economic freedoms. Sort of the best of both worlds.

Anyone who saw Marrou's interview on the "MacNeil/Lehrer News Hour" will tell you he's quite impressive — intelligent, articulate and, well... "presidential."

Of course, if there was a tight race in Massachusetts, and if our electoral votes were crucial in the overall race, it would be important to make a careful choice among the front-runners, even if this seemed like a case of "the lesser of two (three?) evils." But since, in reality, it is extremely improbable that our votes will figure in the outcome at all, why not send a message?

Sure I realize Marrou won't win. But if he can get one million votes, which is a possibility, he will get his Party's position noticed by the media, and maybe even by the actual winner.

If you don't like the way Democrats and Republicans run the country, why vote Democratic or Republican? If you oppose large and intrusive government, I suggest voting for Marrou.

Terry Franklin
Amherst

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

I'm sure by this time everyone's heard about as much about the election as they want. But, as a columnist, I feel compelled to force my opinion upon you.

I find it easier to vote against politicians than finding one I can vote for. I voted against John Silber in 1990, and after getting ripping drunk last Sunday (voting while inebriated makes the choices much more appealing) I voted against Teddy Marivelias, the esteemed University alum running for state representative in Danvers and Nicholas Mavroules, the sticky-fingered chairman of the House armed services committee, whose campaign has been hampered by the criminal investigation by three congressional subcommittees.

After careful consideration, I found a write-in candidate I can endorse. I've decided to vote for the Clinton/Brown ticket. George Clinton and James Brown. One nation under a groove and a funky new president. I was worried that Brown's criminal record and poor road manners may hurt the credibility of the ticket, but simmilar complaints haven't deterred Lyndon LaRouche or Teddy Kennedy.

The editorial page editor received a letter in support for the Alternately Dextrous page. Although the authors declined to support me in the take-over of the physical plant, demanding that more desks for the alternately dextrous be installed in lecture halls, they did express their support of an Alternately Dextrous page. Now if we can just find someone to write for it...

Josh
REYNOLDS

A few weeks ago a new sculpture appeared off tofu terrace, outside the Student Union Art Gallery. I guess it was only a matter of time before someone decided that that open grassy area was a good place for a giant, twisted hunk of rusting metal. I've started an office pool, betting on which local celebrity will be the first hanged-in-effigy from its peak.

In other local news, The X-plicit Players and Sexpression put on a performance on the lawn outside the Hampshire College library. The Hampshire administration refused to host the group's performance, and set their lawyers to work drafting briefs exploring the legal liability in case orifices were entered or fluids were exchanged.

After a campaign by campus activists, the troupe of grizzled, fifty-something hippies arrived, removed their shirts, formed a peace train and proclaimed their freedom to hug audience members who were unlucky enough to sit within reach of the P.A. system's microphone chord. Viva La Revolution.

After shelling out $20,000 a year in tuition, these suburbanite, L.L.-Bean wearing, Mercantile-shopping, $800 mountain bike-riding Nouveau Crunche can't think of anything better to support than a group of geriatric bra burners?

Don't get distracted. There's more to protecting the freedom of speech than lining Madonna's pockets and eating ice cream from Vermont won't save the environment. If there is one thing you should learn before you escape from the valley it's that anything that you can fit on a bumper sticker or the Student Union steps is too small to change the world.

Josh Reynolds is a Collegian columnist.

UMass attitudes cause segregation

As a first-year student and human being, I feel a normal imperative to make an observation on a phenomenon that I have witnessed over this past month. The editorial page has seen a deluge of articles by affected students denouncing the outbreaks of racism. Blacks have cried out for an end to their oppression. Whites have told them that they are supported.

Both sides have lashed out at the administration on its foot-dragging. It failed to create a precedence in a case where action would have proved the intolerance of ignorant crimes on behalf of this "institution of higher education" that someday we will all so dearly call our alma mater.

Steven L.
COHEN

Both of these complaints are merely a grand facade of the real problem. Unfortunately, I can't tell you what the real problem is. I can only speculate that it has something to do with the mindset of our society in this imperfect world. I'm not talking about a conspiracy to suppress Blacks or the breakdown of "family values." Two years ago my mother gave me the "stick to your own kind" speech when I brought home a Roman Catholic girlfriend. I'm Jewish. George Bush might be upset to find out that I told her that those Old World values, not the ones that justify single-motherhood, are the ones that procreate violence. Fortunately, it is not a liberal vs. conservative problem.

If we are products of heredity, then I would have my parents' prejudice. I don't. If we are products of our environment with the ability to develop our own opinions about what we witness, then we have a chance for peace. Prejudice must be taught. DON'T!

The last generation may have worked hard to make our lives better but they also created a thought pattern that, in the liberal hotbed of the world UMass causes self-segregation. The Malcolm X. Center and its equivalents should provide a way for people to maintain their ethnic identity as a part of a multicultural community. Instead we see a ghetto-style approach of support through isolationism from many of the R.S.O.'s. I don't blame the various centers. They do more good than harm, but eat at Franklin D.C. and look around. If you notice the pattern that I did, it will scare you. Look hard.

What is the answer? I don't know — I'm only asking the question. The answer is a personal one that lies somewhere within us. The paradox here is the connection between "personal" and "us." Clue: I love my mother anyway; there still is time for peace.

On a related thought, I would like to make an appeal to the student body. I'm a political science major. In high school I couldn't wait to get to college and take over the Dean's office in the name of some altruistic crusade of the people. Now, I'm here and that spirit still burns within me, but the necessity for it to become manifested in some form or another has not yet been seen, by my eyes anyway, this year. The powers of boycott, public protest and free speech were so well used by the American colonists as tools of freedom that they were later protected by the Bill of Rights. Please stop trivializing them by crying wolf for problems that can be worked out other ways. How do you get people to listen? Try writing an editorial — the pen is mightier than the sword. Thinking doesn't break windows.

Steven L. Cohen is a UMass student.

Change deception and the election

This is a personal message to the UMass community at large.

In light of the recent events locally, nationally and globally, we are all faced with the decision of voting for a candidate that will lead this great nation back to economic recovery. The two leading contenders in the presidential race have fallen short, with the exception of President Bush who has stood his ground despite the media blitz and biased reporting which has now dominated our newspapers and television shows.

Kenneth
MAISONET

We are also headed into the Halloween weekend. The reason I mention this is because Deception has proven to be the formidable contender in this election year, not the candidates. Students are constantly asked to vote for the popular candidate; what about voting for Mr. Deception? It is by far the most popular and well accepted character in our society today.

The notion that a particular leader or party is key to our country's future is a dangerous one. I think we must analyze our reasons for voting for any candidate, especially in this election year. We must think of our children and the position they find themselves in: without a vote or a platform from which to openly express their outrage at those who have betrayed their future all in the name of Change.

The future generation does not see or have positive, educated role models coming out of this and other universities across the nation. They are falling through the cracks of irresponsibility of those before them. Halloween, the concept of Deception and the proponents of Change are synonomous in nature.

In this secular humanistic system, we are taught that the human being is above all life-affirming, sustainable (sacred) traditional values. The values of the human potential has been exalted to such a degree that we have failed to notice the children. Individualism vs. Community. Individuality is not answerable to a higher law and there are no boundaries from which to refrain and reconsider our actions.

It would seem almost obvious that in many areas of our society this thought is more prevalent than others. Our educational establishment stands to be the single most determining factor in shaping and molding the minds of the future leaders of the 21st century. This is also the platform from which post '60s radicals (now professors) are politicizing and psychologically assaulting students who are not mainstream.

Change/Deception are behind this strategy and of course the active willing participants of Change. With this being said, who then are the participants of Deception? We must never forget that America is still a very blessed country by many standards compared to others nations around the world.

When deciding on who to vote for, think again of the unseen candidate, and how our country is headed to perilous times at the expense of Change. All we need to do is look within the classrooms. Look toward the horizon. Will there be Change or Deception?

I am convinced that we are stumbling in great darkness, and that we've become increasingly dependent on human scientific progress to answer highly complex problems. There is another more viable, sustainable option that remains overlooked, even by the most prominent scholars in the world. This is just my opening statement.

Kenneth Maisonet is a Collegian staff member.

Join support for Question 3 on Election Day

Massachusetts is in a trash crisis. As a state we produce over 6.5 million tons of trash per year — fully one third of that is packaging. As a result, our overburdened landfills are leaking, contaminating groundwater supplies and closing one by one. That which is not landfilled is often burned in incinerators, releasing hundreds of toxins in the air. Contaminated ash residue from the incinerators is in turn buried in landfills creating cyclical pollution.

Clearly, the solution to this problem is to recycle as much as possible. Efforts have been made on an individual and town to town basis, but they are largely ineffective because there is little or no market for recycled goods. Companies prefer to use virgin materials rather than recycled ones. This causes them to exploit our natural resources to make a profit at our expense.

Even with the help of the Bottle Bill, which passed as a similar referendum in 1982, statewide recycling levels are only about 10 percent.

The solution is simple: pass the recycling initiative. Question 3 calls for environmental standards to be set for all packaging used in Massachusetts. The packaging needs only to fall into one of five categories: it is reduced in size, can be recycled, has been recycled, contains a percentage of recycled content, or is reusable. Reduce, reuse, recycle.

While you may have seen ads that claim Question 3 will hurt business or cost us more money, they are extremely misleading if not outright lies.

The companies who fund these ads are huge, out-of-state corporations. In fact, 96 percent of the ad money comes from out of state, while an equal percentage of money to support the Recycling Initiative Campaign comes from Massachusetts residents.

Among the firms wishing to control our state from the outside are Exxon, the company that gave us the Valdez oil disaster; Dow Chemical, who have paid hundreds of thousands in fines for environmental infractions; and General Electric, one of the worst polluters in the country.

Gov. William Weld, elected on a strong pro-business ticket, is the number one supporter of Question 3. He sees it for what it is: a chance to both stimulate the economy and benefit the environment in Massachusetts.

They say you can learn a lot about an idea by the company it keeps, and Question 3 is no different. On the "yes" side are Weld, MassPIRG, the League of Women Voters, every major environmental group in the state, over 2,000 Massachusetts businesses, a majority of our state representatives and a vast majority of Massachusetts citizens.

On the "no" side are the big, out-of-state polluters.

Question 3 will create a market for recycled goods, help create up to 6,000 new jobs, and save the state up to $300 million in landfilling and waste removal expenses, according to a 1991 MIT study of The Recycling Initiative.

On Nov. 3, vote for a cleaner environment, fresh air, safe drinking water and recycling: vote yes on Question 3.

Rob Conery
Southwest

Amherst campus needs diversity

As a member of the UMass Board of Trustees, I have been following the events surrounding the "racial strife" at the UMass/Amherst campus very closely. I was optimistic following the meeting and more so after the Board of Trustees meeting, when President Hooker rightly rebuked the Amherst administration for delays in taking care of the issues. At the same time, Hooker provided direction and moral leadership so that we can all move forward.

However, today, I am less optimistic. Not because I doubt the commitment of the president, or the seriousness of the issues and the resolve the students, of all colors, have in eliminating the ugliness and injustice of racism; but because of what I read to be the side-stepping of the issues by the Amherst administration.

On Sunday [Oct.18, NY Times] Chancellor O'Brien is paraphrased as saying, "4,000 new students arrive each year, many from white neighborhoods in the Boston area, many with the stains of frank racism." Grant Ingle, director of the office of human relations, in a similar vein, states, "much of the University's racial tension arises form the fact that 60 percent of its students came from the "white neighborhoods in the Boston area."

Yet, we have not seen such ugly racial incidents as the 1986 riots at Amherst, or smearing of human feces in corridors based on irrational, racist beliefs. Why not? The answer is simple. Although we do have many white students from the same neighborhoods that the Amherst campus draws from, the students, the faculty and the administration of UMass/Boston have been committed to the recruitment and the education of people of color.

On every level of the campus, minorities are represented. Half of our vice chancellors are persons of color. Four out of five of our academic deans are persons of color. Between a quarter and a fifth of our staff and faculty are persons of color. Over 25 percent of the student population are persons of color and this portion is steadily rising. When a significant number of people of color are present in any population, it is hard for any individual to believe they can get away with such outrageous behavior as we have witnessed on the Amherst campus.

Even more important, however, is the fact that the presence of a diverse population makes all of us comfortable being different and being individuals. It is this kind of atmosphere that the administration of the Amherst campus should try to foster, and not the same old blame game that we have been involved in for the last two decades without progress.

The fundamental aspect of coming up with a resolution to this problem is the recruitment and maintenance of significant number of minorities at every level of the community. The president, the trustees and the students are ready for this commitment. Perhaps we can begin by replacing Chancellor O'Brien, who will be leaving in June, with a person of color.

David Loh
Student Trustee
Umass/Boston

"Tribute to loser" reaffirms defeat as writer misses point of election

It was with considerable anger that I read the opening paragraph of Michael Morrissey's article last Friday [Collegian, Oct. 23].

He paid magnanimous tribute to the loser of last week's elections for speaker in the Student Senate. It is to his misfortune that his article neither arouses sympathy for Kevin Jourdain nor causes regret over the final result, but merely reinforces the belief that in Michael Poster the senate did a great service to the students of this University.

The speaker, as defined in the SGA constitution, is "the executive officer and the official representative of the Student Senate."

It is one of the most powerful positions in the SGA and therefore when the elections took place is was necessary to take into account much more than one's political persuasions.

The speaker has to be able to control the senate, facilitate meetings, work with and be able to fairly represent all groups of people. It is a great responsibility and rests on a relationship of trust.

Kevin Jourdain did not lose because of a Democratic conspiracy, nor did he lose because he was incapable of doing the job. He lost because the senate did not consider him to be the "best man," and in my opinion this decision was based to a great extent on his strong Republican views.

The speaker is supposed to be a non-partisan position and it was the fear of many that Jourdain would not be able to divorce his political interests from those of the student community. This is a fear that Mr. Morrissey's article strengthens rather than soothes, and with all due respect, his heartfelt wishes for Kevin Jourdain did more harm to his cause than good.

Indeed, for Mr. Morrissey to write that Kevin Jourdain was "to intelligent senators... the only choice" is at once both narrow-minded and an insult to the intelligence of the majority of the University's student representatives.

Mike Poster is a highly capable, responsible and trustworthy person for whom I have the highest respect and I do not believe he deserves Mr. Morrissey's derogatory comments. As a student senator, I congratulate him on his appointment and look forward to working with him in the future.

Seema Malhotra
Central

■ inquiry

continued from page 1

investigate a wide range of allegations.

Gordon's interim report to O'Brien stated that neither Bischoff nor Katch had responded satisfactorily to his questions. Since the University does not have the power to subpoena individuals, Gordon recommended that the University turn the investigation over to the appropriate public agencies which can compel testimony.

O'Brien's announcement comes three weeks after the House Post Audit Committee referred its investigation to Harshbarger, saying several areas of "potential criminal conduct" were uncovered, according to an Oct. 8 Boston Globe.

Katch's lawyer, Jonathon Souweine, said Wednesday, "if the Ethics Commission chooses to review unsubstantiated allegations involving Dr. Katch, we expect Dr. Katch to be vindicated."

Skip Sesling, spokesperson for the auditor, said the auditor had referred his report to the state attorney general and other criminal authorities.

In his letter to Harshbarger concerning Bischoff, O'Brien said "the University. . . welcomes your review of matters that have been the subject of an audit by the House Post Audit and Oversight Committee. We offer full cooperation of the University, its staff and outside counsel."

■ Congress

continued from page 1

candidate Patrick Larkin.

"John Olver is a lightweight when he was in Congress. He does not act. He is merely a cog," Newnan said. "He has full responsibility for the economic situation [in western Massachusetts]."

Newnan said he believed local support for Olver was not strong. Olver's supporters were only going along with the crowd, according to Newnan.

"I think they should come up and swear they support the Democratic platform," Newnan said laughing. "Take a look at what John Olver has done and then take a look at Patrick Larkin."

The Republican party might not have a lot of money, but they are strong campaigners, Ravosa said.

"What we don't have in green, we make up in grit," Ravosa said.

Ravosa said this election is very important because it is a time of change in the governmental structure. Students must get out and vote, according to Ravosa.

"[Turnout] is going to be the turning point in the election," Ravosa said.

PAWSS

"THE 1992 ELECTION: WHERE DO THE CANDIDATES STAND ON FOREIGN POLICY AND DEFENCE"

A lecture by

LEE FEINSTEIN, Assistant Director of Research
The Arms Control Association, Washington, DC

Thursday, October 29th
4:00 pm
202 Skinner Hall, Mount Holyoke College

8:00 pm
Hasbrouck 20, the University of Massachusetts

A panel discussion with:

MICHAEL KLARE, Director
Five College Program in Peace & World Security Studies

LEE FEINSTEIN, Assistant Director of Research
Arms Control Association, Washington, DC

MARY WILSON, Professor of History
University of Massachusetts

This event is FREE, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible.
For more information call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519.

STUDENTS DON'T FORGET

DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARD NOMINATIONS

DEADLINE: NOVEMBER 4, 1992

If you know a faculty member or teaching assistant/associate who is truly outstanding and deserves recognition, submit a nomination in writing with a brief description of why your nominee deserves the award.

FACULTY, ALUMNI & CURRENT GRADUATE/UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS MAY NOMINATE.

SUBMIT NOMINATIONS BY WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1992

TO: DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARD COMMITTEE
GRADUATE DEAN'S OFFICE
514 GOODELL BUILDING
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

REAL STOPPING POWER.

$20.00 OFF

ANY MIDAS BRAKE SERVICE

Right now, get $20 off the regular price of any quality Midas brake service at participating dealers. At Midas, you'll get a free detailed brake inspection. Written estimate up front. And we can fix your brakes right the same day you bring in your car. So what's stopping you?

*Off regular price. Offer ends 10/25/92

MIDAS

Hadley • Rt. 9 near Hampshire Mall • 586-9991

Dear 5-College Community

X'Mas is around the corner, so we want to make a special offer on our entire collection of jewellery, apparel & decorative crafts.

BASHA'S BARGAIN BASEMENT

A Shopping Enthusiast's Dream Come True
Every Red Tagged Merchandise in our Basement
is
BUY ONE GET ONE FREE

That Includes Elegant Silver Jewellery, Richly Colored Hand Embroidered Ladies Dresses & Exquisite Hand-Crafted Gifts.

THESE GREAT BUYS WILL BE ON TILL DEC. 31
But Do Not Wait because the Stock is Limited and there will be no Rain Checks!

Basha's
ORIENTAL RUGS
East Asian Manufacturers & Importers
241 Main St., Northampton, MA 01060 • 413-586-6030

Free Peer Counseling

Lesbian Bisexual Gay Counseling Collective

Need a Little Help with Life? Call us at the LBG Counseling Collective, 545-2645 or stop by 406G U. Mass. Student Union. Call for office hours, we're here to help!

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

FOLLOW THE YELLOW BRICK ROAD — Freshman Tara Wisniewski, a double major in theater and women's studies, has a funny dream that someone is watching her yeasteday afternoon.

■ Kosher

continued from page 3

Kosher DC is open for three meals a day, Rabbi Friedman supervises the special "koshering" of the kitchen and its equipment.

Students say Friday night dinners are the best meal of the week. These include chicken, stuffing, mashed potatoes, challah and the usual salad bar, according to Shirley Stafford, director of the Hampden and Berkshire Dining Commons. Other popular meals include turkey and bagel dogs. Another advantage of the Kosher DC, says Stafford, are the "beautiful sunsets during dinner," since the DC faces the west.

Head Cook Helen Yagodzinski and assistant Frieda Januskevicius make all the food. Januskevicius makes all of the croutons, which students say are delicious, and Yagodzinski adds a special touch of her own. They treat the students that eat at Kosher as if they are their own children, says Rossi.

Both Rossi and Stafford agree that Kosher DC enrollment has decreased over the last few years. Rossi wants feedback on what could be improved to attract more people. He also wants to know what the students like or dislike about the Kosher DC.

"People who eat there are extremely happy," according to Rossi. The small size of the DC also adds friendliness and comfort to the meals.

Stafford says the Kosher DC is an "excellent program" and says she is disappointed more people do not participate. One does not need to be Jewish to enroll on the meal plan, or to eat there occasionally, which costs an additional $2 if you are on the meal plan.

During Passover the Kosher DC is open for three meals a day, which provides students with the special food for that holiday. Seders are also provided at Kosher DC, for those who can't go home, or are curious about the traditions of Passover.

NO ESOTERICA FOR US. NO SIREE BOB.

'CAUSE TRAMPS LIKE US, BABY WE WERE BORN TO RUN.

NO POLKADOT BIRKENSTOCKS FOR US. WE KNOW WE'RE FASHONABLE ENOUGH.

COLLEGIAN ADVERTISING. IT WORKS.

THE COLLEGIAN WILL VOTE FOR ITS FAVORITE CANDIDATE THIS NOVEMBER 3.
(PROVIDED WE CAN ALL FIT INTO THE BOOTH).
WILL YOU?

IT'S MIDTERM TIME

WE DON'T WANT YOU TO FAIL OUT AND NOT READ US ANY-MORE, SO STUDY.

COLLEGIAN

Listen to "MUMMY"... our Savings are Spook-tacular!

LIQUORS 44

Don't Drink and Drive

BEER
BUD, BUD LIGHT, & BUD DRY SUITCASE CANS $11.99 + DEP.
BECKS BEER $15.49 CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS + DEP.
FOSTERS LAGER $7.99 12 PACK BOTTLES + DEP.
ROLLING ROCK $12.99 CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES + DEP.
SCHLITZ BEER SALE 9.29 $8.29 AFTER REBATE MAIL IN REBATE 1.00 CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS + DEP.
NARRAGANSETT BEER CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS $6.99 + DEP.
BLACKENED VOODOO LAGER BEER $5.69 + DEP. 6 PACK BOTTLES

WINE
GALLO CLASSIC WINES $3.99 1.5 L ALL FLAVORS
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL $3.49 750 ML
FOLONARI SOAVE $5.99 1.5 L
PAOLO TOSCANO CHIANTI $3.99 750 ML
BLOSSOM HILL CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON $6.99 1.5 L
FREIXENET CORDON NEGRO BRUT SALE 5.99 MAIL IN REBATE 1.00 AFTER REBATE $4.99 750 ML

LIQUORS
BACARDI SILVER RUM $15.49 1.75L
SEAGRAMS 7 WHISKEY SALE 13.49 MAIL IN REBATE 5.00 $8.49 1.75L AFTER REBATE
JIM BEAM $13.49 1.75L
POPOV VODKA SALE 9.99 MAIL IN REBATE 2.00 $7.99 1.75L AFTER REBATE
PASSPORT SCOTCH $15.99 1.75L
BURNETTS GIN SALE 11.99 MAIL IN REBATE 2.00 $9.99 1.75L AFTER REBATE
BACARDI BLACK RUM $8.99 750 ML

not responsible for typographical errors

OPEN: 9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday

• TWO CONVENIENT LOCATIONS •
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555

SALE PRICES THURS 10/29/92 THRU WEDS. 11/4/92

Full Redemption Center

Pearl Street Nightclub

DANCE CLUB

Wednesday - DANCING WITH DJ JOB
Thursday - WHMP EIGHTEEN & OVER DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS R. WHMP broadcasting live.
DOWNSTAIRS- DANCEHALL REGGAE WITH DJ OBED
Friday - DISCO 2000 with DJ JOB and WTIC's Lear Jet
♦ Free Admission Before 10:00pm ♦
♦ Free All Night w/College I.D. ♦
Saturday - WHMP THE AREAS BIGGEST & BEST SATURDAY NIGHT DANCE PARTY WITH DJ JOB
Coming 10/31
THE AREAS BIGGEST HALLOWEEN PARTY
•$300 CASH PRIZE FOR BEST COSTUME•
OTHER PRIZES AND GIVEAWAYS

LIVE MUSIC...

Fri., Oct. 30-8:30pm
Free Rock Friday
BIG BAD BOLLOCKS
Da Da
Free Before 10pm
Free All Night with College ID

Sat., Oct. 31-8:30pm
Halloween Party
WHO'S KIDDIN' WHO Floating Boats

Mon., Nov. 2-8:00pm WRSI
Chicago Blues Explosion
KOKO TAYLOR
Lil Ed & The Blues Imperials

Tues., Nov. 3-8:00pm/18+/
TRIPLE BILL!
MATERIAL ISSUE
TOO MUCH JOY
MIGHTY LEMONDROPS

Thurs., Nov. 5-7:30pm/18+/
MATTHEW SWEET
The Jayhawks
Downstairs--9:00 pm/18+/
FRANK ZAPPA'S JOE'S GARAGE
presented by the Green Rosettas

Fri., Nov. 6-8:30pm
Free Rock Friday
THE BOMBASTICS
John Monopoly
♦ Free Before 10pm ♦

Sat., Nov. 7-8:30pm
MAX CREEK

Sun., Nov. 8-7:00pm/18+/
Northampton Center for the Arts Presents
YOUSSOU N'DOUR

Mon., Nov. 9-8:00pm/18+/
Free Show
WIDE SPREAD PANIC
(Adv. Tix. All Outlets)

Thurs., Nov. 12-8:30pm/18+/
SHOCKRA
Borderland

Fri., Nov. 13-8:30pm
Free Rock Friday
BOP HARVEY

Sat., Nov. 14-8:30pm
ROOMFUL OF BLUES

Tues., Nov. 17-8:00pm
LOS LOBOS

Sat., Nov. 21-7:00pm
LUCINDA WILLIAMS

Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Dynamite Records, For The Record in Amherst: Ticket Pro (800) 828-7080.

10 Pearl Street Northampton • 584-7771

ROOM CHOOSING PROCESS
For Spring 1993

PLEASE READ CAREFULLY: IMPORTANT INFORMATION

RESERVING YOUR CURRENT ROOM ASSIGNMENT

If you intend to keep your present residence hall room assignment, you must call the Voice Response Room Choosing System at 6-9000 (from on-campus) or 546-9000 (from off-campus) to reserve your room. FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE THE SYSTEM IS AVAILABLE FROM 9AM TO 9PM ON MONDAY, TUESDAY & WEDNESDAY NOVEMBER 2, 3, 4.

CHANGING YOUR ROOM OR YOUR HALL

If you wish to move to another room in the same residence hall, you must sign up with staff on duty during the room choosing process on Wednesday evening, November 18. All room changes will be determined by your seniority and rank. THE ONLY EVENING TO SIGN UP FOR A NEW ROOM IN YOUR CURRENT HALL IS WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 18.

If you wish to move to another residence hall, you must complete a Housing Preference Form. DEADLINE FOR RETURNING HOUSING PREFERENCE FORMS TO THE HOUSING ASSIGNMENT OFFICE IS WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25.

IF YOU WANT TO KEEP YOUR CURRENT RESIDENCE HALL ASSIGNMENT WHILE ALSO REQUESTING A HALL CHANGE YOU MUST DO THE FOLLOWING:

1. Use the Voice Response System to reserve your current room on either November 2, 3, or 4 or a new room on Wednesday evening, November 18.
2. Fill out a Housing Preference Form. On the Preference Form in the lower right hand corner is a box you must "check" if you wish to be returned to your current hall if your choices cannot be met. YOUR OLD RESIDENCE HALL ASSIGNMENT IS GUARANTEED ONLY IF YOU DO BOTH STEPS.

ROOMMATE REQUESTS

If you wish to move to another residence hall to room with a student already assigned to that residence hall, you must together complete a green ROOMMATE REQUEST FORM. DEADLINE FOR RETURNING ROOMMATE REQUEST FORMS TO THE HOUSING ASSIGNMENT OFFICE IS THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19.

If you wish to become roommates with a student in a residence hall to which neither of you is currently assigned, you must each complete a Housing Preference Form. These forms should be identical, (with the exception of the "check" box) and stapled together. DEADLINE FOR RETURNING HOUSING PREFERENCE FORMS IS WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25.

DIDN'T GET THE ROOM YOU WANTED?

If, during the regular Room Choosing period, you were unable to secure a particular room or type of room (single or particular double), please contact the Housing Assignment Office to fill out a blue In-House Room Request Form. Rooms that become available during Intersession will be assigned, according to seniority, to those residents who filled out these forms and returned them to the Housing Assignment Office.

PAY BILL BY DUE DATE

Your Spring 1993 fee bill will be mailed to your home in early December. If complete payment of this bill is not received by the Bursar's Initial Due Date (usually in early January), your assignment will be subject to cancellation. IF YOU ANTICIPATE HAVING A PROBLEM PAYING YOUR BILL PLEASE CONTACT THE HOUSING ASSIGNMENT OFFICE. WE WILL MAKE ARRANGEMENTS TO HOLD YOUR HOUSING UNTIL YOU ARE ABLE TO MAKE FULL PAYMENT.

OTHER THINGS TO REMEMBER

In addition to properly completing room choosing all students are required to remain in good standing with the University at all times. Being withdrawn for any reason after the end of the semester may automatically subject your assignment to cancellation. Check to make sure you do not owe any fees to the Bursar BEFORE you leave for intersession.

QUESTIONS?

If you still have questions about the Room Choosing process, please contact the Housing Assignment Office (545-2100), 235 Whitmore. Thank you.

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

THIS IS ONLY A TEST — Members of the UMass firefighting force, senior zoology major Brian Major, left, sophomore undeclared major Scott Smith and junior political science major Jeff Winn, practice fighting fires in the Campus Parking Garage.

Exiled Chinese student discusses imprisonment

By CHRIS TORCHIA
Associated Press

NEWTON, Mass. — Deported Chinese dissident Shen Tong said Wednesday he was threatened with a prison sentence of up to 30 years a few weeks before Chinese officials released him.

"They hinted to me they were ready to try me," said Shen, 24, who fled China after the 1989 crackdown in Tiananmen Square and re-entered the country about three months ago. He was arrested Sept. 1 and released on Saturday.

Shen, speaking publicly for the first time about his imprisonment in China, said he was held under 24-hour guard on the top floor of a hotel near the capital of Beijing.

He said he was questioned about his beliefs and contacts with democracy activists inside China. Shen said he frustrated Chinese officials by refusing to cooperate.

"There was a heated argument where I just said to them, "You guys are so stupid. Either you put me in jail or accept that I will never be on your side," he said.

Shen was arrested just before he was to announce the formation of a Beijing office of the Democracy for China Fund, a Newton-based human rights group.

While Shen was in China, some Chinese dissidents in the United States said he carelessly endangered dozens of activists by contacting them while they were in hiding. Some also said Shen misrepresented his role as a leader of the 1989 student uprising.

Shen denied those charges at the news conference.

"It was not our team's intention to endanger any contacts in China," he said. "Everyone I met knew in advance where I was and what I was planning to do.

"They were fully aware of the danger they may face simply by talking to me."

Shen said that as a condition of his release, he demanded that Chinese authorities release any dissidents connected with his case. Asked if he thought China would comply, he said: "I don't think so."

Two other dissidents, Qi Dafang and Qian Liyun, were arrested with Shen. At least three others were questioned and possibly imprisoned, Shen said.

Shen, a Boston University graduate student, also denied a Chinese government report that he confessed to illegal actions and had engaged in anti-government activities.

Shen credited his release to international pressure on China. Seventy-four U.S. senators, including vice-presidential candidate Al Gore, sent a letter earlier this month to Chinese Premier Li Peng urging the release of Shen.

He said he planned to return to China, but said his role as a dissident in exile was important.

"I can speak for a lot of people who cannot speak for themselves in China," Shen said.

■ fundraiser

continued from page 3

Amherst, raised the most money with $2,470.

Bari said he does the Phonathon because it is a great cause. "I am the proud father of two daughters who went through the UMass system and I know how important the Newman Center was to them," he said.

Quigley said before the Newman Center used Phonathon to raise money they used to depend on allotments from the Springfield Diocese. "We are becoming more and more self-sufficient, which is going to be the way of the future for churches," Quigley said.

"The Newman Center would be in real dire straits if they depended on the Diocese today," said Quigley. He said he can't depend on the Diocese because in past years the revenue demands have exceeded their income.

Quigley said he is thankful Smith developed such an unbelievable fundraising system and that so many people participated in the event.

"Everyone's hard work produced a very satisfying result," said Quigley.

MMM, MMM GOOD.
NEWSPRINT IS GOOD FOOD.
COLLEGIAN.

COLLE-
GIAN
FILLER

INSTEAD OF RAKING THESE, RAKE IN THE SAVINGS EVERY MONTH!
Incredible! Use Anytime!
$19.00* Per Month
New Members Only. Offer Ends 10/31/92
Prepaid Memberships Available At Big Savings!
* Plus small joining fee.
FEATURES*:
• Nautilus • Racquetball • Tennis
• Aerobics (includes step) • Free weights • Lessons
• Fitness testing • Sauna • Cam Star 3000 • Basketball
• Day care • Cardiovascular (StairMasters™, LifeCycles™)
• Seniors & kid's programs
Fee required
ATHLETIC CLUBS of AMERICA
659 Amherst Road, Rte. 116
(formerly Winner's Ath. Club)
SUNDERLAND: (413) 549-3638

Winter Session 1993
January 4-25
Yes, you can!
REGISTER FOR WINTER SESSION CLASSES.
SPECIAL ENROLLMENT RESTRICTIONS DO NOT APPLY FOR WINTER SESSION.
SO, IF YOU'RE A UMASS STUDENT, ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS JUST SIGN UP.
OVER 100 CREDIT COURSES.
EARN 3 CREDITS IN JUST 3 SHORT WEEKS!
REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.
CATALOGS AVAILABLE ON CAMPUS OR AT THE DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION, 6TH FLOOR GOODELL.
Division of Continuing Education

"Thank you! for your patronage" The Kyprianos Family
4 Seasons
ROUTE 9, HADLEY 584-8174
DISCOUNT LIQUORS - BEER - WINE
KEGS • AND ICE

Sam Adams, Beer/Ale 24/12 oz. bott. $17.99 + dep.	ICE COLD KEGS!!
Molson Gold & Lt. 24/12 oz. bott. $15.99 + dep	Natural Light 1/2 bbl $32.90 + dep
Michelob, Lt/Dry 12 pk cans $6.99 + dep.	Miller, Lite, GD, GD Lt. 1/2 bbl $38.99 + dep.
Rolling Rock 12 pk bott. $6.49 + dep.	Sun Country Wine Coolers 2.0 L $3.99 + dep
Busch Bar Bottles case $9.49 + dep.	MASS. STATE LOTTERY AGENT!
Bud Dry Bar Bott. $11.99 + dep.	Jim Beam .750 ml $7.99
Narragansett 24/12 oz. cans $6.99 + dep.	Popov Vodka 1.75 L $9.99
Long Trail Ale/Lt 6 pak bott. $4.49 + dep.	Southern Comfort .750 ml $7.99
Blackened Voodoo Beer 6 pak bott. $5.99 + dep.	4 Seasons Vodka 1.75 L $8.99
ICE!! 10 LBS $1.00 50 LBS $4.50	Buttershots Schnapps .750 L $6.99
	Gordon's Gin 1.75 L $13.99
	4 Seasons Gin 1.75 L $9.99

HOURS Mon.-Sat. 9-11 • 10% Senior Discount Everyday
Keg deposits Held Up to 30 Days on VISA, MASTERCARD, CHECK, CASH

Russian creates department for arms detection

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia has created a new spy department to combat the potential threat from nuclear and chemical weapons belonging to former Soviet republics and other neighbors, a foreign intelligence agent said today.

Agents will operate inside and outside the former Soviet Union, said Gennady Yevstafiev, head of the new Department for Weapons Control and Non-Proliferation of Weapons of Mass Destruction.

He told a news conference that Russia was especially worried about states along its border developing a nuclear capability. He singled out Pakistan and North Korea, an ally of the former Soviet Union.

Yevstafiev said that while the end of the Cold War has reduced the likelihood that either superpower will use nuclear or chemical weapons, Russia fears such weapons could be used in regional clashes.

Ethnic strife was reported in 76 spots in the former Soviet Union before it collapsed at the end of 1991.

All short-range nuclear weapons have since been transferred to Russian control, but long-range nuclear weapons remain in Ukraine, Kazakhstan and Belarus.

Yevstafiev's department will be a branch of the Foreign Intelligence Service, one of the agencies created out of the former KGB.

AG seeks retail interest rate cut

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts retailers are charging interest on credit cards at rates as high as 23.5 percent, according to a study released Wednesday by Attorney General Scott Harshbarger.

Harshbarger asked retailers to voluntarily cut their interest rates.

Of the 23 retailers surveyed by the attorney general's Consumer Portection Division, 10 had interest rates at 21 percent or higher, with the appliance chain Fretter's charging the highest — 23.52 percent.

None of the retailers charged interest lower than 18 percent.

"Considering the dramatic drop in interest rates we've seen over the past few years by banks, it is unacceptable to find retailers — and so many of them — charging these outrageous rates," Harshbarger said.

"Retail credit card rates, set years ago when inflation and interest rates were high, need to be overhauled to reflect better the dramatic drip in the cost of funds today," he said.

State law caps interest rates at 18 percent, with some exceptions. His office planned to investigate whether retailers charging more than 18 percent in Massachusetts were breaking the law.

Edgar Dworsky of the consumer protection division said some out-of-state banks are allowed to charge rates higher than 18 percent. "That's why banks like Citibank in South Dakota charge outrageous interest rates and export it."

"The legal issue we're talking about here is, can a retailer hire an out-of-state bank and in essence circumvent the 18 percent cap," Dworsky said.

Harbarger's office conducted the survey on Oct. 1.

Other stores the consumer protection division surveyed included Lane Bryant, 22.8 percent; The Limited Express, 22.8 percent; Eddie Bauer, 22.6 percent; True Value Hardware, 22 percent; Service Merchandise, 21.96 percent; Tweeter, 21.84 percent; Grossman's, 21.6 percent; Home Quarters, 21 percent; Somerville Lumber, 21 percent; Lechmere, 19.86 percent.

Retailers with rates of 18 percent included Bloomingdale's, Bonwit Teller, Bradlees, Caldor, Filenes Basement, Harvard Coop, Jordan Marsh, Lord and Taylor, Neiman Marcus, Saks Fifth Avenue and Sears.

Tweeter's is interest-free if bills are paid within 90 days.

Faithful wait in vain for world to end

By C.W. LIM
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Thousands of Koreans who believed the world would end at midnight chanted, sang and wailed "the rapture is coming" in nearly 200 churches throughout Korea. But they didn't ascend to heaven as they expected and the singing faded.

"Nothing has happened," said the Rev. Chang Manho, according to parishioners. "Let's go home. Let's go back to a normal life."

Some 2,500 worshippers then left a church in western Seoul early Thursday, expressing emotions ranging from disappointment to depression.

"It's just not time for Jesus to come," said Chung Dongbun, a 53-year-old believer. "There will be another time."

Believers had expected rapture — the ascent to heaven — at midnight (10 a.m. EST). Seven years of apocalypse would follow, bringing the Earth's annihilation and the second coming of Christ, they believed.

Singing could be heard from inside Seoul's main doomsday church, the Mission for the Coming Days, after midnight.

Outside the church, more than 1,000 curiousity seekers and family members stood behind police lines.

A police searchlight scanned the darkness, and 200 riot police stood a block away, ready to move in to try to prevent any suicides or other extreme actions. Officials worried some believers might despair when the prediction failed to come true.

No suicides had been reported an hour after the deadline.

The Mission for the Coming Days, the largest of the Turn to RAPTURE, page 14

HALLOWEEN SUPPLIES
We carry everything for your needs including:
Wigs • Make-up • Masks • Costumes
CHILD'S TOYS & HOBBIES
at Hadley Village Barn Shops
49 Russell St., Rt. 9
Hadley, MA • 584-2604
We're different from all the rest, with great everyday prices.

Main St RECORDS
One of the area's largest selections of Imported, Independant & Domestic Records, Cassettes and Compact Discs
586 5726
213 MAIN ST
SON OF Main St RECORDS
Tens of Thousands of Used, Cut outs & Collectible Records and Cassettes
586 1707
21 STATE ST
NORTHAMPTON

ALLEY OOPS
HALLOWEEN COSTUME PARTY
Featuring
Live Music by THE CHOICE
Cash Prizes for Best & Most Original Costumes
8:00PM - 1:00AM
Saturday, Oct 31, 1992
$2.00 in advance $3.00 at door
525 PLEASANT STREET
NORTHAMPTON
Alley Oops
584-2491

THE LAUNDRY CLUB
The Most Fun You Can Have in a Laundromat!
8 am-11 pm • 7 days
◆ Coin Operated Washers and Dryers
◆ State of the Art Machines
◆ Snack Bar
◆ Big Screen T.V.
◆ Pool Table and Video Games
◆ Senior Citizen Discount
COUPON
$1.00 OFF any size washer
Limit 1 coupon per customer
Expires 10/15/92
$3.00 OFF DRY CLEANING ($10 or more)
Limit 1 coupon per customer
Expires 11/30/92
dry cleaning
6 University Drive • New Market Center • Next To Victory Supermarket & Scott's Liquors • Amherst • (413) 549-2640

NHL at the TOC
Don't miss the action!
Kings at Bruins
Tonight at 7:30 pm
TOP of the CAMPUS LOUNGE
11th Floor • Campus Center
UMass at Amherst
Mon.-Sat.: 2:00 pm-12:30 am
Closed Sunday

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

"Yes! Yes! That's it! . . . Just a little higher."

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

TANGENT By KURT MATTILA

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jason George
Copy Editor ..... Lisa Donadio
PhotoTechnician ..... Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor ..... Seth Kaye
Production ..... David Maryakhin, Janet Riley, Michele Bakis

Menu

LUNCH
Pizza
Corny Beef on Rye
BASICS LUNCH
Pizza
Sesame St. Noodles

DINNER
Baked Ziti
Pan Shish KaBOB
BASICS DINNER
Baked Ziti
Captain's Catch

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Quote of the Day

"Sex is the first thing I liked that liked me back."

– overheard

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day for dealing with people who prefer to stay out of the public eye. Secrecy is essential. A financial plan can be carried a step further. Seek your loved ones' support.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Life could throw you a curve today. The show must go on! Redouble your efforts to make a name for yourself. Working long hours now will produce a rich harvest.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone may be a good friend but not very fair about financial matters. Tolerate this person's miserly ways if you value your relationship. Separate restaurant checks remain a good idea.

CANCER (June 21-Aug. 22): You could decide to do something with an art project. Those trying to have their work published will soon receive a happy surprise. Nurture a loved one who has special emotional needs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Since human history ends this weekend, go out with a bang! Enjoy yourself to the fullest and the end times be damned. Invest in an S&L.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can charm your way into a real bargain today. Someone influential sees your true value. You will not need a rabbit's foot or four-leaf clover to attract good luck.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emotions run high today. A ticklish situation calls for a cool head. Cooperation is the key to larger financial rewards. Beware of shifting sands of public opinion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Clinging to outdated ideas could create problems at work or home; leave room to grow. A new business venture is touch-and-go. Leave nothing to chance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Splendid things are happening where your social life is concerned. Encourage open discussion and idea-sharing. Your career will stay on track if you do not waiver.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Helping family members, co-workers, friends — this is your strength today. A fun new pal could be part of the picture. Suggest a special outing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A waif in Sarah's clothing may show its true colors now. There is little use in crying over spilled milk. Put a disappointment behind you; get on with bigger and better things!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Try not to get upset or angry about a delay. Others have the right to do things in their own time and not when you want. Nurture your close personal relationships.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Shadowboxes
6 Br'er Rabbit's foe
9 String tie
13 Michigan county
14 Rents
16 Arabian Sea gulf
17 Commitment
18 Type of club
19 "What's — for me?"
20 Jeanne d'Arc, e.g.
21 15th cen. Italian painter
24 Sierra —
26 West or Busch
27 Furnish
29 Exceptional
34 Article of food
35 Scrutinizes
36 "Neither fish — fowl"
37 Start of a Shakespearean title
38 Proofreader's term
39 Grimm heavy
40 Faulty
41 Critic, at times
42 Unpleasantly plump
43 Decreased
45 Grins
46 London repast
47 Clubs and hearts
48 Hit play of 1945
53 Large joint
56 Anchor
57 Row of seats
58 Annoy
60 Only
61 Shake — hurry up
62 Roman official
63 Bread spread
64 — out supplement
65 Actor Jacobi

DOWN
1 Ike
2 Thomas or Moore
3 World's highest cascade
4 Narrow inlet
5 Foxx role
6 Pond scum
7 Composer Bartok
8 "— dollar, — cent salute"
9 Water heater
10 Atlanta arena
11 Not of the cloth
12 Aware of 15 Part
22 Circular: Abbr.
23 What Antony wants to borrow
25 A very long time
27 Advantage
28 Pierre's daughter
29 Landed
30 Max or Buddy
31 Type of pasta
32 Scandinavian
33 Kilmer poem
35 Rescue
38 Rummy variation
39 Final notice
41 Whirl
42 Neglected
44 He-it's successor
45 Petition
47 Conductor Koussevitzky
48 GI's supplies
49 Christmas
50 Clinton's running mate
51 High, stiff hat
52 Emit smoke
54 Land in the water
55 Furtive glance
59 Netherlands town

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

	C	O	P		S	T	L	D		A	G	O	N
B	O	L	T		P	R	O	E		C	R	U	D	E
A	H	I		F	A	S	T		A	I	M	E	D
B	E	V	E	R	L	Y		S	T	I	L	L	S
E	R	E		L	I	S			S	E	G	A	R
S	S	A	M				T	A	R	D	O	N	O
		M	I	L	E		A	F	R	E	N	T
	D	U	E		R	O	E		A	S	A
J	E	S	T	E	N	D	M	A	N
O	L	E		O	W	E		E	M	I	G	R	E
T	I	S	S	U	E			M	A	I	A		A	R
			M	A		L	Y	R	E		D	R	E
T	A	P	E	R		L	O	R	I		M	A	S	C
U	N	I	T	E		L	O	S	E		I	G	O
B	A	C	H			S	P	A	S		E	M

10/29/92

■ Rapture

continued from page 12

doomsday churches, claims 10,000 members. Police estimate the total number of doomsday believers at 20,000.

A closed circuit television outside had shown parishioners inside kneeling on cushions, singing and raising their arms as a chorus sang and a steel guitar played hymns. "Jesus is coming," they screamed.

But the television was smashed by a teen-ager whose brother was inside the church. He was arrested after a scuffle.

One woman threw a black purse from a fifth-story window containing what looked like housekeys.

"See you in heaven," said a mother with baby on her back, who was outside the church.

Thousands more riot police were deployed at some 200 other doomsday churches in Seoul and elsewhere. Police said fire engines, ambulances and rescue vehicles also were deployed.

The church's 46-year-old founder, Lee Jan-rim, had warned followers to restrain themselves in case today was not the end. He is in jail on charges of swindling followers of up to $4 million.

Prosecutors said Lee had $300,000 worth of bonds that mature as late as next May. They said that proved he did not expect the world to end.

Hundreds and possibly thousands of Korean believers sold property, abandoned their families, quit schools and jobs and deserted military posts.

Reebok "pumped" for lawsuit against L.A. Gear over patent

STOUGHTON, Mass. (AP)— Reebok International Ltd., armed with a newly-issued patent for its inflatable shoe technology called "The Pump," has filed suit against competitor L.A. Gear Inc.

"We now have the tool needed to address unlawful copying of 'The Pump' concept by other companies," said Reebok Chairman Paul Fireman.

The patent issued by the U.S. Patent Office Tuesday covers athletic shoes featuring an inflatable chamber and pump mechanism.

Reebok immediately filed a patent infringement suit against L.A. Gear in federal court in Boston over six models of shoes sold by the California company under the name "The Regulator."

The suit seeks an injunction against the sale of the shoes, plus unspecified damages.

"If companies introduce products that look like our products, that infringe (on) design rights that we have or technology for which we have a patent, then they should consider themselves at risk of Reebok pursuing them," company attorney Jack Douglas said Wednesday.

L.A. Gear spokesman Jeff Lloyd in Los Angeles said the company was aware of the lawsuit, but had no comment.

"The Pump" was introduced by Reebok in November 1989 and the company has since shipped more than 12.2 million pairs of shoes incorporating the inflatable technology, which allows the wearer to drive air into inflatable chambers to more closely grip the foot.

Patent applications are pending for other uses of the same technology, company officials said.

The company sued Spalding Sports Worldwide last year, saying Spalding stole the technology for its airFlex air-inflation baseball gloves.

Reebok accused Design Continuum, its partner in creating "The Pump," with passing trade secrets on to Spalding.

The case was settled, and Spalding continues to sell its airFlex glove.

Reebok International Ltd. reported 1991 sales of about $2.7 billion.

Monday - 10¢ Mozzarella Sticks

Tuesday - 10¢ Mild or Hot Buffalo Wings

Thursday - 10¢ Chicken "Hot Lips" Nuggets

Our 15th Year 1978 - 1993

Charlie's tavern
AMHERST, MASS.
1978 - 1993

FRIDAY NIGHT
Prizes & Giveaways with the
Jägermeister Models
Friday, Oct. 30th, 8-12 midnight

Open 11 am - 1 am 7 days a week • Kitchen open 'til midnight
1 Pray Street (Behind Fleet Bank), Amherst
Game room with 2 pool tables • 3 TV's • MC / VISA / AMEX Accepted • 549-5403

Wednesday - 25¢ Cheese Pizza Slices

CENTRAL TRAVEL
Amtrak
BUY YOUR AMTRAK TICKET FROM CENTRAL TRAVEL AND BE ELIGIGLE TO WIN A
FREE TICKET TO MONTREAL
ASK US ABOUT AMTRAK'S DAILY SERVICE DIRECT FROM AMHERST TO MONTREAL, ONLY $55 ROUND TRIP!
FROM THE AGENCY THAT CARES...
CENTRAL TRAVEL
549-4900
25A PRAY ST., AMHERST, MA
(IN THE D.H. JONES REAL ESTATE BLDG.)

GET OUT AND VOTE
A PUBLIC SERVICE ANNOUNCEMENT BROUGHT TO YOU BY THE COMMITTEE TO ELECT OURSELVES.

UMass basketball

Dear UMass Basketball Fans

Two days to MIDNIGHT MADNESS - your first chance to see the 1992-93 Minutemen! We have an action-packed night of activities planned for you. Come dressed as Coach Calipari and win dinner with me and my wife, or put on your best costume and win a trip of your choice with the basketball team. You can win cash prizes in the special Midnight Madness raffle. Remember: no masks will be allowed.

We anticipate a capacity crowd at the Cage. Be one of the first 1000 through the door and receive a special 1992-93 team poster. Entrance will be on a first-come-first-serve basis.

The doors will open at 9:30 pm and the event will end around 12:20 am. For everyone's safety, no alcohol or containers are permitted in the Cage.

We look forward to seeing you on Saturday night.

Best Regards
John Calipari
Coach John Calipari

■ TV

continued from page 16

comes to college football.

Best impersonation of the weekend: On NFL Live, Bob Costas stuck it to the Eye with his "I'm a big fan" imitation while wearing a fake moustache. Well, the guy hasn't grown on me yet, unlike my other esteemed Collegian colleagues, so get rid of him.

SundaySports Live a hit?: I've got to admit those of you who missed the show this week should be disappointed. Yes, the informative interview of UMass coach John Calipari was well conducted by Mike Ratte. Thank god it was not in studio so Jim "Won't you be my neighbor?" Cline could not mess it up.

Look who's helping out Monday night: During the Jets-Bills game, NBC's David Letterman made a visit to the broadcast booth via invitation from Al Michaels. ABC should make him a regular and get rid of Dan Dierdorf.

Arthur Stapleton is a Collegian columnist.

■ Big Ten

continued from page 16

The most fab of this year's "recruits" is Purdue's 6-9 Glenn Robinson. In fact, Robinson was a Prop 48 casualty last season, and I'm sure coach Gene Keady wishes he'd been eligible while he still had All-Big Ten guard Woody Austin, because this year, the supporting cast is too thin to help Robinson propel the Boilermakers into the conference race. But, judging from all the favorable comparisons he's drawn to the phenomenal Webber, he probably can steer the other team in Indiana to a first-division finish in the Big Ten and a trip to the NIT, or perhaps the NCAA Tournament.

Predicted order of finish: 1. Indiana, 2. Michigan, 3. Iowa, 4. Illinois, 5. Purdue, 6. Ohio State, 7. Wisconsin, 8. Michigan State, 9. Penn State, 10. Minnesota, 11. Northwestern.

Ted Kottler is a Collegian columnist.

■ Scott's

continued from page 16

she asked, "If the Red Sox were eliminated so long ago, why are we still subjected to Lou Gorman's jabberwocky?"

The Shirl, a vote for her is a vote for you.

• Very rarely will I get serious in this space, but on Monday, the Patriots lost a long-time fan and I lost a cousin who showed me the value of laughter and the importance of simply being yourself. Herb, in many ways you might be better off, now your Sundays will be stress-free. Enjoy your view from the skybox.

• Keep your feet in bounds and your eyes on the ballot box.

David Scott is a Collegian columnist.

VOTE COLLEGIAN

HERE AT THE COLLEGIAN, WE DON'T JUST TEND TO YOUR EVERYDAY COLLEGE-MINDED, THURSDAY-WEEKEND-STARTING, TUESDAY-WEEKEND-ENDING, TEST-CRAMMING, TIRED-OF-D.C.-EATING, REAL-CABLE-WANTING, MISSING-FREE-LAUNDRY-DOING, LATE-CLASS-ADDING-BUT-DON'T-REALLY-WANT-IT-BUT-CREDIT-NEEDING, LATE-GRADUATING, MORE-SLEEP-WANTING, UNDERGRADUATE, JOB-AFTER-GRADUATION-WANTING, REAL-WORLD-AVOIDING-SO GRAD-SCHOOL-UP-SIGNING, DO-NOT-LIKE-GREEN-EGGS-AND-HAMMING, DO-NOT-LIKE-THEM-SAM-I-AMING, DUCK-FEEDING, SWAN-FROM-RUNNING, COSMIC FRENCH-FRY-MARVELING, MEANING-OF-LIFE-PONDERING, YES-BUT-IS-IT-ART-MUTTERING, MONEY-FROM-HOME-SEEKING, CONDOM-BRANDISHING, CAFFEINE INGESTING, HEY-HEY-HO-HOING, BOB-LOVING NEEDS.
WE LOVE YOUR ANGST AS MUCH AS OUR OWN.

Spirit Haus
LIQUOR STORE

Post Road Ale 6 pak ..... $6.99 (+ dep)
Blackened Voodoo Lager 6 pk ..... $6.20 (+ dep)
Catamount Gold Amber Porter 6 pak . $4.69 (+dep)
Poland Springs Vodka 1.75 L $9.99
Absolut Citron 750 ml $14.99
Canadian Club 750 ml $9.99
Gallo Burgandy Chablis Rhine 1.5 L $6.20

The Best Selection of Octoberfest Beers still available–"Last Call" at Spirit Haus, and some great in store specials for Halloween!

LOTTERY Headquarters
Beers from around the World!
Imports • Gourmet • Microbreweries
Kegs starting at $33.00
(checks/Mastercard/Visa accepted for Keg Deposits)
Malt Scotches • Cognacs • Brandies • Champagnes

Open 9 am - 11 pm
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED
338 College Street/253-5384
One mile East of Amherst Ctr. on Rte. 9

DISTINCTIVE HAIR DESIGNS
Our stylists work with you to create just the perfect look for your HAIR
$4.00 OFF! with Cheryl only.
Ex. 11/30/92
Styles by Deborah
65 University Drive, Amherst • 549-5610

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students – Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30 Fri. 8:30-2:30 113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Haunted House
Lamba Chi Alpha
Tonight 6:30-9:00
$1 child $2 Adult
To benafit D.A.R.E
Guareneed to scare!

Multicultural Night
Insternational antertainment and cuisine needed for campus wide event (ingredients will be provided) Show UMass your culture! Call by Nov. 6th 253-0522

Tour of Well Street & United Nations

November 6, 1992
Day trip to New York City $32
Call 548-3727 NOW!
Organized by the European Club

UMASS Racquetball team interested in new members- all university men and women welcome. All ability levels welcome--beginner to advanced.
If interested call 549-4349

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Like Applied Science?
Try Food Science as a major
Call Dr. Chinachoti 545-1025

COLLEGE PIZZA

College Pizza
Fall Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $6.00
Free soda with purchase of large sub salad or spaghetti
549-8098 549-9073
Must mention this ad

ENTERTAINMENT

Don't miss the MIDNIGHT MADNESS sale
Amherst Music House
Today 10 a.m. - 12 midnight
233 N. Pleasant St.
(Carriage Shops)
Amherst
549-1728

FOR RENT

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

Amherst 3 bedroom condo avail. Feb. 1st A room and 1 bedroom apartment avail. Jan. 1st.
Lincoln Real Estate
25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7879

4 Bedroom house near Smith in Northampton. $775 plus. Nov. 1st. Call SKIBISKI realtors 584-3428

Fridge rental free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

1989 Kawasaki EX500
Wht, Full fairing only 8600 miles
Have no storage for winter -- Must sell
First $1600 takes it
Call Josh at 549-7939

Block Bike leather used call 256-3092 Leave message take $O

Computer System for sele, desperately need the money, great for beginners color monitor and printer, IBMXT/AT
Asking $550 call 6-6970

Like new Brother word processor WPD 7600 plenty of features
A steal at $210 or bass offer
548-1197

19 inch color TV
Excellent condition $50
Call Sam 253-7896

Tandy 200 Portable computer
2 Power Pacs + case and manuals
Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O.

2 Tickets for Heir
FRIDAY NIGHT
$6 Call 665-7153

HELP WANTED

Alaska Summer Employment - fisheries earn $600+ a week in canneries $4000/month on fishing boats. Free transportation! Room and Board! Male or Female. Get a head start on this summer. For employment program call 1-206-545-4155 ext. A5001

BE A SPRING BREAK REP!
EARN FREE TRIPS and the HIGHEST COMMISSIONS! Cancun, Daytona, & Jamaica from $159. Call TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL today!
(800)32-TRAVEL

Couples -- Property Manager Free Amherst apartment plus salary Debbie 256-0741

Easy Work! Excellent pay! Assemble products at home
Call toll free
1-800-467-6226 Ext. 598

Evening Jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action $7/hr. On buslines. 584-9830

Earn $1,500 WEEKLY mailing our circulars! ... Begin NOW! ...FREE packet! SEYS Dept. 121 Box 4000 Cordova, IN 380184000

Postal Jobs Available! Many positions, great benefits, Call 1-800-333-3737 ext. P-3306

$200 - $500 WEEKLY
Assemble products at home. Easy! No selling. You're paid direct. Fully guaranteed. FREE INFORMATION - 24 HOUR HOTLINE. 801-379-2900 Copyright # MA15KDH

STUDENTS OR ORGANIZATIONS
Promote our Florida Spring Break packages. Earn MONEY and FREE trips. Call Campus Marketing 800-423-5264

WANTED: TRAVEL REPS for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SIESTA, ask for Bonnie

Work for Us
UMass Outing Club
Now hiring an
EQUIPMENT MANAGER
Applications avail.
at UMOC office
423 C Student Union
Due Nov. 9

HEY YOU

TV Times has UMass cable and town of AMherst cable listings customized for you. Pick it up on campus today. Valuable coupons inside!

INSTRUCTION

Italian Tutor
Native Speaker
Call 546-1347

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0266

LEGAL INTERNSHIPS

Spring 1993 internships with the Legal Services Center! Get hands-on experience in the legal field -- work directly with attorneys and clients. No experience in the legal profession necessary -- training provided. Contact Legal Services today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center. November 13 is the application deadline.

MUSICIANS

Guitar Lesson Berklee graduate
534-0183

PERSONALS

CAP
Yo roomie! You are finally legal. What do you say we get NICE and STINKY on 20/20 after grocary shopping? Have a good one, sweetie pie! With toms of roomately LOVE!
CYC

Diane,
Thank you for the best nine months of my life.
Love,
Brian

Little Chicita
I like ya.
TurkeyHead

Missy, Thanks for landing an ear. You're something special kid! BRETT

Thanks forR a fUn roll in tha hay IsSt ThurSday.

TOM
Happy 20th
Love,
B

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to Long Island or NY City this weekend. Call Paul at 256-1239

SERVICES

Free Peer counseling lesbian, gay, bisexual issues. Phone or walk in. LBG counseling collective, 406G Student Union 545-2645.

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops. 549-1906.

Resumes
Need Help? I have experience with Resumes. Quick service, free advice, excellent quality, and LOW prices. IBM laser printing service available.
Call Andy at 549-9453

Tarot Readings
Call Chris 256-0821

ROOMMATES WANTED

North Amherst female to share two bedroom nice clean. On bus route 200/month ASAP Call Holly 549-4259 eves

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed – Free cover page, spell check, laser printout. $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795

Typing - Word Processing.
Resumes, Reports, Theses,
Dissertations. Laser Printing
Call Rosemary 323-9031

Typing $1/PG 24hr turnaround 586-5268

WANTED

Are you moving out of Pulfton? Could we talk over your lease? 2/Bedroom wanted Call 6-1993

We want your 2BDRM Pulfton lease!! Starting January 1. Call us first!! Reward if we sign it!! Call 549-7319

2 DAYS until MIDNIGHT MADNESS

Sports

Minutemen succumb to Fairfield Stags, 2-0

By ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

An unwritten law of sports is never underestimate your opponent. If you do, you will get beaten.

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team was guilty of breaking this law yesterday as it traveled to Connecticut to battle Fairfield University, leaving with a 2-0 defeat at the hands of the Stags.

"We underestimated Fairfield and we weren't mentally prepared. Our team didn't practice too well the last couple of days and today was an indication of that," said junior back Matt Edgerly.

The loss drops the Minutemen, ranked fifth in the New England poll before yesterday's contest, to 9-5-2. Fairfield, unranked, came into the game on a high note after upsetting nation Loyola, which was ranked 24th.

After a scoreless first half, the Stags got on the board with 23:06 left to go in the game. Jim McElderry scored on a penalty kick, blasting a shot past UMass goalie Mark Wolf.

With the score 1-0, the Minutemen were looking for their typical second half surge to tie up the Stags. However, the efforts for a UMass tie were thwarted with 13:55 to go in regulation.

Fairfield's Shawn Mahoney booted one from right in front of the goal and it found its way by Wolf, burying Sam Koch's team for good at 2-0.

For the game, UMass only took 3 shots against Stags' goalie Andy Tennant, who posted his fourth shutout on the season. All three shots by the Minutemen were directed on net, but Tennant collected saves on all three.

It was Fairfield's first non-conference victory all season, following up their huge win over Loyola. The Stags finished 2nd in the Mid Atlantic Athletic Conference, assuring them a spot in the conference's post-season tourney.

"The game is over with, and we need to work harder than we have all season for a big win against GW," said Randy Jacobs.

UMass will be busy this weekend, as the team travels to Washington D.C. Friday morning for the completion of the game with George Washington at 11:00 a.m.

A win would clinch the number one seed in the Atlantic 10 tourney, possibly setting up a rematch with the Colonials next weekend.

"A win against GW means the most for our program. We'll have to put the loss behind us," said Colin Johnson.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

Randy Jacobs and the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team fell to Fairfield yesterday, 2-0. Jacobs leads the Atlantic 10 in scoring with 32 points.

Scott's shots

The following is a paid political infomercial sponsored by "Sports Fans for Scott." The opinions expressed reflect nothing logical and are solely presented because I, like Mr. Perot, have wads of cash to waste.

• Perhaps there was a small misunderstanding last week when I vowed not to shave until Foxboro's Fumblers won a game. I was referring to my legs.

• Publicly we will never admit that we travelled four hours roundtrip to watch those sorry souls discover new ways of losing a football game. Privately however, it could be time to seek counseling.

• Welcome back UMass defensive coordinator Bill McGovern, it's so nice to have you back where you belong. Talk about inspired defense. Woaahh Nellie.

David
SCOTT

• Seems like just yesterday Cal's Pals were beating West Virginia in the Cage and now BANG, it's Midnight Madness. Hoops season does something to this campus that is simply unbelievable.

This just in. . . Lenny Wirtz has been banned from the Coach Cal Look-A-Like Contest after testing positive for anabolic steroids. Oddsmakers have installed Hampshire Gazette sports svengali Milt Cole as a 2 to 1 favorite. Milt's pretty much the mirror image of Cal.

• Xavier McDaniel looks just fine in the Green and White.

• This isn't necessarily Canada-bashing, but the Blue Jays were truly classless when they started doing the Tomahawk Chop and chant during their locker room celebration.

• Either Hugh Million is more injured than originally thought or he's simply a very mediocre quarterback.

• It's starting to look like Robert Parish will be the last of the Big Three left standing.

• As a rule, when at football games it is not advisable to mix hot chocolate and blackberry brandy. Unless of course your team decides to fumble three times in the fourth quarter. Three times. Thrice. Trois. (You know I'm ripped when I pull out the French vernacular.)

• Wouldn't it better for the Bruins to sit out key players the rest of the season in order to save them for the playoffs? Unfortunately it looks like Cam could be sitting for a long time to come.

• Forget the basketball Saturday night Lou Roe, slam home a pumpkin. Madness on Halloween, talk about SCARY.

• Unfortunately we tend to overlook the accomplishments made in some of the lesser known sports on this campus. Case in point is Julie Lafreniere, the two-time A-10 champ UMass women's cross-country head coach, who was named the conference's Coach of the Year. A job well done, congrats.

• Further investigation into Sunday's "game" at Foxboro reveal that both offenses were using the same playbook — a blank one. Ray Berry was spotted dashing from the Browns offensive box to the Patsies box.

• The Shirl posed the question of the week when

Turn to SCOTT'S, page 15

Crew enjoyed busy weekend

By ERIC STEINHILBER
Collegian Correspondent

This past weekend, the men and women's crew teams traveled to Pennslyvania to compete in the Head of the Schuylkilla Regatta.

The lightweight women's team captured first place while the lightweight men's team finished third in their division (division two) and thirteenth overall. At press time the results of the heavyweight races were not available.

"The women not only beat twenty other colleges," said Greg Siemankowski, coach of both the men and women's crew teams, "but they also beat the Vesper Boat Club which contained people with National Team potential, so it was a real good race."

The men's team also had a solid showing finishing third in their division. "We finished thirteenth overall, but all the teams ahead of us except for two were Ivy league schools and National Team," said Siemankowski.

The crew teams have two weeks off before they return to action on the Charles for "an end of the season Regatta".

"We should do really well," said Siemankowski. "We're going up against Harvard, BU, Northeastern, BC and all the other division one schools and I'll be very happy if we can be competitive with that league because they're a step up."

Siemankowski said he feels very confident and hopeful about the upcoming spring season.

"Once we get to the spring that's the big racing season for us," said Siemankowski. "Where we've been finishing in the races this fall points to higher finishes in the spring and possibly, for a couple of events, higher than ever before."

Hoops in Big Ten is a very big deal

The Big Ten is definitely a big-time basketball conference, virtually without a doubt the strongest in the NCAA. But it is actually made up of 11 teams. Welcome former Atlantic 10 (or is it 8?) member Penn State, which testifies to the strength of the league in that it is a consensus cellar pick despite four straight 20-win seasons. (Though I rate the Nittany Lions 9th.)

Now consider this: Here's my All-Big Ten team. PF: Acie Earl, Iowa; SF: Calbert Cheaney, Indiana; C: Chris Webber, Michigan; PG: Jalen Rose, Michigan; SG: Tracy Webster, Wisconsin. All but Webster played on the college development squad that upset the Dream Team in a scrimmage, and all Webster did was shoot 75-for-153 (.490) from 3-point range, the sixth-best mark in the land.

Ted
KOTTLER

While it appears Penn State won't be in the race for the conference crown, it may have a profound effect on it. Until this season, each Big Ten team would play a home-and-home set with the other nine, for a total of 18 league games. They will each play the same number this season, but only one against two different teams.

This format affects the frontrunners, Indiana and Michigan (my picks in that order), most dramatically. The Wolverines one-time it with Northwestern and Penn State, two of the league's weaker teams, while the Hoosiers meet Michigan State and Wisconsin, both likely post-season teams, just once. General Knight's troops get the better end of the deal.

Unlike last year, which marked the arrival of Michigan's Fab Five and Indiana's 6-9 shot-blocking machine Allen Henderson, it wasn't a banner year for recruiting by the Big Ten. Of the Top 50 ranked freshmen in the All Star Sports 1992 Basketball Recruiting Report, published by college coaches' best friend Bob Gibbons, only five are on Big Ten rosters.

The most highly regarded of these is Ohio State's 11th ranked, all-purpose guard Greg Simpson, a McDonald's All-American, who is the vital ingredient to the Buckeyes' climb back to the top of the conference standings following the early departure of Jimmy Jackson.

Turn to BIG TEN, page 15

Weekend sports around the dial

Welcome to another weekly installment of "TV Sports," where we'll take a look back at the wacky world of big-time athletics, with a twist. I'm filling in for Mr. Morrissey, who might resume his column next week, depending on his workload.

Well, the World Series is over, and for those of you who fell asleep on the game early Sunday morning, the championship banner will fly north of the border for the first time in history.

Arthur
STAPLETON

We are starting to see how television is dictating sports, pushing game times all around the dial in order to obtain high ratings. Baseball is losing touch with its younger fans, mainly grammar school kids, because the games a) last too long, b) don't start until prime-time on weeknights, and c) never finish in time for the morning newspapers.

CBS did a good job overall on the Series, with Sean McDonough and Tim McCarver jelling well as a tandem on the tube. McDonough seemed to lead his partner into great evaluations of the game itself.

Once again, like last season, McCarver had the unenviable task of interviewing two-time loser, Bobby Cox. He handled it with his normal integrity, and didn't step on any toes in Atlanta throughout, despite what Deion Sanders thinks.

Other observations from the tube: Channel 22 really missed a chance at high ratings Saturday when it didn't broadcast the UMass-Villanova game. It just happened to be the biggest game of the year for the Minutemen and their fans, and many people left the game after tailgating due to the awful weather.

Game of the Week: ABC once again hit the jackpot with the Penn State-West Virginia contest. This game went down to the wire, with the Nittany Lions sealing the victory with an interception return for a touchdown in the final minutes. Even though NBC would have reaped the benefits of their Notre Dame Saturday if the Irish had a chance at the national title, it has become ABC Saturday when it

Turn to TV, page 15

RECKLESS

Turns absurdity into an art form

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

What do marriage, psychiatry, game shows, parenting and murder have in common? Not much, except that they make up the dizzying sphere of "Reckless," a dark comedy that tells of one woman's flight and her search for stability in an always unpredictable world.

Written in 1988 and re-worked since, "Reckless" was written by Craig Lucas, the talented screenwriter who wrote the breakthrough AIDS melodrama Longtime Companion and both the stage and screen versions of Prelude to a Kiss.

In "Reckless," Lucas tells the story of Rachel (Lynda Newton), whose idyllic Christmas Eve is shattered when her husband Tom (Michael Lombardi) confesses that he's taken a contract out on her life and furthermore, he regrets it. But there is no time and Rachel's only option is to flee.

"Reckless" follows her journey — in a completely absurdist manner — as she travels in a world that may or may not be a complete "dream or therapeutic fantasy."

During her 'journey,' Rachel meets up with a mysterious physiotherapist named Lloyd (Tony Maestrone), who brings her home to meet his wife Pooty (Becca Mackinnon).

Before the end of the play, broad twists and game show sequences will spin "Reckless" into the absurd, which is precicely what director Edward Golden says the message is.

"[The play] suggests that there are no easy solutions to the big questions in life," Golden says. "We tend to be hungry for the quick fixes, but ultimately, I think the play says you must find it within yourself, that we must find our own unanswerable questions."

Golden says he was immediately piqued by the over-the-edge style of "Reckless."

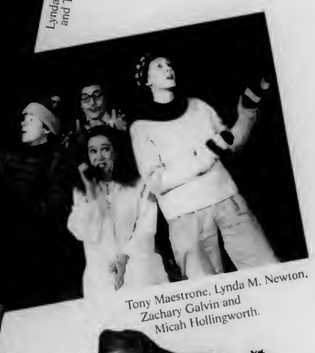
"The play takes a very serious situation and treats it with humor," Golden says, adding that the audience should "go with it" and the message will follow.

"Reckless" showcases the work of graduate students Terry Beckett's scenic design and Sabrina Hamilton's lighting design. UMass senior Ken Chu designed the costumes.

With this kind of background work and Lucas' fast-paced, bittersweet script, "Reckless" will prove to be a unique theater experience.

"Reckless" runs through October 31 at the Curtain Theater at 8 p.m. There will be a matinee on October 31 at 2 p.m. Tickets $5 general; $3 students/seniors. Available at the FAC.

Lynda M. Newton, Becca McKinnon, and Tony Maestrone.



Tony Maestrone, Lynda M. Newton, Zachary Galvin and Micah Hollingworth.

Tony Maestrone and Lynda M. Newton.

PHOTOS COURTESY UMASS THEATER DEPT.

THIS WEEKEND

Scares & thrills from beyond the VCR

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Someone important or famous once said, "Fear is good." Or maybe that was "Greed is good." Anyway, so much for a segue into my top five scary pick flicks (say that five times fast) for Halloween, the holiday where kids are encouraged to dress up like ghosts and goblins (more like the Terminator and Waldo), go knocking on doors and beg for candy that will eventually cause them to get enormous amounts of cavities and send dentist bills soaring.

Where was I? Oh yeah, scary movies. Everyone has their favorites, and I've listed five (really six, but who's counting) contemporary films from recent memory just about guaranteed to make you scream. It's a given that any film with Melanie Griffith in it will make you scream (or at the least beg God for mercy). As a bonus, I've also included some older, classical and lesser known gems to spook you. Alright? Put on your Underdog mask and vinyl, flame-repellent costume and read on:

1. Halloween — (1978) The ultimate and now well-regarded slasher movie standard that sends schlock movie producers running to claim any imaginable, available holiday, big-chested virginal co-eds and some neat impaling object as their own.

John Carpenter's suspenseful "fairy tale" stars Jamie Lee Curtis as a the heroine who plays a frightful cat-and-mouse game with the now legendary psycho Michael Meyers (no, not the one from Wayne's World). Michael does the stalking thing and is pretty freaky-looking, even now after seeing the four sequels.

Sure, a lot of teenagers get killed before and after sex (though one in the middle), and Curtis thinks she offs Michael at the end, but Halloween still boasts an eerie performance by Donald Pleasance as Mr. Loomis and the most identifiable, scary movie music this side of Psycho. (A-)

2. The Exorcist — (1973) Pea soup vomit, Linda Blair's possessed slut taunts the priests, head twisting. . .who could ask for anything more! This acclaimed and near shocking film has been parodied to death, but it is still one of the consistently scary films ever.

There's a whole other layer of stuff going on in The Exorcist but it works best on the rawest level. Linda Blair's possession is chilling and the exorcism is one of the most frightening sequences on celluloid. Pulsing performances by Ellen Burnstyn as Blair's mother and Jason Miller and Max Von Sydow as the priests who try to do battle with a very evil spirit are equally engrossing. (A)

3. The Shining (1980) & Carrie (1976) — The best (and there have been a lot) of the Stephen King film adaptations. None other than Stanley Kubrick (the master filmmaker of all time?) and the marvelous Jack Nicholson team up to deliver a film that is a visual and jolt-filled ride that

TURN TO HALOWEEN, PAGE 4

Photo by Brian Hamill

Mia Farrow, star of Rosemary's Baby, is seen here in Woody Allen's latest release, Husbands and Wives.

TWO WINNERS WILL BE CHOSEN BY RANDOM DRAWING!

COLLEGIAN CONCERT SWEEPSTAKES!

WIN A PAIR OF FREE TICKETS MATERIAL ISSUE, TOO MUCH JOY, MIGHTY LEMONDROPS at PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB Tuesday, November 3rd

TRIPLE BILL TICKETS/ OFFICIAL ENTRY FORM

Name _____

Phone # _____

RULES
Must be at least 18 years old to enter. Tickets are non-refundable.
Drawing to be held on Friday, October 30, 1992. No entries will be recieved after 3:30 PM on 10/30/92.
Collegian staff are not eligible to enter. Winners will be contacted by telephone.
Drop off entries at Collegian business window, 113 Campus Center (basement), UMass, Amherst.
Winners are responsible for picking up tickets at the Collegian office before 3:30 pm on Tuesday, Nov. 3rd.
Only one entry per person will be accepted. Only official entry form from newspaper will be accepted.

THERE WILL BE AN ARTS & LIVING STAFF MEETING THIS SUNDAY, AS ALWAYS, IN CAMPUS CENTER 113 AT 2PM.

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street
South Amherst

PERSONAL
Nice, Affordable two and three bedroom Apts., seeking quiet, responsible residents. Long and short term relationship possible.
Call 253-3834

EASY
IF WE THOUGHT WE KNEW WHAT WE WERE TALKING ABOUT, WE'D BE RUNNING FOR PRESIDENT, TOO.
COLLEGIAN

2 NIGHT!
HALLOWEEN BASH!!
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 30th with MONGHANI
SAT., OCTOBER 31st with BARK LIKE A DOG
BOTH BEGIN AT 9 pm
A "FRIGHTFULLY" FUN TIME FOR ALL!
60 oz. Miller Genuine Draft Pitchers $3.75
Munchies! Prizes! Fun!
HADLEY PUB • ROUTE 9 • HADLEY

DOMINO'S PIZZA
NOBODY KNOWS LIKE DOMINO'S
How You Like Pizza At Home.
Amherst 256-8911
South Hadley 535-1111
HOURS: SUN-THURS 11AM to 2AM
FRI-SAT 11AM to 3AM
AVAILABLE FOR CARRY-OUT OR DELIVERY
FREE DELIVERY
NOW ACCEPTING COUPONS FOR DELIVERY IN SELECTED AREAS

LUNCH SPECIAL
GOOD 11AM to 3PM
MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA+
ONE TOPPING+ 2 FREE COKES $5.99
ADDITIONAL TOPPINGS EXTRA ONLY
LARGE CHEESE PIZZA
ONE TOPPING PLUS 4 FREE COKES $7.99
ADDITIONAL TOPPINGS EXTRA ONLY

BUY A LARGE CHEESE PIZZA FOR THE PRICE OF A SMALL

MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA for $4.99 or 2 for $8.99

BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA & GET SECOND OF EQUAL OR LESSER VALUE FOR ONLY $1.99

LARGE CHEESE PIZZA $5.99

WEEKEND HAPPENINGS

Calendar of events in the 5 College Area

THURSDAY

LECTURE — Dr. Raymond McNally, history professor at Boston College, will lecture on his unique findings of 15 years of researching Vlad Dracula the Impaler, the real-life vampire behind the myth. He will draw from his two novels, In Search of Dracula and Dracula: Prince of Many Faces. AC Frontroom, 9 p.m., $5/$1 with ID.

THEATRE — Hair opens tonight in the Student Union Ballroom. Sponsored by the UMass Theatre Guild, this student-directed production promises to be an entertaining show. Adult material presented, viewer discretion advised. 8 p.m. $6 general, $4 students.

EXHIBIT — Residential Arts presents the work of Ron Rizzi at Hampden Gallery through November 20. Rizzi's collection, "Gulf Angels: Recent Work by Ron Rizzi," includes somber and enigmatic paintings presenting issues of social awareness. Opening reception tonight from 5-7 p.m. Free.

COURTESY YOHAH RALPH

The works of Yohah Ralph will be on display at the Thornes Market Gallery in Northampton. The exhibit "Street Chic" will run Nov. 1–Dec. 3.

FILM — Susan Sarandon, Catherine Deneuve and David Bowie star in The Hunger, a film about "chic queer vampires." Part of the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Film Series. Campus Center Room 903. 7 p.m. Free.

LECTURE — "The Video Drive-In: A Crack in the Tube" by Kate Horsfield will focus on issues concerning the implications of alternative media for the future of video, television and politics. Tonight at 8 p.m. in AC Stirn Auditorium. Free.

IN CONCERT — The Valley Chamber Players will perform with special guest guitarist Kevin Collins. The program includes Estudios Sencillos by Leo Brouwer, Sonata in C by Fernando Sor, Guitar Quintet No. 6 by Boccherini and String Quartet No. 6 (The American) by Dvorak. Bezanson Recital Hall, 8 p.m. Tickets $5/$2.50 with ID. Box Office: 545-2511.

EXHIBIT — "Touch: Interactive, Introspective Clay and Play" by Sunny Miller will be on display at the Wheeler Art Gallery tonight through November 20. Gallery Hours are Mon-Thurs 4-8 p.m., Sun 2-5. 545-2804 for more info.

THEATRE — The UMass Theatre Department presents Craig Lucas' Reckless. Written by the award-winning author of Prelude to a Kiss and Longtime Companion, this is the story of a woman who struggles to make sense of her life after having been told a deep, dark secret by her husband. Show runs through Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theatre with a special 2 p.m. matinee Saturday. Tickets $5 general, $3 students/elders.

LECTURE — Luke Gibbons will present seven film shorts and four feature-length films to encourage an informed viewing of contemporary Irish film. 12 p.m. Campus Center Rm. 803, 4:30 p.m. Herter Hall Rm. 227, 8 p.m. SC Sweeney Auditorium Sage Hall. Lectures/presentations run through Friday, call 659-2207 for specific times and lecture topics. Free.

MEETING — Amnesty International, SC Bass Hall Rm. 204. 5 p.m., 585-6767 for more info.

PANEL DISCUSSION — "Five College Aquatic and Marine Science Alumni Career Panel" will discuss career and graduate school experiences in related fields. SC Sage Recital Hall, 7:30 p.m. Free.

LECTURE — Carole Straw of MHC's Department of History will present "Death in the Arena: The Martyr as Gladiator." MHC Gamble Auditorium, 7 p.m. Free.

FILM — Lesbian Tongues will be presented by the UMass Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns and the LBGA. Lesbians talk about their lives, love and sex in this documentary. Campus Center Rm. 803. 7 p.m. Free.

LECTURE — "Arms Control and Defense in the 1992 Election" will be presented as part of the PAWSS Fall Lecture Series. Lee Feinstein, Assistant Director for Research, Arms Control Assoc. in Washington D.C to speak. MHC Skinner Hall, 4-5:30 p.m. Free.

THEATRE — The Long Goodbye by Tennessee Williams will be shown tonight at AC's Fayerweather Studio Theatre, 8 p.m. Free but reservations needed, call 542-2277.

LECTURE — "Conspiracy of Silence: African-American Women, Abortion and Reproductive Freedom" will be presented by Byllye Avery, Founding President of the National Black Women's Health Project. HC Franklin Patterson Hall, Main Lec. Hall, 8 p.m. Free.

IN CONCERT — The Sanden Strayz Band will play at Sheehan's Cafe in Northampton tonight. Call 584-4254 for more info.

FRIDAY

IN CONCERT — Irish band The Frames will perform in true Pogues form with special guests, The Big Bad Bollocks tonight at Pearl Street in Northampton. Don't miss this free show that begins at 7 p.m.

LECTURE — "Women in the Labor Force: Workplace Issues of the 1990s" will be the focus of Kate Nussbaum's discussion. Nussbaum, President and Executive Director of 9-to-5 (National Organization of Working Women) will deal with problems facing clerical and support staff in the workplace. SC Seelye Hall, 4:15 p.m. Free.

FILM — Evil Dead II will start your Halloween weekend with a BOO! Plus, it's only $2 at AC's Campus Center Theatre, conveniently shown at 7:30 and 10 p.m.

IN CONCERT — Jonathan Hirsh conducts the Amherst College Choral Society in a special parents' weekend concert. Reservations required for this Buckley Recital Hall show, tickets are $5/$2 with ID and for elders. Show begins at 8:30.

FILM — Sally Field stars in Places in the Heart, a nostalgic look at family life during the Great Depression. AC Campus Center, Women's Center. 8:30 p.m. Free.

REGGAE — Internationally renowned reggae master Pato Banton will be jammin' with you in AC's Campus Center Frontroom tonight at 10 p.m. $10/$5 with ID. 542-5773 for more info-man.

SOCIAL — The Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance to hold a coffee social tonight from 3-6:30 p.m. in Room 903 of the Campus Center. Free.

SOCIAL — Alpha Phi Omega to hold "Las Vegas Night" in the Campus Center Auditorium tonight from 7 p.m.-12 a.m. Gamble the night away for $3 in advance, $5 at door.

EXHIBIT — The illustrations of local artist Carol Adamski will be featured at the Barnes Gallery at Leverett Crafts and Arts through November 10. An opening reception will be held tonight for the artist from 7-9 p.m. Call 548-9070 for more info.

HOLIDAY CONCERT — The Arcadia Players, a Baroque and Chamber Ensemble, will present Underworld, a musical celebration of Halloween. Works to be played include Alessandro Stradella's Cantata for the Souls in Purgatory, Henry Purcell's In Guilty Night and Marc-Antoine Charpentier's Orpheus Descends to the Inferno. Tonight, 8 p.m. at the First Unitarian Universalist Church in Springfield, Friday at St. Brigid's Parish Hall in Amherst 9 p.m., and Sunday at 4 p.m. at the First Churches of Christ in Northampton. $15 general, $12.50 senior, $10 student. Call 1-800-THE-TICK for more info. Don't forget your costume!

IN CONCERT — No Doubt, hellacious unsigned alternative band of Orange County will perform tonight at

COURTESY INTERSCOPE RECORDS

Don't miss No Doubt, a zany California alternative band at Amherst College on Friday.

AC. Having performed with the likes of the Red Hot Chili Peppers, Fishbone, Mary's Danish, The Untouchables and Ziggy Marley and the Melody Makers, No Doubt will rock the house with their hybrid of dance/ska/funk and rock. Call 542-5773 for more info.

PARTY — Sheehan's Cafe will sponsor and host a Record Release Party tonight. The first 50 guests will receive a free *45. The Ray Mason Band with special guests The Beeds will also perform. 584-4254 for more info.

SATURDAY

MIDNIGHT MADNESS — Don't miss the chance to celebrate Halloween and show support for the number one college basketball team in the world. Midnight Madness kicks off at 9:30 at the soon-to-be-just-a-memory Curry Hicks Cage. The event will feature a "Best UMass Fan" costume contest, a Coach Calipari look-alike contest, lots of prizes, raffles and fun. The 1992-93 UMass Minutemen will also take the court at midnight for their first practice of the season. Don't miss the event of the year, heck, even ESPN will be there!

COURTESY THE SAINT PAUL CHAMBER ORCHESTRA

The Saint Paul Chamber Orchestra will perform Saturday at 8pm in the Fine Arts Center.

IN CONCERT — The Grammy Award-winning and internationally renowned Saint Paul Chamber Orchestra will perform a program to include Rossini's Overture to Tancredi, Haydn's Symphony No. 86 in D, Prokofiev's Violin Concerto No. 2 in G Minor, Op 63 and Symphony No. 1 Op 25. Special guest violin soloist Gil Shaham will be featured. Principal Conductor/Music Director Hugh Wolff will lead America's only full-time professional chamber orchestra in tonight's 8 p.m. performance. FAC, tickets $18 general/$9 with ID/ $8 children.

FILM -- The MHC Film Society sponsors a creepy double feature to celebrate this Halloween eve. Hitchcock classics Rope and The Birds will make your trip home from MHC's Gamble Auditorium just a little more frightening. 7 & 9 p.m. $2.50.

IN CONCERT — Pearl Street hosts a rockin' Halloween Party featuring Who's Kiddin' Who. Tricks and treats lie in store for you at this Northampton hot spot, and who knows what kind of assorted goodies you may take home on this mischievous night. $5, party kicks off at 8:30.

COMMUNITY — Chabad House at Amherst to sponsor a Shabbat Morning Service and Meal. 10 a.m. Free. More info call 549-4094.

PARTY — Sponsored by the Cambodian Student Association, in the Campus Center Auditorium from 7 p.m.-1 a.m. $7.

DANCE — Sponsored by the Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance. This dance will be held in the Bluewall, Campus Center. 9 p.m.-2 a.m. $4.

SUNDAY

EXHIBITION — "Street Chic," an exhibit of the paintings and sculptures of Yohah Ralph will be featured at Thorne's Market Gallery in Northampton today through December 3. An opening reception will take place today from 2-5 p.m. Call 586-3071 for gallery hours and more info.

IN CONCERT — Folk singer/songwriter Brooks Williams will perform his simple, infectious melodies and intelligent lyrics tonight at 8 p.m. at AC's Campus Center Frontroom. $7 general/$1 with ID.

IN CONCERT — The Mount Holyoke College Glee Club and Chamber singers will present "A Fall Concert" today at 3 p.m. in the Abbey Chapel at MHC. Selections by Schumann, Handel, Britten, Mendelssohn. Catharine Melhorn will direct. Free.

Let your Hair down to groovy sixties musical

By SHAWN MCDONNELL
Collegian staff

The musical Hair has always been a bit of a contradiction: a rebellious "tribal love-rock" musical which is also a mainstream hit, an experimental operetta with a half-dozen Top 40 hits, and a constant success descandale because of a nude scene which is almost never performed.

The Broadway critics had a hard time defining it, when it opened nearly 25 years ago. It was the first time that rock music had been used in the theatre, and the first time a show had dared to address issues of the day. The New York Times praised its originality, and that (combined with increasing word-of-mouth publicity) helped to turn it into an enormous box office success — eventually running for an impressive 1,742 performances.

But despite Hair's commercial success, it was rarely greeted with enthusiasm by the jaded New York theatre elite. Overlooked at the Tony awards, the show became best known for its popularity with the youth it represented.

Alan White describes Hair as an "almost abstract and representational" creation, "a show very much of experimentation."

White is the director of the new UMass production of Hair, which kicks off tonight in the Student Union Ballroom. In the spirit of the show's reckless past, this Theatre Guild production promises to place a new spin on what is already one of musical theatre's most unusual creations.

Hair, the musical, (a vastly different creature from the disastrous Milos Forman film of the same name) is the story of eight very different people, and their search for something to believe in. "It is the search that they have in common," explains White, "and it is that which brings them together."

Set against the backdrop of sixties activism, the show questions the formalized structure of our society which can allow for homelessness, pollution, Vietnam, or even (as White suggests) the War in the Gulf.

"This is a difficult show for us to do," he explains, noting the danger of theatrically re-creating an era which neither cast nor director were a part of. "But all of us in this generation have looked back on the sixties."

One of the messages of the Theatre Guild production is that despite certain differences, the children of the sixties and the children of the nineties share many of the same concerns — from war to ecology, and from pollution to drug use.

"Things still aren't the way they should be," explains White. "That is still the same."

The Theatre Guild production of Hair has been formed very much as an ensemble piece, in which the cast and the creative team have worked together in interpreting and representing the text. Because of the experimental nature of the show, the way the characters appear to the audience relies heavily on the the personalities of the actors portraying them, and the environment they are given to perform in.

The Student Union Ballroom is perhaps the ideal place for such a freewheeling show, and the Guild has altered the space to meet their needs. In addition, Musical Director Peter Fernandez has worked out new orchestrations of many of the show's more familiar numbers, to help the production break away from its Top 40 image.

The score for Hair contains numerous now-classic rock tunes, including "Easy to be Hard," "Good Morning Starshine," "Donna," "Let the Sunshine In," and "The Age of Aquarius" — as well as the rousing title song. Among the lesser-known gems are "Sodomy," an ode to deviant sexual practices, "Air" a tongue-twisting musical catalogue of pollutants, and "What a Piece of Work is Man" — a mournful number with lyrics by William Shakespeare.

However, the most infamous number from Hair is the act one Finale, which builds up the dread until it explodes. Nice support from the terrified Shelley Duvall and the ominous, snow-filled locales that lend to the feeling of being trapped. Fantastic.

TURN TO HAIR, PAGE7

■ Halloween Flicks

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 2

Carrie is not nearly as solid as The Shining, but director Brian De Palma works the audience to screams in a tension-filled portrait of a teenager (Sissy Spacek, who brings creepiness to new levels) with telekenetic powers that she uses to wreak revenge on her guilt-less classmates. Piper Laurie is excellent as Carrie's bible-thumping fanatical mother and the most stunning image in the film — Carrie drenched in blood at a school dance — is extraordinary. The Shining (A), Carrie (A-).

4. Rosemary's Baby — (1968) Roman Polanski's dread-filled urban shocker exploits a thrilling vein of terror as Mia Farrow slowly begins to realize the baby she's carrying is, Satan's kid! Ouch! Ruth Gordon won an Oscar for her nifty portrayal as a member of the coven of witches which inhabits Farrow's apartment building. It's less hackneyed than it sounds, as the movie builds to a dizzyingly emotional climax. The Omen did a similar thing but within the confines of the thriller genre. Rosemary's Baby taps into the fear of motherhood — and amplifies it tenfold. (A-)

5. A Nightmare on Elm Street — (1985) The first time Freddy Krueger stalked our dreams was a virtual reinvention of the slasher movie myth. The psycho now was already dead, and he lived in the dreams of the teenagers who lived on Elm street. Freddy's not so goofy as he became in the sequels; he's a true scare rather than comic relief.

Wes Craven knew how to shock; both the "final" confrontation with Freddy and the near-surreal ending make for an off-kilter journey that's as good as this sort of thing gets. (B+)

But beyond the top six shockers, there are also some terrifying gems that are sure to send you leaping for your partner's arms, or at least the light switch.

Check out Bette Davis' maniacal babysitter in The Nanny (1965) that would eat Peyton, from Hand that Rocks the Cradle, for breakfast.

Director Nicholas Roeg has some chilling twists for you religious symbolism fans, the stylish and haunting Don't Look Now (1973) with Donald Sutherland and Julie Christie. This film also contains one of the classic passionate love scenes in movie history, and, unlike the horny teens in Halloween, these adults don't get offed while caught up in the throes of passion.

The director of Rosemary's Baby, Roman Polanski, has an equally disturbing film that will no doubt keep you on the edge of your sanity. Catherine Deneuve is underrated in the cryptic, mesmerizing Repulsion (1965). A stylish descent into madness that grips and grips and grips...

Brian De Palma has been called everything from the next Hitchcock to the next Godard, but you can be sure that his early films show a definite mood, image and thought while at the same time being an unabashed, manipulative thrill ride.

One of his first films was the criss-cross image-splitter Sisters (1973), with Margot Kidder as a pair of twin sisters, and well, you know the story, but De Palma veers into Bergman-Persona territory with a clever sidebar about mis-identity.

Also worth looking at (if only for the first in a line of many Hitchcock homages) is Dressed to Kill, your basic Psycho re-working with more emphasis on sexuality and guilt.

And finally, no look at spooky Halloween movies could go without a nod to the grandaddy of scary movies: Alfred Hitchcock's brilliant Psycho (1960). Just a look at this landmark film and you'll see how much the film industry and the genre have gained from this singular, perfect shocker.

Sit back, steal some candy from the basket by your front door and have a happy Halloween.

General Meeting
of the campus community with the search firm assisting the Chancellor's Search Committee.
Campus Center 904-08
Friday, October 30, 2:00-3:00

ATTENTION!
UMass Musc
the MINUTEMAN HOOP BAND
Good Guitar Player Needed!
Needs
First Meeting/Rehearsal
Monday, November 2
For More Information, Please Contact Thom Hannum, Director
Room 16, Old Chapel 2nd Floor or Call 545-6060/3410

Tori Amos' stunning voice powers concert

By DAN NGUYEN
Collegian Correspondent

Tori Amos
Smith College
Sunday, October 25

What can I say? I've been eagerly awaiting seeing Tori Amos for about a year. I bought her album, Little Earthquakes, after I heard her voice once. I missed her the first time last year, when she appeared at the Iron Horse — I called for tickets two days too late. This time around I just bought a pair of tickets, it didn't matter who accompanied me.

Tori Amos came on stage at the Buckley Recital Hall after a very entertaining opening act, though I forgot his name [sorry]. Tori was dressed in bell-bottom jeans, platform-like shoes and a stretch tank top.

She opened with a song unfamiliar to me, and then went right into her latest hit, "Crucify." I knew she had a clear, pleasant and strong voice, but I was completely unprepared to witness the soul-shattering, ethereal entity Tori Amos calls her voice.

I seriously had to fight my sobs and welling tears. Tori had taken in, and it was only the second song. Phinney may call ambrosia food for the Gods, but Tori Amos' voice could nourish anyone for immortality.

Tori continued with "Silent All These Years," "Precious Things," "Happy Phantom" and a Jim Morrison cover. Tori explained to us, the willing, how "excited" Tori got about Jimmy. Perhaps he was one of those "demigods with their Nine-Inch nails and little fascist panties tucked into the heart of every nice girl."

Throughout the entire show, Tori looked directly out at the audience while playing the piano and singing out her very being. She sat on the edge of the piano seat in quite awkward positions.

At the turning point of the show, she performed her emotional "Me and a Gun." Every member of the audience gained insight into her rape after the charged song was over. The pain and scars still remained and were transferred to the audience. After this delicate part of her set, she continued with "Mother."

She performed two encores. In the first one she played an incredible cover of Nirvana's "Smells Like Teen Spirit." She can make any song sound pleasant and soothing. I don't think this is what Kurt Cobain had in mind, but it worked for me. She closed with the long awaited "China."

And I haven't even mentioned her piano playing. This is because she had the entire place entranced by her voice that the audience scarcely knew she played any instruments. Her playing was completely effortless and flowed beautifully. Her piano ability perfectly complemented her flawless voice.

Noise is Medicine for post-anemic rockers

By SCOTT KESNER
Colllegian Staff

Shot Forth Self Living
Medicine
Def American Jam

Medicine's debut effort, Shot Forth Self Living is a lot closer to an open wound than well kept skin. In loud contrast with polite musical relatives, Lush, Cocteau Twins and the Sugarcubes, Medicine's music is often a terribly uncomfortable frappe of noise. And, unlike most English bands, these guys are from California.

The albums opening (and best) track, "One More," will send your congested head scrambling for cotton. Caught in the fray of seven unmanageable minutes of undaunted feedback, distortion and Faux-Indian drone fulminations, "One More," is something akin to an amplified fly protest. When the noise finally dissipates, it's like successful ear wax removal.

"Aruca," the album's second tune, seems no more an ear asylum than its predecessor. With its opening death pool feedback and torrential guitar ululation, "Aruca," originally resembles little more than an non-listenable augury foretelling future annoyance.

But much to the consternation of static and noise devotees, the arrangement thankfully manifests into a not so ghoulish haunt looming Brad Laner and Beth Thompson's pallid harmonies over hip hop.

Medicine's music may be too frequent with distortion, but they spread their glaze well. On "Five," a Boston meets fuzz box number, they soften their hallmark in favor of a more palatable groove. The shift from effects-loop to groove is subtle but important in lifting the album from a potential drone to a tasty cocktail of all good things.

"Sweet Explosion," a gargling chiller of veritable vim is dance club material for those who still enjoy real drums while "Short Happy Life" succeeds with immutable rock beat excess and thick gloom.

You may find yourself playing with the treble knobs on your stereo in a desperate flail to decipher lyrics. You will fail. And true, you can't hear a damn word on this album, but who cares, Medicine's done enough by prescribing iron for a whole new generation of post-anemic bands.

New Spiritualized disc dares and challenges

By ROMIN THOMSON
Collegian Corespondent

Lazer Guided Melodies
Spiritualized
RCA Records

Spiritualized's latest album, Lazer Guided Melodies, is a daring effort which seeks to fulfill man's inconstant search for inner purity in a world tailored for high technology.

The music and title go far in challenging the idea that man has been removed from his soul by influences in a technologically advanced society.

Spiritualized was created by previous members of Spaceman 3, a British band which had been performing since 1982. Founding member and vocalist Jason Pierce has crafted this band as a logical "next step" for Spaceman 3. He acknowledged the band's desire to shy away from the "drone thing" which came to characterize the Spacemen and move into a different style.

Spiritualized features cutting-edge technology, utilizing multi-layered material surrounded by smooth melodic overtones.

The single "Run" has already impressed audiences in the U.K. It features an opening hook irresistable to any rock fan and then continues as the drummer rolls with an engaging array of tribal booms. The singer seems to absorb the unrelenting pounds and spits back a collection of monotonic cries in a response that adds subtlety to a ripping fuzz riff.

The final cut, "200 bars" serves as a microcosm of the recording. Keyboardist E. Kate Radley counts from one to 200 as she plays each bar and the tune slowly builds note by note. The lyrical content of this piece lays evidence to Spiritualized's musical goal. ("I've been abused/and I've been used/I'm gonna lose myself in 200 bars.")

The resulting pun asks the audience to "lose" themselves in the music of Spiritualized, just as they could in alcohol.

The music on this album has a haziness to it that enters its venue like a cloud of fog. In "Sway" Jason Pierce's voice is watchful, yet not intruding. He studies the audience and provides comfort, not in a motherly way, but as a stranger trying to hypnotize his captives.

His only failing comes in his reluctance to take over any of the recordings. Throughout the album Pierce elects to fade into the background of the music. Although this approach has given him popularity in Europe. American audiences who like to see pretentiousness in their lead vocalists will probably be frustrated by his technique.

Lazer Guided Melodies suceeds brilliantly where the band utilizes its talent to manipulate high-tech instruments to create a music which drives at man's constant search for peace. Their use of subtlety to promote a calm melodic environment is both outstanding and fresh.

Spiritualized — Photo by Colin Bell

YUMMY.
THE MENU.
EVERYDAY.
COLLEGIAN.

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE
FRIDAY, OCT. 23
Single Project/Event Grants for music, theater, visual art and design, performance art, literature, film and video, and other arts related events.
PROPOSALS ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
APPLICATIONS GUIDANCE/INFORMATION STOP AT STUDENT ACTIVITIES OFFICE OR UMASS ARTS COUNCIL 209 HASBROUCK OR CALL 545-0202

WELCOME BACK!
Round Trips from New York Starting at:
CANCUN $ 310
LONDON 330
SAN JOSE C.R. 470
BERLIN 498
WARSAW 625
BANGKOK 949
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change & availability. Call about one ways. We issue EURAIL passes on the SPOT!
Council Travel
79 South Pleasant Street Amherst, MA 01002
256-1261

THE INEXPENSIVE ALTERNATIVE
RADIAL RETREADS
Full Warranty • Safe • Free Road Hazard • Economical 30,000 mi. Tread Life • 90 Day Replacement Guarantee
AS LOW AS $19.95
GUARANTEED USED TIRES
TOP QUALITY FULL WARRANTY
13" ..... 9"
14" ..... 12"
15" ..... 14"
HADLEY TIRE AND BRAKE CENTER
439 Russell St., Hadley
253-9911 or 253-9054

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful Newly remodeled Facility • Sunny Greenhouse • Sushi Bar • Beautiful Lounge with Big Screen TV.
Serving Lunch & Dinner 7 days a week • Lunch Specials served daily
"Largest Chinese Restaurant in Hampshire County"
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30AM-10PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS TILL 11PM
WITH COUPON 10% OFF DINING ROOM OR CARRY OUT • DINNER • ONLY
EVERY MONDAY THROUGH THURSDAY IN OUR LOUNGE 4PM-7PM, ENJOY
Happy Hour
$2.00 Appetizers from our special menu • $1.00 Draft Beer
Now Available through Delivery Express at 549-0077
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte. 9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte. 9 & University Dr. • 256-8800

Night & the City looks nice but falls flat

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

There's something dead about Night and the City, even though the film contains spirited, bold camera moves, an all-over-the-place performance by Robert DeNiro and keen supporting players. So why is it so, familiar?

The bulk of the blame goes to producer turned director Irwin Winkler, whose first directing job was the stilted Guilty by Suspicion. In that film, he drowned the talents of Robert DeNiro and Annette Bening, a powder-keg coupling if there ever was one, into a soapy melodrama that was as stiff as cardboard.

In Night and the City, which tells the story of heister Harry Fabian, an ambulance-chasing lawyer who tries to revive neighborhood boxing in New York City. Winkler captures the vitality of the city, his spinning camera and fluid moves (though its a little too reminiscent of Martin Scorcese) whirl with spirited janglenss. Beyond this, I'm afraid Night and the City falls short of giving the audience anything new.

Harry Fablan is a loser who is always on the edge of screwing up real bad. A loan shark, played nicely by Eli Wallach (Godfather III) tells him, "You would be good at...something — if only you'd slowed down."

This is a perplexing performance by DeNiro. Harry Fabian might well be DeNiro's most lively yet most lifeless role. There's nothing undemeath, not even shades. DeNiro's not particularly bad, but I've seen this type of guy done before — and done better. The deranged would-be comic Rupert Pupkin of King of Comedy, perhaps? Harry's not nearly as looney, but he's not really anything here.

DeNiro is all too engaging in Night and the City, yet he's nothing more than the image the actor purports. You can see Harry's mind spinning constantly and that's about it.

The surrounding characters are often more interesting than the main character. Cliff Gorman plays Phil, the owner of a bar Harry hangs out in. Jessica Lange plays his wife...and Harry's lover (though Harry seems less interested in her than her money).

Gorman's performance is mean and resonant, he literally throws out a nun who is in the bar asking for donations. Lange looks itching to act, her scenes bristle with anxious intensity.

Alan King surprises and Jack Warden does an admirable job as brothers who are on opposite sides of Harry Fabian's scheme.

There is a clever running visual allusion that runs through Night and the City. There is a multitude of ambulances that race around in the backround of the action in a number of scenes. Harry Fabian is an ambulance-chasing lawyer. The ambulances continue racing until they catch up with Fabian at the end. Are you still with me? Anyway, it was a sly subtext nonetheless.

After you get over the visual trickery, what then, if anything, is Night and the City about? The script is talky and somewhat overwrought, DeNiro's wild performance never looked so much like it was on autopilot and all the good characters aren't on enough. Winkler may have mastered the visual aspect, but the hollow, almost stoic theatrics grind Night and the City hopelessly down.

Grade: B-

COURTESY UMASS DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC

KEVIN BACON? — No, it's Kevin Collins, on guitar, performing with the Valley Chamber Players, tonight in Bezanson Recital Hall at UMass.

COURTESY AMHERST COLLEGE

STRUMMIN' — Brooks Williams will perform at Amherst College at 8 p.m. Sunday, November 1.

CARING.
ONLY FROM THE
COLLEGIAN.

Have a great time on us.

There's no better way to spend the day than enjoying simple pleasures with a special friend. So, don't let the best time of your life pass you buy. Put on a pair of Rollerblade® in-line skates.

Rollerblade
SKATE SMART

Get the times of your life at:

KLEIN'S ALL SPORTS
WE WILL NOT BE UNDERSOLD!

SATURDAY, OCT. 31st
10 A.M.-2 P.M.
HAMPSHIRE MALL • HADLEY

Rollerblade® is a registered trademark of Rollerblade, Inc.

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT

Thurs ~ Friday ~ Sat
DANCING
9-1

Friday Happy Hour
Free Pizza Slices
4-6

Drink of the Week
Peachtree Punch
$1.75

Saturday
UMASS vs. Northeastern
Post Game Party

- FREE Buffet -

University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

WE DON'T COSTUME MUCH.

ZANNA

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563

ACRONYMBLE WINNERS

Yes! It's time again to announce the Acronymble winners!

First Prize is the Acronymble Board Game, fun for the sober and the intoxicated in our home audience. This week's winner is Jon Edwards of Amherst who writes, John Jubilantly Jammed Joyce's Ju-JuBees.

Second Prize, but first in our book for holiday appropriateness, goes to Kristen Chapman of Grayson! Her spooky noodle is Jaded Juveniles Jeer Joyful Jack-o-lanterns. Come on down to the Collegian and pick up your versatile, wear-anywhere Acronymble T-shirt.

Third Prize is THE ACRONYMBLE POSTER, suitable for framing and much less pretentious than that OTHER artist's work you have on your wall. Applaud now for, the perceptive, the one, the only, Sidra Ellison of Hadley for her noodle, Jeepers! Jim's Journal Just Jams!

All winners should venture to the Campus Center Basement where the Collegian offices are located. There you will find gleeful staff members who will direct you to the actual Editor-in-Chief, Dan, or Jon/Lisa the siamese twin Arts and Living Editors.

Next week's letters will bend your brain: R,S,R,S,X. Bring down your submissions in person or send them via campus mail to Collegian Arts Desk, 113 Campus Center.

COURTESY ANNETT DUPPON

SPAMPARIS — This poppy, airy alternative, progressive/ art rock group will perform tonight in the Hatch. Hear the mouth watering Ed Di Muzio on drums, Rick Reese on bass and keyboards, Chris Hobler vocalist and lead guitarist, and David Flood on acoustic guitar and vocals.

■ Hair

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 2

brought the original Broadway production a headful of trouble from censors and Christian Watchdog groups, when director Tom O'Horgan decided to have his cast perform the number nude.

Alan White smiles at the inevitable question, no doubt because he's been asked it so many times. Will there be a nude scene in the UMass production?

"If you want to find out," says White, "it will cost four dollars of your money, and two hours of your time."

HAIR is being performed through Saturday at 8:00 PM in the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets are available from TIX, or at the door.

Campus Paperback Bestsellers: November

compiled by The Chronicle of Higher Education

1. The Firm, by John Grisham. (Island/Dell, 5.99) Young lawyer confronts the hidden workings of his firm.
2. The Indispensible Calvin and Hobbes, by Bill Watterson. (Andrews & McMeel, $12.95)
3. Life's Little Instruction Book, by Jack Brown, Jr. (Rutledge Hill, $5.95) Advice for attaining a full life.
4. A Time to Kill, by John Grisham. (Island/Dell, $5.99) Racial tension run high during a trial.
5. The Sum of All Fears, by Tom Clancy. (Berkley, $6.99) Middle Eastern terrorists bring about the threat of nuclear war.
6. Seven Habits of Highly Effective People, by Steven R. Covey. (Fireside, $9.95) Guide to personal fulfillment.
7. Saint Maybe, by Anne Tyler. (Ivy, $5.99) Struggles of a young man to come to terms with his past.
8. The Road Less Traveled, by M. Scott Peck. (Touchstone, $10.95) Psychological and spiritual inspiration by a psychiatrist.
10. Daisy Fay and the Miracle Man, by Fannie Flagg. (Warner, $7.99) Young girls's hilarious and touching coming of age in a Southern town.

Filler. Just like in hot dogs.
Mmm.
The Collegian.

You there -- the one with the cappucino and beret!

There will be an Arts meeting on Sunday at 2:30 PM.

The Area's BEST CHINESE FOOD & SUSHI BAR

Enjoy the finest, freshest sushi, sashimi, tempura teriyaki and more at Panda East's new Sushi Bar. Also enjoy the finest Chinese Cuisine — Fresh, local specialties, low-priced luncheon specials and banquet facilties for your group or large party.

PANDA EAST
103 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
256-8923 • 256-8924

TEXTNET™
The Students Used Book Exchange

Make up to 300% more by selling your books directly to your classmates through the directory listing for used texts!

Call or write for free information: P.O. Box 459, Sunderland, MA 01375
(413) 665-8471 or 800-949-TEXT (8398)

Madonna's Sex: 'just another day at the orifice'

By ADAM SCOTT ROBERTS
Collegian Staff

SEX
Madonna
Photographs by Steven Miesel
Maverick/Warner Books

She danced onto the scene in 1983 by singing that we needed a Holiday and funky clothes made her a Material Girl. She tried to convince us that she's Like A Virgin, then she decided to Express herself with Like A Prayer and striked a pose with Vogue. Ever-so-ready to push people's button's with her blonde (or is it brunette?) ambition, Madonna's gone completely Erotica with her controversial book SEX.

The $50 book, kept behind bookstore counters worldwide, is wrapped in silver mylar which makes it resemble a giant condom. Open it up and you'll hold the heavy, spiral-bound book. Engraved on the book's metal cover: SEX.

On the first page Madonna writes "This book is about sex. Sex is not love. Love is not sex. But the best of both worlds is created when they come together." Wait a minute, if love is not sex and vice-versa then how the hell are they the same when combined? Is this a deep thought or just another Madonna mechanism for playing on people's imaginations?

She goes on to state that "Everything you are about to see and read is a fantasy, a dream, pretend [yeah right]. But if I were to make my dreams real, I would certainly use condoms. Safe sex saves lives. . .Nothing in this book is true. I made it all up."

I think SEX is a beautiful piece of art (YES, I said art). But as a dedicated fan, I have a biased opinion about anything Madonna does by saying that it is her "artistic integrity" that is on display.

Realistically, I'm one of the numerous fools manipulated by Madonna and her marketing conspirators. I have been manipulated into thinking SEX is an expression of art. When SEX appears to be just one big marketing ploy for her to test people by pushing their buttons and ripping them off at the same time.

So, I'm a victim and I'll still ask for more. But, come on, what else is left for her to do? Will she "accidentally" slip out of her dress at an awards ceremony on live television?

The Steven Miesel photographs in SEX make Playboy look like Volume One of the Winnie the Pooh series. Shot mainly in black and white, the pictures show "Dita" (Madonna's pseudonym and character in the book) in various erotic and auto-erotic poses and situations. Other photos show Madonna as an object or a victim to her male and female counterparts.

The photographs are trying to convey the idea that pain and abuse are good when she writes "Only the one who hurts you can comfort you. Only the one who inflicts the pain can take it away."

The photos dare to shock, and Madonna lets nothing stand in her way. In one set of photos she is shown cavorting with two skinhead, tatooed lesbians, who both have numerous parts of their body pierced. "Dita" is shown being tied up by the dominatrixes while one french kisses Madonna and the other kisses her breast.

Madonna gives her thoughts on bondage: "There's something comforting about being tied up. Like when you were a baby and your mother strapped you in the car seat. She wanted you to be safe. it was an act of love." I interpreted this as her thinking sadomachicism as an act of love. Is it Art? Or is it pornography? Nah!

Miesel's camera captures Madonna and her homoerotic fantasies visualized in a series of photos with two naked (except for their combat boots), athletic males french kissing and expressing their lust and feelings towards each other.

This photo, and the ones that follow of Madonna with a half dozen dancing gay men tries to allow the reader (that's a stretch) to see images that they may have never seen before.

She writes: "...I also like gay male strip places. Straight male strip places are disgusting. Those guys can never dance. Only the guys at the gay clubs can dance and they always have really good bodies."

Madonna also invites celebrity guests to pose with her. Has-been Vanilla Ice jumps on the bandwagon and Madonna for that matter in a set of pics. Nothing special, but it was probably a good idea for Vanilla — if your album sales are near non-existent, maybe doing an erotic photo shoot with Madonna is a good career move.

Other celebrities include actress Isabella Rosellini and former Madonna flame Tony Ward. But surely the most talked about photos will be the menage-a-trois layout with Big Daddy Kane in his skivies and a nude Naomi Campbell sandwiching the naked Madonna.

Believe it or not, words are written in SEX but I am unable to quote even the shortest of sentences due to Madonna's vast vocabulary (Not!). Some of the more "deep" revelations: "I wouldn't want a penis. It would be like having a third leg. It seems like a contraption that would get in the way. I think I have a d— in my brain. I don't need to have one between my legs."

Just about every other word is a swear or a description of an erotic act and I understand why this may be offensive. But thou shall not censor. . .and hey, don't buy the book and you'll be fine.

Madonna knows that she can't be censored and she'll tell you her "artistic integrity" and first ammendment rights are at stake until she's blue in the face. So, if you have a problem with her or SEX, simply don't give her your money.

Furthermore, Madonna thrives on the fact that she takes people to the limit. She'll bring you right to the point of trying to censor her and all it will accomplish is giving her exactly what she wants: publicity. The more exposure she gets, the more money she'll make. Hmmm. Maybe Madonna isn't a person but rather one big marketing scam?

Madonna takes her "artistic integrity" too far when she and Miesel depict a rape scene in a high school gym. One male holding her hands above her head while the other male moves his hand under her skirt (she's not wearing and underwear). The expression on Madonna's face is a happy one. What message is she sending out? Where do we draw the line between responsibility and art?

COURTESY SIRE RECORDS

Madonna

"I think for the most part if women are in an abusive relationship and they know it and they stay in it, they must be digging it." This message can't be taken any other way than how it's written, it degrades us all.

For those of you readers thinking this is pornography, Madonna writes for you: "I don't think pornography degrades women. The women who are doing it want to do it. No one is holding a gun to their head. I don't get the whole thing. . .I love looking at Playboy because women look great naked."

SEX is pretty exciting at first, but the hype is lost after two or three browsings. I think Madonna has achieved what she does best: shocking people over and over again.

RELAX.
TAKE A BREAK AND WATCH A FLICK

QUICK FLIX

QUICK FLIX DELIVERS MOVIES TO YOUR DOOR.

OVER 3,000 TAPES TO CHOOSE FROM INCLUDING:

NEW RELEASES, FOREIGN FILMS, CULT CLASSICS, + ADULT FILMS

CALL
549-8008
FREE MEMBERSHIP
FREE DELIVERY

word of the day
MELANGE-(ma-'lazh,-lanj)n: a mixture of incongruous elements. e.g. "She dips her mitt in this melange", W.C. Feilds in My Little Chickadee.

GAIN VALUABLE EXPERIENCE BEFORE YOU GRADUATE!

Attend a Field Experience presentation designed for your major

History	Oct 29	4:00pm	601 Herter
SOM	Nov 3	4:00pm	116 SOM
Comm Journ Engl	Nov 4	4:00pm	61 Bartlett
Engin	Nov 4	4:00pm	132/134 Marston
Poli Sci Legal Stu	Nov 5	4:00pm	227 Herter

PRESENTATIONS BY:

GTE
Monsanto
Pratt & Whitney
Mitre
Arthur Anderson
IBM
Keyport

With former Coop and Intern students

THE MATHER CAREER CENTER
Career Planning and Placement Cooperative Education Internships
Fraternity/Sorority Park - on the Orchard Hill bus route. (413)545-2224.
Where Careers Take Off!

Friday October 30, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 37

Partly sunny and brisk today, highs 45-50. Happy Halloween!

Sports:
The 11th ranked University of Massachusetts Water Polo team travels to Brown University this weekend to compete in the New England Championships. Page 15.

Ed/Op:
The Collegian endorses the Democratic ticket of Bill Clinton and Al Gore. The election is on Tuesday, November 3. Page 5.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Student robbed, stabbed near cage

By DAVID RIVERA
Collegian Staff

A 20-year-old University of Massachusetts student reported that he was stabbed and robbed of $20 yesterday afternoon in an incident UMass officials are calling "a robbery with no racial overtones."

The victim, who chose not to identify himself, was discharged from Cooley Dickinson Hospital at approximately 6:45 p.m. after receiving treatment for lacerations to the face, arm and abdomen.

"He came from behind and hit me over the head," the victim said. "He wanted money, I gave him twenty dollars and he ran." He described the alleged assailant as a Black male in his early 20s, approximately six-feet tall with a heavy build.

The victim, who was able to make his way to UMass Health Services, reported to police that the alleged assailant didn't use any racial comments. This led the police to regard this as a robbery and not another racial incident on campus.

The victim was transferred by Amherst Ambulance services to Cooley Dickinson Hospital at approximately 3:30 p.m. for follow-up treatment.

Following the alleged assault, police sectioned off the area near the Curry Hicks gymnasium for several hours while looking for evidence. A weapon was not found, according to UMass police.

Assistant Dean of Students, M. Ricardo Townes, was at the scene of the incident but had no official comment. He did say that UMass officials aware of the situation and were in a meeting to address the event.

Buses along Route 9 in Northampton were stopped by Northampton police, in an attempt to find the alleged suspect.

Witnesses on the the 3:35 bus to Northampton, said police stopped the bus and questioned the driver and then questioned a UMass student.

The student, who is Latino, said he didn't want to be identified and said he was asked to step outside the bus and answer some questions.

"They asked me to step outside the bus," he said. "They said they were looking for a black suspect and I got angry — I'm Latino and they just picked me out because I have dark skin."

UMass spokesperson Kay Scanlon said UMass police had no involvement in the bus stoppings on Route 9 and added that they responded on their own to radio reports of the incident.

"Northampton police recently had a similar incident and they acted on their own," Scanlon said. "UMass police did not set up road blocks."

As rumors spread throughout the campus of a possible racial incident, housing officials used the telephone system to instruct RDs, ARDs and RAs to keep informed of the situation in case of problems.

"We received two messages," said Joanne Land, an RA in Dickinson. "They advised us to beware of the situation and help stop rumors."

Land added that she, like all other RAs are trained in safety matters and are required to attend meetings regarding situations like yesterday's. She also added that she hadn't heard any facts about the incident and said the phone system allowed her to stay informed.

Collegian staff member Mike Carvalho contributed to this article.

ROBERT O'CONNELL / COLLEGIAN

ON THE AIR–Chancellor Richard O'Brien being interviewed by Liz Walker, of WBZ in Boston, for an upcoming story on racial disharmony.

Phillip Morris denies trying to sway Gov't

By PAUL RAEBURN
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Phillip Morris has given millions to charities in lawmakers' states and districts, according to documents obtained by an advocacy group that says the tobacco conglomerate is trying to buy influence in Congress.

Federal campaign finance laws limit corporate contributions, but corporations are free to give as much as they want to charities.

Phillip Morris denies any wrongdoing.

The tactic of contributing to charities to sway legislators has increased in recent years, said Donna Edwards, an attorney with Public Citizens Congress Watch in Washington.

She also noted that charity contributions are tax-deductible, meaning that taxpayers are partly "footing the bill, in lost revenue."

"All of this stuff is done in the context of buying access to influence," Edwards said. "It has effectively stalled legislation that would be good for the health of most Americans."

Eric Olberg, executive director of Houston-based Doctors Ought to Care, said the documents arrived in the mail as computer files on floppy disks. He said he was told the files were from computers in Phillip Morris' Washington office.

"What gets people elected is support from their constituents," said Solberg. "Phillip Morris has learned to get Congresspeople support by donating to charities in their districts."

James W. Dyer, a White House deputy for legislative affairs, was a Phillip Morris lobbyist during

Turn to MORRIS, page 9

Candidates' platforms analyzed

Arms Control Assoc. rep speaks on defense policies

By GEORGE ZHU
Collegian Staff

"While the candidates' positions in arms control and defense policies are very similar on paper, there are obvious and undeniably important generational differences," an arms control analyst said.

Lee Feinstein, Assistant Director for Research at the Washington-based Arms Control Association, spoke at Mount Holyoke College yesterday. It was sponsored by the Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies.

Feinstein said he believed the different experiences of Bush as a WWII veteran and Clinton as the first babyboomer to run for president will "shape the way the two candidates approach their decisions."

In general, Feinstein said, the Clinton campaign "seems to think when it comes to the defense and arms control issues, they are very happy if they call it a draw, they are not interested in winning the debate."

Feinstein quoted Lee Hamilton, Chairman of the House Mid-East Subcommittee, as saying: "The main message of the Clinton camp has been: This is a democrat in mainstream who would pursue the policies of the bipartisan foreign policy consensus since WWII."

Hamilton among others is speculated to be a candidate for Secretary of State in a Clinton Administration.

Feinstein said that no matter who is president, he is going to have troubles in keeping the defense spending at the level he plans to.

"While the peace dividend we have all been talking about may not materialize the way we hope," Feinstein said. "Equally I think the defense budget is vulnerable, and even the spending level that George Bush has announced will be difficult to sustain over the course of the

Turn to PLATFORMS, page 9

Andrew's victims still await aid

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — When Hurricane Andrew blew apart his trailer home and scattered everything he owned, Dan Haschker filled out forms to get emergency aid for rent and clothes.

He was told he qualified for help, but two months later it still hadn't arrived. Last week he filled out more aid forms and was told to wait another two to four weeks.

Haschker, 29, who has lived in an abandoned motel, camped out in a tent and slept in a car since the Aug. 24 storm, is pessimistic.

"They'll probably call me in three weeks and tell me the same thing they told me two months ago," he said.

More and more people in storm-ravaged south Florida are complaining that red tape and regulations are getting in the way of renewal and rebuilding.

Legal aid lawyers charged Tuesday that less than half of the 154,000 people seeking aid have gotten it, and a shortage of mobile homes from people leaving now-closed tent cities has left thousands with inadequate housing.

Officials of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which is overseeing the disaster relief effort, deny the lawyers' accusations. They note that since Andrew struck, FEMA has received 155,999 applications and disbursed nearly $500 million in housing grants.

"We have delivered much more aid and much faster than we had with (hurricane) Hugo," said Len DeCarlo, a FEMA spokesman. "Most people are getting help very promptly."

He said some delays had been caused by hurricane victims filing out more than one application for help, or moving into temporary lodgings without telling officials their new addresses.

"It's little wrinkles like that have caused some delays," he said. "But among most people who have applied for help, I don't think you'd find a large number of complaints."

Most agree some delays are inevitable with disaster the scope of Andrew. But some remained frustrated.

Turn to ANDREW, page 11

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editor .....
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Correction

The University of Massachusetts athletic department was inadvertently implicated in a story in Thursday's Collegian entitled "O'Brien seeks investigation of UM official." The officials named were connected with the schools of exercise science and physical education.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Friday, October 30

Dinner — A Shabbat Service and dinner will be held at 7 p.m. at the Chabad House in Amherst. The topic of discussion will be "Judaism - a universal code, commandments for humanity."

Las Vegas Night — The Kappa Omicron Chapter of Alpha Phi Omega is sponsoring the thirty-first annual Las Vegas Night to benefit the UMass Library at 7p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. Tickets are $3 in advance and $5 at the door.

Meeting — A general meeting of the campus community with the search firm assisting the Chancellor's Search Committee will be held from 2 p.m. - 3 p.m. in Campus Center room 904-08.

Meeting — The Muslim Students Association of UMass will be holding Jumaa Salat at 1 p.m. in the Campus Center. Check the information desk for the room number. A Registration — The Everywoman's Center will be offering a group for women who are questioning their sexual identity. Interested women should call 545-0883 for more information or registration. The deadline for registration is today.

Saturday, October 31

Rabies Clinic — A vaccination will be held for all cats and dogs from 11 a.m. to 12 noon at 260 Snell St., Amherst and from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. at 320 Russel St., Hadley (Dr. Katz and Dr. Diamond). The fee is $8 per animal. Due to the recent confirmation of raccoon rabies in Massachusetts, cat owners should bring their animals.

Morning Service — A Shabbat morning service and meal will be held at 10 p.m. at the Chabad House. The event is free.

Sunday, November 1

Public Solar Observing — A free public solar observing is held on the Amherst Town Common every clear Sunday from 1-2 p.m. Appropriate for all ages. Additional dates for the observing will be Nov. 8, 15, 22, & 29.

Public Planetarium Show — Free public planetarium shows will be held every Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Amherst College Bassett Planetarium. Appropriate for all ages. Additional dates for the shows will be Nov. 8, 15, 22, & 29.

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day

Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

• Graffiti was discovered near Crabtree Residence Hall on Wednesday morning, according to police. Staff from the dormitory found chalk figures of human figures on the blacktop outside the dorm at 8 a.m. Some of the figures were shown holding guns and balloons, police said.

• A woman received a derogatory racist message on her answering machine Wednesday evening and reported it to University police at 5 p.m.

• Police received a report of the theft of a sportsbag from the playing fields in front of the Boyden Athletic Building on Wednesday. A man reportedly left the field for a short period of time and returned to find the bag missing at 11:15 a.m. The bag contained the man's wallet, which police value at $140.

• A man reported the theft of his stereo from his car parked in Lot 32 on Wednesday. According to police, the automobile was found to be broken into at approximately 8:30 p.m. The stereo is valued at $300, police said.

• Police received two reports of stolen bicycles within twenty minutes of each other on Wednesday. At 2:30, a man reported the theft of his bicycle from the rack in front of Hills House. At 2:50, police received a report of a stolen bicycle from a man who said he had locked the bike to the rack in front of Thoreau Resdidence Hall. Police value the bike at $525.

• Two men will be summoned for a showcause hearing for the attempted theft of a Security Officer's uniform hat on Thursday morning. One of the men stole the hat from the officer in Washington Residence Hall and attempted to flee from the building. While pursuing this subject, the officer was tripped by the second man, according to police.

• Police were summoned to Cashin Residence Hall to investigate the reported smell of marijuana on Thursday morning. Upon investigation at 1 a.m., police located the suspected room and confiscated a small amount of the drug.

Come as you are... or who you desire to be

Saturday October 31st
Bluewall 9p.m. - 2a.m.... $4.00 - Donation
Scream to the sounds of DJs Paraphonia.
Sponsored by UMass L.B.G.A
Miss thing, there are no masks tonight!!!

Computerized badges signal workers' location

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., (AP) — Finally, no more telephone tag.

A computerized badge worn by some Digital Equipment Corp. workers tells a central computer where they are whenever they leave their desks.

The month-old experiment on 30 employees in the computer maker's Cambridge office is designed to imporve efficiency, said Joe Codispoti, spokesman for the Maynard-based computer maker.

"Our job is to figure out how to gather information and get it to people where they want it and when they want it," he said.

Calls placed to a badge-wearer were automatically sent to his or her location, which is also shown to anyone who taps an employee's name into a computer network.

The badges emit an infrared pulse picked up by scores of sensors scattered around the building. The sensors then relay the information to the central computer.

The system is an experiment to see if the badges might have commercial use, according to Codispoti. "It's very exploratory," he said.

Engineers and sales staff spend up to 70 percent of their time away from their desks, said Laure Riedman, spokeswoman for Italy-based Olivetti, designer of the badge.

She told the Boston Herald that the new techonogy could save customers and colleagues valuable time in trying to reach people.

Some computer industry analysts said the badge system could threaten an employee's privacy.

"I thing it is very scary," said Coralee Whitcomb, a member of Computer Professionals for Social Responsibility. "You can cite examples of any technology's benefits, but the door is open just wider to more abuse."

Digital officals said the Cambridge workers are voluntarily wearing the badges.

And if the badge wearers change their minds, thy can punch a button on the badge and keep their location private. The computer will tell callers the person is "busy."

Corpse found in woods

Needham police attempt to identify body

NEEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — Police are trying to solve the gruesome riddle of a decompsed body found chained to a tree in the woods.

Authorities were directed to the corpse by an anonymous caller Wednesday night. They say the body had been there for at least six months.

It remained chained to the tree for most of Thursday while police combed through the leaves for clues.

They said animals may have dragged away the victim's clothes or personal possessions.

An autopsy is planned to determine the body's sex and age.

The corpse was discovered in a Massachusetts District Commission reservation between the Charles River, MBTA commuter rail tracks and Route 128, Needham Police Lt. Thomas Leary said.

Leary said police were checking missing persons lists from bordering towns. He said Needham had no reported missing persons.

The area where the body was found was sealed off, while Needham and state police officers returned to the scene along a narrow mile-long access road to search for further evidence.

Local News

Amherst asks UMass to give up $250,000

By MICHAEL B. PIERCE
Collegian Correspondent

Town officials are asking the University of Massachusetts to hand over more than $200,000 in collected motor vehicle violations.

The money, collected from moving vehicle violations paid through the Northampton District Court, was sent to the bursar's office and then to the scholarship fund at the University of Massachusetts.

Larry Kelley, town meeting member, said the University owes the town of Amherst nearly $250,000, including interest.

"If this money does belong to the town, I'm putting my flamethrower on full throttle to get it back to the town," he said.

Jaymie Chernoff, director of University relations, said the laws changed over the past few years, and "at each time, we were operating under the law because the court's interpretation changed."

Chernoff said prior to 1990, 50 percent of the money went to the state's general fund, and the other 50 percent went to the town in which the violation was issued.

She said the court decided in 1990 that the money from violations issued by University police on roads owned and 100 percent maintained by the University, and on which town police had no jurisdiction should go the University.

Chernoff said the town sought a letter of guidance from the chief justice of the state trial court in 1992 to determine where the money belonged.

"His interpretation was that the money belonged to the town," she said. "But he also said the letter wasn't binding because other parties may wish to seek further clarification."

Turn to MONEY, page 4

UM grad returns to Pioneer Valley, speaks on human rights violations

By CAROLINE NASSON
Collegian Correspondent

More than fifty people gathered last night in the Campus Center to listen to a lecture by Dr. Antonio Martinez, Director of Chicago's Marjorie Kovler Center for the treatment of Survivors of Torture.

Sponsored by the University of Massachusetts Spanish speaking organization AHORA, Dr. Martinez discussed the purposes of torture, human rights violations, and the empowerment of survivors of torture.

A graduate of UMass, Martinez began his speech with a story about a Guatemalan woman who was severely oppressed by her husband.

"She felt that the relationship between man and woman in Guatemala was like torture. She was beat up because her husband did not like the fact that she enjoyed herself while making love."

Martinez went on to discuss other examples of torture in Guatemala. "The Guatemalan army does not respect the constitution which says that individuals do not have to join the army until they are eighteen years old. But they forcively take ten to thirteen year olds into the army," he said.

"What kind of society is it that children can't be themselves, but military strategists who protect their lives only so they can be killed?"

Martinez explained that the purpose of torture is political control. Because of the unequal distribution of wealth inherent in many third world countries, people demand social change, says Martinez. Torture and terror are a means for the people in power to avoid change and keep those in power. As a result of the torture, the number of poeple seeking refuge in the United States is increasing, he says.

"Over 50,000 people were killed in one year in Guatemala for minimal requests, like asking for more books in the schools," Martinez said.

"Why do people do this? Are they monsters? Do they have deformed personalities? How can a human being do this? A person must be fascist, communist, racist, and immoral to think that the person recieving the torture is not human, but an object. Anyone can be a torturer."

The Marjorie Kovler Center includes over seventy-five professionals consisting of docters, social workers, and counselors who help get survivors of torture on their feet.

"We tell them that it is very important to fight for something, Dr. Martinez stated.

"We're doing this not because we feel sorry for victims, but because if it can happen to them, it can happen to us. Violations of human rights happens in very civilized societies. It happened in Germany."

ANGIE POPOVICH / COLLEGIAN
Amnesty speaker

Co-op Extension System looks to bridge gap

By KENNETH MAISONET
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Cooperative Extension System was designed to help bridge the gap between poor disadvantaged families in the early 1900's through research and education. The program primarily worked with families in rural areas by teaching about agriculture and home economics.

In 1914 the program branched out and started to work with agricultural issues and the community at large. In particular with youths from economically depressed cities.

The UMass Cooperative Extension System Youth and Families At Risk Program addresses high risk factors for young people living in poverty by focusing on community empowerment. The program aims to reach those most discouraged due to lack of resources and social isolation.

The system's expanded Food and Nutritional Education program educates low-income families with children to effectively meet their nutritional needs. Since 1969, over 45,000 families have increased their basic nutritional knowledge, enabling them to improve their diets and health.

The 4-H Youth Development Program guides the efforts of thousand of volunteers working with young people across the state. It's mission is "...to assist youth in acquiring knowledge, developing life skills, and forming attitudes which will enable them to become self-directing, productive and contributing members of society.

Diversity, Partnerships, Volunteerism and Youth Development are the values promoted by the programs philosophy. The 4-H believes that diversity strengthens the ability of 4-H to reach out and help youths develop and deliver quality educational and cross-cultural experiences provide opportunities for program involvement regardless of economic, social, culture, age, disability or gender.

John H. Gerber, the newly appointed associate dean and director of The UMass Co-op Extension System believes that cherishing differences among cultures is of utmost importantance in creating a better society.

"We're about values and differences, we believe that in order to be a good teacher our perspective must include appreciation and understanding different nationalities and cultures," Gerber said. He also states that the staff is charged to teach children about nutrition with respect to cultural backgrounds.

"We need to open up to new ideas in relation to agriculture, nutrition and the community, working in concert with the community in a way truly supportive manner," said Gerber.

Mr. Gerber's approach to pragmatic issues is by promoting a more decentralized concept to management, where everyone is in harmony, more participatory in decision making.

"We want to empower people. That is our mission not just a theory because it's working," said Gerber.

The UMass Co-op Extension System is a highly research based program that was created as a partnership between the federal, state and local government. it is a statewide, off-campus program that works with the communities.

Turn to EXTENSION, page 11

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN
MIDTERM MADNESS — Pumpkin with it's eye blown out by anxious student. Pretty seedy, huh?

Women of color unite

Look to end isolation on UM campus

By CARA LEE BIRCH
Collegian Correspondent

A group of undergraduate and graduate students met last night in the third formal meeting for women of color in the Campus Center.

The women formed the meetings to begin a discourse among each other, attempting to end the amount of isolation that occurs on the University of Massachusetts campus. Most importantly, they organized to address the everyday violence that women endure and to find solutions to the problem.

"Women of color are scattered and isolated on this campus and often have to sit and listen to professors who make racist and sexist remarks to them and about them on a daily level," said an undergraduate.

The conversations explored a variety of issues ranging from racism on campus to relations between Asian, Latino, African-American and Native American students to exploring the histories of American women and Third World women.

The understanding between many women was that there simply was not room in the classroom to deal with one another and with the white majority on campus.

"In most classes, race, class, and gender are talked about in an abstract way and our issues are never seriously addressed," stated Juliana Hopkins, an undergraduate in Women's Studies.

"We become objects of study because most often, the majority of the class is white and will be taught by a white professor," stated another woman.

Many others also expressed that their classes never talked about race or gender, and that the invisibility they felt was due to departmental demographics. Engineering, for instance, looked very different from Women's Studies.

Besides the curriculum and the lack of professors of color, many women expressed their concern over the amount of daily harassment and violence they endured.

"We don't have many places to turn on

Turn to WOMEN, page 4

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

CONDOMANIA!–Paul S. Edelman, a junior marketing major, doesn't just sell condoms. He also sells the concept that condoms can be fun and life–saving.

Digital Corp. announces layoffs and closed plants

By TRUDY TYNAN
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., — Digital Equipment Corp. announced Thursday that it was closing its computer manufacturing plants here and in Burlington, Vt., as part of efforts to stem flagging sales and persistent losses.

The Springfield plant, opened 20 years ago, employs about 320 people and the Vermont facility another 350.

"It's a terrible blow for us," said Springfield Mayor Robert Markel. "The city has lost 600 jobs in one week." Earlier Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance, headquartered here, announced it was cutting 300 workers.

"And it's a blow for the state of Massachusetts," Markel said. "All that activity and prosperity driven by the computer companies in the late 1970s and 1980s seems to be coming apart."

The closing leaves only one Digital plant in the Springfield region and Markel said he was told by company officials that they have yet to make a decision on that facility in Westfield.

U.S. Rep. Richard Neal, D-Springfield, a former mayor, said her was seeking a meeting with the company's top executives in hopes of persuading them to change their minds. But Vermont Gov. Howard Dean said he and state officials had already tried that and failed.

"I talked directly with the new president," Dean said. "We felt we made a good case for keeping the Vermont plant. It is an extreme disappointment to us and to Digital's workers that the industry's retrenchment again struck here." The Burlington plant opened in 1976.

Company officials said they expected the work force to be phased out over the next six months and the plants shut by April 1993. It plans to keep its sales, software and service operations, which employ about 80 people in Springfield and its information services in Vermont.

They blamed the closings on decreased demand caused by a soft worldwide economy has left Digital . . .with excess worldwide manufacturing capacity," said Edward D. McDonough, vice president for manufacturing and logistics.

He said the Maynard-based company will remain in the computer manufacturing businesses and described the plant closings as part of its efforts to restructure its operations to become more competitive.

Since 1989, Digital, the nation's second-largest computer maker, has cut 27,000 jobs. It reported a huge loss in its fiscal year, which ended June 27, of $2.8 billion. In the most recent quarter, which ended Sept. 26, it reported losses of $260.5 million and the elimination of 5,3000 jobs. The cuts brought its work force to 108,500 people.

At the time, President Robert B. Palmer, who took over earlier this month from Digital co-founder Kenneth Olson, said he expected the company eventually to cut its payroll to 90,000 people.

The workers are to get a reduced severance package announced by the company last week. Those with up to 10 years of company service will get a lump sum payment of nine weeks pay plus one week's pay for every year of service, according to Digital spokeswoman Nikki Richardson.

■ women

continued from page 4

this campus," stated Shyamala Ivatury, a graduate student. "Who trusts the police, or who would confide in a racist Resident Assistant if she had just been raped?" she asked.

The discussion continued over the issue of harassment, which was overwhelmingly prevalent according to the women in the meeting. Many talked about the behaviors of professors, graduate teaching assistants, other students, and staff in administrative office positions.

There was a consensus over the issue of lack of safety anywhere on the campus, whether it be the classroom, the dormitory room, the library, or various other offices.

Finally, there was some discussion on solutions. Most everyone agreed that there needed to be a vehicle to put out the concerns of women of color.

"Because women are silenced in many ways, I think there should be room in the media or in other programs for women to express their concerns and to support one another," remarked another student at the rally.

■ money

continued from page 3

Kelley said he didn't think the laws changed.

"I don't think a judge looked at this case and made a law stating the University could keep the money, and then rescinded it," he said.

Alan Seewald, assistant town council, said in his opinion, the money was improperly paid to the University and belonged to the town.

Seewald wouldn't comment on whether or not the laws had changed over the years or if action would be taken against the University, but also said "there are so many courts because reasonable people can differ."

Kelley said he hoped to start taking action next week, and estimated the cost of litigation to be between $3,000 and $10,000.

Chernoff said the University was working with the town to straighten out this issue.

To make people aware of what is happening, Kelley said he would take out paid advertisements if necessary.

Chernoff said the University wasn't acting like a "deadbeat."

"I don't think any responsible person in government believes that," she said. "Larry Kelley is a man of extravagant language. He makes some good points, but he is excitable."

WE DON'T COSTUME MUCH.

ZANNA

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563

Vote Collegian in 1992

Winter Session 1993
January 4-25

Yes, you can!

REGISTER FOR WINTER SESSION CLASSES.

SPECIAL ENROLLMENT RESTRICTIONS DO NOT APPLY FOR WINTER SESSION.

SO, IF YOU'RE A UMASS STUDENT, ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS JUST SIGN UP.

OVER 100 CREDIT COURSES.

EARN 3 CREDITS IN JUST 3 SHORT WEEKS!

REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.

CATALOGS AVAILABLE ON CAMPUS OR AT THE DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION, 6TH FLOOR GOODELL.

Division of Continuing Education

Have a great time on us.

There's no better way to spend the day than enjoying simple pleasures with a special friend. So, don't let the best time of your life pass you buy. Put on a pair of Rollerblade® in-line skates.

Rollerblade
SKATE SMART

Get the times of your life at:

KLEIN'S ALL SPORTS
WE WILL NOT BE UNDERSOLD!

SATURDAY, OCT. 31st
10 A.M.-2 P.M.
HAMPSHIRE MALL • HADLEY

Rollerblade® is a registered trademark of Rollerblade, Inc.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Clinton will bring change

We, the Board of Editors, endorse the democratic ticket of Bill Clinton and Al Gore in their bid for the presidency. Clinton and Gore are the only candidates who have shown a sincere commitment to change, a change that will help us all.

Clinton's economic plan is the one that will better the American people in the long run. By investing in America, Clinton will create jobs here, not overseas. His economic plan gradually cuts the deficit over a period of years so funding for domestic plans, such as welfare and social security, will not be cut dramatically.

With Clinton's knowledge of health care and Gore's of the environment, they have what it takes to reform these areas that are so important to the well-being of the American people now and in future generations.

Since importantly, for us as students, Clinton and Gore are the only candidates who have shown a commitment to young people and education. Clinton served as co-chair at the President's Education Summit in 1989 and Arkansas, under his governorship, has been nationally recognized for its education improvements. Furthermore, in a time where racial and gender discrimination plagues this campus — and this nation — Clinton/Gore is the only ticket that has not ignored these issues. They have addressed them with compassion, concern and a sincere promise for change.

George Bush promised us several changes, but his administration has yet to come through. In a time when this campus and this nation scream for reform, Bill Clinton and Al Gore have what it takes — open minds.

We'd also like to emphasize how important it is to participate in this election. You have the power to be heard, your voice is your vote. The government should be for the people — if you give up your vote, you give up your rights. VOTE!

Women left in Stone Age

Move over Ward and June, and make way for the '90s, the decade in which women are finally supposed to receive the equal treatment they deserve. Unfortunately, though the years have passed, sometimes it seems like we are back in the Stone Age with Fred and Wilma, and for us women that's nothing to Yabba dabba doo about.

We are currently living in the heyday of gender discrimination. The phrase was coined to describe the wrongful restrictions made on women due simply to their sex. Gender discrimination, which has come to settle in the work force, is anything that deliberately keeps women out of the work force, for no reason other than their sex, unless it serves a national good.

Stephanie
EISENBERG

Under these classifications, many old issues begin to resurface under this new heading. One such issue is abortion, or more so, anti-abortion. Although abortion is traditionally thought of as a moral issue, these new facets place it where it belongs, in the category of discrimination.

The biological differences between men and women make it understandable that when a woman becomes pregnant she will need to temporarily remove herself from the job place. Since she has made the conscious decision to bear a child, she then understands that her displacement from the work force is inevitable.

That's all fine and dandy, yet many women choose not to have children, even if they do become pregnant. Under current law, they are permitted to have an abortion, enabling them to remain in the work force. If abortion becomes illegal, as prolifers would like, many unfortunate women will be forced to carry a child they don't want. In addition to all the other idiocy and lunacy that comes with viewing women as baby making machines, women forced to carry a baby are forced to remove themselves from the work force.

That's right folks, by forcing women to have children they don't want, by outlawing abortion, you are keeping them from the work force. According to some of the new discrimination laws, this can be viewed as a form of gender discrimination.

Now this would be a key place for all of you snoozing pro-lifers to tune in. As if it wasn't crime enough for you to try to shove women back with good old Wilma and Betty in the Stone Age, you could actually be committing a crime by outlawing abortion. And since I would never want to see all of you "lovely" people go to jail, I'm considering this my civic duty toward mankind (although womankind is more appropriate) and warning you. So get the hell out of the road and stop blocking abortion clinics, before you're faced with a hefty gender discrimination lawsuit — one that I would be all too happy to file!

I'm not vain enough to think that I'm the first person who came up with this clever deduction. Denying abortions to women is a way of preserving the male hierarchial structure and societal order that has traditionally been associated with the work force. Denying abortions to women makes them more vulnerable in the job place, and makes them more susceptible to further types of gender discrimination. Denying abortions to women is a sneaky way of removing them from the work force and placing them back in the private home front. And when viewed in the context of gender discrimination, it is also illegal.

With times and the government the way they are, it is rare that abortion will ever be viewed in this context, since we are dominated by a society of "holier than thou" types who think abortion is murder but gender discrimination is nifty. Abortion is more than a moral issue, and women should not be kept out of the work force simply because they are able to bear children. Hopefully by the time we get to the Space Age, the "holier than thou" types will have either died out or gotten a clue, and George and Jane Jetson will have some promising news for us.

Stephanie Eisenberg is a UMass student.

Join struggle for liberty and vote

Americans know that the time for explanation is over. The time for action is here. We know that real equality of opportunity among all races and creeds can no longer be denied. Let us move to the higher ground of action given to us by our founding fathers. We, as college students have a chance to make a change. So regardless of political faith, get out there and vote!

If you need a ride to the polls or information on where to vote call 545-0341 or come to Room 420 in the Student Union. Polls are open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

The struggle for individual liberty is the crucial political conflict of our times. What America thinks about liberty and, even more important, what America does about liberty, affects the policies of every government and the people of every nation. More than at any other time in our history we in America cannot be confuse about what liberty is but must seek broad, deep agreement on what liberty means and how we must secure it. Vote Democrat on Nov.3 and demand a change.

Manuel Aguilar
Northampton

Bush the comeback kid

A funny thing happened since last Friday: the comeback kid has stepped out of the ditch which politicians and pundits alike had thrown him in, and back on the electoral college highway, it looks like President George Bush will not stop until he reaches I-270.

This will be my last column before Super Tuesday, and I will devote it to the many reasons why voters should support our president.

There are those who believe that the American people are constantly in need of someone watching over them, for they are incapable of leading successful and independent lives on their own. Bill Clinton is one of these people, President Bush is not.

Michael
MORRISSEY

In the true philosophy of conservative politics, Bush has fought a successful battle to keep the federal government out of our hospitals, our places of work, our churches and our pockets. Bush's laissez-faire government has kept Big Brother off our backs by maintaing low income taxes, fighting against "environmental" bills which harass large profit-making corporations, and standing up against socialist reform for national health care.

Bush has also fought AIDS by spending more money than any of the forty previous presidents combined. The president is dedicated to the well-being of this country, and it has shown.

This is simply a highlight of the things Bush has done domestically. To go into what he has done globally (contributed to the fall of communism, the tearing down of the Berlin Wall, the protection of countries such as Kuwait and Panama) in his first term would take from now until 12 midnight Tuesday, which is Clinton's estimated time of concession.

The glowing report on the economy of the third quarter, which was revealed Tuesday, is simply the tool Bush needs to ply his way to electoral college supremacy. Despite the charges of the (liberal) press, despite the naysayers and doomsdayers in Congress, the economy has improved for six straight quarters, which has demonstrated that the recession is over.

The economy was the lone issue that the Democrats held in their grasp as a weapon to slash Bush's credibility. The public now sees that the economy, thought of as the Democrats' machete, turns out to be nothing worse than a table spoon. Voters have begun to swing and the election may turn out differently than the liberal press might have hoped.

When Bush did not give speeches that would rival Socrates, Lincoln, or Reagan, the press tried to bury him. Democratic spin doctors thought that Clinton won the third debate, and magazines such as Time had Slick Willie's face on the cover, analyzing what he will do if elected president. Because the liberals held the vague "has to hit a home run" phrase up to Bush, he failed to live up to their expectations.

Yet George Herbert Walker Bush has never been a home run hitter, even back when he was the captain of the Yale University baseball team. What he was, and is, is a true leader. He also is a very good singles hitter, a man who will constantly and tirelessly hack away until his team wins.

He has finally begun to drive home his policies and his ideology, and the newest Gallup poll among likely voters has Slick Willie's lead down to 2 percentage points, with a plus / minus margin of 3 percent. Do you know what that means: it means we have a dead heat.

Bush has guaranteed that he will win reelection, and like the pedigree that he is, he will beat Slick Willie (a horse of a inferior breed) out by a nose and preserve our way of life in the United States of America. The comeback kid is back, and the communist kid is history.

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian columnist.

Olver's work supports higher ed

The Graduate Employee Organization/ District 65/UAW, a labor union of graduate students at UMass/Amherst who work as teaching and research assistants, voted to endorse Democrat John Olver in his bid for re-election to the First Congressional District seat. Because our membership is dependent upon the University not only for our education but also for our livelihood, we are concerned that the Congressional representative from our area be completely committed to higher education. Congressman Olver's unfailing support for the University during his many years representing us in Boston should be seen as a starting point of what we feel will be a lifelong task of advocacy on behalf of higher education.

As the sole Massachusetts member of the Education Committee, Congressman Olver has already made his presence felt. He has cosponsored legislation recently passed by the House expanding the availability of federal grants and loans to working families and increases this aid for nontraditional students. With so many in Western Massachusetts out of work, this legislation will be welcome news to those returning to school in order to help themselves off the unemployment line. Olver helped secure over $5 million in federal educational funding for Western Massachusetts. Education is the key to America's future as a leader in the post-industrial global economy, and John Olver has already been helping to make that future come to life; think of what he can do if he has the opportunity to serve a full term. Please help him to continue his excellent work as a supporter of education in Washington, D.C., by casting your vote for him on Nov. 3.

Tristram C. Carpenter, Jr.
Political Action Coordinator,
GEO/District 65/UAW

Perot backers living in dream world

I was dismayed by a letter from a Perot supporter that appeared last Wednesday (Collegian, Oct. 21). The author cited some very legitimate concerns regarding the present state of politics in this country we are all familiar with — politicians cater to powerful interests, are not often responsive to their constituents, etc. This is in itself is disturbing. However, what really worries me is that the author is party to some widespread and very dangerous misconception; first, that Ross Perot has a better character than either of the other candidates, and second, that once in office he will carry out his ambitious agenda.

Regarding the first: time Perot entered this race ostensibly as an outsider intent on providing the American voters with a choice in candidates that is not party to special interests, and to make the point that the existing candidates were beholding to special interests to an unacceptable degree in American politics. It is ironic that what Perot has done is illustrate what is really wrong with this country: that it is prey to the whims of megalomaniacs, both in politics and in the private sector, who are willing and able to manipulate politics to suit their own purposes and to indulge their own egos. In this light it is obvious that Perot is not the solution to the problem, he is the problem.

Another misconception is that if this maniac were in the oval office he would miraculously to clear up the nation's problems. What Perot has left out of the equation is the principle of checks and balances that was prudently included in the Consitution. A Perot administration would result in a paralysis in government between a loose cannon in the White House and an alienated and hostile Congress. Of course the reality of the situation is that Perot will not win; he hasn't a prayer and those who deny merely confirm that they are living in a dream world.

David Fahl-King
Northampton

New book challenges 'Little House' series

By KENDALL J. WILLS
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Laura Ingall's Wilder's "Little House" series about frontier life were ghostwritten by her daughter, a professor contends. But others say it's not so clear where the writing ends and the editing begins.

In a forthcoming book , William Holtz challenges the image of Wilder as a literary Grandma Moses and credits Rose Wilder Lane with everything that make the children's books "stand up and sing."

"I am saying the daugher substantially rewrote it, excising parts, writing dramatic themes, changing dialogue. If this isn't ghostwriting, what is?" the University of Missouri professor of English said Wednesday.

Some of Holtz's colleagues counter that the Wilders collaborated on the series published in the 1930s and that the daughter was simply an editor.

"Her fingerprints are all over these books," said William Anderson, a Michigan author who has written several books on Wilder's family. "But I just don't think it is fair to say she did 80 or 90 percent of the writing."

If Lane had been a ghostwriter, HarperCollins Children's Books would have given her credit as co-author, said spokesman William Morris. Its predecessor companies published nearly 25 million copies of the books.

Wilder, who had earlier written for newspapers and a Missouri farm journal, began writing books at age 65 at her daughter's urging. She had the

Turn to SERIES, page 9

Franken releases book

SNL's Smalley IS good enough

By SCOTT WILSON
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stuart Smalley is not a licensed therapist. He is, however, a member of several 12-step recovery groups, including Overeaters Anonymous, Debtors Anonymous, Al-Anon and Adult Children of Alcoholics. He broke up with his "rage-aholic" girlfriend, Dale, more than a year ago. It's been tough.

Still, he's managed to get his own self-help and daily affirmation program on cable TV, which airs on NBC's "Saturday Night Live" every now and then. And he's on the cover of this month's Sober Times magazine.

Stuart is obtuse, vaguely narcissistic, shy, hopelessly neurotic and co-dependent, and yet has a certain sweetness and dumb courage. He fails and yet, each time, he picks himself up and resumes his journey of recovery.

Stuart is fictional. He's the creation of "SNL" writer-producer-performer Al Franken, who also wrote a Dell paperback of Stuart's daily affirmations: "I'm Good Enough, I'm smart Enough, And Doggone It, People like Me."

"It's a long title — but that's OK!" Franken insists, lapsing into Stuart's character. "It's catchy."

See? Already, Stuart has begun to forgive himself for the long title.

Last week, Franken conducted a three-hour "satellite tour" of 25 cities, talkinglive with news anchors and reporters about his book. Actually, it was Stuart who did the interviews, 'cause, darn it, he's good enough!

"There were just a couple who couldn't accept that Stuart was there, not Al," Franken said. "One of them asked me, 'Now Stuart, what does Al Franken do in his spare time?"

Spare time? The short answer is that Al Franken has no spare time. His job at SNL is full time. He's co-writing and co-producing Sunday's Nov. 1 election spe-

Turn to BOOK, page 9

Arts & Living

Anderson's Views from the Outside

By MARK K. ANDERSON
Collegian Correspondent

Don't kid yourself. Disasters can prove to be defining moments of an era. We all know where we were when we learned that the shuttle Challenger exploded or when news arrived that Brady Bunch daddy Robert Reed bought the farm. Yet very few could recite the accomplishments of the many successful Space Shuttle missions, or for that matter of anything having to do with Eve Plumb.

(You know. Jan? Right next to Alice on the tic-tac-toe board credits?)

Every human endeavor has its share of disasters. The world of Wall Street has Ivan Boesky, the world of Art has Christo that guy who wraps islands in plastic, the world of architecture and design has... well... Christo that guy who wraps islands in plastic, and the world of television has The New Monkees.

Disastrous in more ways than one, the 1987 TV show The New Monkees, admittedly a brilliant piece of trash-marketing, cashed in on the mid-eighties revival mania surrounding its predecessors. (Who, it bears repeating, started off as their own unabashed cash-in.)

Unfortunately, Monkees: The Next Generation did distinguish itself from the original formula in one significant way. That is, unlike the story of the Pre-Fab Four, the televised antics of Larry, Dino, Jared and Marty (the Pre-Flab Four?) lasted about as many weeks as a mild case of the gout. For good reason too: The New Monkees episodes tended to reek so fouly as to cause severe swelling and excessive fluid build-up in many of its regular viewers.

The lads released an album under their name which, truth be told, they didn't have a whole lot to do with. Big surprise there, sports fans.

The songs on their eponymously self-titled album that, conveniently enough, happens to be named The New Monkees are not severely wound-inflicting or even painfully torturous. Side one is certainly not as bad as being stuck in a mine shaft with only a leaf blower to dig your way out. The flipside may even prove more tolerable than undergoing root canal work as practiced by caffeine-junkie oral surgeons in the land of recurrent earthquakes.

Having denigrated the show (nay, way of life seems more fitting) to such extremes, in fairness I should note that at the time I too was swept up in the enthusiasm for a Monkees that the youth of today could call its own.

Hindsight, always being partial towards the winner, exposes the fatuous nature of the dream I was chasing. Yet to this day I cannot help but be moved by the words I wrote upon first viewing Larry, Dino, Jared and Marty: "Hail to the new standard-bearers! Having just last year been immortalized by The Replacements' 'Bastards of Young,' our generation now has a television show which sets us apart from the pernicious, dominant and homogenizing influence of the baby-boomer demographic."

And then the show flopped. I'm so embarrassed.

Naturally, the inevitable question must be posed. Where are they now? Surely, fate has brought them lucrative Nutra-Sweet commercial offers or maybe even a chance to portray that Jean Luc waiter guy the two dismal and apparently mentally-deficient middle-aged women drool about over their "international" coffee. ("Okay, we're here in Paris! Let's skip the museums, historical monuments or any other place we might stand to learn something and just ogle at french waiters in some tacky, American tourist-dive.")

The New Monkees

COURTESY WARNER BROTHERS

Back-issues of magazines or newspapers (not counting the highbrow win-a-date-with-Menudo periodicals) offered nothing to help pinpoint the whereabouts of America's fallen teen idols. A long day of library jockeying turned up nothing more than a few half sheets of computer printout and several dull pencil stubs.

The other tact, locating our displaced heroes through their record label, appeared a reasonable option. One call to Warner Brothers and the nice operator, after taking down your size preference for the complimentary Bugs Bunny t-shirt, would give out all the phone numbers you needed.

And Juan Valdez picks coffee beans for a living.

It probably would have been easier to get the Time-Warner stockholders' meeting to sing a round of "Cop Killer" than it was to get the promotions department to cough up any leads. No one would talk New Monkees with me.

Are they ashamed of a flop? Did one of the boys knock over a Seven Eleven recently? Why the secretiveness?

I quickly discovered that prying open the files of such dropped product could only be done if some ex-member of the team is still working with Warner Brothers today. Short of flying out to Vegas and getting the 411 from Wayne (he knows all), the old bait-and-switch appears to be my only remaining approach.

Next week: The chase is on!

This week's movies on super spooky HSCN

By JAMIE GORNSTEIN
Collegian Staff

Hey, movie lovers! Welcome to yet another installment of the Campus Cable Connection. For those of you who like kiddie movies (including myself, thank you), there are some really cute ones this week, including The Adventures of Milo and Otis, a simply adorable film with the cutest animals to ever grace the silver screen, in my humble opinion. One note, though, the movie is narrated by Dudley Moore, and narrated stupidly. You know how everyone gets annoyed by Bob Sagget's interludes during "America's Funniest Home Videos"? Same principle. Dudley's a dork. Watch the movie with the volume turned down, and you're in for a treat, trust me! Anyway, here are the movies that will be shown from now until November 3rd.

Coming to America—Eddie Murphy, Arsenio Hall, James Earl Jones. One of Eddie's better movies about a rich prince who is yearning a bride that is more than just a subservient beauty—he needs a woman who can match his wits. (Does that sound like Eddie to you?) Anyway, it's very cute and—get this—not one obscenity comes forth from Murphy's lips! Can you believe it? Arsenio is hysterical as Murphy's best buddy sent to watch over him in New York. Watch for the special cameo appearances from 48 Hours. ***

Children Of A Lesser God—William Hurt, Marlee Matlin, Piper Laurie. Touching film about a schoolteacher who falls in love with a woman who he sees working at the school as a janitor. The janitor, played superbly by Matlin, is a very intelligent woman but is hindered by her hearing impairment causing her isolation from society. The two leads' performances are simply phenomenal, and this is a movie absolutely not to be missed, especially the sex scene in the pool. Whew! What a steamer! 1/2

Godfather III—Al Pacino, Andy Garcia, Talia Shire. Good try, but not even in the same ballpark of greatness as the first two. It was obviously rushed for Oscar time, and the last scene with Pacino grieving over his daughter being shot was SOOOOOO obviously one of those scenes where we expect to see it on the screen when they announce the nominees for Best Actor. Now I know there was a lot of discussion over the fact that Coppola's granddaughter was horrible, and all I have to say is. . .she is quite possibly THE worst actress I have ever seen. She is an ugly, heinous troll, and Andy Garcia had to have been severely hard up to go for her. What a woofer, and the space between her ears is for rent. But the rest of the movie, especially Garcia's acting, is somewhat laudable. 1/2

House Party—Christopher Reid, Robin Harris, Christopher Martin. VERY funny movie about the events before, during, and after a house party. Starring real-life rapper Reid, the film has some moments that'll leave you rolling. If you need to have a good, honest laugh, catch this movie. What the heck, HSCN plays it all the time for SOME reason, right? 1/2

Mannequin Two—NOT Andrew McCarthy, NOT Kim Basinger, and NOT anyone you'd want to see on a screen for more than three seconds before screaming. I saw this piece of [expletive] over the summer at 3:30 a.m. on HBO. I was in disbelief that any producer was proud enough to put his name on the credits. It must have been a mercy mission from God, because I have not seen a movie so bad since the first one, but then again the first one had good actors. People, please, for your own safety and sanity, DO NOT WATCH THIS MOVIE! I would rather be stark naked in a leech infested lake than to sit through this film again. 'Nuff said? NO STARS.

Point Break—Keanu Reeves, Patrick Swayze, Gary Busey. Sigh. I reviewed this movie last semester and was severely chastised by a certain member of the Marching Band's drum line who shall remain nameless (we'll just call him Rich), for talking about how cute Keanu Reeves' butt looked in the wet suit, but quite honestly, Rich, it was the only saving grace of the film. The acting was terrible, the plot lacked EVERYTHING, and Gary Busey got so fat that they had to break out the wide angle lens for close ups! Give me a break! Am I to suffer through an entire movie without seeing Keanu's delectable derriere? As if! 1/2* for the movie, * for Keanu's butt! HA! Did it again, Rich.

Total Recall—Arnold Schwarzenegger, Rachel Ticotin, Sharon Stone. Wow, director Paul Verhoeven must have a thing for Sharon Stone, huh? I just saw his steamy Basic Instinct for the first time last night. Gasp! Anyway, Total Recall is one of the best AH-nold movies to date. The special effects are outstanding, the acting is worth praise, the plot is new and exciting, and there's never a dull moment. As always, great music as well. If you haven't seen it, you must. ©©©©

Rocky Horror Picture Show—Tim Curry, Susan Sarandon, Barry Bostwick. This one's always better in Cambridge, but what the heck. Still a fun film when seen on HSCN about a straight couple, Janet and Brad, who stumble onto a strange town of Transylvanian transvestite whackos. Outstanding music by Meatloaf, though he is a tough one to look at. I guess the name says it all, huh? At least watch it with a bunch of friends who have seen it in Cambridge. It's a major cult classic! ©©©©

U2 Rattle and Hum—Excellent film as the famed Irish band takes it on the road. For some strange reason, parts are in black and white and others are in color. Weird. Anyway, their version of "Helter Skelter" is absolutely amazing. I kept rewinding and rewinding to see it over and over again. Bono and The Edge are fantastic as always, but some parts drag. U2 should have just kept to the music and left the trip to Graceland out. ©©©

Movies that are on HSCN but are not reviewed are: Bride of Reanimator, Dead Again, Lawnmower Man, Gladiator, Night in Heaven, Physical Evidence, Ragtime, The Super, Where the Boys Are, and Young Guns II.

Halloween Cheese-a-thon

WMUA 91.1 F.M. will be presenting the first annual Halloween Cheese-a-thon this Saturday night from midnight until 6 a.m. Join hosts Mark, Jarvis and Jim as they spin six hours of the absolute worst in recorded music. They will be joined in the studio by Tom Ardolino, drummer for the band NRBQ, and other lovers of the abysmally horrible.

Mark, D.J. of the Nasty Notes, says, "The management reserves the right to play Don Ho at any moment if matters get out of hand."

—Lisa Curtis

Collegian Arts – it's an adventure.

Come by and check out all the wonderful opportunities that await you.
We're located in the basement of the Campus Center on the opposite end of the ATM's.

Tritt's new album puts drive into country

By CALEB COCHRAN
Collegian Correspondent

T-R-O-U-B-L-E
Travis Tritt
Warner Brothers

While Garth Brooks decided to rest on his laurels with his new album, Travis Tritt's latest release, T-R-O-U-B-L-E, gives further proof that he is a force to be reckoned with in the country music world.

The follow up to his brilliant sophomore album It's All About to Change, T-R-O-U-B-L-E follows the same formula as Tritt's first two albums: exhilarating country rockers balanced with soulful ballads.

T-R-O-U-B-L-E gets off to a bang with the first song, "Looking Out For Number One." This tune is a typical Tritt rock 'n' roller which cruises along with all the power of The Black Crowes and a Southern flair that only Travis has the patent for. In the song, Tritt announces that he will begin to concentrate on his own feelings rather than those of others.

Another down-home rocker is the title track, which couples clever lyrics with powerhouse guitars and rip-roaring vocals to produce one of Tritt's best songs to date. The speed and force of this track are reminiscent of the Tritt classic "Put Some Drive In Your Country" from his debut album, Country Club, but "T-R-O-U-B-L-E" is even more upbeat than the earlier tune.

In contrast to Garth Brooks, whose songs sometimes walk a fine line between country and pop, Tritt's feet are firmly planted on Southern ground. He is a pure country singer, more comparable to Alan Jackson than Brooks or Randy Travis. Tritt explains his style best in the aforementioned hit, "Put Some Drive In Your Country," when he says that "I made myself a promise, when I was just a kid/ I'd mix Southern rock and country, that's just what I did."

While the album thrives when Tritt plays hard and fast, it suffers at points when he slows things down. "Can I Trust You With My Heart," while mechanically well done, is a bit sappy and lifeless. The same can be said for "When I Touch You," the only really bad song on the album. Travis aims to create a moving love song here but instead produces a laughable mess which is well below his standards.

While Garth Brookes walks a fine line between country and pop, Tritt's feet are firmly planted on Southern ground.

With the exception of those two songs, however, the album is on a par with Tritt's first two albums, which were fantastic. "Lord Have Mercy On The Working Man" is a pleasant and twangy tune in which Tritt discusses the perils of blue collar America. "I Wish I Could Go Back Home" is this album's answer to "Drift Off To Dream," from Country Club, a genuine heartfelt tear-jerker.

Another of Tritt's scornful tracks in the spirit of last year's "Here's a Quarter (Call Someone Who Cares) is "A Hundred Years." In the song, Tritt sings about love gone awry but shrugs it off by saying that none of it will matter in a hundred years.

With the release of T-R-O-U-B-L-E, Travis Tritt has added to the steadily growing body of evidence that he is the number one contender in the fight for the country music crown. While Garth Brooks and Randy Travis are both past their peak, the young Tritt is well on his way to a long and fruitful career in the country music world.

COURTESY RANDEE ST. NICHOLAS
Travis Tritt

VOTE COLLEGIAN

SATURDAY
Halloween Party
9 pm - 1:00
with
DJ Pete Free
• Costume Prizes • awarded at Midnight
Any Menu Nachos
$2.00
9:30 - 10:30

THE 24 HE-HS PUB
CELEBRATES 1968 • 1992 IN AMHERST
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

Know it, Love it, Live it.
Collegian.
At 19,000 copies a day, there's a lot to love.

WEEKLY COLLEGIAN ARTS DESK MEETINGS
Every Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Collegian Newsroom.

ALLEY OOPS
HALLOWEEN COSTUME PARTY
Featuring
Live Music by THE CHOICE
Cash Prizes for Best & Most Original Costumes
8:00PM - 1:00AM
Saturday, Oct. 31, 1992
$2.00 in advance $3.00 at door
Alley Oops
525 PLEASANT STREET NORTHAMPTON
584-2491

NEW BURSAR'S OFFICE HOURS
In an effort to catch-up on administrative paperwork, the Bursar's Office will open at 10:00AM until further notice.
Teller's windows are open for cash transactions from 10:00 AM to 3:30 PM
Monday - Friday
THANK YOU FOR YOUR PATIENCE

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Drink Special MILLER GENUINE DRAFT $1.00 BOTTLES
HALLOWEEN PARTY
Cash Prizes for Best Costume
ALL YOU CAN EAT SUNDAY BRUNCH
11:30 - 2:30 • $3.75
Eggs Benedict • Scrambled Eggs • Roast Beef • Assorted Muffins & Breads
Sausage • Chicken & Rice • Bacon • Beef Stroganoff • French Toast
Drink Special MILLER GENUINE DRAFT $4.50 Pitcher Always Something For Everyone!
Drink Special RUM & COKE $1.50

MINUTE WHO?
1992-93 UMASS Minuteman Mascot Tryouts!
Attention students!
Are you energetic, athletic and willing to promote the successful tradition of UMASS Athletics?
If so we would like you as our UMASS MINUTMAN MASCOT for the 1992/93 school year.
Mascot tryouts will be held on November 8, 9 & 10, 1992 at the Curry Hick's "CAGE" arena.
For all those interested please contact Margaret Driscoll at the UMASS Athletic Dept. in Boyden Building room 203. 545-3190.
Mascot Tryouts
November 8, 9 & 10, 1992
Curry Hicks "CAGE" Arena
Cantact: Margaret Driscoll
203 Boyden Building
545-3190

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN
SAW-SEE — Bonnie Becker, a senior communication major see-saws during Delta Zeta's See-Sawathon to benefit the hearing impaired.

■ book

continued from page 6

cial "Saturday Night Live's Presidential Bash."

On Tuesday, he'll be Comedy Central's anchor for election coverage, a stint he began with the State of the Union speech.

Franken also has a screenplay in development with co-writer Ron Bass. It's tellingly titled "Disgruntled Former Employee" and it's a comedy, he said; the final draft should use up his Christmas break.

Franken is a little shy and very delighted when a critical reader compliments his book.

"I think it's the best thing I've ever done," he said. "It has a lot of (12 Step) program wisdom, like "Denial is not just another river in Egypt."

"And it has handy survival tips for people from dysfunctional families."

"One affirmation is; 'When I go home to visit my family, I will stay at a motel.' The book's only been out a week, but I've been told that has saved several lives."

Franken acknowledges that Stuart is an "extreme example" of the recovery program mentality. He also acknowledges Stuart's less-than funny origins.

"I belong to an anonymous fellowship of friends and relatives of drunks and recovering alcoholics," he said.

■ series

continued from page 6

equivalent of an eigth-grade education.

By the time she died in 1957, Wilder had published 10 books. Another was published after her death. Lane died in 1968.

Holtz's claims are made in his biography of Lane, "The Ghost in the Little House," to be published in the spring by University of Missouri Press. Lane's heir gave Holtz access in 1976 to family letters, diaries and manuscripts.

"I think what the manuscripts, the diary and the letters indicate is that (Wilder) was an amatuerish writer from beginning to end and that everything that makes the 'Little House' books stand up and sing is what the daughter did to them," Holtz said in a telephone interview from Columbia.

He said Lane was an established writer before Wilder became famous, writing novels, articles for national magazines and biographies of Henry Ford and Herbert Hoover.

"Have to finish my mother's goddamn juvenile, which has stopped me flat," Lane wrote to a friend about Wilder's "On the Banks of Plum Creek."

"Change the beginning if you want," Wilder wrote her daughter. "Do anything you please with (the) damn stuff if you will fix it up."

■ platforms

continued from page 1

next four years."

The Bush plan will reduce the military spending to 251 billion dollars in 1997, a 15 percent reduction from this year's level, while the Clinton plan as outlined by his advisors proposes a 20 percent cut, setting the 1997 defense budget 234 billion dollars, same level as 1975 which was a low year in the post-Korea war period, according to Feinstein.

Under the Bush Administration, Feinstein said, the defense spending cuts were done reluctantly. And if Bush is re-elected, we will see a "Status Quo Plus" and more arms sale, while it is "fair to expect that Clinton will pursue more seriously the idea of limiting the U.S. conventional arms sale," said Feinstein.

Feinstein predicted that in defense and arms control, Clinton will face "very much the same problems that Jimmy Carter did."

"Perceived as someone who lacks foreign policy experience, he may lack a certain confidence in operating independently in this area," said Feinstein.

■ Morris

continued from page 1

the period covered by the documents, roughly 1989 to 1991. He confirmed incidents reported on what appear to be his expense accounts, suggesting the documents are legitimate.

He also confirmed that Phillip Morris pursued a strategy of making charitable contributions to organizations in the districts of key legislators.

"They did do a lot of charitable contributions," he said. "That's not a campaign contribution."

Craig Fuller, vice president for corporate affairs at Phillip Morris Inc. New York, neither confirmed nor denied the accuracy of the documents. But he emphatically denied that the company's donating program is driven by political goals.

"It's directed toward helping communities in which we have people living or working or consuming our products," he said Thursday. After the contributions are made, he said, "It's certainly understandable that our Washington office would be interested in our activities."

"It's possible that elected officials would bring to our attention community needs," he said. "But that happens on both sides of the aisle."

A file on Sen. Bob Kasten, R-Wisc., shows that during the past decade Phillip Morris made some 5,000 separate contributions to high schools, colleges, public television, arts organizations, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, the Kidney Foundation and other groups in Wisconsin.

2 1/4 LBS Burgs For 2 Bucks EVERYDAY IN NOVEMBER
BURGERS • HOT DOGS
FRIES • ONION RINGS
PHILLY CHEESE STKS
SHAKES • FLOATS
ROUTE 9 HADLEY 585-0241
ONE MILE WEST OF THE HAMPSHIRE MALL

PERSONAL
Nice, Affordable
two and three bedroom Apts., seeking quiet, responsible residents. Long and short term relationship possible.
Call 253-3834

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9)
Amherst • 253-5072

AIR FORCE ROTC UNITS FILLED TO CAPACITY
NOT!
Don't believe everything you hear. The Air Force continues to seek outstanding students to fill future officer requirements. See yourself becoming a leader, graduating from college as an Air Force officer with fully developed qualities of character and managerial ability. Notice, too, the opportunities. Like eligibility for scholarship programs that can pay tuition, textbooks, fees...even $100 in tax-free income each academic month.
Visualize a crisp uniform that reflects pride in yourself and your ability to accept challenge. Get the picture? Now make a call!
545-2451/2437
AIM HIGH--AIR FORCE

VOLUNTEER
UMass Music
the MINUTEMAN HOOP BAND
Good Guitar Player Needed!
Needs
First Meeting/Rehearsal for Monday, November 2 from Old Chapel
For More Information, Please Contact Thom Hannum, Director Room 16, Old Chapel 2nd Floor or Call 545-6060/3410

The Collegian–
What a party.
If you would like to come and have some fun stop by the Campus Center, room 113 and find out more about it.

UMass racial attack OK'd for prosecution

NORTHAMPTON (AP) — A judge on Thursday cleared the way for prosecution of a Framingham man accused of a racial attack at the center of racial strife on the University of Massachusetts campus at Amherst.

The suspect, an 18-year old White male, is accused of assault and civil rights violations for allegedly punching a Black student at a campus dormitory.

The alleged assailant accused the Black student, 22 year-old Arlens Barosy of Worcester, of attacking him first. But Judge Alvertus Morris dismissed that counterclaim during Thursday's show-cause hearing in Northampton District Court.

The suspect, who is not a student at the campus, was visiting friends there, authorities say.

The alleged attack on Sept. 25 set off a storm of anger on campus, including an alleged spree of anti-White slurs in a dorm by minority students.

University officials are now negotiating with minority students over a set of demands, including greater security and increased minority representation among students and faculty.

In his decision, Morris said there was enough evidence to warrent formal charges against the alleged assailant. "I think if Barosy was white, this incident would not have occured," the judge said.

More than 30 journalists and spectators watched the hearing. Show-cause hearings are usually closed to the public, but authorities decided to open Thursday's proceeding in the highly publicized case.

'MDC' stands for Massachusetts Daily Collegian.
The Collegian wasn't always daily.
It mustn't have been called the MDC then.

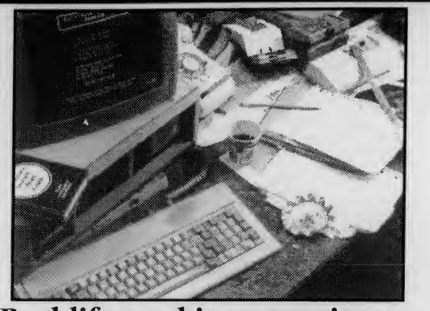
HAPPY HALLOWEEN

From Information Data Bank 545-1555

Experience.



Real-life working experience.

That's what really matters once you graduate.

Like the skills you learn working at the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, the largest independently-run college daily in New England.

In fact, many of our current staffers spent their summers working at The Holyoke Transcript, The Middlesex News, WLVI TV-56, The Boston Globe, WEEI, The Berkshire Eagle and the Associated Press.

And our alumni? They hold jobs at almost every major paper in the nation.

At the Collegian, you learn the skills you'll really need – from brainstorming for news features to writing stories on tight deadlines.

It's cool, casual and you can go at your own pace.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
News Desk • 113 Campus Center • 545-0719

The News Desk is looking for new writers.
Contact David Massey, News Editor.

CELEBRATING 25 YEARS • DAILY SINCE 1967

The Collegian is looking for writers for the following departments:

Black Affairs
Third World Affairs
Multicultural Affairs
Women's Issues
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues
Jewish Affairs

Call 545-3500 or visit our office in the basement
The Collegian is an EOE

The UMass Theater Guild presents
HAIR
The American Tribal-Love Rock Musical
October 29, 30, & 31, 1992
8 pm Student Union Ballroom
Tickets on sale at Tix Unlimited
$4 students $6 non-students
General Admission
May not be suitable for some viewers

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湖園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

Clinton's optimism may help him win votes

(AP) — Democrat Bill Clinton — the candidate who was born in Hope, Ark. — has tried to frame the election as a choice between "hope and fear." He has called repeatedly for racial unity and closed his nomination acceptance speech with the line, "I still believe in a place called Hope."

That may be a good stance to take. Candidates who either didn't discuss problems or made them seem surmountable won 18 of 22 presidential elections from 1900 to 1984, according to a study by political psychologist Harold Zullow of Columbia University and psychologist Martin Seligman of the University of Pennsyvania. Among the victors: Eisenhower, Johnson and Reagan.

President Bush is having trouble convincing some voters he has a way to fix their problems. Independent Ross Perot's call for share sacrifice is not what most people want to hear. Almost by process of elimination, Clinton has become a repository for intangible hopes.

In Ypsilanti, the doomed plant workers call Clinton there only hope. In College Station, Texas, Neal Van Alfen says Clinton will revive the caring of the past.

"Twenty years ago we had a real sense that we had a responsibility to the environment and to each other. I don't see that as much anymore. I'm disappointed in how the country has changed," says Van Alfen, a plant pathology professor at Texas A&M.

Blacks in the AP poll were more pessimistic than Whites about the state of race relations a decade from now. But many have great hopes that Clinton will diffuse tensions.

"If we don't sit down and talk to one another and reach some common ground, we're in trouble," says Johnson. "Clinton believes in racial equality and doesn't believe in devisiveness. The message has to be sent from the top. That sets the climate and the tone."

Turner, the granddaughter of a former slave, sees, "too many Black men out of jobs, too many white men selling Black boys crack." She, too, is counting on "responsible leadership" at the White House to help ease the trials of the black community.

In 10 years, she says, "there will be jobs, people will understand each other and respect each other race-wise and Blacks will sense and feel the value of life much more than they do now." After a pause she adds, "It's wishful thinking, but it's within the area of responsibility."

■ Andrew

continued from page 1

Dade County officials have waited for weeks for the arrival of thousands of housing vouchers to help people left homeless to pay rent. More than 5,000 people are on waiting lists for the help.

But the office of Housing and Urban Development is still waiting for the Office of Management and Budget to turn over the money. "We've got the plans, we're just waiting for the order to fire," said Mario Marti, director of the county's special housing program.

Insured homeowners are also facing bureaucratic hassles. Elizabeth Henretig, 75, was ready to use insurance money to repair her home of 17 years after Andrew swept through.

■ extension

continued from page 3

Gerber is very optimistic despite the economic budget crisis. He has travelled extensively to the Carribbean, Asia and Africa, working and learning more about culture, agriculture and the environment. He also served as Associate director of the experiment station in the department of Foods and Natural Sciences at the Univerity of Illinois.

Gerber says that learning styles are within the context of culture is another aspect by which we can foster better business relations and help acheive goals more effectively.

"Our basic philosophy is helping people, help themselves. Most of the people that work with us are volunteers. 4-H is run by volunteers. Our youth development model approach is very collaborative, not competitive in the sense that it promotes cooperation and team building," said Gerber.

If you're happy and you know it read the Collegian.

The Collegian would like to remind you to please vote in the upcoming election. If you don't then we don't want to hear you complain that you don't like who won. Got a deal?

2 NIGHT!
HALLOWEEN BASH!!
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 30TH with BARK LIKE A DOG
SAT., OCTOBER 31ST WITH MONGHANI
BOTH BEGIN AT 9 pm
A "FRIGHTFULLY" FUN TIME FOR ALL!
60 oz. Miller Genuine Draft Pitchers $3.75
Munchies! Prizes! Fun!
HADLEY PUB • ROUTE 9 • HADLEY

Spirit Haus
LIQUOR STORE
CORRECTIONS
Post Road Ale 6 pak.....$4.69 (+ dep)
Gallo Burgandy Chablis Rhine 1.5 L.....$4.49
Catamount Gold Amber Porter 6 pak .$4.69 (+dep)
Poland Springs Vodka 1.75 L.....$9.99
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED
Open 9 am - 11 pm
338 College Street/253-5384
One mile East of Amherst Ctr. on Rte. 9

MEDITATION
POWER
&
ENLIGHTENMENT
JOURNEY TO THE CENTER OF PERCEPTION WITH THE POWER OF YOUR MIND
Course Designed for Ages 9 & Young
FREE
Saturdays, 11AM - 12PM
The Unitarian Universalist Church
121 North Pleasant Street
Amherst
Instructor - Chitananda

News
Sports
Arts
Comics
Crosswords
Horoscope
Opinion
Lunch
Everybody reads us.
COLLEGIAN ADVERTISING
545-3500

Rugby beats Yale, faces Harvard in N.E.T.

By STEVE GREGG
Collegian Correspondent

Coming off their first league loss last Saturday, 34-0 at the hands of Dartmouth, UMass looked to rebound in the rain, mud and cold against Yale in the first round of the New England Tournament.

UMass and Yale both boasted 4-1 league records and were seeded fourth and fifth respectively in the eight team field.

UMass opened the scoring in the first half on a try by Junior wing Greg Lisi. Rich Halloran fielded a kick from a Yale fullback at midfield and ran it halfway to the goal before being hemmed in by Yale defenders. He passed the ball outside, and two passes later, the ball was in Lisi's hands and he was across the goal, and after the two point conversion, UMass had a 7-0 lead.

UMass struck again in the first half when Senior co-captain Dave Lally scored on a penalty run from the five meter mark. Scanlon again converted on a very difficult kick to make it 14-0.

Yale added a penalty kick in the final minutes to make it 14-3 at the half, and they struck first in the second half, their try without the conversion kick making the score 14-8.

UMass countered with another try thanks to a heads-up play by junior scrum-half Sean Flynn. Rich Halloran, subbing for the injured Larry Scanlon, converted the kick for a 21-8 UMass lead.

Yale was able to rally for two tries but could only cut the lead to 21-18, UMass.

■ water polo

continued from page 15

under much pressure to produce.

"I think there's less pressure this year because we're pretty much guaranteed being in the championship game...unless we really fall apart against the B.C./M.I.T winner, which I don't see happening."

Junior hole-man Tsan Engin says the pressure is on the team to send the seniors out in style.

"I think there's some pressure," he said, "especially for the seniors. They've been here for three years, and have lost to Brown all three times in the championship game. Plus, Brown has won it 17 years is a row. We think it's our time to claim the title. We feel a little pressure, but we're also really confident."

A win in the opening round would give the Minutemen a 12:30 p.m. Sunday game against the winner of the Harvard/Brown game. UMass beat both squads during the season, with the Crimson putting up a much better battle than the Bruins.

12th-ranked Slippery Rock College (PA.), the only school to beat UMass this season, is at the Mid-Atlantic Championships this weekend, where they will have to play Navy and Princeton, the only two Eastern teams that have beaten "The Rock" this season. If the Minutemen win the N.E. title and S.R. loses a game this weekend, UMass will likely be the top seed in next weekend's Eastern Championships. The top team and an at-large team after that tourney will receive invitations to the NCAA Championships in California over the Thanksgiving weekend.

PIZZERIA
Paradiso
TRADITIONAL WOOD-FIRED BRICK OVEN PIZZA
12 CRAFTS AVENUE NORTHAMPTON, MASSACHUSETTS
586-1468

Campus Design & Copy
1992
Students Working for Students
403 Student Union (413) 545 - 2271
RÉSUMÉS RÉSUMÉS RÉSUMÉS
$15
All Inclusive
Layout, typesetting, 10 copies, 10 matching envelopes and one year storage

HALLOWEEN SUPPLIES
We carry everything for your needs including:
Wigs • Make-up • Masks • Costumes
CHILDS TOYS & HOBBIES
at Hadley Village Barn Shops
49 Ruseel St., Rt.9
Hadley MA • 584-2604
We're different from all the rest, with great competitive prices.

Buddhist Enlightenment
American Buddhists Discuss Their Experiences With An Enlightened Teacher.
Enjoy An Evening Where Powerful Meditation Techniques Will Be Taught.
Learn About Our Exciting Self-Paced & Bodacious Program Geared For The 90's:
• Gain Personal Power, Happiness, and Wisdom
• Study With An Enlightened Teacher
• Learn Meditation Using Awesome Electronic Music
• Attend Field Trips to Hawaii & The Desert
Saturday Night - Oct. 31, 7:00 pm, Room 903
Monday Night - Nov. 2, 7:30pm, Room 811
Campus Center Building
FREE FREE FREE
Free Music Tape For All Who Attend
Sponsored By The Boston Meditation Society
(617) 499-7985

ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READER'S POLL 1992 1st Place
PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Mon. - Thurs. ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET $5.99
SUNDAY BRUNCH - ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.99 11:30 - 3 p.m.
20% OFF DINNERS FOR COMEDY PATRONS Fri. & Sat.
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
586-1202 Free Parking 北京園 on Route 9, Hadley

Monday - 10¢ Mozzarella Sticks
Tuesday - 10¢ Mild or Hot Buffalo Wings
Wednesday - 25¢ Cheese Pizza Slices
Thursday - 10¢ Chicken "Hot Lips" Nuggets
Our 15th Year 1978 - 1993
Charlie's tavern
AMHERST, MASS.
1978 - 1993
FRIDAY NIGHT
Prizes & Giveaways with the
Jägermeister Models
Friday, Oct. 30th, 8-12 midnight
Open 11 am - 1 am 7 days a week • Kitchen open 'til midnight
1 Pray Street (Behind Fleet Bank), Amherst
Game room with 2 pool tables • 3 TV's • MC / VISA / AMEX Accepted • 549-5403

CALVIN AND HOBBES

By BILL WATTERSON

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

"Well, this isn't very promising."

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

TANGENT By KURT MATTILA

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

WILMINGTON By MARK K. ANDERSON

Quote of the Day

"I am the king and I will have dumplings!"
– Ferdinand of Austria

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Distant business or financial affairs require careful handling. Invite someone special to lunch. Sharing secrets with this person could have a profound effect on your future.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The prospect of financial gain keeps you on your toes today. Be persistent. Coping with stress is easier than in the recent past. Try to exercise or take a long walk every evening.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21): Once you have established a regular rhythm, you will be able to work a lot faster. Although you hold strong political views, trying to force them on others could prove counter-productive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Electrifying but pleasant news may put a bounce in your step this morning. A secret plan has every chance of succeeding. Take family members and VIPs into your confidence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your vitality returns. A daily workout could be good exercise. Someone needs your help or wants to bridge a gap. Be wary of getting involved with an overly aggressive person.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A friendship or romance is fragile now; hold it together with tenderness. Play second fiddle to your mate for a change. You need to think carefully before creating a long-term debt.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Look forward to a day of discovery. Place no limits on where you will go or what you will do. A legal matter or creative endeavor turns out just great. Celebrate tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Curb a tendency to act moody or aloof this morning. You will need all the cooperation you can get to reach a business goal. An unexpected gift or invitation carries a special message.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Others may be temperamental today. Be careful to go through channels if you want a favor. You will need to make a special effort to create harmony at work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Something important is going on this morning. Hold meetings behind closed doors; any financial maneuvers must be kept confidential. Lessons learned in the past can be put to use.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your diplomatic skills are tested by someone's demands. Complete a major work project, then take the time to reassure a loved one. Relax at home tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Why sign your name or put money on the line when there are no guarantees? What you see or hear is not necessarily what you will get. Keep in touch with your parents.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

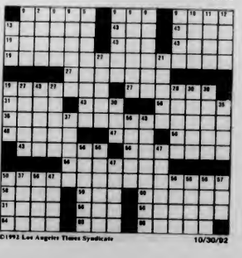
ACROSS
1 Style of jazz
6 Musical syllable
9 Mutt's pal
13 Rocket fuel
14 Accelerate
15 Chemical ending
16 British car hood
17 Botanist Gray
18 Film
19 "Le —" Fokine ballet
22 Cities in Spain and Ohio
23 Without hesitation
27 Having a handle
31 Toulouse-Lautrec's birthplace
32 Promise to pay, for short
34 Group of Muslim scholars
36 "The —": 1965 Pulitzer prize play
40 T.S. or George
41 Of everything
42 Fr. holy women
43 Mister, in Lisbon
46 Oriental
48 Use up
50 " 'Rainbow comes and goes, and —': Wordsworth
58 Muscat is the capital
59 Econ. concern
60 Of an eye part
61 Star in Cetus
62 Bus. letter abbr.
63 Thread: Comb. form
64 Pt. of linguistics
65 Fed. agcy.
66 Aims

DOWN
1 Cartoon character Betty
2 Sea eagle
3 Judge's seat
4 Uruguayan writer Juan Carlos
5 Of motor cars
6 Barter
7 Mignonette
8 King Arthur's paradise
9 Taunt
10 Within: Comb. form
11 Mists
12 Escape
13 Jr.'s ammo
20 Sir Thomas —: 16th cen. English writer
21 Assyria, of old
23 Wreck a Soho flat
24 Hebrew months
25 Slats' partner
26 Type of mustard
28 "— Lady" Gather
29 Sample
30 Muslim ruler
33 Charity org.
35 Org.
37 Kennedy or Waters
38 Attu native
39 Violent
44 Part of water
45 The — of Galloway
47 Kind of record player
49 Org. for dogs, etc.
50 Capital of Togo
51 Leave out
52 Modify
53 City in Judah
54 "Green Mansions" girl
55 Old-law land ownership
56 Poses
57 Writer Umberto

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

S	P	A	R	S		A	B	A		B	O	L
I	O	N	I	A		L	E	T	S		O	M
B	E	G	A	N		G	L	E	E		I	T
S	T	E		F	R	A	A	N	G	E	L	I	C	O
		L	E	O	N	E		M	A	E
A	F	F	O	R	D		A	B	E	R	R	A	N	T
V	I	A	N		S	C	A	N	S		N	O	R
A	L	L	S		C	A	R	E	T		D	G	R	E
I	L	L		R	A	V	E	R		O	B	E	S	E
L	E	S	S	E	N	E	D		S	M	I	L	E	S
		L	E	A			S	U	I	T	S
A	N	G	E	L		S	T	R	E	E	T		H	I	P
M	O	O	R		T	I	E	R		T	A	S	T	E
M	E	R	E		A	L	E	G		E	D	I	L	E
O	L	E	D			E	K	E		D	E	R	E	K

10/30/92



©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 10/30/92

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Chris Cuddy
Copy Editor ..... Lisa Curtis
PhotoTechnician ..... Jacob Adelman
Production Supervisor ..... Nicole Dumas
Production ..... Brad Hutchison
Lisa Jezowski

Menu

LUNCH
Hamburger
Chicken a la King
BASICS LUNCH
Tri Bean Casserole
Chicken a la King

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Broccoli Royale
BASICS DINNER
Sweet and Sour Tofu
Roast Turkey

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

UMass basketball

Dear UMass Basketball Fans

Two days to MIDNIGHT MADNESS - your first chance to see the 1992-93 Minutemen! We have an action-packed night of activities planned for you. Come dressed as Coach Calipari and win dinner with me and my wife, or put on your best costume and win a trip of your choice with the basketball team. You can win cash prizes in the special Midnight Madness raffle. Remember: no masks will be allowed.

We anticipate a capacity crowd at the Cage. Be one of the first 1000 through the door and receive a special 1992-93 team poster. Entrance will be on a first-come-first-serve basis.

The doors will open at 9:30 pm and the event will end around 12:20 am. For everyone's safety, no alcohol or containers are permitted in the Cage.

We look forward to seeing you on Saturday night.

Best Regards

John Calipari

Coach John Calipari

OPEN LETTER TO THE UNIVERSITY COMMUNITY

We write this letter as faculty who are deeply concerned about the state of the University. The events of the last few weeks have underscored how far the University is from realiizing the ideal of a multicultural campus where tolerance and respect for difference form the foundation of community. If racial harassment, violence and fear are a fact of life for students in our community, it is because the University is not doing its job. Once again it has been the very students who suffer the racism of the campus who have had to bear the responsibility for bringing the attention of the University to these issues.

We believe all members of the University community have the responsibility for creating a tolerant and respectful community, but our responsibilities are not all of the same kind. It is the job of the administration to ensure that this campus has an acceptable living environment, and to ensure that violators of its policies against harassment and violence are quickly and effectively disciplined. It is the job of the administration to establish goals for correcting minority underrepresentation on this campus at all levels – students, faculty and administrative staff – and to provide the means for reaching these goals through active recruitment and retention programs. More generally, it is the job of the administration to promote a vision of multicultural community that pervades every area of University life and to support in every way possible the realization of that ideal. The administration has not done its job.

As members of the University community we voice our support of the demands for a safe, tolerant, multicultural campus put forward by the students involved in the recent protests:

- increasing the representation of minority students and minority faculty
- restoration of litigation power to Legal Services
- scholarship for low-income students
- decisive, equitable enforcement of University regulations
- increased security by a police force free of racial prejudice

We also call for:

- a serious revamping of the administration of the residential halls, one which restores a faculty and staff presence in the halls and removes the burden of police functions from student residential assistants
- the hiring of minority administrators at the highest levels

As faculty members we commit ourselves:

(i) to stand watch over the administration and at the same time to participate with it in the attainment of the goals represented by these demands,

(ii) to vigorously recruit minority faculty members and students in our own departments, and

(iii) to use our resources as teachers and scholars to contribute to the understanding of difference and to the combatting of racism, sexism and homophobia, in our own University and in the world at large.

Nina M. Scott	Spanish & Portuguese	Harry Schumer	Psychology	Jennie Traschen	Physics
James M. Royer	Psychology	Cerlin Berton	History	Nicholas Bromell	English
Douglas L. Anderton	Sociology	Cristina Gonzelez	Spanish & Portuguese	Jerome Myers	Psychology
José Ormeloa	Spanish & Portuguese	Lisa Saunders	Economics	Mohammed Jiyad	Judaic & NEastern Studies
Sara Lennox	Germanic Lang & Lit	John R. Nelson	English	Katharine Leigh	Art
Arlene Avakian	Women's Studies	Vincent Cleary	Classics	Jan Whitaker	Physics & Astronomy (staff)
Mary C. Wilson	History	David Gross	Biochemistry	Roberta W. French	English
Margeret Gullick	Art	Stephen Arons	Legal Studies	Dario Politella	Journalism
Bruce Laurie	History	Eduardo Cetteni	Mathematics & Statistics	R. Brooke Thomas	Anthropology
Roland Sarti	History	John Brigham	Political Science	Arlyn Diamond	English
Klaus Peter	Germanic Lang & Lit	Julie Graham	Geology & Geography	Carlene J. Edie	Political Science
Susan Cocalis	Germanic Lang & Lit	Eric Martz	Microbiology	Gery L. Aho	English
Jeremiah Allen	English	Judy Soloken	School of Education	Linda Marchesani	School of Education
Dennis Porter	French & Italian	Richard S. Bogartz	Psychology	Berbere Love	School of Education
Scott Berton	Polymer Sci & Eng	Janice B. Sheler	Physics	Felice Yeskel	School of Education
Julie Nelson	Theater	Patrick Sullivan	School of Education	Andy Anderson	Sociology
Jeffrey Blaustein	Psychology	Ernest D. Washington	School of Education	Richard Trousdell	Theater
Randall Stokes	Psychology	James F. Walker, Jr.	Physics & Astronomy	Anne Mochon	Art History
Gareth Mathews	Philosophy	James Humphreys	Mathematics & Statistics	Ruth Hooke	UWW
Joseph Lake	Slavic Lang & Lit	Byrd Jones	School of Education	John Kingston	Linguistics
Nancy Folbre	Economics	R.W. Maloy	School of Education	Angelika Kratzer	Linguistics
Robert Creed	English	R. Radhakrishnen	English	Emmon Bach	Linguistics
Ernest Gallo	English	Roselie Scott-Soons	Spanish & Portuguese	Lyn Frazier	Linguistics
Jules Chametzky	English	Alvin Cohen	Asian Languages	Margaret Speas	Linguistics
Gloria Bernebe Remos	Spanish & Port., CASIAC	Daniel Clawson	Sociology	Barbara Partee	Linguistics
Surinder Mehta	Sociology	Sigrid Brauner	Germanic Lang & Lit	Hegit Borer	Linguistics
Daniel Martin	French & Italien	Craig Herbison	Art History	Thomas Roeper	Linguistics
Richard S. Ellis	Mathematics & Statistics	Alan Swedlund	Anthropology	Elisabeth Selkirk	Linguistics
Sarah Lewall	Comparetiva Literature	Esther Terry	Afro-American Studies	Joyce Berkman	History
Adnan Hayder	Judaic & NEastern Studies	Robert Stern	Music & Dance	Anne Hemington	Writing Program
Shmuel Bolozky	Judaic & NEastern Studies	Jane Rausch	History	Marcia Curtis	Writing Program
William Moebius	Comparetive Literature	Juen C. Zamore	Spanish & Portuguese	Sara Stelzner	Writing Program
Harry Seymour	Communication Disorders	Robert Peynter	Anthropology	John Bonsignore	Legal Studies
Cherlena Seymour	Communication Disorders	Leonel Gongore	Art	Barton Byg	Germanic Lang & Lit
Robert Rothstein	Slavic Lang & Lit	John Bracey	Afro American Studies
David Paroissien	English	Ingrid Bracey	UWW
Jerri Willett	School of Education	Pat Griffin	School of Education
Sonia Nieto	School of Education	Maurianne Adema	School of Education
Luis Fuentes	School of Education	Rita Hardiman	School of Education
Robert Sinclair	School of Education	Bailey Jackson	School of Education

For information or to add your name to this list of signers, contact Lisa Selkirk, Linquistics Dept., phone (545-0889 (o), 256-8024 (h)) or e-mail (selkirk@cs.umass.edu).

■ field hockey

continued from page 16

as we now do, it makes your corner more powerful."

Hixon said that the team has used the past week to get back to fundamentals, and to refresh the basic skills such as passing, shooting, and playing defense. Hixon said she would try to get the team to practice scoring opportunities, one of the team's weak spots.

Tomorrow's game is a chance for the Minutewomen to refresh their talents, and barring any major letdown, pad their record.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 16

A sweep this weekend will not be easy though. On Saturday, the Minutewomen face SMU (14-4), which boasts of a lethal scoring attack in the form of Kara Lee, Courtney Linex and Lisa Perry.

Lee is a speedster, with great finishing moves who has pumped in 16 goals on the year. Linex (11 goals) and Perry compliment the attack and can burn a defender at any time.

Central Florida (10-3-1) will host Massachusetts on Sunday and has lived on defense all season. The Mustangs have allowed a mere 12 goals and have skilled Heather Brann in net. Senior defenseman Michele Koshan is particularly tough. Sophomore frontrunner Amy Geltz (6 goals) is the team's leading scorer.

■ pigskin picks

continued from page 16

nation in a game they had to win, then proceeded to go into a funk for the last three weeks. GangGreen has the ability to win the Super Bowl, but the offense is weak if Randall does not perform. GPA: 3.65.

San Francisco 49ers (6-1): With the win over New Orleans earlier in the year, San Fran has the inside track on the divisional title. A strong running game thus far by Ricky Watters has added to the depth of the offense despite losing John Taylor, and has overshadowed a suspect D. The only loss came to Buffalo, who possess a real offensive threat. GPA: 3.6.

Washington Redskins (5-2): Joe Gibbs is the best coach in the NFL, and his troops are making a great run at a repeat of the championship. Mark Rypien has been mediocre at best, and the Redskins will be dangerous. The remaining question is "can the veterans on this team survive the stretch run?" GPA: 3.3.

On Monday night, the Vikings travel to Soldier Field to take on the Bears, who seem to get it done in mysterious ways year after year in front of millions. Harbaugh will make sure he doesn't let Minnesota back in this time. Chicago 24, Minnesota 17.

Game of the Week revisited: Philadelphia travels to Dallas in the biggest game of the season for both teams. The Eagles need to bounce back from their sluggish performance lately, and Dallas can pull away from the division if they win. Aikman, Emmitt, and Irvin have never combined against Kotite's crew for a typical offensive performance, until Sunday. Dallas 17, Philadelphia 13.

Arthur Stapleton is a Collegian columnist.

Engin, UMass look to make splash at N.E.'s

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

The 14th-ranked University of Massachusetts water polo team has entered what coach Russ Yarworth affectionately calls, "the second season."

It is also known as the playoffs, where a blemish to the Minutemen's 19-1 record against varsity teams can mean grave consequences to their NCAA Tournament hopes.

This weekend UMass will travel to Brown University for a shot at its first ever New England Championship. As the tournament's number one seed, the Minutemen have a first round bye. At 2:30 p.m. Saturday UMass will play the winner of tonight's Boston College/Massachusetts Institute of Technology match-up. Neither team provided a contest during the regular season, so the playoffs should prove to be no different.

It is the first time in the team's short history that it has been seeded number one for the N.E. tourney, but Yarworth doesn't feel that the team is haircuts always $10!

Turn to WATER POLO, page 12

Bucci
a hair space
25 N PLEASANT ST. AMHERST 256 0733

DISTINCTIVE HAIR DESIGNS
Our stylists work with you to create just the perfect look for your HAIR
$4.00 OFF! with Cheryl only. Exp 11/30/92
Styles by Deborah
65 University Drive, Amherst • 549-5610

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students – Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Tour of Wall Street & United Nations
November 6, 1992
Day trip to New York City $32
Call 546-3727 NOW!
Organized by the European Club

UMASS Recqusthall team interested in new members> all university men and women welcome. All ability levels welcome - beginner to advanced, If interested call 549-4349

ANNOUNCEMENTS

You're Doomed
If you don't ATTEND
The 2nd Annual Lumberjack Extravaganza
TONIGHT

FOR RENT

Amherst remodalad 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

Amherst 3 bedroom condo avail. Feb. 1st A room and 1 bedroom apartment avail. Jan. 1st.
Lincoln Reel Estate
25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7879

4 Bedroom house near Smith in Northampton. $775 plus. Nov. 1st. Call SKIBISKI realtors 584-3428

Fridge rental free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

1989 Kawasaki EX500
Wht, Full fairing only 8600 miles
Have no storage for winter – Must sell
First $1200 takes it
Call Josh at 549-7939

Computer System for sale, desperately need the money, great for beginners color monitor and printer, IBMXT/AT
Asking $550 call 6-8970

Electronic Typewriter
Some WP features like new!
$60 call
665-2617

Like new Brother word processor WPD 760D plenty of features
A steal at $210 or best offer
546-1197

19 inch color TV
Excellent condition $50
Call Sam 253-7896

Stereo Components: Usedreconditioned, srea's biggest selection. Buy-Sell/Trade at StereoVideo Exchange, Sundays 10-4, inside Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Other days call 256-0941

Tandy 200 Portable computer
2 Power Pacs + case and manuals
Call Mitch 549-9761/ 549-0 O.B.O.

2 Tickets for Hair
FRIDAY NIGHT
$6 Call 665-7153

FOUND

Found - a Watch! Properly describe it and its yours once AGAIN! 546-0021

HAIR

The Umass Theater Guild presents
HAIR
The American Tribal, Love Rock Musical
October 29,30, & 31, 1992
8pm Student Union Ballroom
Tickets on sale at Tix unlimited
$4 Students $6 non-students
General Admission
May not be suitable for some viewers

HELP WANTED

Alaska Summer Employment - fisheries earn $600+ a week in canneries $4000/month on fishing boats. Free transportation! Room and Board! Male or Female. Get a head start on this summer. For employment program call 1-206-545-4155ext. A5091

BE A SPRING BREAK REP!
EARN FREE TRIPS and the HIGHEST COMMISSIONS! Cancun, Daytone, & Jamaica from $159. Call TAKE A BREAK STUDENT TRAVEL today!
1800)32-TRAVEL

Couples – Property Manager Free Amherst apartment plus salary Debbie 298-0741

Easy Work! Excellent pay!
Assemble products at home
Call toll free
1-800-467-6226 Ext. 598

Evening Jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action $7/hr. On buslines. 584-9830

Earn $1,500 WEEKLY mailing our circulars! ... Begin NOW!...FREE packet! SEYS Dept. 121 Box 4000 Cordova, IN 380184000

$252.50 Sell 50 funny college T-Shirts and make $252.50. No financial obligation. A risk free program. Avg. sales time =4-8 hours. Choose from 18 designs. Smaller/larger quantities avail. Call 1-800-733-3265

$200 - $500 WEEKLY
Assemble products at home. Easy! No selling. You're paid direct. Fully guaranteed. FREE INFORMATION - 24 HOUR HOTLINE, 801-379-2900 Copyright # MA15KDH

STUDENTS OR ORGANIZATIONS
Promote our Florida Spring Break packages. Earn MONEY and FREE trips. Call Campus Marketing 800-423-5264

WANTED: TRAVEL REPS for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun.
Call 1-800-3SIESTA, ask for Bonnie

HEY YOU

TV Times has UMass cable and town of Amherst cable listings customized for you. Pick it up on campus today. Valuable coupons inside!

INSTRUCTION

Italian Tutor
Native Speaker
Call 546-1347

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact The Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

LOST

Brown clutch purse Purse desperately need contents
Reward $49-1198

Lost Book 10-23: A History of Russia on NOHO bus, borrowed important highlights. Call Eric 586-6918

MUSICIANS

Guitar Lesson Burkles graduate
534-0183

PERSONALS

Andrea,
May my twin have a
Happy Halloween
Good luck riding 10/31
JV

Cher Chris
Est-ce que vous aller a la ma chambre pour une interressante temp le dimenche prochain? Je voundrais pour tu a cros
Ange

Chris Kephart where are you? Respond e-mail amoritz @phoenix. princeton. edu

Denise! It's great to see you beat the rap. Make sure your sisters hold your hair back when you boot!
Happy 21st
Love, Me

Doherty, Happy Hellowean
Get ready for a great weekend!!
Love BIZ

Ellen Bloch – Have an awesome week end at conclave & keep up the good work! In LFS. Your Big Brother!

Erick K. – How about I show you how to enjoy trick or treat? SD

For the six...
Happy Halloween!!
Let's try to control ourselves
Huh? No urinating in unauthorized areas!! Jen!! Love Ray

From one ball of wax fan to another,
Happy 21st Birthday!

Go to the Lumberjack Halloween Party
Or perish

Happy Birthday Krael This day finally came! I am sura that this avening will be a night to remember!
Dougeroo

Happy 20th Birthday
Janet (Metro)
Only one more year
to go!!
Have a great day!!
Love,
Your Siamese twin!
Who else?

Happy Halloween to my favorite big sis
Stef from her favorite little sis –
Shannon

Happy Hellowean
To all my friends and all of my Sigma Sisters!
U Guya R the GREATEST.
Karolyn

Happy Swillin
Swirs Village
Go get 'em:
Timi, Demo, D.C. and Joe

Happy Belated
Birthday Abby Stowe Sorry it's late
Justine

Happy 21st Kim Addesal!
Where's that shot glass
Love Heido

Harmful: I by far have the freshest lid. I will also have the best costume tomorrow. Harmless

Hey 5th Floor Dickinson
We're going to have a
Spooktacular Halloween
Catch the green ball

Hey Muffin
I love you!
From your little mushroom

Hey Sanchez ??? How was consenting Adults? Why don't you try the popcorn tonight?
The Concessionist
D.C. Man

Janet M.
Happy 20th Birthday
and many Happy days to come
Love Eric

Jason
Have a Happy Halloween!
I love you
Stacy

Kyri to Tuesdays, shotglasses: Germany and the Oktoberfest. Prepare yourself for the final day! Prost!! Jenbabwe

Lucy Jones
Let's Luce it up this Helloween!
I love you all
Love Juice Johnson

My Only favorite boyfriend:
Happy Halloween! I can't believe I've been kissing you for a year.
I'll love you forever. RAY

My Prince of the Nile
Thanks for the past three years
I look forward to many more.
No more Pearl Jam!

Pooh
You are a freak anyway. NO need to dress up! But if you want someone to be crazy with you throughout life than I'm the one!! By the way I don't need an anniversary to know how much I LOVE YOU!

Weasel

Ozzy works at Mcdonalds
Ozzy works at Mcdonalds
Ozzy works at Mcdonalds
Ozzy is corky! HH!

Rey, Kyri, Fluzy, Lori, Laura, Jane, Ali, and Julia. Only one day left of Oktoberfest. Get Ready!! J

Rob Gart
Happy Birthday, Mush
Love Annie

Roomate
Happy Helloween
R

Russ, Nikki, and Todd:
One week ago,
Little did I know that v could fit in a bed
It was cramped it was crowded
There was more than was allowed
My bed got wet,
No sleep did we get
My thanks goes to your
From the girl in 307

RYL
Halloween
Nice!
-RY

Sherry
Welcome to TRI SIGMA
I'm glad you're my little sister
Love your big sister
Estee

SIGMA KAPPA SISTERS and pledges: Get ready for the best date party ever! Thanks to Dana, Mitch and Jen Spandex Weasel Man! Hope you have a Happy Halloween – maybe you'll get your neck bit! twink, wink, nudge, nudge!

Sunset Cafe
I'll be thinking of you while in sunny
Colorado! Happy
Halloween! Love Me

Tania Gentile
It's finally here
and you're gonna sally out!
Oh well happy 21st
love
Your roomates

To Lori, whose imagination is anything but faint:
Excursite is a week word to describe the way your interest has made me feel. Ecstatic comes closer. The time before the dawn is a life in itself. May we share much more of it
Ben

To the cool girls on the 4th floor of UMA
Happy Halloween!
Guess who!

To the cast of HAIR
I hust want to thank you for the experience along with the nightly dose of tears.
Have a fantastic opening and run
I love you - we are all one!!
Your Producer & love Bunny
Jan

Tracy, Happy 21st Birthday!! You can finally go out again!! Have lune this weekend. Love, Beth

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to Long Island or NY City this weekend. Call Paul at 256-1239

SERVICES

Free Peer Counseling lesbian, gay, bisexual issues. Phone or walk in. LBG counseling collective, 405G Student Union 545-2645

Grents, Ioens, scholarships
We find financial aid for every student regardless of grade point average or family income. Guaranteed.
1-800-475-2288 ext. 1519

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Resumes
Need help? I have experience with resumes. Quick service, free advice, excellent quality, and LOW prices. IBM laser printing service available.
Call Andy 549-8463

Tarot readings
Call Chris 256-0821

ROOMATES WANTED

North Amharst famala to share two bedroom nice clean. On bus route 200/ month ASAP Call Holly 549-4259 eves.

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed - Frea cover page, spell check, laser printout. $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795

Typing-Word procassing
Resumes, reports, theses,
dissertations. Laser Printing
Call Rosamary 323 5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5288

WANTED

Are you moving out of Puffton?
Could we take over your lease?
2 bedroom wanted call 8-1993

We need books! Quality paperbacks and textbooks bought year round. Buying hours: Mon-Sat., 10-4. Amicus Aitbon Booksnop, 8 Main St, Amherst (next to Sidway) 256-1547

We want your 2BDRM Pulfton lease!! Starting January 1. Call us first! Reward if we sign it!! Call 549-7319

1 DAY until MIDNIGHT MADNESS

Sports

Football faces revamped Northeastern

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

After gaining some respect last week against Villanova, the University of Massachusetts football squad (5-1) will travel across campus to McGuirk stadium for a Halloween matchup against the Northeastern Huskies tomorrow at 1:30 p.m.

The Huskies (4-2-1) have certainly been a surprise this season, as they joined the Yankee Conference this year and were picked to finish among the cellar dwellers. With a win over the Minutemen, however, they could break into the division 1-AA top 20; UMass, on the other hand, will be fighting to retain its No. 20 ranking (and hopefully move up).

"This is a big game for both teams," said head coach Mike Hodges. "Gallup (NU head coach Barry Gallup) has done a nice job rebuilding their football program; tomorrow's game is a chance for them to gain national respect.

"We've already gained that respect," he continued, "now we just have to keep winning and moving up in the polls."

NU's run-and-shoot offense (averages 27 pts/game) is led by senior quarterback Ralph Barone, who passed for an impressive 1,899 yds last year and so far this season, his numbers are equally impressive: 120 completions in 236 attempts for 1,551 yards with 13 TD's. He is also the second leading rusher on the NU squad with 223 yds behind running back Kevin Williams, who averages 4.3 yards/game and has five TD's thus far. Two of Barone's favorite targets are wide receiver Branden Tsetsilas (12.5/catch, four TDs) and wide receiver Tim Boudreau (12.3, three TDs). Tsetsilas also has 401 yds receiving.

Defensively, NU defensive back Silas Calhoun was named to the YanCon honor roll for his 11-tackle performance last week against UNH. On the season he has 22 tackles, two sacks and one interception. Calhoun will be joined on D by outside linebacker David Atwood (41 tackles), and tackle Joe Griesbaum, who has 38 tackles on the year as well as five QB sacks. Strong safety Mark Salisbury has come back from a pre-season shoulder injury to rack-up 30 tackles and two interceptions.

"They (NU) have an aggressive, stunning, blitzing defense," said Hodges. "That presents a lot of problems to us.

"Offensively, the run-and-shoot is very hard to defend because they spread out the field very well," he said. "The quarterback throws very well and they also mix in the run very well - it's going to be very hard to stop the run and defend the pass."

For UMass, Mike George will be back this week as the starting fullback after sustaining a twisted ankle against UConn. He'll be joined in the backfield by tailbacks Rene Ingoglia and John Johnson, as well as redshirt freshman quarterback Andrew McNeilly, who passed for 86 yards last week.

On defense, "Super" Mario Perry has been simply awesome with 42 tackles and 10, yes 10, QB sacks. There is a good chance Perry's name will be heard once or twice over the loudspeaker. Inside linebacker's Bobby Burke and Phil Lartique will gang up with outside linebacker Scott Assencoa to try to stop the Husky's offense as will cornerbacks Tony Williams (nine tackles, three pass-break-ups, and an interception last week) and Don Caparotti.

The question is, if UMass wins this game, what are their chances for making the playoffs?

"We're in control of our own destiny," Hodges said. "If we win all the rest of our games we won't have to worry about whether we're going to the playoffs."

Big weekend for women

Soccer faces UCF, SMU in sunny Florida

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
The UMass women's soccer team travels to Florida to face Central Florida and Southern Methodist this weekend.

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy has to be happy with his team's post season chances. Entering the last weekend of the season, the Minutewomen's fate rest in their own hands.

UMass (13-3) travels to Orlando, Fla. this weekend to take on two tough teams, tenth-ranked Southern Methodist and No. 13 Central Florida. If UMass, tied with SMU for No. 10, wins both games, they are a shoe-in for an NCAA bid.

"It is nice to know the ball is in our court," Rudy said. "We can decide our future."

Each region of the country (North, South, Central and West) receives two automatic bids to the tournament. There are also four more at-large bids. Connecticut and Hartford have all but wrapped up the two automatic bids in the North, leaving Massachusetts in a fight with almost a dozen teams for the at-large bids.

Central Florida and SMU are in similar positions so with every win, UMass not only stregthens its own case but knocks off a chief competitor.

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 15

A-10 title up for grabs

Win over GW gives men number one seed

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

Starting today, the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team will finish off their regular season with 1.5 games this weekend.

How can the Minutemen be playing 1.5 games, you ask? Well, it is simple, today in Washington D.C. UMass will finish off their battle against George Washington which was delayed (with UMass up 2-1) due to rain earlier in the season.

Then on Sunday, the Minutemen (9-5-2) will invade Orono, Maine where they will meet the Black Bears. While Sunday's contest might be the season capper, it is today's battle with the Colonials that will be for all the marbles, the Atlantic 10 marbles that is.

Earlier in the season, on October 11th, the Minutemen were at GW and beating the Colonials 2-1. Right after the second UMass goal, which was scored by Josh Pittman, the sky opened up and both teams took cover.

GW claimed the weather made the field unplayable, thus making the game void, and that it was to be played over at a later date from the beginning.

Controversy followed, and it was ruled that the game would be finished on Oct. 30 from the point that mother nature let go. Now the game has significant importance because if UMass wins, they win the A-10 and will enter the conference's post season tournament as the No. 1 seed.

You don't have to ask junior Justin Edelman twice about the importance of the GW finish.

"We have got thirty minutes left," he said. "We know what have got to do, we just have to go down there and play hard."

On Sunday the Black Bears will be no pushover for the Minutemen. The Bears are 8-4-3, and are coming off a big 3-0 victory over Central Connecticut.

Jake Ouimet is the leader of the UMaine offense, amassing 13 goals on the year.

In net for UMaine will probably be Seb D'Appolonia. D'Appolonia has been stingy to stay the least, with seven shutouts and a sterling 1.15 goals-against average.

Pigskin picks: Week nine

For those of you who have been in solitary confinement since September and have missed the first eight weeks of the NFL, Stapleton's Pigskin Picks is here to highlight the best and worst in football as well as preview upcoming games. So as Chris Myers of ESPN puts it, "Stay with us, I. . . know you will."

Arthur
STAPLETON

As previewed in last week's column, the Midseason GPA for each team in football will follow in several supplements (I just thought I would simplify it for those readers who don't really comprehend what they read). Warning: Any grades below a 1.5 will not be listed, for the teams should be ashamed and belong on AP.

Athletic Excellence, 3.5 and over:

Dallas Cowboys (6-1): The loss against Philadelphia on Monday night did more for Jimmy Johnson's team than any victory so far this season. Emmitt Smith is the anchor of the team, and if he carries the ball 20 or more times, the Cowboys are 21-0. The presence of Charles Haley has created a pass rush down in Big D. After Week 8, Dallas is the best team in the NFL, for now. GPA: 3.8.

Philadelphia Eagles (5-2): Letdown is not a word Randall Cunningham wants to hear right now. The Eagles crushed Dallas in front of the

Turn to PIGSKIN PICKS, page 15

Women tune up with Springfield

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

To use a boxing analogy, Saturday's field hockey contest against Springfield is a light sparring match the University of Massachusetts. The Minutewomen will use the game at Totman Field (12 noon) as a tune up before the more rigorous Atlantic 10 Championships take place next weekend.

The Minutewomen have moved to third in the nation in the new NCAA field hockey poll, up from fourth. The team is 16-1 and could finish out the regular season with two more wins, against Springfield and Yale. The team has, for all intents and purposes, locked up a spot in the NCAA Tournament. Even if the team were to lose its last two regular season games and the first game of the A-10 Championships, they would still stagger into the NCAAs.

The focus now for the Minutewomen is to play the same type of fundamentally sound game which has gotten them this far. Against a team like Springfield, this should result in some goals, and a win.

With offense coming from midfielder Ainslee Press (21 goals), UMass will have no problem getting on the board. Press, along with Holly Hockenbrock and Jenn Salisbury, have made the penalty corner run smoother than ever for head coach Pam Hixon's squad.

"The difference between last year and this year is the experience at the skill positions," Hixon said. "They've all worked hard. When you have more than one dimension,

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 12

Madness is back for Halloween

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

The first day of University of Massachusetts basketball practice takes place on the maddest day of the year: Halloween. Hence, this year's version of Midnight Madness is bound to take on a whole new meaning.

There are a couple of new twists to the event, including a possible appearence by ESPN. The cameras may be rolling, and a wild and raucous crowd is expected, as head coach John Calipari anticipates the Cage to be filled. Two other new events are the Coach Calipari look-alike contest, with the winner receiving free dinner with Mr. and Mrs. John Calipari at a local restaurant.

New NCAA rules have pushed back the first basketball practice date from October 15 to November 1, and UMass has responded with moving the Madness to Halloween night. The doors will open at 9:30 p.m. and the first 1,000 fans will receive free UMass posters. A three-on-three tournament will then transpire, as will a raffle for free round trip USAir tickets to Florida. There will also be a foul shot contest for money.

Another new contest involves the "Best UMass fan costume," with the winner getting his or her choice of one free road trip with the team. The lucky fan will fly, stay at the team's hotel, and sit on the bench during the game.

At midnight, the lights will turn off and the team will be introduced a la spotlight, player by player. A slam dunk contest by the players and a scrimmage will follow, and the Madness will wrap up at about 12:30 a.m. Sunday morning.

Following the Minutemen's 30-5 record and appearence in the Sweet Sixteen last year, this fourth edition of Midnight Madness could be the most eagerly awaited ever.

Monday November 2, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 38

Highs in the 50s, slight chance of rain.

Arts & Living:
Halloween at Spooky World– What's the attraction? See how famed Sports writer Jeff Crofts' ride on the Haunted Hayride went. Page 9.

Sports:
Women's soccer add two more victories to their record over the weekend while vacationing in Florida. Page 16.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Cage rocks in madness

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN
Scott Zalinsky, winner of the best basketball-related costume watches Saturday's Midnight Madness.

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

Get ready for the encore!

The University of Massachusetts basketball team began practicing for the upcoming 1992-93 season early Sunday morning, performing in front of a near-capacity crowd at the Curry Hicks Cage in the fourth edition of Midnight Madness.

The raucous crowd began filing into the Cage a few minutes after 9 p.m., with most celebrating Halloween by dressing up in strange and unusual fashion. Costumes ranged from a man sporting a backboard and net on his back, to three John Calipari look-alikes.

With their costumes, fans brought high expectations for the upcoming season. The Minutemen finished with a 30-5 record and a spot in the NCAA Tournament Sweet Sixteen last year, and although losing three starters, fans have not lost their high expectations.

NCAA regulations pushed the Division I basketball opening practice date Oct. 15 to Nov. 1. Although head coaches everywhere were upset because the new date leaves teams with less preseason preparation time, the fans at the Cage yesterday did not seem to mind.

Head coach Calipari addressed the crowd at 12:01 a.m. Sunday, cajoling them into saying, "Repeat after me: 'We do not expect 30 wins.'" The crowd followed along faint-heartedly until

Turn to MADNESS, page 16

Teenager charged in assault on RA

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

NORTHAMPTON — A judge ruled Thursday that a Framingham man will face civil rights charges as well as assault and battery charges in an attack on a University of Massachusetts resident assistant which spurred massive protests and racial tension on campus earlier this semester.

After hearing testimony from witnesses in Thursday's show-cause hearing, District Court Judge Alvertus Morse issued a complaint against Francis Marchant, 18, in the alleged Sept. 25 attack on former Washington Tower resident assistant Arlens Barosy.

UMass police sought the complaint against Marchant, charging he struck and attempted to choke Barosy after Barosy attempted to enforce an alcohol policy banning open containers of alcohol from dormitory hallways.

Marchant was reportedly one of a dozen people carrying open containers of beer in the hallway of the 17th floor that night. All complied with Barosy's request to pour out their beer except Marchant, who used foul language and assaulted Barosy, according to police.

Morse opened the hearing to the public at the request of Barosy's attorney, William A. Norris. Show-cause hearings are usually held before a clerk/magistrate behind closed doors, but court procedures allow judges to hear them in an open court.

"My feeling was that it should not be done in the basement of the court with nobody looking," said Norris.

Marchant sought a counter-compliant of assault and battery against Barosy, but Judge Morse turned down his request citing lack of evidence. Witnesses said Barosy grabbed Marchant to restrain him from punches and to keep him in the lobby long enough to get his name.

Marchant's cross complaint was not allowed, Norris believes, because Marchant's most favorable witness said Barosy had tried to restrain Marchant's arm. Norris said he argued that Barosy had every right to restrain his arms in such an immediately threatening situation. "Arlens said he never touched Marchant and I believe him," added Norris.

Marchant did not testify.

Much of Thursday's testimony came from statements taken by UMass police from Barosy and witnesses. Barosy said he confronted a group of people waiting for an elevator on the 17th floor when Marchant threatened Barosy after he told Marchant to get rid of his beer.

After escorting the group downstairs in an elevator, Norris said derogatory statements accompanied Marchant's threats of violence.

Barosy also said Marchant punched him three or four times sending him through doors and bruising his head. Barosy added that Marchant never identified himself and threatened Barosy again as he left the building.

According to press reports, Marchant

Turn to ASSAULT, page 6

Recent tailgating craze overshadows Minutemen

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Thousands of students and alumni have been exercising their newly restored right to drink alcohol at football games this season and some may wonder whether it's the beer or the game that draws them to Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium every weekend.

"It's the biggest party around," said Steve Mann, a senior Plant and Soil Science major, echoing the attitude of countless fellow tailgate party-goers at Saturday's football game. Many, however, said it was only the parking lot drinking that brought them there.

Tailgate parties are nothing new at UMass. The practice of standing around in the parking lot drinking beer prior to an athletic event is an old one, banned only in 1988. Despite massive protests made by thirsty sports fans, the ban lasted four years until requests from alumni and other University football fans brought an experimental restoration of drinking rights this semester.

The ban was instituted by former Chancellor Joe Duffy in April 1988 in response to the violence which followed the 1986 World Series where mostly White Red Sox fans clashed with predominately Black Mets fans.

But now a stroll through E lot outside the stadium, now designated a "tailgating lot," reveals row upon row of cars, pickup trucks, and recreational vehicles with stereos blaring, grills blazing, and people guzzling. The price of admission for one car is $5, which includes the cost of a large plastic recycling bag, designed to reduce litter.

An important factor behind the lifting of the ban was a desire to increase attendance at the games. According to Kay Scanlan of the UMass News Office there

Turn to TAILGAITING, page 6

Across the nation, people are ready to vote

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN
Associated Press

NEW HOPE, Ala. — At Huck's Barber Shop, pictures on the wall celebrate the glory days of Alabama Crimson Tide of football. People here hold to tradition, and they like things the way they are in this tidy country town far removed from big-city crime and Washington politics.

"We've got it made right here and we don't know it," mused barber Leon Hornbuckle, who can leave his shop door unlocked when he goes across the street to tend to business at his used-car lot.

And yet something has people in New Hope and other places around the country stirred up. It's Tuesday's election.

For many, it's the most important vote in years — and they say that, whoever wins the White House, they look for a thawing of government gridlock, and awakening of the economy, overdue attention to the $4 trillion national debt — changes that they simultaneously wish for and fear.

See related story, page 3

"It'll be rough for a few years," said Hornbuckle, anticipating hard post-election choices to deal with problems the long campaign has raised.

"But after we get on our feet, we're going to be fine," said the 42-year-old businessman. "We've got to get things straightened out. It's an important election."

He's voting for Bill Clinton. But down at the Main Street Cafe, Danny Baker, a supporter of President Bush, has a similar, hopeful feeling. "They've been running so hard against each other, they're going to have to start doing some of the things they're saying," he said.

At the town library, Aileen Moon joined the chorus, saying that both parties "are starting to get the message" delivered by her candidate, Ross Perot, whose economic plan focuses on cutting the debt through higher gasoline taxes and other across-the-board economic sacrifices.

It's not only in New Hope that folks feel new hope — and concern.

At a giant fireworks store with Las Vegas-style neon signs that flood the nigh sky in Kimball, Tenn., manager Richard Talley strikes up conversations about the election with his largely tourist clientele.

"Everybody wants a change. They want it but they're afraid of it," said Talley, 45. "They know that the change is going to have to be so drastic that everybody's going to have to sacrifice."

Like many others interviewed around the country, a

Turn to ELECTION, page 2

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editor ..... Kristin St. John & Yvette Baez
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor .....

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

election

continued from page 1

groups of retirees in Tampa, Fla., suburb of Land O' Lakes said they'd arrived at their presidential pick by a process of elimination.

Bush probably will be the choice of Ed Broussard, a 52-year-old registered Democrat. "I expect the country to start to bounce back," he said. "Things will get better, but it won't happen overnight."

"Our country is right on the edge with the size of our national debt," said Ervin Hoefler, 75, but he receives Social Security and fears Perot's tough measures. He, too expects to vote for Bush.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Monday, November 2, 1992

Lecture — Marcia Curtis will speak on "Write what you think, but please not that: Gay issues in the writing classroom," from noon to 1:30 p.m. in the 9th floor of the Campus Center. This lecture is part of the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual Studies Brown Bag Series.

Seminar — The Speakers Bureau of the Program for Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual Concerns is sponsoring a seminar, "Everything you always wanted to know about queers but were afraid to ask. . ." at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center room 176.

Film — As a part of the weekly queer film series, the Program for GLB Concerns and the Lesbian, Bisexual Gay Alliance will sponsor a film at 8:00 p.m. in the Campus Center. Film to be announced.

Panel — The Five Colleges Coastal and Marine Science Program and the UMass Department of Geology and Geography are sponsoring a panel, "Recent Developments in Coastal and Wetlands Law" at 4:00 p.m. in the Campus Center room 803.

Vigil — There will be a candlelight vigil from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. on the south side of the Student Union to protest racism. For more informatin, call the Office of Third World Affairs at 545-2517.

Tuesday, November 3, 1992

Meeting — The next meeting of the Institute for the Healing of Racism will be at 7:00 p.m. in the Campus Center room 165. For more information, contact Gene Wallace at 256-1878.

Seminar — The Social and Demographic Research Institute is presenting a Research in Progress seminar at 3:50 p.m. in W32 Machmer. The seminar will feature Randall Stokes and Albert Chevan discussing "Male marginality and female family headship."

Columbia shuttle lands safely

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Columbia swooped through a clear sky and landed at NASA's spaceport Sunday with six astronauts who released a laser-reflecting satellite and tested a robotic eye during their 10-day journey.

"Beautiful ending to a great mission," Kevin Chilton, an astronaut inside Mission Control, told the crew.

Columbia landed on the concrete runway at Kennedy Space Center at 9:05 a.m. EST. Just before nosewheel touchdown, the astronauts released a red, white and blue drag chute that slowed the shuttle as it rolled to a stop.

It was a fine morning for a landing. There were only a few wispy clouds and, contrary to earlier forecasts, barely any fog.

More than 300 people were on hand to welcome Columbia home.

Columbia traveled 4.1 million miles during its voyage, which began Oct. 22, and circled Earth 159 times. It was the 51st shuttle mission and 13th flight of NASA's oldest shuttle.

A quick inspection showed teh shuttle to be in good shape, said NASA launch director Bob Sieck.

Ground controllers had to scramble when shuttle commander James Weatherbee reported during descent the failure of a mechanical gauge that displays the positions of the rudder, body flaps and other flight control surfaces. Mission Control told him to turn the power off and on, which got the gauge working but only for a few minutes.

NASA spokesman Jeff Carr said it appeared to be a power problem and that the crew was able to monitor the information on computer screens.

The five U.S. astronauts and one Canadian completed their primary orbital job — releasing the Laser Geodynamics Satellite — early in the mission. They released the satellite on Oct. 23, and an attached rocket quickly boosted the craft into a 3,632 mile high orbit.

The satellite is covered with 426 prisms to reflect laser beams fired from around the world. Geologists hope, over time, to gauge the slow drifting of continents by measuring the time it takes for the pulses to travel back and forth. That, in turn, should provide a better understanding of earthquakes.

Italy's space agency built the $4 million satellite and its $120 million booster.

Kennedy director Robert Crippen, a former shuttle commander, took issue the critics who blasted NASA for spending nearly a half-billion dollars on the mission and risking six lives to launch a satellite that could have been lofted by an unmanned rocket.

He said there was no reason not to use the shuttle for hoisting the satellite since that had been the plan all along.

Although the experiments that were conducted during the flight might be considered small by some, they are important, Crippen said. "There is a really big plus for science," he said. "It was a superb mission as far as I'm concerned."

Commish denies allegations

BOSTON (AP) — Police Commissioner Francis "Mickey" Roache dismissed recent critics who have accused the department of police brutality, calling the charges dangerous.

"I will not let them tear down the good relationship that has been built between the police and the overwhelming majority of the residents from all over," Roache told the Boston Herald. "That is a very dangerous thing to do."

"The costs can be extremely high," he said.

"The department was the subject of heavy criticism at a community meeting Thursday in the Dorchester section of the city. Rev. Eugene Rivers and others, nearly all of them Black, accused the department of brutality.

Roache vehemently denied the allegations and said no new police misconduct complaints have been filed with the department's Internal Affairs unit.

He asked that those with legitimate complaints go through the official system, but also said that many times, cross-complaints are filed by citizens against officers who have made proper arrests.

"I think we have a very sophisticated society and a lot of people involved with the law know how to utilize the system," Roache said.

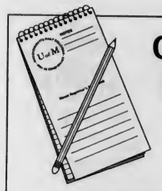
Lose All The Weight By Thanksgiving
Nutri/Size™ 34
FREE*
nutri/system
Old Size 40
Rainer Kruger
Nutri/System
Client
1•413•586•8111
137 Damon Rd. Northampton, MA
*You pay only for Nutri/System meals. Weight loss and maintenance vary by individual. Participating centers only. Cannot be combined with other offers. Offer expires 11/6/92.
©1992 Nutri/System, Inc.

NOW YOU CAN GET DIRTY FOR A WHOLE LOT LESS.
TREK USA MOUNTAIN BIKES
ON SALE!
850 was $519.95 now $449.95
6000 was $659.95 now $519.95
All Other '92s On Sale!
'93 Bikes Rolling In Daily!
NORTHAMPTON BICYCLE
EST 1971
319 Pleasant St.
Northampton, MA
586-3810
800-464-3810
TREK USA

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days
8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9)
Amherst • 253-5072

WELCOME BACK!
Round Trips from New York Starting at:
CANCUN $ 310
LONDON 330
SAN JOSE C.R. 470
BERLIN 498
WARSAW 625
BANGKOK 949
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change & availability. Call about one ways. We issue EURAIL passes on the SPOT!
Council Travel
79 South Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
256-1261

Local News



CAMPUS SHORTS

compiled by David Massey

A missed mission

One hundred fourteen faculty members signed an open letter to the University community that appeared in Friday's Collegian. The faculty denounced the administration, saying it has failed in its mission to create a tolerant, multicultural campus community.

Lisa Selkirk, a professor in the linguistics department, said the idea for an open letter came through discussions within the department. "Its intent is to let students know that faculty are very concerned about the situation," said Selkirk.

"If racial harassment, violence and fear are a fact of life for students in our community, it is because the University is not doing its job," states the letter. "It is the job of the administration to promote a vision of a multicultural community that pervades every area of University life and to support in every way possible the realization of that ideal.

"The administration has not done its job."

Mirrored mirage

If you haven't already noticed, the scenic photograph that graces the cover of the latest student telephone directory is backwards.

The 15,000 copies of the directory, produced by Student Affairs Special Services, are provided to students free of charge. But the image on the cover depicts an M.C. Escher-like notion of campus with the Southwest Towers located where the Campus Center area should be.

"It was printed backwards by the printer," said an official from University Photographic Services, who provided the publisher with the slide. The photograph itself was actually taken four years ago from atop of Herter Hall.

But Rob Brooks, director of Student Affairs Special Services, was initially unaware of the mix-up. "I suspect, if anything, the slide was wrong."

For the correct view of the photograph, simply hold up the phone directory to a mirror.

TAs cheapen degrees

A new book by a former Columbia University professor slams schools for supplying students with "second-rate" educations by forcing graduate students to serve as professors.

Martin Anderson, in his book Impostors in the Temple, (Simon & Schuster, 1992), calls the use of teaching assistants — better known as TA's — a "callous exploitation" of both graduate students and their undergraduate pupils.

"The victims of the rip-off are the undergraduates, especially freshmen or sophomores, the ones who are often taught and graded by other students — teaching assistants as they are euphemistically called," writes Anderson.

"In a variation of the old bait-and-switch game, the universities entice potential students and their parents with tales of exceptional teaching by erudite and sometimes world-renowned professors. . . . While these pseudo professors rarely lecture in the large halls, they often lead the smaller class discussions where the real teaching should occur.

"As long as few people catch on to the fact that university students are taught and graded to a significant extent by other students, and that high grades are commonplace, the value of the degree will hold up. But as the word spreads, and it will, the value of many college and university degrees will become more and more suspect."

Excerpts courtesy of the Collegiate Network, a program of the Madison Center.

UMass buttons up

University administrators have distributed thousands of buttons with the lettering "ALLY" to students and faculty. The different colors on the button symbolize various ethnic groups and communities and support the idea of a "multiplicity of cultures."

According to the Amherst Bulletin, the human relations office spent approximately $1,400 on the buttons.

"Symbols are very important on campus," said Grant Ingle, director of the Office of Human Relations, who came up with the idea. "It really is to provoke people's thinking, and the plan is to make sure that there is some discourse and dialogue."

Ballot questions await voters

By AARON-JOHN RICADELA
Collegian Correspondent

When area voters pull the lever tomorrow, they won't just decide which candidates join the unemployment roll, but vote on state and local ballot questions including a cigarette tax increase, a pro-environmental package law, and a seller's property levy.

Four state referendum items, three county questions and three non-binding state questions join Tuesday's choices for president, congressional representative and local seats. Supporters and opponents of the proposed state laws argue their sides in a voter-information pamphlet published by the Office of the Commonwealth Secretary.

The Recycling Initiative is the hot question in the Valley this year. A yes vote on Question Three requires Massachusetts packaging used after July 1, 1996 to be smaller, reusable, or recyclable.

Supporters, including environmental groups, Governor William Weld, and state civic leaders, say the law would triple recycling levels, conserve trees, energy and water, and save millions in garbage disposal costs. Backers also cite the creation of new markets and jobs through recycling programs sparked by the law.

Question Three's opponents say the law is deceptive and would cost the state millions without increasing recycling. The NO on 3 Committee says the law would also increase consumer costs and threaten jobs by increasing costs to businesses.

Question One proposes a tax increase of 25 cents on a pack of cigarettes and an increase in the price of smokeless tobacco by 25 percent of the wholesale price.

Supporters link tobacco price and consumption, and say 80,000 people will quit or never start smoking because of the tax. Revenue raised would fund smoking information and cessation programs.

Opponents say the tax is regressive and unfair because 25 cents a pack becomes a larger percentage of income the less a person earns. Higher taxes and more government will drive out area businesses, say opponents.

A yes on Question Two requires certain banks, insurance companies and publicly traded corporations to file public tax return reports with the Massachusetts Secretary of State. The law would keep companies honest by holding them accountable to taxpayers, say supporters of a yes on Two.

Out-of-state competitors could use the information to hurt state business, which is why no state has a public tax report law, say the initiative's opponents. The proposal violates confidentiality and threatens business when Massachusetts is losing jobs, say opponents.

A yes vote on Question Four approves a proposed tax on certain oils and hazardous materials which makes polluters clean up toxic dump sites, say its proponents. Last year only two of 2500 suspected toxic dump sites were cleaned, says the official argument.

Four's opponents say the new tax increase exempts the worst polluters and passes down costs to consumers through higher prices, lost jobs, and increased property taxes.

Turn to BALLOT, page 7

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

SEEING DOUBLE — Erin Kelley, a freshman engineering major, and Michelle Giengregorio, a freshman Political Science major, relax in the women's bathroom after a hard day of classes.

Officials offer input in search for chancellor

By LISA A. BONSALL
Collegian Correspondent

Scholarly recognition, fundraising experience, and commitment to athletics and multiculturalism are a few of the qualifications that should be on the next chancellor's resume, campus officials said.

But strong leadership and managerial skills and a personal involvement with the campus were what mattered most to those expressing their views at an open forum Friday afternoon in the Campus Center.

It doesn't matter how sensitive a candidate is to racism for example, said one man at the forum, if that candidate cannot manage the campus with "sheer managerial confidence."

The forum allowed the campus to voice its opinions about what kind of criteria are needed for choosing the next chancellor at UMass, said Robert Schwartzwald, a member of the chancellor search committee.

Leadership and supervisory skills while conducting internal affairs on campus are also important criteria when choosing a candidate, said to forum participants.

The chancellor needs to focus his attention on the internal problems on campus and then be able to articulate clearly what needs to be done and how it is going to happen, said Karen Shelley, assistant financial director for Housing Services.

Turn to CHANCELLOR, page 7

Students support Democratic ticket

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

While recent public surveys show President George Bush and Governor Bill Clinton neck and neck in the race for president, an informal Collegian poll taken yesterday showed Clinton winning the election by a significant margin.

The poll, which was conducted over the telephone, surveyed 20 University of Massachusetts students. There were 14 votes for Clinton, 4 votes for Perot and no votes for Bush. With only one day left until election day, two students remained undecided.

• Robin LaMonda, an undecided first year student, said, "I'm voting for Clinton because I don't like Bush's environmental policies. Any policies Bush has passed have ended up hurting the environment."

• Leah Petrakis, a sophomore journalism major, said, "Throwing my support to Perot is the only way I can help break the two party system. Neither the Republicans nor the Democrats want change and eventually there is going to be just one party which no one will be able to contest."

• Mike Zabawa, a sophomore School of Management major, said, "Clinton did a good job as governor in Arkansas and I want a Democrat in the White House for a change."

Turn to POLL, page 6

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the entire Five College community.

The Editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Submissions must bear your name, local address and phone number in order to be considered for publication. This information is subject to verification.

Anonymous letters will be printed at the editor's discretion. Letters should be no longer than 50 typed, double-spaced lines. Columns should not exceed 70 typed, double-spaced lines. Submissions that are not typed will not be considered for publication.

Responses to or criticism of columns, cartoons, articles or letters are limited to letter form (under 50 lines). Columns responding to previously published material will not be printed. Responses to or criticism of letters that themselves have responded to a letter, column or article will not be printed. Collegian staff are restricted from writing letters, but may write columns. Any exceptions will be determined solely by the editors.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material. Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writer and do not represent the views of the Collegian.

The Editorial staff is committed to honoring the abovementioned policies in order to provide a forum for community discussion of issues.

Hostility, racism won't be solved through 'feel-good' alternatives

Recently the editorial pages of the Collegian have been full of examples of racism on campus and solutions to the problem. Unfortunately, the suggestions seem to revolve around the idea of forced "racial harmony" by hiring a specific number of minority educators and giving additional financial aid based on color and sex. I believe that these measures will only serve to increase racial tensions on campus.

I, personally, do not care about the ethnic background of my professors. I am being taught the intricacies of electrical engineering, and I expect the best education that I can get for my money.

As long as the professor is the best in his field, I feel that I am getting what I am paying for. I would not be pleased to be taught by someone who was hired solely on race, when more qualified candidates for the job were not considered because they did not meet a racial requirement.

I have to pay for my own education. I am not willing to spend my money in order to be a pawn in a social experiment of affirmative action.

The misconception among those who wish to implement scholarship programs based on race and sex is that the average White male does not need financial aid in order to attend college. My ancestors have been in New England since the early 17th century. Some arrived on the Mayflower and most served in the Revolution. Despite this, without the aid that I am currently receiving, it would be impossible for me to further my education.

I am already excluded from many corporate scholarship programs due to my sex and nationality. Being excluded once again for a scholarship program, when my tax dollars would be used to fund it, would be more than unfair.

The only way to end the racial tension on campus is to destroy the racial and sexual barriers, not add to them.

Hiring should be done on the basis of ability and qualification, not color or sex. Scholarships should be awarded for scholastic merit and financial need, not race. Anger and hostility are bound to grow if the current situation is not addressed with real action, not "feel-good" alternatives.

Gregory O. Bodge
Holyoke

Two men, a scary clown and a political prediction

Two men and a scary little clown. Is this a reference to the presidential race? No. It is Friday night trying to hitch back from Hampshire college at four in the morning. I can imagine no worse combination, unless maybe we were carrying a severed head.

I'm dressed like Karl Marx (thinking it was the scariest thing you could dress up as in America) but am reminded of Groucho: like him and his club I certainly wouldn't take a ride from anyone who would be prepared to have us as passengers. So, trudging back the only thing scarier than the thought of having to walk all the way home is the thought that someone might pick us up.

Jesse
ARMSTRONG

In England Halloween is a problem. Sure, it's Halloween, but what does one do about it? Only small children know: suffused with American culture they have adopted "trick-or-treating" to the bemusement of those whose doors they knock upon. I think maybe Halloweeen is the perfect American festival, signifying nothing, merchandisable without the irritating moral overtones of Christmas or Easter. But most of all you are given free reign to do your thing, be it dressing as a roller-skating caterpillar, a blood-splattered Jackie Kennedy or, ever popular at Hampshire, "a semi-naked person." Dressed as Marx I kept getting mistaken for Uncle Jesse from "The Dukes of Hazzard" and my friend without a costume was taken to be an amusing portrayal of a poor person.

I did my portrayal of a poor person this week at University Health Services where I paid $50 for a pain in both arms. I was disgusted; this is America, where is my choice? The same injection for everyone? What is this, socialism? There should be a $5 standby rate with a jab from a rusty pike in the butt, or a $100 special where you get to keep your personalized needle and the doctor does a Bob Newhart routine.

Perhaps some of the revenue from such a scheme could help finance the UMass institutions in steepest decline. It is a sad, sad state of affairs when it is headline news that the library is to purchase books. Boy, what will next week's investigative coup be? "D.C.'s to serve food," perhaps, or "UMass to arrange classes"?

Anyway, two men and a scary little clown — who are you going to vote for? O.K., so you're not going to let a limey tell you how to vote, but how about a bit of prediction. Here is the dubious premise: for the last 20 years British and American politics have traveled parallel courses, with British electoral results foretelling the American mood. Hence Wilson's '74 victory for Labor can be compared to Carter's '76 victory, likewise the tide of radical conservatism swept in with Thatcher's '79 victory a year before the same impulse let Reagan win.

By this logic the April victory by the Tories in the British general election is a precious omen for Republican strategists. Like the Democrats here, the Labor party was ahead in the polls up to the eve of the election, but it seems that in the privacy of the polling booth a significant portion of voters swung to the Conservatives, frightened of possible Labor tax increases. This is certainly a plausible scenario here also.

But hold on, there is another scenario: a Clinton landslide. Imagine if the Democrat vote holds firm and a large section of Perot voters join them, deciding not to "waste" their vote but unwilling to support four more years of pragmatic Bush inaction.

Who can tell, maybe such a victory by what is only relatively the left here could prefigure a British change, after all it is quite possible that after the fiasco over pit closures and humiliation on European policy a split Tory party might be pushed into a second general election this year.

Jesse Armstrong is a Collegian columnist.

Columnist's rhetoric is pointless

Dear Mr. Morrissey:

Welcome back Ted Maravelias! I am glad we have such an astute and original political mind working for us at the Collegian. The manner in which you expressed your unsubstantiated views Friday [Collegian, Oct. 23] is an embarrassment to both the Collegian and yourself. Just think: a conservative columnist in a fairly liberal publication advising us on how we should vote in November. Since your column was in the editorial/opinion section, I can deal with that. What I (and I'm assuming many of your readers) have trouble swallowing is your arrogant, righteous attitude and utter lack of any real insight concerning the political climate.

If your primary objective in writing this column was to provoke a reaction from readers (which incidentally I feel is the case here), then that to me constitutes poor journalism. On the other hand, I would never discourage one from sharing his or her views, political or otherwise. Hówever, if your views are simply a conglomeration of typical Democrat-bashing statements, a slew of nicknames for Bill Clinton, and a rehash of "America — love it or leave it" rhetoric, then I'd advise you to save your time because this kind of old hat just isn't worth reading.

Brian F. Rattigan
Amherst

U.S. citizen counts on others to make choice

I would love to vote in these elections. I am counting the days that are soon to be gone but there is a big problem.

I am registered to vote, just like my friends are. We know most of the things that go on in this government. We abide by the U.S. Constitution and protect it as if it is ours, but I can't vote because I am from the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and can't vote for the president of the United States I am a born U.S. citizen just like all the Puerto Ricans at UMass. We follow your constitution and even use the same currency, but I still can't vote for a U.S. president.

I would give anything to be able to decide who will run such a powerful country. Like me there are at least 500 students at UMass that would love to vote here.

My point is that you are given an honor, not a right, and that you should use it properly because you are going to decide who should run the country. I am counting on you to make the right choice.

It's not as if you like red or blue but that you trust the person you are voting for to be a leader for this nation. This will be the person who will guide us through the next four years. So I count on you, the people, to make the choice for me.

Karola I. Rovira
Southwest

You're nearly grown up now — what are you going to be?

I've just stepped out of my journalism class, and am slowly realizing how confused and baffled I am with the whole thing. No, not just the class itself; I'm talking about my life.

My courses just contribute to my bewilderment. I guess what I'm driving at is that I'm a junior in college and am a bit unnerved because I have no real, concrete idea of what I want to do with my miserable existence.

I've always thought that writing would be my bag. Of course I, like everyone else, went through the "what I'm gonna be when I grow up" phases. My plans included becoming a lawyer, surgeon, ghost hunter, oceanologist, veterinarian and World Wrestling Federation star (could you honestly see me trying to bodyslam Andre the Giant?).

But now I'm 20 years old and hopefully more mature and level-headed. I took up journalism because I don't know what else to do. I'm presently getting into the core of my studies, and it's not that I'm scared — I just hope like hell I made the right choice.

I comprehend the fact that someday I've got to get serious and consider an internship, co-op, or something — I've gotta get in gear! It depresses me to the point of yakking that when parents, professors and all those adult figures refer to moving on in life and settling down to a long road of deadlines, career moves and overall seriousness, they bring up "putting the fun aside." What a nice outlook!

Troy L.
MERRICK

I remember my dad giving me his version of a pep talk about becoming an adult. He said he "didn't envy me" and flat out didn't know how my peers and I would survive in this apparently knock-down, drag-out society, job market world.

Stressing the importance of a college education (and the fact that a high school diploma alone don't mean jack in many or most instances), he noted that without it the average shmuck would be the slob who asked you if you wanted fries with your quarter pounder with cheese.

I respect my Dad — he's provided me with endless knowledge and insightful advice, but the sad truth of his opinion in this matter made me think twice of my desire to live past my 18th birthday. They say high school is supposed to be the most cherished four years of your life, and now those too have been gone for three years and what do I have to look forward to?

Well, I suppose my future contains whatever I cause it to — I have control. But if I don't have the foggiest notion of what I'm going to do, where I'm going to go, who I'm going to be — I'm staring into a cul-de-sac, a dead end, and all the inspirations and goals I've established for myself will be dust in the wind.

I'm willing to gamble that most of you probably categorize me as a pessimist, but please don't. I only want to show you who feel that your back is against the wall and don't really know what direction to drag your academics in that you are not alone. You are not the sole castaway on the ship of cluelessness in the sea of life.

I have a lot of living to do. Sigh.

Troy L. Merrick is a UMass student.

Student casts his vote from Cairo

It's been a bit strange being in Egypt for the tail end of the 1992 presidential election. Most Egyptians I have met are very interested in the election and are curious to discover your political leanings.

In the Middle East where patriarchal, strong-handed governments are the norm, Bush is described in terms of "strength and fairness." At first I was taken aback. Bush!? Strong, fair? My Amherstian ears were shocked. My Arabic is not yet good enough to launch an effective argument against Bush's foreign policies but I've managed to incur the ill feeling of most of the taxi drivers and store owners in Cairo. On the other hand, I can understand the Arabs' misgivings toward Clinton concerning his views on the Palestinian/Israeli question, which are shaky at best. They see him as selling out to Zionist pressures in the United States and possibly departing from the policies of the Baker negotiations. However, according to W. Quandt, NSA advisor to Carter, Clinton is merely doing what any self-respecting Democrat who wants to win New York must do. In fact, one of his chief advisors has issued a statement which promises to follow the initiatives begun by Baker.

It was a very surreal feeling, voting in my first presidential election by absentee ballot at the American University in Cairo. As the teacher rattled on about the coup in Algeria, I cast a vote to decide on who I wanted to lead my country for the next four years. The system may disenfranchise huge numbers of our population, but in the end we have no one to blame but ourselves. P.J. O'Rourke wrote, "All governments are parliaments of whores, but in a democracy we're the whores." If you don't like either candidate join a reform group or do something other besides complaining and watching your country go down the toilet.

Egyptians, like the vast majority of people in this world, live in a police state. They enjoy more political freedoms than their neighbors but the system is still a far cry from Western democracy. A few hours by plane can take you to a country like Somalia where people live and die in such poverty that their government is entirely irrelevant. The United States will join the ranks of the "have-nots" one day in the future and we only beckon that destiny through political negligence and complacency.

Michael R. Smith
Cairo, Egypt

Ignorance isn't bliss — it's rape

I am writing in response to the letter "Violence can turn sex into rape" [Collegian, Oct. 22]. I've never seen such an effective metaphor for rape. Even if I wanted sex, and even if I went back to someone's room, absolutely no one has the right to force me to have sex. I'm my own person, and no one has the right to force me to do anything, regardless of whether I want to or not.

What impressed me most about the article, was it was written by a man. This semester, stories have been printed declaring men to be evil animals who don't know the meaning of "no." Now don't get me wrong — there are definitely guys out there who have no respect for women whatsoever, but I feel that this article shows that there are decent, understanding men out there, few as they may be.

The problem, though, is not just with men. More often than I would like to admit, I've heard conversations where friends, girl friends, are as ignorant as the assailant. "It's her own fault — she was stupid enough to go back to his room. What did she expect?" She didn't expect to get raped. Simple as that.

Statistics state that at least one out of every four women will be raped. Five out of six of my friends have been, at least, sexually harassed. Those are pretty high chances for something horrible and dehumanizing to happen.

Women: it's your friends, your daughters, you who are facing these chances. Men: it's your friends, your mothers, your sisters who are facing these sad facts. It's true, yet very few are willing to admit that it happens every single day.

Ignorance is not bliss. Ignorance is sad and unfeeling. Ignorance of understanding and respect is rape.

Tanya Milosh
Amherst

'20/20' didn't cover diversity

I am writing in response to the Oct. 23 "20/20" show in which reporter Lynn Scherr did a piece on Northampton women who love women. I felt degraded, embarrassed and misrepresented by a show that purported to portray all women who love women in Northampton in a positive, candid manner. These are critical times for queer communities nationally. Not only are we reeling from the devastation of AIDS, but we are under attack from the radical right wing, which is pushing such initiatives as Section 9 in Oregon that could take away the rights of all queers. Many say the timing of the "20/20" show is crucial in educating voting Americans on the acceptability of lesbian lifestyle. I think there is danger in that assertion.

The show's approach was typically homophobic. Ms. Scherr trotted out lesbian sexuality as though it were some scientific experiment, dwelled on why lesbians aren't into men, and the photographers spent an inordinate amount of time on "Cherisse's" cleavage. "20/20" also mistitled the show; a more apt title is "How Lesbians can be Middle Class, Thirtysomething, Professional and Get Married and Have Babies Just Like Heterosexuals."

I am not interested in bashing the lesbians on the show for their choice in lifestyle, although I can't understand why any lesbian would agree to answer such idiotic, exploitative questions about our sex lives and our "rejection" of men. Where were the perspectives of lesbians who are on welfare? Where were the opinions of women who aren't lesbian but are bisexual? What about the voices of Black, Asian, Native American and Latina lesbians (the voice of the one lesbian of color who spoke was dubbed over)? What about those of us in our teens or 70s, or who wear lots of leather and have green hair? What about the insights of lesbians who are survivors of drug abuse and the mental health system because of the trauma of being queer in a homophobic society? And where does "20/20" get off denying that lesbians are political?

"20/20" does not address the complexity and diversity of the Northampton lesbian and bisexual women's community. By being portrayed as homogeneous and conformist, we are being denied our right to choose the sort of lifestyle we want to live. Do you honestly believe that this model of lesbianism won't be held against those of us who don't fit it? How many times have each of us been told that it's okay that we're lesbians as long as we don't flaunt it? How is this show saying anything different?

Frankly, I'm scared. There is no predicting what sort of homophobic backlash Northampton is now going to be subjected to. While the professional organizations featured in the show are getting business from curious people and lesbians who had not known about Northampton (and can afford to eat in restaurants and buy culturally appropriate trinkets), already I am being scrutinized like a zoo animal as I walk down the street to my $4.36 per hour job. What happens if reactions become violent? While I realize that the organizations named by "20/20" may suffer some monetary setbacks from loss of homophobic patrons, the targets of violence will not be lesbians safely ensconced in their cars, homes and places of business. The targets will be queer women who are already vulnerable because they are poor or dark-skinned or politically vocal, etc.

If "20/20" represented all facets of the Northampton community and sincerely addressed the issues facing us, it would be worth chancing the backlash. But we can't ask them to do that now because they aren't around. They are back in TV land, getting pats on the back for finding such a controversial human interest story and they're raking the money because they upped "20/20" in the viewership polls. Or have we all forgotten that the show aired during network TV's sweeps week?

Elizabeth Rensenbrink
Northampton

Bush is loser in character contest

It's 3 a.m. The remote has switched the station to CNN. I can't believe what I'm seeing.

The nose of a plane is silhouetted against a blue and white sky. Outside the hangar is a small crowd. As he quickly alights the steps to the podium in his white, blue and red parka, one could mistake him from a distance for a rock star, but he is much too old. A young African-American rushes eagerly to the man to shake his hand. "No, no!" I gasp. He does. Pretty cheerleaders run through well-rehearsed routines. Mothers and fathers wave signs. A band strikes up patriotic music.

After acknowledging the applause and cheers, he starts to speak. He punches with his fist and points to punctuate his rantings. He is not above macho posturing, "When I am through with my opponent, I won't just give him hell, he'll feel like he is in hell."

"Go get 'em, John Wayne," I caustically mumble.

The King of Smear doesn't stop. He labels his opponent as unpatriotic, a traitor and a daft dodger. I bolt up from my chair and yell, "Wait a minute Joe McCarthy, everyone tried to get out of that war!" I remember men feigning everything from homosexuality to asthma to avoid being drafted. Surely George Bush would have used the wealth and influence of his father to avoid the "service" had he been a member of the baby boom generation.

I switched the TV off. How much longer will Americans be fooled by trickle down economics, with its increase in food stamp applicants and working poor, or by a president who refuses to take any blame for the recession and actually tried to fool us into thinking it didn't exist? Such blind patriotism overwhelm reason? What sort of tragedy are we headed for when the lessons of history are distorted and forgotten?

My choice for president is Bill Clinton. He is a man who cares about people, and not just about getting elected. Bill has been known to stay up late, upset about racial injustice. Bush, on the other hand, while running for Congress in Texas, actually campaigned against the 1964 Civil Rights bill to pick up votes from segregationists.

Bill is one of us. He worked his way through college and knows financial hardship. Bush, who likes to lampoon Clinton for only having experience in public office, boasts about starting his own oil business (with a $1.2 million loan from his Dad).

Clinton can step off the pedestal and play his saxophone on "Arsenio Hall." But just as quickly, he can play the role of presidential contender and whip George in debate, forcing him to retreat into whining, "Don't blame me, I am not an Oxford man" (he is a Yale man).

On Nov. 3, let's end the lies of the Republican administration. Vote for Clinton — the winner of the character debate.

Tim Leinroth
Sunderland

■ assault

continued from page 1

claimed he did not ride the elevator but took the stairs to the lobby.

Witnesses maintained Marchant confronted Barosy in the elevator.

Senior English major Julie Trainito, who said she witnessed the incident, said she thought Marchant acted hostilely because Barosy was Black. "It was definitely an RA confrontation that turned racial," she said.

"Hearing those racial slurs was worse than physical damage," said Norris. "The language was just horrible. It was the worst possible."

Although Norris he did not doubt the judge's sensitivity, he said he didn't think the court's original venue was "terrific." So Norris said he asked for a judge to preside over the hearing instead of a clerk and requested that the proceedings be opened to the public.

"We're going in the back door and civil rights was tacked on as an afterthought," said Norris, who asked if the proceedings would have been brought into the lowest level of the criminal system if the situation involved a White defendant.

Marchant's attorney, Janet Kenton-Walker, was not available for comment.

Due to the incident and subsequent appearance of racial graffiti and feces outside his door and other stress, Barosy has quit the resident assistant job and moved to another dormitory, according to Norris.

"Arlens is quite a remarkable man," said Norris, commenting on how outstanding it is that he's a native of Haiti, who attended high school in the states for a few years, and then awarded a prize at the University last spring for maintaining the highest GPA for electrical engineering students.

"It's terrible the things that were said to him, especially to someone so talented and wonderful as him," said Norris.

Barosy was not available for comment.

The dates for Marchant's arraignment had not been set as of press time.

The election is coming up tomorrow– don't forget to vote!

■ tailgaiting

continued from page 1

were about 2,000 tailgates at Homecoming, and turnout at the other games has also been high. But the parking lot festivities tend to continue well into the first half of the game.

"There has been a continual problem of people not leaving [the lots] during the game," said Scanlan. "Tailgating is supposed to be two hours before the game and one hour after, but the lots just don't clear out."

Many of those interviewed at Saturday's game praised tailgating as a social event, but said they were not interested in the game itself. Others were more blunt.

"I'm just here for the drinking," said Greg Caille, a senior history major.

"I just like to drink beer," said a junior HRTA major who cleverly identified himself as Ben Dover.

Still, head football coach Mike Hodges said he feels attendance at the games is increasing as a result, and that many people who originally came just for the tailgating become interested in football when they see the game.

"If they come down once they'll come back. Our team is great to watch, and this season has been excellent from a fan's standpoint. I think tailgating has let a lot of people realize that," he said.

Jennifer Knudsen, a junior School of Management major, echoes this sentiment. "I'd never been to a game before tailgating started, and it's made me realize what I've been missing. I've gotten a lot more interested in the games."

Scanlan said there have been no arrests or major security problems at the parties, and that police have issued no more than a few trespassing orders. "It's been pretty under control," she said.

According to Scanlan tailgating will continue until the end of this season, and then the policy will be reviewed for a decision to be made as to whether it will continue next year.

And whatever their reasons for being there are, many of the tailgaters do go in to watch at least part of the game. "Yeah, I'm going in. As soon as I'm drunk enough," said Rick Pitcher, a senior HRTA major.

French ban smoking in cafes

By TERRI JONES
Associated Press

PARIS — Some French are delighted, some are disgusted, while others are blatantly flouting a tough new law that went into effect across the country Sunday.

"The battle lines are drawn," said Alain Genestan, writing in a front-page editorial in Le Journal ou Dimanche, Paris' only Sunday newspaper. "What do I mean, battle? It's a war."

The law bans smoking in restaurants, offices and public transportation.

"I'm not going to stop smoking at work," said Doile Marie, an office worker at Telediffusion de France, which distributes radio and TV programs.

"I'm a very tense person, I drown my stress in cigarettes," she said. "If I stopped smoking, my rate of work would slow down. People respect that in me, too."

Miss Marie say, however, that away from the office she'll refrain from lighting up in public places or places where it bothers people.

Polls indicated up to 84 percent of the French approve of the law and 65 percent support pressure to enforce it.

But howls of protest have risen from cafe, restaurant and hotel owners, who fear losing clientele for enforcing the law, or hefty fines of up to $1,200 — or even prison terms — if they don't. Individual violators are to be fined $120 to $250.

Dozens of cafes and bars across Paris put up yellow signs on their doors saying, "Bar Fumeurs" (Smokers' Bar)

Joel Robuchon, the famed chef at the three-star restaurant Jamin, one of the swankiest in Paris where diners often enjoy a pungent cigar after a meal, said Sunday it would be extremely difficult to enforce the new law.

"It's hard hard to harmonize this with the dining experience," he said in a radio interview.

Daniel Estival, owner of L'Estivel said. "Then we'll see."

France has one of the highest rates of smokers in Western Europe: 40 percent of all adults, according to 1991 figures.

■ poll

continued from page 3

• Eric Peltier, a senior history major, said, "Perot will shake up the government and is the only candidate intelligent enough to deal with the economy."

• Tom Owen, a senior economics major, said, "I am not pleased with any of the candidates because each have some good ideas, but none of them have all the good ideas."

• Noah Rice, a senior history major, said, "I am voting for Clinton because he stressed education. If people want to improve the quality of America, they have to start in the school systems."

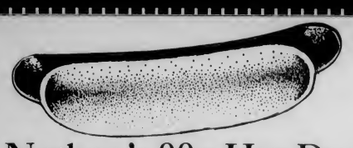
• Debbie Adams, a senior electrical engineering major, said, "Since Bush doesn't stand for free choice, I'm voting for Clinton. Clinton will do more for the middle and lower classes too."

• Hillary Swanson, a first year pre-veterinarian major, said, "Bush is fascist and Perot is insane, so I'm voting for Clinton. Clinton will try to do something for the deficit and he has, by far, the most superior views on social issues."

• Jon Harris, a first year mechanical engineering major, said, "Perot's experience in business will improve the national debt and will help Americans produce better businesses."

• Susan Pease, a first year graduate student studying fine arts and poetry, said, "I'm voting for Clinton because he supports the economy, middle and lower classes and women. I don't want to give Bush the chance to appoint another conservative Supreme Court justice."

ON NOVEMBER 1ST CALDOR NORTHAMPTON WILL GO TO THE DOGS



Nathan's 99¢ Hot Dog
With This Coupon
From November 1st to November 14th Only
Nathan's Famous
Not To Be Combined With Any Other Offer. Offer Good Only At The Caldor Northampton Location
CALDOR 180 North King St. Northampton, MA

For the Serious Student
• Quiet Apartment Living
• Convenient
• Affordable
• Flexible
THE BROOK
253-3834

Vote on Tuesday!

haircuts always $10!
Bucci
a hair space
25 N PLEASANT ST. AMHERST | 256 0733

■ chancellor

continued from page 3

Teamwork and intercommunication among all groups on campus is important, Shelley said, but a "chief operating officer" not afraid to discuss issues that people don't always want to hear will benefit the campus.

The chancellor must feel comfortable surfacing possible volatile issues and then work together with the campus to deal with the problems, Shelley said.

Another important criteria discussed at the forum was the ability of the chancellor to gain the trust of the students who want to be able to go to a name they recognize and respect. They want a chancellor, said a woman at the forum, "who can roll down his or her sleeves and talk with students in the Hatch" about important issues.

"It's not going to be easy to make changes on campus," said Shelley, but if the chancellor is able to become a part of the teamwork on campus, then situations will get resolved.

■ ballot

continued from page 3

The three Hampshire County questions, Five, Six and Seven, work in conjunction imposing a service excise of $1.14 per $500 value of real estate transactions, paid by the seller. A yes vote on these questions approves the fee, which would provide $400,000 for a locally controlled Regional Services Fund.

Opponents resist restoration of a levy banished in 1989. The levy would charge $456 to the seller of a house valued at $200,000.

A yes on Seven, the substantive question, raises money for underfunded rural social service programs said Hampshire County Commisioner Vincent O'Connor.

"This is not a propery tax, nor is is new. It's only paid by the seller once or twice in his life, and it provides money for services that help the community do the best for its residents," said O'Connor

'O'Connor said the excise would raise money for an educational service for local dairy and produce farmers in co-operative extension with the University of Massachusetts. He said the revenue would also computerize the registry of deeds' record system, saving citizens time and legal fees.

The service fund includes nutritional information for low-income and rural families, and a care facility in Northampton, said O'Connor.

He said Question Five strenghtens the county charter and Question Six is technical housekeeping which make a yes on Seven more effective. O'Connor said Five and Six enact no laws or fees.

THE COFFEE SHOP
Nov. 2 - Nov. 6
Bring This Coupon & Get A Free 12oz. Soda With Any Purchase of $2.00 or More.
Campus Center

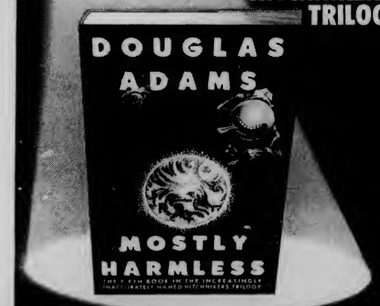
You're the BEST..why not work for the BEST?
It all starts at one of our Job Fairs
Sunday, November 8, 10-2pm
All Job Fairs are at the Gatehouse Base Lodge at Sugarbush South in Warren, VT. For more information call Sugarbush Personnel at (802) 583-6400
Sugarbush Resort is known for having the friendliest, most professional and dedicated employees in the ski business. Why do we attract the best employees?...Simply because we have the best ski mountain, the best daycare, the best food service, the best training and the best jobs. Add to that, more things to do, more career opportunities and more fun and you get more happy people. Sugarbush employees get to enjoy the resort and be part of the spirit that is Sugarbush. Join the fun, be part of the Best Team in the Ski Business.
Come to one of our Job Fairs, meet the hiring managers from all departments throughout the resort, find out what jobs are for you and join the Sugarbush Team.
Sugarbush is an Equal Opportunity Employer
SUGARBUSH RESORT
RR 1 Box 350 Warren, VT 05674

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA
$10 HAIRCUTS!
Make an appointment with Heather or Liz, between 9am and 1pm, and your haircut will be only $10! Good Monday through Friday. Expires 11/4/92

Amtrak
BUY YOUR AMTRAK TICKET FROM CENTRAL TRAVEL AND BE ELIGIGLE TO WIN A
FREE TICKET TO MONTREAL
ASK US ABOUT AMTRAK'S DAILY SERVICE DIRECT FROM AMHERST TO MONTREAL, ONLY $55 ROUND TRIP!
FROM THE AGENCY THAT CARES...
CENTRAL TRAVEL
549-4900
25A PRAY ST., AMHERST, MA
(IN THE D.H. JONES REALESTATE BLDG.)

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
Miller MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL
PRE GAME BUFFET
Pasta-Salad-Garlic Bread
All you can Eat $3.00
HALF TIME APPETIZER BLITZ
1/2 Price
MINNESOTA Vs. CHICAGO
Total Score Pool - Great Prizes
- Monday Night Stumper -
- Drawing For Pats Tickets & -
Limo Ride to Foxboro-Week 17
University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

THE AMAZING LOGIC-DEFYING BUT-WHY-STOP-NOW FIFTH NOVEL IN THE INCREASINGLY INACCURATELY NAMED HITCHHIKER'S TRILOGY
DOUGLAS ADAMS



"His characters frolic through the galaxy with infectious joy."
—Publishers Weekly
Join Arthur Dent's teenage daughter Random on a quest across time and space.
Now at your bookstore.
Unabridged audio edition available from Dove audio
HARMONY BOOKS

Why are so many people from all walks of life opposing the Repackaging Bill?

David Gordon Wilson
Professor, MIT
Author, "Legislation to Promote Recycling and Conservation"

"The increased consumer costs and bureaucratic frustrations Question 3 would create would completely outweigh any small effect it would have on our waste stream. Question 3 would be very costly. I urge a NO vote on Question 3."

Jennie, Paul, and Connie Brown
Brown's Market

"Our family has owned and run our grocery store for over 70 years, and we've never faced a problem like Question 3. Question 3's repackaging red tape would force higher prices in stores throughout the state."

Gregory A. Conigliaro
President
Conigliaro Recycling Company

"As a recycler I believe we need to continue to improve our existing recycling programs. We don't need Question 3's costly repackaging red tape and bureaucracy. Join me in voting NO on 3."

Solid Waste Experts, Grocers, Employers, Workers, even Recyclers urge NO on 3 . . .

Because Question 3 would cost Massachusetts people over 500 million dollars every year, but leave over 90% of our solid waste untouched.

Massachusetts Citizens and Employers Against the Repackaging Bill
(Partial List of over 50,000)

Dr. Melvin W. First
Professor of Environmental Health
Engineering
Harvard School of Public Health

Carolyn E. Boviard
State Director
National Federation of Independent Business

Jon DeFreitas
Atlantic Poly
Recycling Company

Martin Kelley
Owner
Durgin Park

William J. DeTellis
President
Healthshare Associates

Jay Howland
President
D'Angelo Sandwich Shops

Jeffrey A. Miron
Chairman, Department of Economics
Boston University

Kevin B. Harrington
Former President
Massachusetts Senate

Charles McDevitt
President
Local 422, U.A.W

Hoyt C. Hottel
Professor Emeritus,
Department of Chemical Engineering
Massachusetts Institute of Technology

Dr. Laura C. Green
President
Cambridge Environmental, Inc.
Lecturer, Division of Toxicology, MIT

Robert N. Stavins
Kennedy School of Government
Harvard University

Robert Cerretani
Cerretani's Supermarkets

Richard A. Manley
President (1970–1992)
Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation

Jill Beresford
Vice President
BPI Environmental
Recycling Company

Joseph D. Alviani
State Secretary of Economic Affairs
(1985–1989)

William F. Marsden
Demoulas & Market Basket

Richard Arnott
Professor, Department of Economics
Boston College

Robert H. Bateman
Chairman, Massachusetts Economic Development Council (1986–1987)

Constance Brown
Brown's Market

Jack B. Howard
Professor of Chemical Engineering
Massachusetts Institute of Technology

Richard S. Stein
Professor and Director of Polymer
Research Institute
University of Massachusetts, Amherst

Peter B. Post
President
Greater Boston YMCA

Kenneth M. Lemanski
President
Charles River Hospital–WEST

John Phinney
President
UFCW 1445

George C. Lodge
Professor of Business Administration
Harvard Business School

Roger S. Berkowitz
Owner
Legal Sea Foods

Professor David Gordon Wilson
Massachusetts Institute of Technology
Author, "Legislation to Promote Recycling and Conservation"

Gregory A. Conigliaro
President
Conigliaro Recycling Company

Merton C. Flemings
Department Head, Materials Science and Engineering, MIT

Larry Overlan
Director, State and Local Government Policy Studies
Beacon Hill Institute
Suffolk University

I. Robert Freelander
President
Come Play Products
Recycling Company

Bruce Butterworth
President
Pewter Pot Family Restaurant

John Clementi
President
Plastican Recycling Company

Joseph C. Faherty
President
Massachusetts AFL-CIO

Patrick E. Roche
Roche Brothers Supermarket

Barbara Anderson
Executive Director
Citizens for Limited Taxation

Christopher P. Flynn
President
Massachusetts Food Association

James F. Slattery
Executive Director
Massacusetts Farm Bureau Federation

Ira Stepanian
Chairman
Massachusetts Business Roundtable

John Cammarata
Manager, Superior Produce
Distributors
Chelsea Produce Center

*Titles and affiliations for identification purposes only

Stop the Costly Repackaging Bill

Vote NO on 3

Authorized and paid for by the NO on 3 Committee, P.O. Box 4512, Boston, MA 02101, Christopher P. Flynn, Chairman, Cynthia Eid, Treasurer

Arts & Living

Spooky World missing the scare but still fun

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

Spooky World
Horror Fun Park
Berlin MA
Thursday, October 28

Well, October is over and so is Halloween. For all of the haunting month in Berlin, Massachusetts, there was a corporate sponsored horror theme park called Spooky World.

Once one enters the Spooky World grounds, the spooky aura becomes evident. There is an old man with juggling skills galore at the entrance. He juggles axes, torches, and other novelties while standing on both the ground and a large beach ball.

That is the entrance, the two attractions that await you at Spooky World are the Haunted Hay Ride and Haunted Barn. Up first is the hay extravaganza.

Right from the beginning of the hayride it is easily recognizable that the ride is going to be more entertaining than horrifying. The emcee on the tractor makes that clear with his one liners and anecdotes.

Along the ride there are many live performers running around trying to frighten you. Included in these characters is Jason (of Friday the 13th fame), legendary barber/murderer Sweeny Todd, and Leatherface (of Texas Chainsaw Massacre fame).

Other characters include cannibals, mummies, and a variety of ghouls and living dead. While the characters do provide a few shocks, it is the special effects which make the hayride entertaining.

A guillotine, boiling pot o' human soup, scattering of a calvalcade of corpses, flying monsters, and a high quantity of bloody gore make the hay ride, if not scary, fun filled.

After the hay ride comes the haunted barn. The barn is basically the opposite of the hay ride in that it lacks in ideas but is better in the fright department. This is because the barn has the characters placed strategically in dark places, around corners, and so on. This placement allows for the element of surprise which the hay ride lacks for the most part.

Other than the characters, the rest of the barn is pretty much lacking. There are a couple of nice displays featuring aliens, but that is about it.

There is a gift shop where a potpourri of things can be bought. In addition to items for sale, the gift shop allows one the chance to get decked out in the latest horror makeup. There are a couple of horror celebrities (no, not Stephen King) there to greet you as well with autographs and polaroid moments awaiting.

Also, Spooky World would not be complete without a karaoke machine, which is right near the hay ride entrance. Entrance into Spooky World cost $12.50 from Monday through Thursday, and $15.50 on Friday to Sunday.

On a whole, Spooky World could do more to be frightening, but it was entertaining. So, even though it is closed now for this year (it is open every night of October), it is pretty clear that it will be back again next year. If you want a few laughs and a couple of shocks, check it out.

Views on television: the last round of Cheers

By CALEB COCHRAN
Collegian Staff

When Kelsey Grammer of Cheers appeared on Late Night With David Letterman recently, I felt the tears welling up in my eyes. No, it wasn't because of Grammer's ugly beard, although that thing is horrible. The reason for my heartache was the announcement that Cheers is nearing the end of its long and glorious run on NBC.

Although this announcement was certainly not a surprise, it is saddening to hear cast members speaking of the end. The way Grammer put it, whenever Ted Danson is ready to hang it up, Cheers will ride off into the sunset. Thus, the show will run one more year at the most.

Grammer's announcement confirmed what I had already known for quite a while: the Golden Age of television comedy is coming to an end.

I was never a big fan of *M*A*S*H*, Barney Miller, or even Taxi. Thus, I don't consider the 1970's the pinnacle of t.v. sitcoms, as many do.

Rather, my Golden Age begins in the early 1980's. Shows such as Bosom Buddies and WKRP in Cincinnati are still among my favorites. Shows like Diff'rent Strokes, The Facts of Life, and Silver Spoons, while funny, were only hints of what was to come.

In 1984, one of the greatest comedies of all time, The Cosby Show, was born. With Cheers and Family Ties already in the Thursday night lineup, Cosby brought NBC over the top and created the most awesome lineup in t.v. history.

The Cosby Show quickly became one of my favorite programs as the Huxtable family won my admiration with their humorous antics and old-fashioned values.

It was shortly after the birth of The Cosby Show that I began to stay up until 9:30 on Thursdays to watch Cheers, perhaps the greatest program in television history. The characters on this show are simply brilliant.

Norm Peterson, the overweight, unemployed slob played by George Wendt, is my favorite character in all of television. Cliff Clavin, the mail man with a knack for trivia, and Carla, the angry waitress, are a couple made in heaven. And don't forget Sam Malone, played by Ted Danson, is the foundation of the show.

However, the one thing that has allowed Cheers to enjoy such a long and fruitful stay is the quality of the writers. It was a stroke of brilliance to bring in the character of Woody after the death of Coach, and the changeover from Diane to Rebecca took place without a hitch.

The characters of Dr. Frasier Crane and his fellow psychiatrist and wife Lilith have only made the show stronger. And yet, it is all about to come to an end.

Yes, Cheers will certainly live on forever in syndication. However, there is no topping the excitement of a weekly television show that is still alive. Every week, we were entranced by the romance of Sam and Diane; annoyed by the stories of Cliff; entertained by the one-liners of Norm; baffled by the stupidity of Woody.

The show is now winding down. Sam is older, and the rest are now so familiar that nothing is a surprise anymore.

However, it is still a fantastic show. It is still funny, it is still entertaining, and every Thursday night at nine, I still want to go where everybody knows my name.

So forgive me if you see me holding back the tears as Cheers comes to a close. I'm not only weeping for myself, but for the demise of the Golden Age of television comedy.

'Fefu and Her Friends' makes one think about life

By EMILY MARINO
Collegian Staff

Midterms haunt me, and a number of professors feel the need for me to share enlightening thoughts and prove worthy of my education here in the form of something like 10 pages, double spaced, you know the rest.

Feeling that some entertainment might offer solace and insight, I treked over to Smith College last Wednesday night to relax and view Maria Irene Fornes' Fefu and Her Friends.

Upon entering Theatre 14, as I was sure I was supposed to, I was a bit confused because the play appeared to already be going on. Elegantly dressed women engaged in what one might call "charming conversation" of the highest caliber of social etiquette. Our hostesses swept around the stage sipping champagne and giggling.

And then the strangest thing happened. These women talked to us as if we were guests at the same party. Not only had I forgotten my party atire, but I wasn't sure that I liked discarding my comfortable role as mere spectator for one closer to that of actress.

As the play progressed I became more accustomed to Fornes' intentional intertwining of audience and cast.

The actual plot of the play unfolded around Fefu (Frances Anderson) and seven other women spending a weekend together to engage in prime female bonding and consequent soul searching. In true "New Woman" style these eight women explore and test the boundaries of their womanhood, questioning their relations to men and to each other.

"Men have natural strength," asserts the unpredictable and beautiful Fefu. "Women have to find it." She goes on to explain that men have faith in the world where as women do not. Men, she quips bitterly, are insulators of pain, and the price that women pay for this protection is the spirit.

Fefu and her friends illustrate the basic differences in not only how men and women interact differently with each other, but demonstrate the struggle for women to shed the ideological implications of their sexuality and find their own "voice."

After having met Fefu and her friends the audience was divided into four groups and brought on stage to view four different scenes involving various characters. This made our experience with the actresses more intimate, and helped us to better understand how women interact differently in group and private situations.

It also skewed the concept of time by presenting information to the audience in varying order. Each group had a different perspective of what was happening in the lives of these women and to the cast as a whole.

These four scenes depicted certain aspects of female sexuality which confine women to certain roles. The first scene illustrates a dream which Cindy (Victoria Claire True) had pertaining to sexual harassment and her power to stand up for herself and protect her dignity by finding the voice to say no.

The second scene explores the "seven year love affair" between men and women which, when all is said and done, consists of three months of true happiness. Paula (Nancy Blasi) and Cecilia (Megan Stancill) present homosexuality as not a mere alternative, but as a natural solution to the incompatability between men and women.

They portray an endearing relationship that fulfilled emotional needs seemingly better than previous heterosexual relationships, and one that caused as much pain once it was over.

The third and most powerful scene featured Julia (Caty Carr), a woman crippled after having been accidently shot by a hunter. The trauma has led her to hallucinate. Julia's hallucinations, her visions, address the limited societal role of women: her visionwoman's oppression and limited role in society due to ideologies pertaining to her sexuality and biological "duty."

Dating back to the Biblical tale of Adam and Eve, woman's "evil" nature with regard to sex provides a scapegoat for men who are not spiritually sexual. For men, sex is merely physical. For women, sex is a vital part of their nature which creates evil thoughts and deeds in men.

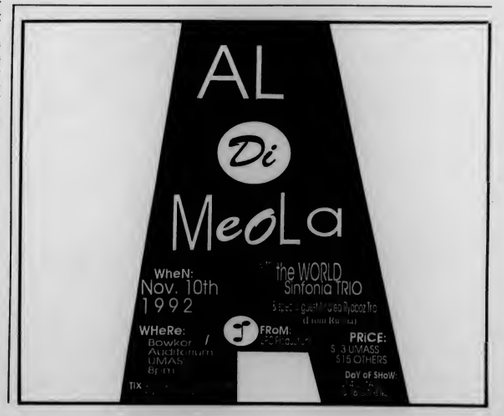
Carr presents these ideas disturbingly well, and the fact that the audience looks down into a pit designated as a bedroom while she writhes around in the bed creates a literal image that women should be looked down upon in this position, unable to move and at the world's disposal.

Finally, Fefu and Emma (Karuna Venter) present homosexuality in a more obvious and visual way as comforting and safe. Discussing everything from genitals (Emma insists that people pretend that they do not have them in daily encounters) to the unexplainable fear of which Fefu is a constant victim, these two women present the necessity and unique beauty of the bond between women. Homosexuality is not merely an issue of physical affection, but one of emotional commaradiere and spiritual fulfillment.

Venter later steals the show with a monologue concerning the "science of educational dramatics," by hypnotizing the audience with unescapable, direct eye contact and complete surrender to her emotion-driven words.

Frances Anderson also portrays a seemingly confident, spontaneous woman struggling to maintain her lively spirit in the face of social restrictions. She convincingly presents all facets of her character. Anderson lets that frightened little girl that lurks inside all women at one time or another escape from the corners of her michevious eyes or smiling lips.

It is not very often that I question my life in terms of how being a woman affects me on a daily basis. After all, we are all just people, right? We boast that gender, like race, has little to do with how we relate to each other in this world. However, you may be surprised at what an eye-opener a little drama can be.



Blue Rodeo lassoes unique music variety

By CALEB COCHRAN
Collegian Staff

Lost Together
Blue Rodeo
Atlantic

In the past, Canada has produced musical acts such as Bryan Adams, Allanah Myles, and Honeymoon Suite. However, perhaps the best Canadian act of all is the little-known band Blue Rodeo. The band recently released their fourth album, Lost Together, which could finally launch the band out of obscurity and into the hearts of American listeners.

The roots of Blue Rodeo were formed back in 1981, when band leaders Jim Cuddy and Greg Keelor created a pop/new wave band called The HiFi's. After being scorned in New York City by a lack of response to their music, Cuddy and Keelor put together a tape of music that "we were sure wouldn't be popular," according to Cuddy, and called the band Blue Rodeo. With this recording, the band finally started to receive recognition.

After three years in NYC, the band headed back to Canada. There they found drummer Cleave Anderson and keyboardist Bob Wiseman. After bassist Bazil Donovan was discovered through a classified ad, Blue Rodeo was complete.

In 1987 the band released their first album, Outskirts, which won the band acclaim in Canada with the esteemed Juno Award (the Canadian equivalent to the Grammy) for best group. Diamond Mine, released in 1988, and Casino, the band's third album, also received critical acclaim but went virtually unrecognized in the United States.

With Lost Together, Blue Rodeo may have finally produced an album that American fans can appreciate. The album embraces several musical genres, most notably country, pop and rock. The use of an organ, steel guitar and violin add to the diversity of the album.

"Fools Like You," the first song on the album, gives the listener a pleasant sample of the band's sound. The song includes elements of country and pop, producing a sound somewhat like that of Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers. Ian Guenther's violin gives the song a touch which John Mellencamp uses quite often in his music.

In "Rain Down on Me," Blue Rodeo exposes its country side. The vocals here are definitely more country oriented and the presence of the steel guitar gives the tune a western feel. It is already evident after listening to this, the second song on the album, that Blue Rodeo is as diverse as it is talented.

"Restless" is much more of a conventional rock 'n' roll song. Guitars flail and drums pound with confidence as the band reveals yet another facet of their repertoire. Not many bands have the ability to shift from country to pop to rock as comfortably as Blue Rodeo does here.

With "Western Skies," country is again the chosen style. This tune is an ode to rural life which glorifies the countryside and the simple life. Bob Wiseman showcases his piano skills here with a stirring solo.

"Flying" is another song which reminds me very much of Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers. If Petty sang the vocals here, the tune could be thrown onto the Long After Dark album from a few years back without hesitation. The guitar chords that open this tune are definitely reminiscent of the Beatles.

"Lost Together" is bound to be a favorite slow song at high school dances for years to come. This is a beautiful love ballad devoid of the cheesy lyrics that are commonplace in many of today's ballads. The organ of Bob Wiseman is a bit annoying here, but otherwise this is a great song, with background violins contributing nicely to the overall mood of the song.

The real gem of this collection is "Last To Know," which perfectly embodies the spirit of the band. Elements of country, pop and rock all shine through on this track. A powerful chorus carries this song along with emotion and heart. While most of the songs on the album can be quite easily sorted into categories of pop, rock, or country, this tune blends all three of these elements to produce a brilliant song.

Lost Together winds down with "Angels," an eight minute jam which borrows from many rock 'n' roll heavyweights, including U2, Eric Clapton and The Black Crowes. Piano and guitar instrumentals rage through this track with reckless abandon, showcasing the talents of drummer Glenn Milchem as well as those of Wiseman, Cuddy and Keelor. Wiseman lets loose with an organ solo here unheard of since the days of The Doors. A quiet piano solo wraps up the song and the album nicely.

Although Blue Rodeo is already recognized in Canada as one of today's best lesser-known bands, American fans have yet to recognize the band's talents. With Lost Together, Blue Rodeo should finally win the praise of American fans as well.

PHOTO BY ATLANTIC RECORDS
The group Blue Rodeo is a group which fits into many categories. They have a style which uses threads of country, pop, and rock. Their latest album is titled 'Lost Together'.

On Wednesday,
October 28, 1992, in recognition of his support for Gay &
Lesbian needs, the UMass Lesbian, Bisexual,
Gay Alliance endorsed Bill Clinton for President.
The LBGA encourages all students to VOTE TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1992!

Family claims racial motive in beating

BOSTON (AP) — Police on Sunday investigated the beating of a Black man whose family said the attack was racially motivated.

Donald Williams, 32, was allegedly attacked and beaten by a White male early Saturday morning, police said.

Williams' family said the victim moved to South Boston from another section of the city three weeks earlier.

"He was in a lot of pain," Peggy Williams told the Boston Globe after visiting her son. Ms. Williams said her son told her "a bunch of white boys jumped me."

Mayor Raymond Flynn visited the neighborhood after learning of the attack and spoke with residents.

"We don't know any of the details, but we're obviously concerned with any incident of this type, whether it beWhite on Black, Black on White or any other racial or ethnic group," Flynn said.

Peggy Williams said her son was on his way to a construction job at North Station when he was allegedly beaten.

Williams was taken to Boston City Hospital and later transferred to University Hospital.

By Sunday afternoon, Williams had been transferred to Massachusetts General Hospital where he was to undergo surgery on his eye, police spokesman James Browning said.

Browning said the Community Disorders Unit had spoken to Williams briefly, but officers were hoping to learn more when they interview him again Monday after his eye surgery.

Democrats to dominate again

New Congress promises more newcomers, minorities

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — American voters apparently are ready to grant Democrats control of Congress for another two years.

Despite intermittent scandals, a stagnant economy, running confrontations with a Republican president and general voter discontent, polls indicate the Democratic party will at least retain its 57-43 Senate majority and will probably lose no more than 20 seats of its 100-seat margin in the House.

Even so, the 103rd Congress that will be elected Tuesday will look considerably different from the one that adjourned last month:

— At least one-quarter of the 435 members of the House will be newcomers. With 65 members having decided against re-election — a modern day record — and many incumbents running in newly redrawn districts, some analysts are predicting 130 or so new faces, the largest turnover in 60 years.

— Six additional Hispanics and 11 new blacks are assured election to the House because of redistricting.

— The Senate will get at least eight new members; another eight incumbents are in close races for new terms.

— Women are running in record numbers for both houses. The two incumbent female senators who will be returning in January probably will be joined by at least two other women, maybe more. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., and Carol Moseley Braun, D-Ill., are rated the best bets. Braun would be the first black woman to serve in the Senate.

Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., is nip-and-tuck in polls with Republican Bruce Herschensohn. Democrat Lynn Yeakel is within range of Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., and in Washington, Democrat Patty Murray is in a close contest with Republican Rep. Rod Chandler in their race for a vacant seat.

MAKE A MARK FOR YOURSELF.

PHYSICISTS
MATHEMATICIANS
COMPUTER SCIENTISTS

Do you have a PhD, a Master's or Bachelor's degree?	YES	NO
Is your degree in Mathematics, Physics, Computer Science or in Electrical Engineering with emphasis in signal processing?	YES	NO
Are you a U.S. citizen?	YES	NO

If you answered YES to all of the above questions, read on! XonTech is a highly respected, progressive R & D firm specializing in the empirical analysis of complex physical phenomena, and development of advanced concepts and technologies in support of numerous defense programs. Our research encompasses the following:

Research, development and evaluation of advanced radar and weapons systems:

- Signal Processing
- Performance Analysis
- Signature Analysis
- System Simulation
- System Design
- Threat Analysis

Analysis and evaluation of flight test data (aircraft, ballistic missile, satellite) including:

- Trajectory Reconstruction
- Re-entry/Aerodynamics
- Navigation Analysis
- Orbital Mechanics

Our work is technically challenging and offers exceptional visibility and direct client contact. There are excellent opportunities for technical and management advancement.

All applicants selected will be subject to a security investigation and must meet eligibility requirements for access to classified material.

XonTech will be at the Career Planning and Placement Center on Wednesday, November 4
Sign up today for an interview.

Qualified professionals are invited to submit cover letter and resume in confidence to: Corporate Human Resources Dept., 6862 Hayvenhurst Ave., Van Nuys, CA 91406. We are an equal opportunity employer M/F/D/V.

XonTech, Inc.
"People, Science and Technology"
Northern & Southern California
Washington D.C. • Huntsville, Alabama • Colorado

DiGeronimo Brothers
VICTORY Super Markets
10 University Drive - Amherst
WE RESERVE THE RIGHT TO LIMIT QUANTITIES. VICTORY SUPER MARKETS ARE NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS.
STORE HOURS: Mon. - Sat. 7am-9pm Sundays Noon - 8pm
Prices Effective thru Friday, November 6, 1992.
Check-Out Our Weekly Circular for More Great Buys...

1/2 PRICE! Mrs. Butterworth's Syrups •Regular •Lite 24 Oz. Bottle $1.49 Reg. $2.99

VICTORY COUPON PLU 909
Fresh...Grade A Large Brown Eggs Reg. $1.09 HALF PRICE In The Dairy... 54¢ Dozen
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a $10 purchase excluding price of coupon item, beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru Friday, Nov. 6, 1992. THIS COUPON NOT TO BE DOUBLED

1/2 PRICE! Fresh...At Our Bakery Bagels Assorted Varieties Reg. $3.99 6 For $1

VICTORY COUPON PLU 911
Kellogg's Corn Flakes Reg. $2.79 HALF PRICE 24 Oz. Box $1.39 41678 070
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a $10 purchase excluding price of coupon item, beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru Friday, Nov. 6, 1992. THIS COUPON NOT TO BE DOUBLED

1/2 PRICE! Fresh Baked... White Bread Reg. $1.49 At Our Bakery... 75¢ Loaf

VICTORY COUPON PLU 907
Viva Paper Towels Reg. 79¢ HALF PRICE •Assorted •Designer 39¢ Roll
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a $10 purchase excluding price of coupon item, beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru Friday, Nov. 6, 1992. THIS COUPON NOT TO BE DOUBLED

KAYEM Kayem German Bologna Sliced at Our Deli... $1.99 Lb.

VICTORY COUPON PLU 908
Prince Spaghetti Sauce Reg. $1.19 HALF PRICE 26 Oz. Jar •Meat •Meatless •Mushroom 59¢
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a $10 purchase excluding price of coupon item, beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru Friday, Nov. 6, 1992. THIS COUPON NOT TO BE DOUBLED

1/2 PRICE! Sweet Life Tomatoes •Crushed •Sauce (28 Oz. Can) •Whole Peeled (29 Oz. Can) Reg. 89¢ 44¢

VICTORY COUPON PLU 910
Friend's Pea Baked Beans Reg. $1.69 HALF PRICE 28 Oz. Can 84¢
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a $10 purchase excluding price of coupon item, beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru Friday, Nov. 6, 1992. THIS COUPON NOT TO BE DOUBLED

1/2 PRICE! Reg. $1.99 1/2 Gallon Hood Sherbet Assorted Flavors 99¢

VICTORY COUPON
Orville Redenbacher Micro Popcorn Reg. $3.49 21 Oz. Value Pack Asst. Var. 08600 Buy 1...Get 1... FREE!
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a $10 purchase excluding price of coupon item, beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru Friday, Nov. 6, 1992. THIS COUPON NOT TO BE DOUBLED

Cemetery teaching comes alive

By TRUDY TYNAN
Associated Press

BELCHERTOWN, Mass. — Shaun Breshnahan's job is making the dead speak in language modern teen-agers can understand. So it is somehow fitting to find the national social studies Teacher-of-the-Year and his students in the local cemetery.

"It's a wonderful way to teach the history of a community and the nation — its architecture, art and literature styles, and its religious and social practices," he said.

Breshnahan isn't about to be forestalled by funding cutbacks that have affected his little school district as well as many across the country.

"If you can't bring the kids to the cemetery, you just bring the cemetery to them," Breshnahan said, rummaging through the cabinets in his cluttered classroom packed so tight with historical artifacts and other props that there is barely room for student desks.

In a few minutes he emerged from behind a teetering pile of boxes with a battered suitcase stuffed with plaster casts of 17th and 18th century headstones.

He demonstrated how students can make rubbings of the replicas and plaster casts of their own. "See, this is history they can touch."

"You don't have to talk for 45 minutes. In 10 seconds you have them," he said, diverting to empty a carton of visuals.

Breshnahan will receive his award and a $2,500 stipend on Nov. 21 at the annual meeting of the National Council for the Social Studies in Detroit.

At 45, and with 22 years teaching here, Breshnahan calls himself "just one of the lucky ones to be singled out," and can't imagine doing anything else.

"I've wanted to be a teacher since I was a sophomore in high school. It's the most powerful and important occupation in the world," Breshnahan said. "Here is where the action is."

"At the end of one week teachers have produced a hundred times the impact of any legislative body on the course of the world," he said. "In what other job can you influence the attitudes of the world's potential leaders — the people who are going to be creating history?"

"When you have a teacher like that you just sit back and let him go," said High School Principal Dennis Pike.

"I'm here at school at 7:15 a.m. and leave at 3:15 p.m. From 3:30 p.m. until 9 p.m. I devote to my own family. Then I spend from 9 p.m. until midnight or 1 a.m. in academic preparation," he said. "My vacations all revolve around my school work."

And he admits he doesn't have the time to cover everything he'd like.

"I don't have the luxury of dealing with just 250 years of history. I am forced to impart 10,000 years of human history and culture and project that into the future," Breshnahan said after a lesson that in 10 minutes took students from local lead paint removal projects to the gold fields of the Amazon, the fishing grounds off Japan and through ocean currents, the tuna fleet and human ills caused by pollution.

"All I can really do is bring out the highlights. Infuse ideas and relationships," Breshnahan said. "And if we seem to concentrate on the mistakes that is after all what we do not want to be repeated."

So he makes sure he has help.

Gambling bug biting young in Bay State

BOSTON (AP) — Youth gambling is on the rise and some gambling addiction experts are pointing at church and state-sponsored gambling as two of the causes for the increase.

State law bans people under 18 from buying Massachusetts Lottery tickets. But a Department of Public Health survey of more than 2,000 students in junior and senior high school indicated that 61 percent between ages 11 and 17 have played the numbers.

Nearly 3 percent reported playing the Lottery 20 or more times a month, indicating they might suffer from early gambling addiction, officials told the Boston Sunday Globe.

A growing number of young people or their parents are calling a gamblers' hotline, said Thomas Cummings, director of the state Council for Compulsive Gambling, which released the survey last week.

Jack Hi, chairman of the New England Intergroup of Gamblers Anonymous, said Sunday that his organization also had noticed a trend toward younger gambiers.

"It's quite obvious that the average age of the compulsive gambler has come down substantially over the last few years," he said.

Gambling is "just rampant" in college and it's starting to become "very prominent" in high school, he said.

Typically, the young gamblers bet on sports, he said, sometimes losing large amounts of money. The new gamblers include well-educated kids from wealthy suburbs, he said.

The gambling increase has been helped by church and state sponsorship, said Howard J. Shaffer, director of the Center for Addiction Studies at Harvard Medical School.

"As drug and alcohol use decline, the Lottery is becoming the crack of the '90s," he said, referring to crack cocaine, which addicted many people in the 1980s.

Specialists say more youths are supporting their gambling addictions by stealing, peddling drugs and prostituting themselves.

More than 90 percent of compulsive adult gamblers take up the habit before they are 14, specialists also say.

CAFE DICARLO
5-College Student Dinner Special
Choice of:
• Lasagna al Forno
• Chicken Parmigiana
• Shrimp all' Arrabbiata
• Pasta Primavera
Complete Italian Dinner, including choice of entreé, salad, bread, soda or coffee for $6.95, with college I.D.
Sunday thru Thursday
Offer expires Nov. 30, 1992
Open Daily at 11:30 a.m
71 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA
253-9300

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton /Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

THE RACKS ARE ABLAZE WITH MARVEL'S HOTTEST NEW COMIC AT:
Same Bat Channel
Comics, Cards, Games and more...
Hampshire Mall, Hadley 586-8775 Ingleside Mall, Holyoke 532-9797
... fly on your own wings of imagination....
Open Monday-Saturday 10 am- 9pm Sunday 12 pm- 5pm
COMICS TRADE PAPERBACKS GRAPHIC NOVELS
TM & © 1992 MARVEL ENTERTAINMENT GROUP, INC. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

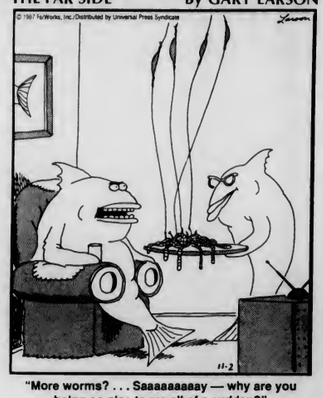
Florence
An Academic Year Abroad in the Arts and Humanities
A year or semester of undergraduate study immersed in the life and culture of Florence. The program combines university courses with individual tutorials and language study and, for students of the arts, work with Italian artists.
For information and an application:
Sarah Lawrence College In Florence
Box UMAF
Bronxville, New York 10708
SARAH LAWRENCE COLLEGE

PLEASE DO US ALL A FAVOR AND VOTE IN THE ELECTION ON TUESDAY!

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湖園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over: $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON



"More worms? . . . Saaaaaaaay — why are you being so nice to me all of a sudden?"

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

BYRON By FRANCESCO MARCIULIANO

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

Quote of the Day

"My vision may be impaired, but I can still see you've got candy!"
– Crazy Protractor Man

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Domestic activities enjoy highly favorable influences. A visitor could bring you some fascinating news about a mutual pal. Avoid financial speculation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be glad that you are putting money away for a rainy day. Your savings will give you some stability when rising expenses eat away at your budget. Use your investigative skills wisely.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Devote more time to your work and doing what higher-ups ask of you. Friction mounts in certain alliances — do not confront it; walk away. Romance on the rebound seems extra-sweet this week.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are on a winning streak! Big-wigs value your brains as well as your brawn. A romantic partner also has high praise for your efforts. Be a peacemaker on the home front.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Unexpected disruptions could get in the way of your career or domestic plans today. All you need to do, however, is go that extra mile. Make a daring move in romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Congratulations are in order. A financial windfall adds to the happiness of the day. You can afford to be generous. Listen carefully to a teenager's problems before giving advice.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your skills and ambition are in the spotlight. While you are working for other people, they will be working for you. Lighten up! Try not to take yourself too seriously.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your one-of-a-kind thinking and style could be exactly what higher-ups want to see. A partnership brings several nice surprises. Talk things over with your mate before making new commitments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A business partnership thrives now. Reaching a new financial agreement will mean lasting peace of mind. You get your point across convincingly when you stand firm.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make certain there is no misunderstanding about a confusing work assignment. Your good rapport with a VIP can be a real blessing. Be philosophical about plans placed on hold.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You tend to get a little carried away at times. Wishful thinking is best avoided. Level with a partner; be specific about what you expect from your relationship.

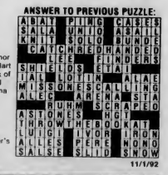
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Now that your feelings are out in the open, it should be easier to deal with a business problem. Handling your financial resources efficiently will help you attain greater self-sufficiency.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

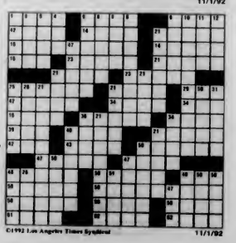
ACROSS
1 Have status
5 Coarse file
9 "— for All Seasons"
13 Shortly
14 "I cannot tell —"
15 Martini garnish
16 Ian Fleming's secret agent
18 Tea type
19 Enjoyed a meal
20 Hurt
21 Fad
22 Clement
23 Actress Jaclyn
25 Wheedle
28 Aural
29 Bat wood
32 Accumulate
33 Scottish miss
34 Fr. title
35 Coal weights
36 Wallet contents
38 Friend, in France
39 Before, to a bard
40 Flan's garment
41 Fragrance
42 Dreamer's activity: Abbr
43 Cosmetic ingredient
44 Shops
45 "Our Miss Brooks" star
47 Marvin and Majors
48 Grate cabbage
50 Hag
52 Vacation spot
55 Backside
56 Ross MacDonald's detective
58 Director Woody
59 Help go wrong
60 Ceremony
61 Root vegetable
62 Challenge
63 Singles

DOWN
1 Indian prince
2 Art school course, for short
3 Weighty work
4 Compass point
5 Mob
6 Vocally
7 Transgresses
8 Idol's perch
9 Wide awake
10 Mickey Spillane's private eye
11 Stratford-upon-—
12 Require
15 Science of vision
17 Weighs anchor
22 Playwright Hart
24 Feel the lack of
25 Provide food
26 Love, in Roma
27 Agatha Christie's sleuth
28 Kukla, Fran and —
30 Photographer's command
31 Rascals
36 Bundle
37 Strict
38 Famous —: cookie king
40 Depress
41 Take the helm
44 Legislative body
46 Adjust the alarm
47 Devalue
48 Thick slice
49 Hearty
51 Country singer McIntire
52 Ankle-knee connection
53 A Cincinnati Rose
54 God of war
57 — Magnon

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



11/1/92



©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/1/92

Today's Staff
Night Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Copy Editor ..... Sarah Levesque
PhotoTechnician ..... Tom Haller
Production Supervisor ..... Lisa Jezowski
Production ..... Jason George, Challis Meehan

Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Sloppy Joe	Roast Turkey
Grilled Cheese	Beef Stew
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Tofu Sloppy Joe	Roast Turkey
Grilled Cheese	Cheese Spinach Strudel

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Appreciating the Madness

Saturday night's Midnight Madness basketball love-in was more proof just how much the student body appreciates the men's basketball program. It also goes to show the strides the Minutemen have made the past four years.

There was a time when this event didn't attract much attention. Four short years ago the first-ever Madness attracted 2,500 fans. There were easily that many in their seats before 10 pm Saturday night, two hours before the first dunk, a one-handed tuck-away by senior Tony Barbee.

Greg
SUKIENNIK

Here's a little excerpt from former Collegian sporswriter George Austin's piece on the Madness from Oct. 16, 1989: "'It was our way of giving back to the students, getting them involved, getting them excited and telling them that we need them,' Calipari said. . .'we need [the students] in this building, we need them going crazy, we need them having fun and I think that they saw tonight we're going to have an exciting team.'"

Imagine that: having to ask students to come to the Cage. Now the program has gotten so big it has literaly outgrown the Cage.

Midnight Madness is an event more with the fan in mind than the basketball purist. It's less of a game and more of a game show, especially considering the amount of prizes given away.

Halloween has a bad reputation at this school because of the potential for drunken mayhem, and many were concerned that something stupid was going to happen at the Madness.

Nothing could have been further from the truth. If anything, the holiday brought out the creativity in the UMass fan. One individual — a male student dressed in a halter and spandex — made a big hit for his dancing prowess. Also in attendance were a cow (complete with udder), more nuns than St. Joseph Central High (most of them male), a walrus, and a guy with a regulation-sized backboard strapped to his back. Now that's dedication.

As for the actual basketball, Lou Roe's play foreshadowed possible future brilliance. Okay, it was only a scrimmage (read: minimal defense), but Roe was everywhere on the floor. His highlight of the evening was an offensive follow-up slam, which brought the now-expected reaction: "Louuuuuuu." You'll hear a lot more of that this year.

Anyways, here's some food for thought: UMass' Dec. 2 season-opener at Florida State is exactly one month away.

Greg Sukiennik is a Collegian columnist.

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 16

this morning.

Eynard sniped home two clutch goals bringing her season total to twelve, eight of which are game winners.

"Kim is showing her experience," Assistant Coach Felicia Faro said. "She is coming through when we need her — in the clutch."

Yesterday, Massachusetts survived an early onslaught by an emotional UCF team but rebounded to bring home the win.

UMass goal keeper Briana Scurry (9-2) was spectacular, stopping six shots to record her seventh shutout on the season and lower her goals-against average to 0.63.

Scurry, who was pressured for much of the first 15 minutes, stuffed Julie Tombragel in the 13th minute and made a diving stop on Tina Theis in the 25th minute.

"When it comes down to having a lot of pressure on her, Bri steps it up a notch for the big games," Faro said. "She's playing with a lot of confidence."

Eynard banged home the winner in the 50th minute. Rachel LeDuc gained possession near midfield on the right. LeDuc passed up to Eynard who collected the ball at the top of the box and drove into the left slot. From there she laced her shot just inside the right post.

"It was a great goal," Rudy said. "Rachel was a big factor and [Nicole] Roberts created the play at midfield."

On Saturday, Eynard again provided the late heroics for the Minutewomen. With only 1:16 left to play, Eynard picked up a pass from Amy Trunk at midfield. She streaked down the left flank into the corner of the box. About 25 yards out she shifted back to the center past defender Lynn Jarosi.

From 20 yards out Eynard drilled a shot just under the crossbar for the game winner.

"It was a great play," SMU coach Alan Kirkup said. "You can't defend that, you've just got to give her credit for the play."

The Minutewomen, who jumped out to an 11-0 start, may be playing their best soccer now.

"I think we are playing better now than at the beginning of the year," Scurry said. "We are playing full games, good defense and we're getting the goals. This is a good time to be playing this way."

Men's soccer fall in finish to GW, lose seed

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

It is hard to imagine any team being upset with itself after qualifying for a postseason tournament, but that may very well be the case with the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team.

That is because on Friday in Washington D.C., the Minutemen had the chance to wrap up the Atlantic 10 regular season championship and No. 1 seed in the upcoming A-10 tournament.

To do this, the Minutemen (9-5-2) had to hold onto to a 2-1 lead against A-10 rival George Washington (8-4-6) in a game which started earlier in the season. UMass could not do it, and now while the Minutemen are still in the A-10 tourney, their seeding will slip, how much depends on how other A-10 teams did in their conference games.

Earlier in the year (October 11) in Washington, the Minutemen jumped out to a 2-1 lead before rain and lightning caused postponement.

UMass' Randy Jacobs started off the scoring at the 19:47 mark. GW would answer right back when Derk Droze beat Minuteman goalie Mark Wolf at 36:10. Before the rains came, UMass' Josh Pittman scored to give the Minutemen the 2-1.

It is here where the action picked up on Friday, with 31:11 remaining in the game. GW finally was able to tie the game at the 78:46 mark. Nashir Idris potted the goal for the Colonials.

The game would remain tied until the final minute when Moises Reyes of George Washington broke the deadlock with a goal with at the 89:15 mark.

GW held onto the lead for the scant 45 seconds that remained and dislodged the Minutemen's hopes of being A-10 champs.

For UMass, the A-10 tournament this upcoming weekend in Piscataway, New Jersey will represent their big opportunity for both revenge and a birth into the NCAA tournament.

Game Notes: Shots on goal: UMass 11, GW 14. Saves: Umass (Wolf 4), GW (Ward McIntyre). UMass played on Sunday against Maine University but results were not available as of press time.

Breakfast Special (8am-10am)
Scrambled Eggs - Home Fries - Toast
$1.49
SUNDAY-FRIDAY SPECIALS
(4:00pm - 9:00pm)
Meatball Grinder $2.65
Italian Dinner Specials
(4:00pm - 11:00pm)
Pizza Slice (Large Cut) 99¢
Large Plain or Pepperoni Pizza with your choice of a pitcher of soda or a pitcher of beer $8.75
Now Through November 24th at
the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

STUDENTS DON'T FORGET
DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARD NOMINATIONS
DEADLINE: NOVEMBER 4, 1992
If you know a faculty member or teaching assistant/associate who is truly outstanding and deserves recognition, submit a nomination in writing with a brief description of why your nominee deserves the award.
FACULTY, ALUMNI & CURRENT GRADUATE/UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS MAY NOMINATE.
SUBMIT NOMINATIONS BY WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1992
TO: DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARD COMMITTEE
GRADUATE DEAN'S OFFICE
514 GOODELL BUILDING
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

Polo wins first-ever New England title

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

Entering yesterday's New England Championship water polo game against Brown University, the lucky number for the Universiy of Massachusetts was three. After all, it has been the third period where UMass has buried teams all season.

"1" will be on the minds of UMass players and coaches, at least for a few days, as the 14th ranked Minutemen ran their record to 22-1 in earning their first ever New England title in a 9-6 win over the Bears. Brown had won the last 17 titles in a row.

"It means everything in the world to me," said UMass senior co-captain Scott Reed, whose father has coached Brown for the last 20 years. "It's all I wanted to do. For seventeen years I've been hearing about it, it's been the same guys. It's about time we did something about it."

UMass had a small but boisterous contingent at the Smith Swimming Center, but it was Brown's Tim Freer who scored first, 2 and a half minutes into the game on a man-up situation.

It was the only lead Brown would have.

Reed scored on a man-up with 3:22 left in the first, floating a shot over two defenders and the goalie. The normally reserved Reed pumped his fist after the goal, signifying the frustration the UMass seniors have endured against Brown over the years.

After Tsan Engin scored to put UMass up 2-1, Javier Gonzalez made it a two goal bulge just under a minute into the second period as he picked up a ball Jay Peluso had banged off the post and skipped it past Brown goalie Kevin Newman.

Less than a minute later, UMass' Adolpho Oliete drew a penalty shot. Gonzalez, missed the ball off the left post, igniting Brown and its fans.

The Bears responded as Jed Simon scored twice in the next two minutes, with the second coming on a penalty shot.

"When Javier missed that penalty shot," coach Russ Yarworth said, "We sort of absorbed Brown's emotion and hung in there."

After the teams traded goals, Luke Harlan, with 45 seconds left, made a tip steal on a Brown man-up situatiuon. The Minutemen made it pay off, as Engin fed Gonzalez with 20 seconds left, and the his goal gave UMass a hard-earned 5-4 lead at the half.

Brown scored to open the second half, and UMass' offense was almost too patient, twice letting the shot clock run out.

Gonzalez atoned for the missed penalty shot with 2:38 left in third period, as Reed fed him on a counter-attack, and Harlan's score on passes from Reed and Peluso gave UMass a two-goal lead.

With 41 seconds left in the third, Peluso scored the back-breaker on a pass from Engin, creating an 8-5 lead.

The Minutemen played the fourth quarter somewhat conservatively, but could afford to with a three-goal lead and Brown's sputtering offense. The teams traded goals in the fourth.

■ kicking

continued from page 16

ever, on his 42-yd bomb in the fourth quarter.

"I knew that was perfect right after I hit it," said Maguire in reference to his immediate celebration after the kick.

Hodges seemed equally impressed with Maguire's performance on Saturday against the Huskies.

"He didn't have a lot of confidence at the beginning of the year," Hodges said . "For some reason today, everything clicked for him. The second one was a knuckleball, but the last one he drilled."

Maguire's kicking talents have brought him from Division 3 Nichols College to Big East behemoth Syracuse and now to UMass.

"In practice, he kicks 'em (field goals) 50 yds - he's a talented kid," said Hodges. "The footing was tough out there today but he did a great job."

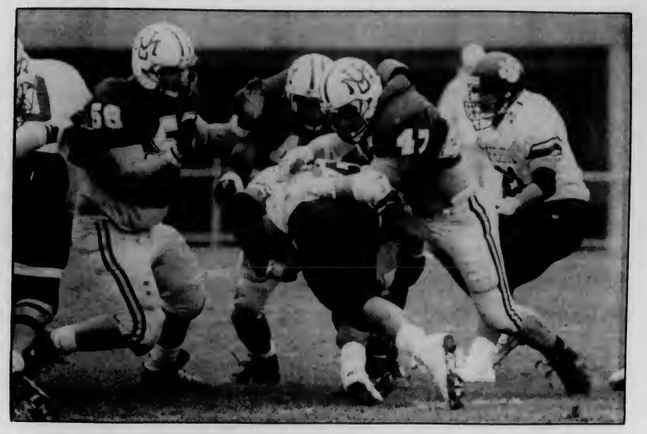
But when is the footing ever good for Maguire, who has been kicking barefoot since seventh grade?

"I can't kick with a shoe on," he said. "I get a much better feel for the ball kicking with a bare foot."

Maguire also moved one PAT closer to tying former UMass kicker Silvio Bonvini's record of 33 consecutive PAT's, with his 32nd successful extra point attempt. Pursuit of the record, however, does not seem to phase this Cohasset, MA native.

"Hey, it's 20 yards, I better not miss one," said Maguire. "With Tommy (Fasano) holding and John (Kromenhoek) snapping it's more a case of them not having missed one. It's the guys up front who make it happen."

After getting the opportunity to play for the Orange, he had to move his talents to Amherst because of monetary reasons. The UMass football staff couldn't be happier.



CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

The UMass defense, shown here wrapping up a Northeastern running back, played a huge role in the team's 22-10 win over the Huskies. For the fourth straight game, the defense of the Minutemen has held opponents to one touchdown.

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 16

good production from our forwards. Tara Jelley got the ball in the circle constantly, and Jenn made a lot happen at the endline."

The action slowed in the second half, as Springfield retracted into a defensive shell, conceding offense and the win to UMass. Because of this, Hixon used the final 35 minutes to clear the bench. Backup goalie Tina Rusiecki played the whole second half in net and did not face any Springfield shots.

"They didn't take as many risks in the second half," Hixon said. "Tina didn't even touch a ball in net, and I don't think they had any corners."

The Minutewomen sustained two key injuries, however. Forward Catherine Jarema sprained an ankle and will be out of action for at least a week. Holly Hockenbrock, who was on crutches after the game, will recover soon, according to Hixon.

"Holly got hit on her foot by a ball, and it's a little tender. She didn't practice Sunday, but she will be all right."

The Minutewomen performed like the third-best team in the country Saturday after a week's hiatus. The fact that the team did not look ahead to the Atlantic 10 Championships next week is a powerful example of its concentration.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students – Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30 Fri. 8:30-2:30 113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Multicultural Night
International Entertainment and cuisine needed for campus wide event (ingredients will be provided) Show UMass your culture! Call by Nov. 6th 253-0522

Tour of Wall Street & United Nations

November 6, 1992
Day trip to New York City $32
Call 546-3727 NOW!
Organized by the European Club

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Video
The Union Video Center is offering workshops on video production. Get hands on training with professional grade equipment. If you're interested in video, don't miss this opportunity. The UVC is located in the Student Union. 545-1336
Life is short, video is forever.

EXTREMELY IMPORTANT

Tarot Reading by appointment, Anytime
Call Mitch at 548-9761

FOR RENT

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

4 Bedroom house near Smith in Northampton. $775 plus, Nov. 1st. Call SKIBIKI realtors 584-3428

Fridge rental free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Brother Wordprocessor WP-760D+ with spreadsheet brand new with one year warranty.
Only $29B
546-0390

1989 Kawasaki EX500
Wht, Full fairing only 8600 miles
Have no storage for winter -- Must sell
First $1200 takes it
Call Josh at 549-7939

Like new Brother word processor WPD 760D plenty of features
A steal at $210 or best offer
546-1197

Stereo Components: Used/reconditioned, area's biggest selection. Buy/Sell/Trade at Stereo/Video Exchange, Sundays 10-4, inside Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Other days call 256-0941

Tandy 200 Portable computer
2 Power Packs + case and manuals
Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O.

FOUND

Found - a Watch! Properly describe it and its yours once AGAIN! 546-0021

HELP WANTED

Alaska Summer Employment
fisheries earn $600+ a week in canneries $4000/month on fishing boats. Free transportation! Room and Board! Male or Female. Get a head start on this summer. For employment program call 1-206-545-4155 ext. A5001

College Pro Painters
Earn $8000-$10000 this summer running your own business. Informational session on Wed. Nov. 4 room 902 Campus Center. Info call 1-800-346-4649 or Brendan at 549-B109 All are welcome

Couples -- Property Manager Free Amherst apartment plus salary Debbie 256-0741

Evening Jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action $7/hr. On buslines. 584-9830

Earn $1,500 WEEKLY mailing our circulars! ... Begin NOW!...FREE packet! SEYS Dept. 121 Box 4000 Cordova, IN 390184000

Fundraisers for Christmas Kettle program, outdoor work needed for 3 hour shifts from November 21 thru Christmas. Reliable and dependable individuals a must. Contact Lisa at the Salvation Army M & F 3-7 and Thurs 1-6 $4.50/hour

$200 - $500 WEEKLY
Assemble products at home. Easy! No selling. You're paid direct. Fully guaranteed. FREE INFORMATION - 24 HOUR HOTLINE: 801-379-2900 Copyright # MA15KDH

WANTED: TRAVEL REPS for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SIESTA, ask for Bonnie

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons - first lesson half price 665-1178

Italian Tutor
Native Speaker
Call 546-1347

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

LOST

Brown clutch purse - Purse desperately need contents
Reward 549-1198

Glasses in black case somewhere between E-Lot and Central - Call 546-5258

Lost Book 10-23: A History of Russia on NOHO bus, borrowed important highlights. Call Eric 586-8918

PERSONALS

Dave
I Love you so much honey.
Happy 1st Anniversary
Thanks for everything.
Mugga-Mugga-Mugga!
Lo ve Always,
Me

Happy Birthday
Dahui Huang
From Hamlin House Council

Micah
Congratulations on your first department show! Good luck and break a leg!
Your Best Friend,
Michael

SIGMA KAPPA SISTERS and pledges: Get ready for the best date party ever! Thanks to Dana, Mitch and Jen

Xavier-
Happy Anniversary!
Let's play forever.
Your Best Friend,
Bartholomew

ROOMMATES WANTED

2 girls needed to share largest bedroom in a 3 bdrm Puffton APT. 549-7319

SERVICES

Free Peer Counseling lesbian, gay, bisexual issues. Phone or walk in. LBG counseling collective, 406G Student Union 545-2645

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Resumes
Need help? I have experience with resumes. Quick service, free advice, excellent quality, and LOW prices. IBM laser printing service available.
Call Andy 549-8463

Tarot readings
Call Chris 256-0821

RSO FAIR '92

RSO FAIR '92
Monday, November 9
12-4 SUB
FREE food, entertainment, prizes, Demonstrations and Information.
5 College Community Welcome!
SPONSORED BY
Div. of Student Activities

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed - Free cover page, spell check, laser printout. $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795

Typing-Word processing
Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations. Laser Printing
Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268

WANTED

We want your 2BDRM Puffton lease!! Starting January 1. Call us first! Reward If we sign it!! Call 549-7319

Cash for your Clunker!
Get paid for your worthless car! Call 549-4897 and ask for Crusty for details. This is not a joke. I need your car!

Sports

Maguire, UMass down Huskies 22-10

By CHRIS CUDDY
Collegian Staff

Spearheaded by Jim Maguire's three field goals and four Northeastern turnovers, the University of Massachusetts defeated the Huskies 22-10 before a McGuirk Stadium crowd of 5,051 on Saturday.

The Minutemen, now 6-1 and riding a six game winning streak, used a balanced running game and another outstanding defensive effort to edge NU, who falls to 4-3-1.

"We just played a little better than them [Northeastern]," said UMass head coach Mike Hodges. "Our team is playing with a lot of confidence and emotion right now. As long as we keep it up, we'll be OK."

After a 19-yard Maguire field goal gave the Minutemen a 3-0 lead with seconds left in the first quarter, the Huskies stormed back for ten unanswered points while building a 10-3 lead over UMass late in the second quarter.

It appeared that NU would carry that lead into the locker room at halftime, as the Huskies regained possession with just over a minute left before the break.

It was at this point that the UMass defense took over, as reserve strong safety Roger Kotlarz stepped in front of a Ralph Barone pass at the Husky 43-yard line, taking all the way to the one before being brought down by Austin Saladin.

"I just happened to be in the right place at the right time," said Kotlarz, who was starting in place of Allen Gibson.

Reserve fullback Ron Drapeau bulled in from the one on the game's next play, knotting the game at ten apiece.

Northeastern would threaten once again to regain the lead before the half, driving to the UMass 26 yard line before Scott Assencoa and Brian Corcoran forced Husky tailback Bill Eacrett to cough up the ball with 26 seconds left.

"Our defense prides ourselves on making the big play," said UMass linebacker Mario Perry (4 tackles, 1 1/2 sacks). "If we don't make a big play on defense, something's wrong."

After the break the Minutemen took control of the game, scoring 12 unanswered points as the Huskies could muster only 38 yards of total offense over the game's final 30 minutes.

UMass would take the lead for good six minutes into the third quarter, taking over at the Northeastern 24 yard line after Tony Williams forced a Barone fumble after a 12 yard Husky gain.

Four plays later Maguire would boot a career-long 40 yard field goal, giving the Minutemen a 13-10 lead.

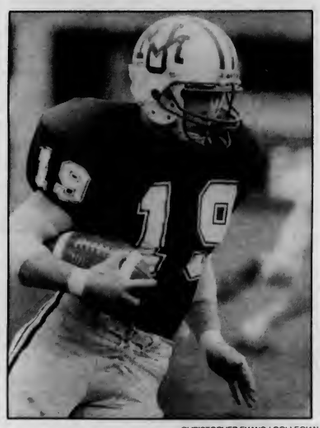
Northeastern would never really threaten again, as the Minuteman defense would allow the Huskies 12 yards in offense the rest of the way.

"They're a good defensive team," said NU head coach Barry Gallup. "They did what they had to do down the stretch."

The Minutemen made it 16-10 with 10:10 left when Maguire booted his third field goal on the afternoon, a 42-yarder that bested his 40-yarder as a career-best.

John Johnson would finish out the scoring with 2:29 left, scrambling in from the three after apparently being swarmed under at the line of scrimmage.

"I followed the pulling guard into the hole and there was nothing there but a mass of people," said Johnson. "Then I looked at myself and said 'I'm not down.' So I ran around the pack, handed the ball to the official and said, 'I'm in! I'm in!' He just looked at me and said, 'I know son.'"



CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

The University of Massachusetts football team, led by Rene Ingoglia, won its sixth game in a row Saturday by defeating Northeastern 22-10.

■ madness

continued from page 1

"Expect 31."

The event was handled smoother than ever before, as students were given tickets before they reached the door, assuring them of a seat in the Cage. Security and UMass police were also out in full force, making sure the Midnight Madness-record crowd did not get out of hand.

"Everything went off without a hitch," said ticket manager Thorr Bjorn. "Our biggest concern was getting everyone in safely. Giving them tickets really worked out for the best."

Two eagerly awaited contests were the John Calipari look-alike contest and best UMass fan contest. Matthew Goldstein, a virtual Calipari clone, won the contest in a landslide. The judging fans loved his rendition of an angry Calipari.

A fan who painted on a UMass tank top jersey on his torso and ornamented his head with a basketball rim, won the best fan award.

A veritable freak show occurred when Tettemer asked all costumed fans to participate in the "best costume" contest, for a potpourri of transvestites, and male nuns rushed the floor. The winner by consensus was a man, replete with moustache, dressed as a woman with tight pants and swimsuit top, but assistant coaches Bill Bayno and James "Bruiser" Flint gave the award to a woman dressed as a walrus.

As the lights dimmed at 16 minutes to midnight, a omen of some sort occurred when the spotlight blew out. Introductions were done in the pitch black until the Cage lights were turned back on. Calipari said the spotlight breaking was a good omen for this year's team.

"It's a good omen because for us, we should be judged on how we play and whether we give 100 percent, not on how we look," he said.

Calipari conducted a 10-minute scrimmage to show off the team's talents, and Lou Roe, Jerome Malloy and newcomer Dana Dingle wasted no time in showing off their talents.

Tony Barbee won the dunk contest with his back-to-the-backboard, bounce-under-the-legs off-the-backboard catch-and-slam.

Maguire boots 3 FG's

Kicking game comes up big for UM

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

Head coach Mike Hodges said Saturday that the University of Massachusetts kicking game has been solid all season but hasn't directly determined the outcome of any game.

Saturday against Northeastern in front of 5,051 rowdy fans that all changed, as senior placekicker/punter Jim Maguire played the biggest game of his career, banging home field goals of 19, 40 and 42 yards. Maguire also made the best hit of the day when he dropped his shoulder and flipped NU's Clarzell Pearl, just as Pearl was about to break a kick return.

"We've talked about (the importance of) the kicking game from day one," said an elated Hodges. "Today the kicking game definitely helped us win."

Maguire's first field goal, a 19-yard chip-shot, put UMass on the board first with 20 seconds left in the first quarter. His second, at 8:13 of the third quarter, was a 40-yd line drive knuckleball that broke a 10-10 tie and put the Minutemen up for good. Maguire left no doubt, how-

Turn to KICKING, page 15

UMASS, 22-10
at Amherst

Northeastern(4-3-1)... 0 10 0 0 - 10
UMass(6-1)..... 3 7 3 9 - 22

UM - Maguire 19-yard FG
NU - Rogan 20-yard FG
NU - Gobeil 7-yard pass from Barone (Rogan kick)
UM - Drapeau 1-yard run (Maguire kick)
UM - Maguire 40-yard FG
UM - Maguire 42-yard FG
UM - Johnson 3-yard run (pass failed)

Attendance - 5,051

	NU	UM
First Downs	9	15
Rushes-yards	41-137	59-202
Passing yards	34	30
Return yards	112	160
Passes	18-8-1	13-4-1
Punts	7-38.7	6-33.7
Fumbles-lost	3-3	1-1
Penalties-lost	4-37	7-64

Field hockey wins 4-0 at home

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

Ainslee Press scored a goal, leading the University of Massachusetts field hockey team over Springfield College, 4-0 Saturday at Totman Field.

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

On Halloween, the sun rose and set, children went out trick-or-treating, and the University of Massachusetts field hockey team won. All three occured in equally routine fashion.

The Minutewomen (17-1) controlled Saturday's game at Totman Field against Springfield College, netting four goals in the first half and extending their winning streak to seven games. Danielle Borges, Ainslee Press, Colleen Duffy and Jenn Salisbury scored to put the game out of reach by halftime.

The Minutewomen, playing their first game in a week, showed no signs of letdown in the first half. Head coach Pam Hixon was concerned about a possible letdown.

"I saw Springfield upset Providence 2-0 at Providence," Hixon said. "I was a little apprehensive going into the game, but the players showed no signs of pressure. I was worried that the team would take Springfield too lightly, but we really executed."

One aspect that the team worked on during the week was the standard offense, which had been anemic of late. Hixon said she was concerned the team was scoring almost exclusively on penalty corners.

"I think we did play well on offense," she said. "We really dominated, we passed the ball really well. We got

Turn toFIELD HOCKEY, page 15

Women boost NCAA hopes with road wins

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

ORLANDO, Fla. — Senior forward Kim Eynard scored two game- winning goals over the weekend to virtually lock up an NCAA tournament bid for the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team.

Massachusetts (15-3) defeated tenth ranked Southern Methodist on Saturday and No. 13 Central Florida yesterday by identical 1-0 scores.

"We played wonderful," UMass Coach Jim Rudy said. "Defensively we didn't give up anything the whole weekend. We couldn't have played much better."

Massachusetts, ranked No. 11 nationally, came up with two big efforts under the hot Florida sun and should receive an at large bid to the NCAA tournament when the field of twelve is announced

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 14

Tuesday November 3, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 39

Cloudy with showers, clearing later. Temps in the low 50s.

Local News:
The Amherst select board voted last night to suspend Twisters Tavern's liquor license for alleged violations of the town's capacity limits. Page 3.

Arts & Living:
Too Much Joy is too good to miss when it plays tonight with Material Issue and The Mighty Lemondrops at Pearl Street. Page 8.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Pedestrians struck

Two UM undergraduates hospitalized

TOM HALLER / COLLEGIAN

An automobile which struck two pedestrians, both UMass undergraduates on University Drive last evening. Both students are currently hospitalized.

By EVELYN A. DE JESUS and GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Staff

Two female pedestrians were seriously injured as a result of a one-car accident last night on University Drive at approximately 7 p.m., according to eyewitness reports.

Carrie Crossland, a freshman from Westwood, was admitted to Baystate Medical Center about 8 p.m. last night according to hospital officials. Crossland, according to her roommate, suffered a broken nose and is currently in a coma.

Jennifer Coughlin, a freshman from Norwood, was also admitted to Baystate and suffered two broken shoulders according to Crossland's roommate. Hospital officials would not comment on either students' condition.

"They were crossing the street when they got hit," said Dan Moroney, who witnessed the accident from the curb of University Drive. "One went over the hood and one went off to the side."

The windshield of the car, a late-model Chevrolet Celebrity, showed signs of being cracked from the outside, with heavy damage on the driver side. Moroney said that one of the injured, and possibly both, struck the windshield.

Lt. Michael Grabiec, who heads the UMass Police's department of investigations, declined comment at the scene, saying only that the accident was still under investigation. The information would be made available when the investigation was completed and the ap-

Turn to ACCIDENT, page 6

Clinton favored to win despite vulnerabilities

By WALTER R. MEARS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON, D.C. — There was a time when Bill Clinton was the Republicans' favorite Democratic challenger. Now the man they thought would be vulnerable is at the doorstep of the White House, the election-eve favorite to defeat President Bush on Tuesday.

The character and trust questions Bush was pressing in the final days, when Clinton's lead in the polls narrowed to striking distance, couldn't have been applied to a different Democrat.

One top Republican mused that if the Democratic nominee had been one of the front-rank dropouts - Bill Bradley of New Jersey or Sam Nunn of Georgia, for example - the president's re-election chances would be none instead of slim.

The GOP theory was that Clinton was a flawed candidate, carrying too much political baggage to oust their incumbent president. He certainly had baggage, but he carried it skillfully, and dispensed with much of it early in the season.

When Bush and his allies began bearing down on character as an issue, the president did show temporary gains in the polls.

"We simply cannot take a risk on Gov. Clinton," Bush said Monday. "You have to have the trust of the people through character and you have to have the trust of the world when you are President."

Bush said he didn't come up with the word "slick" to describe Clinton. "I did say slippery when wet. I will stand with that."

The Gennifer Flowers affair accusations and Clinton's varying accounts of the way he avoided the Vietnam draft both surfaced before the presidential primary elections began.

The Republicans chose to let Democrats wrangle among themselves. As Clinton noted after Bush raised the draft question in the final campaign weeks, the president had discounted it as an issue last winter.

At that point, rival Democrats were making the case against Clinton, and warning the party that their attacks were only a pale preview of what he'd face from the Republicans in the fall.

That was in the days when Clinton was emerging from a thin Democratic field to effectively clinch the nomination only weeks into the campaign.

By the time he did, Bush had his own intra-party problems - the conservative challenge and the persistent protest vote in the GOP primaries.

He also had his own baggage: the economic slump. That's been the Democrat's issue from the start, along with the classic outsider's message that it's time for a change. Bush bounced among themes, trying to find one that would work. One effort was the unlikely claim that he'd bring change.

Bush talked more about changing his own administration in a second term than he had about changing things in 1988.

All of that gave Clinton a relatively free ride prior to his nomination, and it was extended when the Republicans looked past him and tackled Ross Perot after the independent entry climbed in the polls.

With Clinton's nomination, the Bush campaign decided on a theme that had worked before: They'd depict him as a tax-and-spend liberal, just like the Democrats who lost in 1988 and 1984.

New legislation impacts women

State Rep. Story cites revamped system, stalking bill

By STACY MALONE
Collegian Staff

State Representative Ellen Story, Democratic candidate of the Third Hampshire District, said in an interview yesterday that the passing of recent bills concerning violence against women through the legislature will have a great impact on all women.

"In the short time I have been in the legislature there have been three important bills that have passed which specifically apply to violence against women," Story said. "They are the stalking law, a new computer system in the court system and a new standard for setting bail."

Before the stalking bill was passed an ex-boyfriend or ex-husband could be harassing a woman and there was nothing she could do about it. Now if there is a restraining order against someone and they are stalking, the person can be arrested, said Story.

She also said there is a new computer system in the court system that gives the judge all information available about the history and current restraining orders of the person who is arrested.

"If someone is arrested the judge not only can, but is mandated to pull up all information on the person," Story said. "Before this law passed, judges would not have a whole history of the arrested person and would not know that the person who was arrested in Northampton had been battering someone in Worcester."

The past criteria for setting bail solely depended on whether the person would return to the court for trial or not. The new criteria, which is just recently in effect, also takes in consideration the dangerousness of the person, said Story.

"The judge would have to decide if the person is set loose what could be the consequences," Story said. "The judge is the only person who can decide whether or not bail can be set for an arrested person depending upon the person's dangerousness."

Story believes the two main reasons for the passing of the recent bills are the escalation in domestic violence and the Governor's response to the issue.

"Governor Weld has declared a state of emergency around the issue of domestic violence," Story continued, "Domestic violence is now a priority in legislation, because it has to be taken seriously and the tone was set from the top down."

Story said as a community we must send out the right messages to both the batterers and the battered women. She said we must get out the facts to the battered women that domestic violence is extremely common, the battered woman is not bad or worthless, there are genuine safe places for the women to go and help available to assist in supporting their children. Story said the batterers need to know and be shown that battering their wives and

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

State Representative from the Third Hampshire District Ellen Story.

Stuart pleads guilty; closes book on case

By JON MARCUS
Associated Press

BOSTON — In the final twist of a murder hoax that made national headlines, Matthew Stuart today pleaded guilty to charges connected with the 1989 murder of his brother Charles' wife.

Stuart's plea came as jury selection was scheduled to begin for his trial on fraud and obstruction of justice charges because he had disposed of the gun allegedly used to kill Carol DiMaiti Stuart.

Suffolk Superior Court Judge Robert Banks, after hearing from the prosecutor, accepted the plea and sentenced Stuart to three to five years in prison.

The sentencing came after statements to the court by Matthew and Carl DiMaiti, a brother of Carol Stuart.

DiMaiti said Matthew Stuart deserved as much blame for the murder as his brother.

Matthew told the court, "I never knew of my brother's plan to murder his wife," He turned, looked at Carl DiMaiti, and said in a voice choked with emotion, "I am truly sorry, and hope that my actions today will help heal some of the pain of this terrible tragedy."

While the plea closes the legal book on the major part of the case, it leaves much of the circumstances forever up to speculation.

"The rest of the questions were never answered, and are never going to be answered," said Nancy Gertner, Matthew Stuart's attorney.

Matthew, now 26, had maintained all along that he did not know there was a plot to kill Carol Stuart

Turn to STUART, page 4

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Announcement

The candlelight vigil to combat racism which was postponed last night due to rain has been rescheduled for this Thursday, Nov. 5 at 7 p.m. by the Campus Pond.

Write for the Collegian. And vote.

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day
Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

ASSAULTS

• A woman was reportedly walking back to her dormitory in Northeast Residential Area on Saturday morning when she passed five men on the sidewalk. One of the men slapped and grabbed her on the buttocks as she passed them at 1:30 a.m., according to police.

• University police were called to the Blue Wall in the Campus Center to investigate a fight involving several women on Saturday morning. According to police, a woman not involved with the fight asked a male friend of one of the combatants how the fight started at 2 a.m. The man then followed the woman to her car, where he allegedly struck her in the face. Court complaints are being sought and the incident is under investigation, according to police.

• A female Resident Assistant in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall investigated the source of a disturbance on Saturday and was allegedly pushed against a wall by a man who she confronted. The man then fled the dormitory, according to police. The woman reported the incident to police at 2 a.m., and police then stopped and identified the subject, who will be summonsed to Court for a Showcause hearing, according to police.

• Police escorted a man from Baker Residence Hall on Saturday afternoon after they were called in to investigate a disturbance between the man and a woman. The man allegedly broke a mirror in the woman's room at 5:35 p.m., according to police.

• Two women were having an argument on Sunday in front of Curry Hicks Cage when one of the women allegedly threatened to assault the other. Police are investigating the incident, which occurred at 12:30 a.m.

• Two subjects were charged with disorderly conduct and arrested by police on Sunday morning in the Campus Center. Police arrived at the scene and had to break up a fight in progress between them. Toy Bun, 22, and Run Trach, also 22, were arrested at 12:30 a.m., according to police.

• A woman in Washington Residence Hall was riding in an elevator with three men when one of the men allegedly pulled at her shirt and made a derogatory comment to her on Sunday, according to police. The woman reported the incident to police at 2 a.m., and the subjects were then identified. The matter is under investigation, police said.

VANDALISM

• A pizza delivery man was parked in Lot 50 on Saturday morning when a group of men allegedly approached his vehicle and one of them kicked and damaged his rear-view mirror. Police estimate the damage to be $50.

• A car parked on Sylvan Drive sustained $500 in damages after bottles were thrown at it from the windows of a nearby dormitory on Saturday morning.

• Police are investigating damages at the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Concerns office in Crampton Residence Hall. According to police, a plate glass window was kicked-in and a mail slot was bent on Saturday morning. Police estimate the damages to be $225.

• Staff members from the Emerson Residence Hall reported two large drawings on the first and second floors which depicted male genitalia at 11:15 a.m. on Saturday.

• A swastika and a reference to Adolph Hitler was discovered written on a bathroom stall in Dwight Resi-

Turn to POLICE LOG, page 4

For the Serious Student
• Quiet Apartment Living
• Convenient
• Affordable
• Flexible
THE BROOK
253-3834

The Collegian urges you to vote for "BOB"

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
$10 HAIRCUTS!
Make an appointment with Heather or Liz, between 9am and 1pm, and your haircut will be only $10!
Good Monday through Friday.
Expires 11/4/92

University of Massachusetts Employees
We are Your Credit Union
25 Years of Service
YOUR FULL-SERVICE FINANCIAL INSTITUTION, WITH TWO CONVENIENT LOCATIONS: 6 UNIVERSITY DRIVE IN AMHERST, AND ON THE UNIVERSITY CAMPUS IN DRAPER HALL.
OUR 6 UNIVERSITY DRIVE OFFICE IS OPEN WEEKDAYS, 9:30 - 3:30, AND FRIDAY UNTIL 6:00. THE WALK-UP WINDOW IS OPEN MONDAY - FRIDAY 7:30 - 9:30, AND MONDAY, THURSDAY, AND FRIDAY UNTIL 6:00.
OUR DRAPER HALL OFFICE IS OPEN MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, AND FRIDAY 9:30 - 1:30.
AS A TOKEN OF OUR APPRECIATION FOR YOUR SUPPORT OVER THE YEARS, WE ARE MAKING YOU THIS OFFER: IF YOU BRING US THIS AD WHEN YOU OPEN A CHECKING ACCOUNT, AND/OR QUALIFY AND ARE APPROVED FOR A VISA CARD, WE WILL WAIVE THE COST OF YOUR FIRST BOX OF CHECKS ($15.00 LIMIT) AND/OR YOUR FIRST YEAR'S VISA ANNUAL FEE.
MEMBER SIGNATURE, ACCOUNT NUMBER, AND TODAY'S DATE
(OFFER GOOD THROUGH 31 DECEMBER, 1992)
Your Credit Union
U-MASS/FIVE COLLEGE FEDERAL CREDIT UNION
6 UNIVERSITY DRIVE
AMHERST, MASSACHUSETTS 01002
TELEPHONE (413) 549-7400, LOAN (413) 549-4722
MA WATS (800) 852-5886, FACSIMILE (413) 549-6766
ESTABLISHED 1967
Our Field of Membership includes employees of the Five Colleges, the Clarke School for the Deaf, and Kaiser Permanente in Hampshire and Franklin Counties, persons working on the campuses of the Five Colleges for other employers, and the families of these people.
Your deposit insured to 100,000 NCUA National Credit Union Administration

THE EDWIN M. ROSSMAN ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS
SPORT MANAGEMENT
DATE: WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1992
TIME: 3:00 PM
LOCATION: CAMPUS CENTER 168C
SPONSORED BY:
MATHER CAREER CENTER
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
SPORT MANAGEMENT
This is an opportunity to meet with alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world. Don't miss this important panel discussion!
ALUMNI PANELISTS:

Paul Baldrate - B.S., 1989	Assistant Manager and Membership Coordinator, Plymouth & Worcester Athletic Clubs
Pam Batalis - M.S., 1991	Sales Representative, Reebok Northeast
Tom Cafaro - M.S., 1979	Athletic Director, Nichols College
Heidi Holland - M.S., 1981	Director of Media Relations, Boston Bruins
Pam Stone - B.S., 1988	Public Relations Manager, Spalding Sports Worldwide

For more information, please contact:
Mather Career Center
545-2224

Local News

Select Board to penalize Twisters Tavern

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

The Amherst Select Board suspended Twisters Tavern's alcohol license from Nov. 15 to Nov. 21 yesterday with the possibility of adding Nov. 12 - Nov. 14 to the penalty at the town meeting held at the Bangs Community Center.

"You're shutting them down for 10 consecutive days. This is a long period," said Sheldon Rosenthal, a Springfield lawyer representing Twister's owner Mark Forsych.

On several occasions the Amherst Fire Department have reported over-crowding at Twisters Tavern, which is license to seat 120 people. On Sept. 11 the fire department found 189 patrons inside the tavern and 14 on the patio. Another incident occurred on Sept. 16 with the Assistant Fire Chief finding 339 patrons inside Twisters and 10 on the patio.

Rosenthal admitted the evidence was true, but said Forsych was pressured to let loiters in to preserve order outside the bar. Also on one of the nights when the over-crowding was found Forsych said people snuck in the back of the bar, according to Rosenthal.

"What is outside of the building is no responsibility [to bar owners]," Amherst Fire Chief Victor Zumbruski said.

But Select Board member Harry Brooks said businesses in the area are complaining the over-crowding is making them look bad.

"I move we revoke the license. Role back hours to 10:30 p.m.," Brooks said. "It would be a modern version of an English pub."

As Brooks stated his proposal of Twisters having soups and salads, students in the back of the room groaned and laughed. When the ALO East, Inc., which owns Twisters, applied for the alcohol license back in 1988, it said in its plans it would be an English pub for business people, according to Selectman Bryan Harvey.

"It would enable him to go back to original request of what it was originally was about," Brooks said.

Brooks added that Forsyth would save money because he would be able to hire less people because they would be open for a shorter amount of time.

Although Brooks suggested the bar to roll back its hours, Select Board member Brena Kuchinski said this problem has happened before and will happen again so the board should penalize the tavern harshly.

"I would like in some ways revoke their licence," Kuchinski said. "I think [the problems] will come back to us eventually."

Part way through the meeting Town Manager Barry L. Del Castilho said he just got some information that Twisters violated the capacity seating on one other occasion. On Oct. 30 despite the Twisters' staff counting 135 patrons, the Amherst fire department found 141.

About 50 students attended the meeting, along with about 20 townspeople.

Many students said they were angry about not being able to express their views to the select board. Jennifer Anezis, a junior English major who works as a waitress at the tavern, said she believes the other bars are also having problems with over-crowding, but are using Twisters as an example in order to get their business.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
Amherst select board members deliberate the fate of Twisters Tavern last night at the Bangs Community Center.

Librarian negotiates deal to maintain job

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

For reasons of economic survival, Svetlana Speyer, a University of Massachusetts library assistant threatened with termination, has negotiated an agreement with her personnel manager to maintain her job.

Speyer agreed to reduce and reschedule her work hours after receiving one week's suspension and two letters of insubordination threatening termination last month.

"I had no choice — I need to survive," said Speyer, 52, who agreed to have her full-time daytime hours reduced to 28 hours a week despite feelings that the agreement is still unacommadating to her needs. She said she has been forced to compromise her obligations as a single parent by changing two daytime shifts to evening shifts.

Speyer was "kicked out" of her job in the Reserves department a month ago for refusal to switch the daytime hours she has maintained for the past 18 years to the night shift.

"I was really scared and I panicked because I couldn't afford to lose my job," said Speyer. "But right now I don't know what I'm going to do."

Speyer believes she would have been terminated if her grievance wasn't so highly publicized. She said after a recent Collegian article describing the threatening termination process, she was asked to meet with the personnel manager to negotiate an agreement to keep her on staff.

"There's no doubt in my mind that I would have been out of the University [without publicly voicing her grievance]," said Speyer. She said it was obvious her bosses felt threatened by their management style being questioned publicly.

"But it was either I go public or have no job," said Speyer.

Pat Graves, the personnel manager who negotiated the agreement, was unavailable for comment.

Gordon Fretwell, Associate Director of Public Services was also unavailable for comment.

Unhappy with the new agreement, Speyer said she doesn't understand why

Turn to LIBRARIAN, page 6

Gay issues discussed

Panel says gays need role-models

By GREGG A. BORNSTEIN
Collegian Correspondent

A panel of women from the writing program at the University of Massachusetts led a discussion about gay issues in writing classes, at noon yesterday in the Campus Center.

The luncheon, titled "Write what you think, but please not that: Gay issues in the writing classroom" was part of the Program for the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns Brown Bag Lunch Series organized by Ben Zeman, a graduate student in the Social Justice Education Program.

The discussion was opened by Marcia Curtis who addressed problems imminent in the GLB community.

"After listening to Pat Buchanen speak at the Republican National Convention, for the first time in my life I had adult fears," Curtis said. She said she felt that the standards of rights for gay, lesbian and bisexual individuals at UMass were unacceptable.

Curtis said the Black community has been demanding more minority faculty be hired by UMass and she said one reason is that minority teachers can be more of a role model for minority students.

"Gay, lesbian and bisexual students can make those same demands too," Curtis said. She said that there are homosexual teachers already in the university, "If teachers who are gay come out they can act more as role models for gay students."

Cathie Bachy said non-heterosexual perspectives were not usually brought up in the classroom.

But she said once a heterosexual male teacher of hers brought in a lesbian writer to speak in a lecture, presumably to show the students that being a lesbian was valid and equal.

"Anyone can promote this point of view. You don't have to be gay," Bachy said.

Julia Wagner, a writing teacher, said she felt objectivity in analyzing personal writing was essential.

Gabriel Carey said it is very important for gay, lesbian and bisexual people to have peers accepting them for who they are.

After the panelists were done speaking, a role playing exercise was done concerning the public reaction to Magic Johnson's announcement that he had contracted the AIDS virus.

The panelists said the goal of the exercise was to address the question, "Why

Turn to PANEL, page 4

Abortions nearly illegal in U.S.

Author says Roe v. Wade in danger of being overturned

By AARON-JOHN RICADELA
Collegian Correspondent

Abortion is as good as illegal in most of the United States and the Bush administration encourages this repression, said psychologist and author Dr. Kathryn May to an Election Day eve crowd last night.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
Dr. Kathryn May speaks about abortion to a crowd at the Campus Center Auditorium.

A safe and legal abortion is a euphemism and the political climate promotes stripping women of their rights under the guise of a return to traditional values, said May, speaking about her 1988 book, Back Rooms - Life in America when Abortion was / is illegal, an oral history of the illegal abortion era.

"It's been several years since I wrote this book, and I still find these women's stories hard to read. I get a sick feeling in my stomach, and I guess I came here tonight to make you sick, too," said May.

Despite infringements on abortion rights since the 1973 Roe v. Wade decision, May said the situation for the women interviewed for the book was much worse.

"You couldn't learn anything. The non-discussion was the hardest part," she said. May said most women she interviewed for the book chose illegal abortions because "It was the only way they could go on with their lives, even if they had to risk losing them."

With Roe v. Wade, the Supreme Court essentially barred states from regulating against abortions in the first three months of pregnancy. May said the decision ran into trouble recently as conservative legislators and religious groups read the ruling as a misinterpretation of the constitutional privacy act, and distorted the issue.

"You get a different picture if you listen to people on the talk shows. No one wants abortion to be legal in the seventh month. That's not what they're after," said May.

"In the past few years there have been hundreds of

Turn to ABORTION, page 6

Sisters work for hearing impaired

By CHRISTINA THORPE
Collegian Staff

Anyone who saw the women of Delta Zeta sorority last week see-sawing by the campus pond probably wondered what they could have been doing.

The answer is raising money for Gallaudet College for the hearing impaired. Your contributions went toward Gallaudet's research and scholarships.

OK - now the question is why.

Like the other national sororities on campus, Delta Zeta regularly participates in philanthropies, one of which is Gallaudet College. A nationally chosen philanthropy such as Gallaudet receives assistance from the sorority's chapters across the country.

Jennifer Brown, a senior animal science major, and Andrea Rosenberg, a senior psychology major, are the co-fundraiser chairs for Delta Zeta.

Rosenberg said, "See-sawing is a fun way to raise money - while raising money for a good cause."

According to Jodi Slotnick, the Vice President of Philanthropy for the Panhellenic Council, there is no real definition of a philanthropy.

I guess it is something we do as a fundraiser for an organization," said Slotnick. "It helps anyone accident

continued from page 1

propriate contacts were made, he said.

The two women were struck in the northbound lane of University Drive roughly 100 yards north of the corner of Fearing Street and University Drive. Both were admitted to the Trauma Unit at Baystate at or about 8 p.m. last night, according to Pam Ciberowski, a nursing supervisor at the hospital.

Wet road conditions may have been a factor in the cause of the accident. A light rain had been falling yesterday afternoon and evening.

"It was wet — the driver hit the brakes and skidded into them," Moroney said. "It was definitely hard to see. They had dark-colored clothes on and it was dark." Moroney also said he thought the driver did not see the two women until the last minute.

Police arrived on the scene shortly after the accident and closed University Drive from Fearing Street to the Southwest Horseshoe. Two ambulances and five police cars responded to the accident and were later joined by an engine from the Amherst Fire Department.

Collegian staff member Dan Wetzel contributed to this report.

police log

continued from page 2

dence Hall at 3:15 p.m. on Saturday, according to police.

• Graffiti of a homophobic nature was written on several doors and posters on the first floor of Lewis Residence Hall on Sunday. Police are investigating the graffiti, which was discovered at 11:20 a.m.

• A woman discovered a window broken on her vehicle on Sunday, according to police. The car was parked in Lot 32 when the woman discovered the damages.

Stuart

continued from page 1

and that he only pieced it together after disposing of a gun and some of her possessions. Police say he told officers he thought his brother wanted him to help stage a theft for insurance money.

Earlier this year, he was charged with conspiracy to commit insurance fraud and to obstruct justice, compounding a felony, concealing stolen property and unlawful carrying of a handgun.

Charles Stuart had claimed an assailant had entered his automobile the night of Oct. 23, 1989, as they left a birthing class and then shot them. His call from a car radio to police was taped by tabloid television shows and played across the nation.

Carol Stuart died that night, and her son, Christopher, was delivered prematurely and died Nov. 9.

A citywide manhunt ensued, but 10 weeks later, Charles Stuart apparently took his own life after Matthew, a younger brother, told family members he was going public with what he knew of the his brother's actions.

The gun later was found in the Pines River in Revere.

Gertner and her colleagues had said in papers filed with the court that the indictments "typify the commonwealth's frustration after Charles Stuart committed suicide and thereby avoided prosecution."

Charles Stuart had told police a black man had robbed and shot him and his wife, and prosecutors zeroed in on a suspect — too quickly according to civil rights activists — until Charles Stuart's apparent leap from the Tobin Bridge Jan. 4, 1990, convinced observers they had been duped.

panel

continued from page 3

did it take Magic Johnson's contraction of AIDS to bring about the revelation that AIDS can affect everyone?"

Zeman said that the luncheon's aim was, "to make people think about more of the cutting edge of the academic side of GLB studies."

LIBERAL ARTS IN THE MARKETPLACE: OPTIONS AND OPPORTUNITIES

QUESTION:
What do the screenwriter of Young Indiana Jones Chronicles, orchestrator of the presidential debates, and the publicity director for the Boston Red Sox have in common?

ANSWER:
A liberal arts degree from UMass in the Faculty of Humanities and Fine Arts.

THE FACULTY OF HUMANITIES AND FINE ARTS PROUDLY PRESENTS DISTINGUISHED ALUMNI PANELISTS:

Richard Bresciani '60	Director of Publicity, Boston Red Sox Boston, MA
Edward Fouhy '56	Founder & President, Concorde Communications Washington, DC
Jon Hensleigh '81	Screenwriter & Producer New York, NY

DATE? Thursday, November 5
TIME? 8:00 PM
WHERE? Campus Center 163
WHY? Learn what a liberal arts degree can do for your future. Meet alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world.

Don't miss this lively and informative event!

Breakfast Special (8am-10am)
Scrambled Eggs - Home Fries - Toast
$1.49
SUNDAY-FRIDAY SPECIALS
(4:00pm - 9:00pm)
Meatball Grinder $2.65
Italian Dinner Specials
(4:00pm - 11:00pm)
Pizza Slice (Large Cut) 99¢
Large Plain or Pepperoni Pizza with your choice of a pitcher of soda or a pitcher of beer $8.75
Now Through November 24th at
the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

Wanted
STUDENT
Legal Assistants
Application Deadline: Nov. 13th
- No experience necessary; paralegal training provided!
- Work directly with attorneys and clients
- Receive up to 15 academic credits
- Function as a paralegal in a busy law office
- Gain valuable, hands-on experience in the legal field
- Apply TODAY. Call Legal Services at 545-1995!

ENGINEERING • MATHEMATICS • SCIENCES
Pocket Professional™ Software
Plug-In Textbook
Expand the power of your HP 48SX calculator.
Access equations, formulae & technical data instantly!
- Calculus
- Electrical Engineering
- Mechanical Engineering
- General Chemistry
- Statistics
- Mathematics
- Physics
- Spice48
- Solid State Electronics
- Celestial Navigation

AVAILABLE AT YOUR COLLEGE BOOKSTORE OR CALL 1-800-827-8416 (EXT 552)
Sparcom CORPORATION

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Registration system hangs itself

It is estimated that in the 1988 presidential election, barely 50 percent of the electorate voted, as turnout hit its lowest point in 64 years. Even though the participation rate of the U.S. voting-age population was low, it is estimated that more than 80 percent of those registered do vote. Even more Americans might consider exercising their right to vote to participate in the democratic process, if the registration were made more convenient.

Presently, 29 states allow voter registration at motor vehicle offices, and 27 states permit registration by mail. Only three states — Maine, Wisconsin and Minnesota — practice same-day registration and North Dakota requires no registration at all. Experts argue that following the lead of these states would motivate would-be voters to vote.

Dade County, Florida, was one of the first school districts to institute the awarding of voter registration cards along with high school diplomas. It is reported that this pilot program now registers an average of 11,000 high school seniors a year.

Earlier this year, President Bush vetoed legislation nicknamed "motor-voter" which would have required states to allow citizens to register when they obtain or renew their driver's license. It also required states to offer registration by mail and at welfare, unemployment and other government offices.

Some experts claim this legislation would have increased voter registration to a whopping 90 percent — a significant step up from the 60 percent currently signed up. The naysayers predict that such legislation would not increase voter turnout, but would in fact increase the likelihood of fraud and create mountains of paperwork for the registrars.

Then there is the question of "purging" so-called ineligible voters from the rolls. Most states hace procedures for removing voters who do not vote in two consecutive elections. I take issue with this process. A proud native of New York state, I traditionally return to my home state every four years for the privilege of making a difference. This year is the exception. Currently residing in Massachusetts, I phoned New York to request an absentee ballot, only to be informed I had been purged from the state rolls. I was shocked and angry. How dare they deny me the right to stand and be counted? The sympathetic voice at the other end of the phone patiently explained that because I had not notified the board of elections of my change of address, I had been eliminated from the state rolls. It did not seem to matter that I have not lived at that address for over five years, but have still continued to pull the lever in every major election in that district during that time.

And so I sit on the sidelines like a wallflower ignored at the prom. I wonder how many Americans have been locked out of the process while politicians complain about voter apathy. Shouldn't we all have a say in the choosing of our policy makers? And shouldn't that process be made as simple and as accessible as possible? Getting Americans to register to vote is a monumental task. Just look at the massive campaign mounted by MTV's "Rock the Vote" in an effort to inform and prompt 18- to 24-year-old lads to take part in the deciding of issues of that affect us all. Let's keep the voters we have, while encouraging more Americans to register. So I urge those who can, to vote and let your voice be heard. Do it for those of us who can't.

Angela Norman
Springfield

Church must adopt change

Hats off to Sinead O'Connor for doing the unthinkable. In one brilliant moment of expression she touched the untouchable. With one act she opened the door to healthy criticism of an institution that has far too much power in the world. The Catholic Church must be held accountable for its deeds, both good and bad.

David
RIVERA

Few people understood O'Connor's anger with the Catholic Church when she tore up a photograph of Pope John Paul II a few weeks ago on "Saturday Night Live". Claiming the Pope was "evil" she set a fire she didn't expect to ignite. Of course the Bible thumpers and pious pundits went at her like they usually do when a woman questions authority.

Soon after "SNL", O'Connor was booed off stage by a crowd of forty-something dolts during a Bob Dylan tribute. I find this ironic, for it was that same generation that championed free speech. It seems the forty-something crowd is a bit washed up. It's off to the nursing home with you.

O'Connor, in using her right to free speech, tore that photograph to raise awareness of papal power and the church's abuses of that power around the world. Not many in this country understand the authority the church has over people in Ireland and how oppressive it is toward women.

Like many Irish women, O'Connor feels the church regards them merely as instruments of reproduction and nothing else. Abortion is not only illegal but impossible to have. Even if a woman becomes pregnant through rape or incest, the church wouldn't condone an abortion. O'Connor knows that women's rights are all but none existent in Ireland.

Many people feel the church has been given a free ride for far too long. O'Connor wants to bring awareness of the true wrongs of this religious organization to an apathetic Western world.

Claiming homosexuality is against the word of God, the Roman Catholic Church has perpetuated and encouraged hate and violence against homosexuals. In promoting its doctrine against homosexuality, the Catholic Church has created divisive situations like that in Oregon. This election season Oregonites will vote for or against new legislation condemning homosexuality ,which could sendan already backward and sheltered state into the dark ages. Shame.

Roman Catholicism is a multinational corporation and should be controlled like one. No more "separation of church and state" nonsense. It's time for the church to pay its fair share of taxes.

This separation has proven wrong time and time again, but a sad example of abuses by the church can be found in the case of Father James Porter. As the atrocities committed by Father Porter become known, more people are questioning the authority of the church.

I don't condemn any institution because of the acts of one sick person; I condemn an institution that protected him and allowed him to hurt more and more children. Church officials knew Porter molested children. They did virtually nothing to stop him and covered up the case. The church is as guilty as Porter.

Last week the Vatican finally apologized for condemning Galileo's idea of the solar system. Four hundred years ago he was sentenced to life imprisonment for saying the Earth revolved around the Sun. Four hundred years later they finally admit he was right and said they were sorry.

Maybe hundreds of years from now the church will apologize for their mistreatment of homosexuals. And maybe hundreds of years from now the Roman Catholic Church will apologize to women and admit they have the right to do whatever they want concerning their bodies. But by then — like for Galileo — it will be far too late.

David Rivera is a Collegian columnist.

Ques. 3 endangers public health

Question 3 would require all packaging in this state to be reduced in size, reusable or made of materials that have been or could be recycled. The MassPIRG-backed initiative, endorsed by Governor Weld, is likely to have a major impact on the food industry without having a major impact on the solid waste stream.

Food packaging is an easy target; consumers see it everywhere. However, it represents less than 2 percent of municipal solid waste. Packaging materials comprise only about 30 percent of municipal solid waste; some 24 percent of this already is recycled. The majority is non-packaging materials, and is not much recycled (only 8 percent is). If we vote for Question 3, we will be scratching the wrong place. We should limit non-packaging waste rather than packaging waste.

The Institute of Food Technologists addressed the issue in its report "Food Packaging, Food Protection and the Environment" It states clearly that, while we do need to address the environmental issues in packaging decisions, we cannot compromise the high degree of food safety, quality and nutrition presently provided to the American consumer. Uniform national packaging standards and coding to identify materials for recycling would better address waste reduction without compromising food safety. Packaging of food is an essential part of public health, standard of living and lifestyle in the U.S. Food packaging is highly regulated to assure safety. Reduction in its size or reusing of used materials can result in outbreaks of food-borne diseases and even death.

Pavinee Chinachoti
Associate Professor of Food Science
Hatfield

Pretentious column trivialized abortion issue

Stephanie Eisenberg's trivialization of the moral massacre of abortion is disconcertingly typical of the selfish mindset in modern America [Collegian, Oct. 30].

To illegalize murder while condoning abortion is to flaunt the hypocrisy embedded in our misprioritized value system.

I feel compelled to denounce the condescending tone of this article, which I consider a pathetic attempt to minimalize the severity of the issue.

Eisenberg's reasoning is similar to that of most subscribers to the "me first" philosophy. She reduces the beauty of a human life to a matter of monetary gains and losses in a workplace power struggle.

This stultified outlook is a failure to realize that the disregard for the equality of women stems from the same neglect of basic human life advocated by abortion.

The commercialization used to stereotype generations gives the illusion that more, faster and easier represent the "blessed" idea of progress we vainly take pride in as a society.

In actuality, we are tearing ourselves away from the very simplicity which is our natural, inherent livelihood as humanity. Gender discrimination is not a result of abortion. By defending abortion for this purpose, you are saying there's no real reason to stop oppression, but that we will simply take any measures to make ourselves succumb to it!

It is pretentious to call me a "snoozing pro-lifer" when I can claim sincerity above a feigned faithfulness to practicality.

Regarding the invitation to "tune in": I do not listen to stations that play constant grating static. I pronounce my exclusion from the classification "us women" and I would not like it to be supposed that I would ever "yabba dabba doo" about anything.

The infantile theme framing the argument makes offensive light of a traumatic injustice that carries beyond the scope of the article.

It is obvious that Eisenberg is the one assuming a holier than thou attitude by granting herself divine authority to determine the destiny of an innocent child.

And yes, I am one of those "types" who think abortion is murder, and I am not surprised that in order to be consistent with her futile argument, she closed her article with the apathetic hope that my type will "die out" so as not to inconvenience the pseudo-liberation of womankind.

Marianna LaCanfora
Central

Don't let out-of-state CEOs buy your vote

These may be the last words you read about Question 3, so read on. (vote yes) The recycling initiative will set recycling standards for packaging for manufacturers. (manufacturers) The little man at your corner store is exempt, for he is not the problem. (Dow Chemical is the problem) The problem is that packaging is over one third of the waste we throw away every year. (compact disc boxes) If we contine this, we'll close 80 percent of our landfills in the next three years. (new taxes)

So who's fighting Question 3? (money-grubbing CEOs) The large corporations that gave us this stuff. Ninety-four percent of the money on the "No on 3" campaign is from outside Massachusetts. (bogus) Meanwhile, Gov. Weld, Sens. Kerry and Kennedy, the League of Women Voters and every environmental group are endorsing Question 3.

Don't let Exxon buy your vote! (dumb) Make sure you vote yes on today's ballot and ban wasteful packaging. Vote yes on 3. (yes!)

Dana L. Forrar
Amherst

abortion

continued from page 3

laws passed by dozens of states to try and regulate against abortion," said May. Parental consent laws contributed to a chipping away at Roe, and are horrifying to anyone under 18, she said.

"The parental consent law in Indiana led Becky Bell to seek an illegal abortion because she didn't want to disappoint her family. Now her parents are stomping across the country for abortion rights because their daughter's illegal abortion killed her. If it weren't for that parental consent law, she would still be alive today. She's not the only case," said May.

May said the 24-hour waiting period in some states contributes to illegal abortions, especially in a state such as Mississippi, where there are three abortion clinics. Many women can not afford the travel expenses the law requires, said May. She also cited informed consent, public disclosure of clinical records, and the attempted gag rule as repressive measures.

"This is what's happening out there. It's still possible to get abortions if you have money or live near a city, but for most women in this country, in fact in 83 percent of this nation's counties, there is no legal abortion available," she said.

May quoted Supreme Court Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist who said threats to abortion rights have made Roe v. Wade "a mere facade".

"It's important that we realize the implications of issues that are so relevant on this night before our election," said May.

librarian

continued from page 3

she couldn't continue her former work schedule. She added that the whole situation is so unfair because she said they're hiring other people to fill the position she was transferred out of.

"I feel so victimized. It is so hard to work there now," said Speyer. "People look at me like I'm a trouble maker."

Considering seeking other employment after receiving threats from co-workers and having had an object thrown at her, Speyer said when she asked her boss if she could get good recommendations for her 18 years employment, he told her she didn't have a good work record.

But Speyer, who feels she has been a dedicated worker, is angry her identity has been ruined, with two letters of insubordination on her record. "It's highly upsetting," said Speyer.

"They expected me to walk away quietly but I wouldn't do it," said Speyer, who is considering writing an open letter to her boss voicing her resentment to the agreement she feels forced into.

Recycle this Collegian.

see-saw

continued from page 3

who needs our help - an individual organization or a general cause."

As a whole, the Greek Area participates in several different philanthropies each semester. This fall Slotnick, with the help of the Interfraternity Council's Vice President of Philanthropy Jason Gragerman, has planned philanthropies with a range of beneficiaries.

For the Thanksgiving holiday, fraternities and sororities will match up to "adopt a family." The Greeks will prepare turkey dinners for their families who reside in local shelters.

So far this semester the Greek Area has been a force in several philanthropic undertakings including a telethon to raise money for the Newman Center, and a drive which collected and packaged candy wrappers to send in for rebates to help maintain the UMass library. Sororities have also been babysitting every Wednesday at Wildwood Elementary School.

There are no monetary returns for fraternities and sororities when they participate in philanthropies. Slotnick feels the motivation to contribute is the same as with anyone else who does volunteer work. It comes from the desire to give to the community and the "incredible feeling" a volunteer, or Greek, receives when he or she does just that.

"You feel great when you help someone else out," said Slotnick, "and when we know people feel they can count on us for help."

For the December holidays there is a tentative Christmas party planned for the children of local shelters. Slotnick is hopeful this will become reality.

Many saw how Alpha Tau Gamma contributed to AIDS research during Homecoming with the Gyro. Delta Upsilon has their annual Chariot Roll to benefit the Jimmy Fund, and Sigma Kappa sells lollipops to raise money for research of Alzheimer's Disease. Chi Omega has no chosen national sorority, yet this semester these women have adopted an owl, participated in the American Apple Harvest, and plan to visit a soup kitchen.

Story

continued from page 1

children is a type of behavior that will not be tolerated.

She also said we need more funding for battered women shelters and more education in schools to tackle the problem of violence against women. Funding battered women's shelters will give battered women a safe place to go and more education in schools can teach the younger generations how to talk about problems rather than beat one another up, said Story.

"Domestic violence is a huge problem and will not eliminate violence against women only by education and financial support," Story said. "We have to start taking steps so they will all fit together to create a society in which domestic violence and violence against women will be unacceptable."

TONIGHT

OPEN STAGE NIGHT WITH MC PETE FREE

Any Menu Nachos $2.00 9:30 - 10:30

THE 24 PUB

CELEBRATES 24 YEARS 1968 • 1992 IN AMHERST

•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

THE COFFEE SHOP

Nov. 2 - Nov. 6 Bring This Coupon & Get A Free 12oz. Soda With Any Purchase of $2.00 or More.

Campus Center

WE'VE PUT A NEW SPIN ON INVESTING WITH TIAA-CREF

At TIAA-CREF, our goal has always been to make your retirement dollars go farther. Now, they can go as far as London, Frankfurt or Tokyo—or anywhere else in the world where financial opportunities seem promising—with our new CREF Global Equities Account.

THE CREF GLOBAL EQUITIES ACCOUNT EXPANDS THE HORIZON FOR RETIREMENT SAVINGS.

The CREF Global Equities Account is an actively-managed portfolio of both foreign and domestic stocks selected for diversity and growth potential. As part of a wide range of annuity and investment alternatives already offered by TIAA-CREF, it can increase your ability to create a more balanced, well-rounded retirement plan. While returns may vary over time, the CREF Global Equities Account is based on CREF's already-existing strength and the long-term approach to investing that has made TIAA-CREF America's preeminent pension organization.

WHEN IT COMES TO FOREIGN INVESTING, WE'RE ON FAMILIAR GROUND.

We've been speaking the language of foreign investing for nearly twenty years. That's when we pioneered investing pension funds on an international level. All those years of research, market analysis and cultivation of regional contacts have given us special insight into the risks and rewards of today's global marketplace.

DISCOVER MORE ABOUT OUR NEW GLOBAL EQUITIES ACCOUNT.

The CREF Global Equities Account is offered through your TIAA-CREF retirement annuities, subject to the provisions of your employer's retirement plan. It is automatically available for TIAA-CREF Supplemental Retirement Annuities (SRAs).

To find out more about the CREF Global Equities Account or TIAA-CREF's other annuity and investment alternatives, send for our free brochure. Or call 1 800-842-2776.

You'll find that at TIAA-CREF, our world revolves around helping you build a secure and rewarding future.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

SEND FOR OUR FREE BOOKLET

The CREF Global Equities Account—A Wor-D of Opportunity and learn more about this exciting new CREF Account. Mail this coupon to: TIAA-CREF, Dept. QC, 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10017. Or call 1 800-842-2776.

Name (Please print)

Address

City State Zip Code

Institution (Full name)

Title Daytime Phone ( )

TIAA-CREF Participant ☐ Yes ☐ No If yes, Social Security #

CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800-842-2733, ext. 5509 for a prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

Multicultural Affairs

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Combatting racism, weather permitting

A vigil to protest racism was cancelled last night due to the weather. This is an interesting concept. Students on this campus were only going to "peacefully protest" if the weather was good. Since when has racism been dictated by weather?

This concept of holding a vigil must be taken further and so must the concept of "organizing" other groups that are supposedly combatting racism. Holding vigils is never going to end the daily violations that students of color on this campus are forced to tolerate. Holding candles only symbolize the racism and those wicks only last so long. Students need to wake up and take some action. Don't stand around hoping the weather is good so that you can stand "peacefully" and pray to who knows what for white people to be good to you.

It seems that the administration simply wants us to 'appreciate' the racial attacks and violations when they put out this line of 'celebrating diversity'.

As we have seen, many students have taken the reactionary stance and they have molded together some groups that are purportedly challenging racism. One such group is Allied Students Against Prejudice (A.S.A.P.). For those who believe that they are "doing something," ask yourself what is changing on this campus.

Are African, Latino, Asian, and Native American (ALANA) students still being beaten up, raped, harassed, and threatened? Are people of color still being denied the opportunity to get an education? Are ALANA students still being forced to learn from a Eurocentric curriculum by racist and sexist faculty? Do ALANA students still constitute only 10 percent of the population on this campus? It becomes quite obvious that nothing is changing positively for students of color here.

Another interesting group is the Institute for the Healing of Racism. We must begin to understand that racism isn't something we attempt to "heal." One can never put a band-aid on a person who is bleeding to death after being stabbed in the back.

Besides, racism is embedded in the institutions of this society. The structures that we have today like universities, social service agencies, businesses, administrative offices, and so forth are fundamentally linked to the U.S. government, and are based on racist practice. Racism in this country is systemic, and people must recognize that institutions are set up to perpetuate this system, not "heal" it.

Just look at the chancellor's language: "I believe we should go at this task as a community — in a spirit less interested in blaming than in healing." He is simply attempting to divert responsibility from the administration to the students, especially students of color.

The administration on this campus loves such groups like A.S.A.P. and the "Institute . . ." and they love to see vigils and "multicultural" events because ultimately, they want to pacify the students. They figure that a few dances and dinners will satisfy students of color and that the whole university can participate in this "cultural exchange." The chancellor even proposed putting forth $100,000 for multicultural events. This only exploits us, our people, and our culture for their benefit.

Cara Lee BIRCH

Compare this to the language used around Columbus Day. Depicting Columbus as a man bringing different cultures together only grossly distorted the reality of genocide against Indigenous peoples of this land. Media folks and government sponsored celebrations put out the line that his discovery was "inevitable" and that now, we should just "appreciate" our cultural differences.

Holding cultural dinners and dances only distorts the reality of people of color and helps to ignore the daily violence. It seems that the administration simply wants us to "appreciate" the racial attacks and violations when they put out this line of "celebrating diversity."

Another tactic the administration uses is their handpicking of students to participate in such things like the negotiations that are going on. They say that students of color are negotiating demands put forth to the chancellor. However, there is a white woman who is also on this negotiating team. Also, many of the students on that team never even saw the list of demands until the first day of negotiations. As students of color, we don't even know who is representing us.

Students have been sucked into thinking with the colonial and victim mentality by attempting to work with their own oppressors.

To top it all off, the administration has the U.S. Justice Department mediating the negotiations. One of the purposes of representatives from this department is to go around to college campuses, such as ours, in order to pacify the students there through "negotiations." This also helps deflect the issue at stake which is the repression and exploitation of people of color in this country and abroad.

Since when has the Justice Department ever vied for people of color in this system? Why are students of color working with those who are putting one out of four African-American men in jail? Why are students working with those who serve a government that supports the South African government and who murders our people in the Third World?

Students have been sucked into thinking with a colonial and victim mentality by attempting to work with their own oppressors. The administration is nothing but wealthy people who don't give a damn about our lives. They have nice comfortable jobs at the expense of our labor and exploitation. They can go home and have something to eat and sleep in a nice house after their day of work. We are still harassed, abused, and raped on a campus that is blatantly racist.

The climate of this campus is not isolated nor is it aside from the climate of the U.S. As the youth in this country are being attacked for being in gangs, as the men are incarcerated into the jails, women are being raped, murdered, and sold into sexual slavery. Racial and sexual stereotypes are carried over to the classroom, the offices, and the dorm rooms. This isn't about campus politics. This is about our lives, our histories, and our futures as people of color in this country and around the world.

Attempts at combatting racism, sexism, homophobia, and class exploitation will be futile if there is not an understanding and a critique of a capitalist system which depends on racism and sexism to achieve its goals of cheap labor.

Workshops, vigils, liberal organizations, and other such nonsense. . .tell us to adjust to the genocide against our own people.

Workshops, vigils, liberal organizations, and other such nonsense, simply attempt to tell us to adjust to the level of violence we endure, and tell us to adjust to the genocide against our own people. These are reactionary tools that the administration fuels in order to divert us from the reality of racist and exploitative practice. Holding hands, lighting candles, and "feeling our pain," is the most appalling and humiliating ways to "resist".

Institutions in this American system have been built on the land of the Indigenous people here, and have been built through the enslavement of African, Asian, and Latino peoples. Ignoring this history puts us at the mercy of the European colonizers and this system of repression. People of historically oppressed nations cannot expect the "leaders" of this nation to ensure our human rights out of the goodness of their heart. As students of color, we cannot expect the administration to ensure our safety. It is simply not in their best interest.

Finally, the cry for "organization" must be turned into the demand for "liberation." Organizing often means utilizing the tools given to us by the master, and as Audre Lorde so eloquently put, "the master's tools will never dismantle the master's house."

Cara Lee Birch is a Collegian correspondent

We will speak out . . . We will be heard

Mainstream media has constantly perpetuated the charade of "objectivity-objective journalism." Under the guise of unbiased reporting, mainstream media has successfully silenced the voices of women, people of color, lesbians, gays, and bisexuals, i.e. all those who do not fit into the establishment's mold. It is certainly not in the interest of the "powers that be" to allow for discussions on sexism, racism, homophobia, for they benefit from these oppressions.

The "cultural elite" perpetuates the system by establishing clones of itself at the grassroots level. For instance, the newspapers at the collegiate level replicate the attitudes and prejudices present in the national media. The Univeristy of Massachusetts is a microcosm of larger society even though the facade of multiculturalism has become fashionable.

Asserting their first amendment rights of freedom of expression, women at UMass in the late 70s agitated for the formation of the women's issues page in the college daily. Their action was a protest against the "sexism" present both in the media and all over this campus.

It has been over a decade since UMass women first demanded that their voices be heard and their issues be addressed. Subsequently, it seems as though we have come full circle. Women's issues are once again being ignored and our voices have been censored.

Women on this campus have no means through which they can exchange information and discourse on issues relating to them. News stories are not adequate for they provide no analysis. The predominantly white management of the major campus media does not encourage the printing of a diversity of opinions and views, let alone a coherent discussion on sexism, racism, and homophobia.

There has been the defacto silencing of the voices of women, especially women of color and gay women on this campus. The implicit meta-message is that issues concerning women are "non- issues" and that we do not count.

Shyamala IVATURY

This state of enforced silence is disturbing considering the intolerant climate on this campus. Incidence of racism and homophobia are on the rise, the number of violent crimes against women is on the rise, as is sexual harassment. These phenomenons are not only local, but also national trends.

There is an acute need for women to discuss issues relating to them. This discussion could continue through the local media. The local media could be contributing to the educational mission of this university by seriously addressing issues of oppression.

The last few decades have produced a large number of writings on women's liberation. The different critiques of white middle-class feminism have exposed its contradictions and pitfalls. Obviously the notion of a "monolithic concept of feminism" was false. There are significant differences in the articulations of liberation from oppression for white women and women of color, for women from different economic strata, for women from different cultural backgrounds, for gay and heterosexual women. It is obvious that women of all colors and backgrounds cannot simply hold hands and unite — in abstraction.

The feminism of the 60s and 70s has been critiqued for its elitism and racism. The lack of acknowledgment of differences between women has left women of color and poor women uninterested in mainstream feminism. The 80s witnessed the slow death of the feminist movement as white middle-class women saw the narrowing of the wage differential between white men and themselves. The co-option of middle-class white women has afforded them material comfort, yet they have remained victims of sexism and violence.

White middle-class feminism has not been able to articulate a notion of liberation that is universal. It has not been able to build coalitions between women from different backgrounds. Only those formulations that incorporate the complexities of race, ethnicity, and sexual orientation, intertwining them with women's equality can be liberating. Without recognizing the inter-connectedness of all these oppressions, there is no true feminism.

Women of color are the hardest hit. They are caught within the clutches of both racism and sexism. They are often put into a position of having to decide which contradiction to tackle first. The monolithic construct of feminism has resulted in severe backlash from their respective communities. The men of color notice the racism of white middle-class feminism, so any women of color who cares about women's equality is accused of not caring for her own people. The backlash which is the result of racism often results in the non acknowledgment of sexism and homophobia within the various communities of color. Women of color who choose one or the other struggle do so with the knowledge that partial liberation is a myth.

For third world women, the idea that feminism is some kind of universal ideology has proved to be extremely problematic. For instance, western concepts of feminism denounce the "veil" as a symbol of subjugation at the same time rejoicing over the status of women in this country. Reducing women's equality to a dress code ignores the acts of rebellion of third world women. White feminism does not take into account cultural relativism in the construction of their definition of liberation.

The need to articulate a more universal and inclusive construct of feminism is intimately tied to the need for women to have their voices heard. There is a need for a forum through which all women can establish a discourse on issues concerning women. The most obvious choice for such a platform seems to be the print media. The censoring of women's voices is another means of maintaining oppression by the age old tactic of "divide and conquer." It results in the separation of women from different communities, preventing women from actively engaging in issues relating to their oppression.

How long will freedom of speech remain as a privilege for a select few?

Shyamala Ivatury is a UMass graduate student.

Arts & Living

A beautiful, stirring, but erratic River

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES
Brad Pitt of "A River Runs Through It."

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Sentiment is everybody's game now, it seems. From the drippy, manipulative yanks of A League of Their Own to the more honest but just as sappy strains of Fried Green Tomatoes, the business of churning out the tears in lieu of real drama has become almost a given in Hollywood films these days.

Sentiment has its place, to be sure. Of Mice and Men is a recent example of the type of film which earns the respect of emotion without reducing a character's life to a slow montage flashback and a whispy violin solo.

Ordinary People, the 1980 Robert Redford-directed triumph is a film of the former. It told of the cracking of a brutal American family with honesty. The film's closing displays a driven force of mixed sentiment without reaching for weepy theatrics.

Redford has returned to behind the camera for the third time (he directed the confused Milagro Beanfield War in 1988) with the beautiful and stirring film version of the Normal Maclean novella, A River Runs Through It.

Shot in almost constant golden glow, River is the story of two brothers in Montana between 1910 and 1935. There's the logical and morally upright Norman (Craig Sheffer), the charismatic and daring Paul (Brad Pitt) and the father (Tom Skerrit) who raises them with a love of God and fly fishing.

Redford, as an older Norman, narrates the film, setting the stage with the famous opening line from the novella, "In our family, there was no clear line between religion and fly fishing."

Redford steers the film from the boys' stern upbringing to their early twenties, as they become men and drift apart; their only link being the bond they share through fly fishing.

These expertly shot fly fishing sequences were by far the best moments of the film, which, as a whole is as erratic as it is masterfully photographed. At times, River could be almost cryptically intricate and the emotions true. At other times, the film seemed to choke within its normative constraints.

River begins promisi ng and carries well throughout, the father's pa enting is real "family values," and it almost immediately wins you over. This is the type of film you'll want to fall into, letting the lazy rays of the Montana sun warm your face and the innocent, aw shucks of the times engulf you. You're willing to follow it anywhere.

Norman goes to Dartmouth and studies to be a professor, while Paul becomes a hard-drinking newspaperman. This is where River becomes uneven. Paul turns out to be the most intriguing character in River, but since the film is seen through the eyes of the bland Norman, Paul is relegated to the fringes of the story. The most loaded story, it seems, is being told off-camera.

This is a source of almost constant frustration, as the token love story between Norman and Jessie Burns (Emily Lloyd) takes up screen time that should've been devoted to Paul. Hell — Jessie's family is more lively than Norman.

The conclusion, drenched in familiar sentiment, doesn't come out of nowhere; the character has

Turn to RIVER, page 9

Too Much Joy is too good to miss live at Pearl St. tonight

By CUTTER GARCIA
Collegian Staff

All throughout history the downtrodden have had their heroes, those glimmering beacons of light which have served to inspire and motivate the masses. The Jews had Moses. The women had Clara Barton. The Native Americans had Geronimo. Frazier had Lilith and 'we, the twentysomething members of the lost generation, have Too Much Joy.

This band, who has just released their new album Mutiny on Giant Records, is the embodiment of the class clown we all sat next to in high school. The kid who your mom didn't want you hanging out with because behind that cheshire grin lurked a dangerous presence.

Too Much Joy is the kid who got you to steal your dad's Playboy's and drink warm Black Label beers out in the woods behind your house. TMJ = Eddie Haskell '92.

Using upbeat tempos and unique harmonization TMJ manages to point out all of life's injustices and inanities in a wryly sarcastic manner. With lyrics like "Wish I was Black/Wish I was gay/Wish there was a reason that I felt this way/I'm ahead of my time/But only by a week/This is my happening/And it makes me freak."

"We get people from all walks of life," says lead guitarist Jay Blumenfield, "but the one thing they have in common is that they can't dance in beat. It's sort of like . . . they're people who are pissed off at the world and pissed off at hypocrisy and pissed off at themselves but they're not quite alternative. They went to Lollapalooza but they still didn't fit in."

TMJ consists of four high school friends (Tim Quirk/vocals, Sandy Smallens/bass & vocals, Jay Blumenfield/guitars & vocals, Tommy Vinton/drums and other objects of bashing) who banded together sophomore year to play music, drink beers and scream at the world.

"We started in 10th grade because we hated everyone in our high school and we wanted to annoy them as much as possible," says Blumenfield, "and we decided that being in a band would be the most subversive and annoying thing we could do. Then our parents made us go to college. Tim and I went out to California (Stanford and Berkeley). Sandy went to Yale and Tommy went to Iona. We tried to do the college thing but all's we could do at college was get drunk and then call each other up late at night and go, 'we GOTTA do this band!'"

Lucky enough for the rest of us, the Joy Boys graduated and got back together to record and spread their visions of disillusionment and anger. You can't help but listen to their songs and smile. Their ability to call attention to issues like homelessness, abuse of authority, unrequited love and lack of direction - all while never taking themselves that seriously - is their charm.

TMJ talks with their audience and not at them. They're the kind of a band you'd love to be in because they look like they're having so damned much fun up there. And you know what kids? - They are.

When asked about how big they'd like to become Blumenfield quips, "Well, anyone who's in a band who tells you they don't want to be the biggest band in the world is full of s—. We're doing this to reach as many people as possible so there's no cap on it. (If they sold out an 80,000 seat stadium) It wouldn't be a problem. We'd figure out a cool way to do it - and it wouldn't be called ZOO TV."

When asked about label support Blumenfield says, "They're cool because it's like, they pretty much don't understand us but they know that there's something there so they're kind of like,'Well, we don't get it - but that's Too Much Joy - let them do their thing. Here's some money, go do what you've got to do. We don't understand it - but the kids seem to.'"

On tour right now with Material Issue and The Mighty Lemondrops, Too Much Joy is busy preparing for a solo tour in January. "In January we'd like to go out and headline and offer really cheap tickets and play for a long time.", said Blumenfield.

In trying to describe the TMJ philosophy on life Blumenfield says, "Go buy all our records. Then after you listen to them, you'll get it. Then go out and buy some more of them and then come to all our shows. Stop pointing fingers at others and point them at yourself and then after you've pointed them at yourself and have taken a good look THEN go point them at others and then push people you've ever hated and everyone who's ever

Turn to TOO MUCH JOY, page 9

The production dazzles, but a lame cast washes out Hair

By SHAWN McDONNELL
Collegian staff

Hair
Student Union Ballroom
October 29 - 31, 1992

Beneath dangling banners of sixties-kitsch artwork, all spiralling psychedelia and stars, a "happening" is taking place. Flowerchildren in limitless supply converge into a dancing, gyrating sea of bangles, beads, peace medallions, marijuana joints and tie-dye shirts, as a throaty-voiced folk-siren announces the dawning of the age of Aquarius.

If this image of an average afternoon in 1968 is based more on Woodstock newsreels and nineties misconceptions than it is on consistent fact, one must nevertheless admire the skill with which the creators of this spectacle have tapped into our collective vision of the period.

Certainly Rado, Ragni and MacDermott, the creative trio behind the musical Hair, were as aware as anyone that the late sixties was a period of self-defining myth: their show is a celebration of the unchallenged love and peace which never really existed outside of one counter-culture's ideology.

As performed by the UMass Theatre Guild, Hair is a masterwork of evocative, escapist fun — a giftbox of rock music, striking imagery, and contagiously joyous dancing which is so completely entertaining that one scarcely notices its emptiness.

Director Alan White has done an exceptional job of staging the show, complementing the episodic structure with a series of wonderful images. In the song "Air," about pollution, a single gasmask-toting woman stands alone in a field of corpses; in "Don't Put It Down," four elevated men salute the "red, white, blue and yellow" while urinating on an American flag; and in "Three-Five-Zero-Zero" the cast pontificates about the tactics of war, while casually murdering one another.

Some of White's direction seems downright inspired. For the beautiful closing song, "Flesh Failures," he has a drafted hippy being drowned out and swallowed by a crowd of his friends, who do not understand his decision to fight in Vietnam. The story and characters are as banal as the music is fantastic, but White presents the scene with such style that it becomes moving nonetheless.

The tragic shortcoming of this production is its considerably below-average cast, whose inadequacy undermines many of White's inspirations. Wonderful songs like "Donna" or "Electric Blues" are mauled by unspeakable vocals, while others such as "Easy to be Hard" or "Colored Spade" are totally inaudible.

The only complete performance of the evening was that of chorus-member Michelle Wynn, whose glorious vocals put the accepted leading ladies to shame. Despite her minescule role, Wynn was the only person who appeared to be playing a character, as well as singing rock songs.

While the rest of the ensemble appeared indifferent to their lines, Wynn seemed to be experiencing the words as they went through her. When she shouted "we don't need your f—ing war," you could see the anger and frustration in her face. When she lamented the loss of innocence in "Eyes Look Your Last," her voice had all the wailing intensity of a keen.

Thankfully, White managed to keep the stage packed for most of the evening. The performers who seemed inaudible or off-key by themselves sounded wonderful when singing harmony, and the finale (a rendition of "Let the Sun Shine in") was so infectious that the cast, director, and audience all wound up dancing and singing together. With an ending like that, you can't help but leave smiling.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
HELLO? HELLO? — Forget about Bush, Clinton and Perot and cast your ballot for the MediaDarlings, playing a free show tonight at 9 p.m. in the Hatch.

Craig Lucas' Reckless inspires laughter and cool realization

By EMILY MARINO
Collegian Staff

Descending into the cosmic Curtain Theatre Saturday was like entering a whole, separate underworld and donning glasses with which to see and reevaluate life. Surrounded by the engulfing black walls and floating, star-like beads, the UMass Department of Theatre presented the hilarious yet sobering Reckless by Craig Lucas.

Lucas' play centers around Rachel (Lydia M. Newton), a woman who is told by her husband, Tom (Michael Lombardi) on Christmas Eve that he has taken a contract out on her life. Having second thoughts, he warns her to leave before the gunman appears, as he cannot take the order back.

We follow Rachel along a path of self-exploration upon which she encounters the likes of a hearing deaf woman, a game show called "Your Wife or Your Mother," a handful of crazed psychiatrists and a host of other wacky characters and experiences.

As the story develops we learn that each of the three main characters, Lloyd (Tony Maestrone), Pooty (Becca MacKinnon), and especially Rachel, have secrets in their pasts which cause their present lives to be less than honest.

Maestrone portrays the lovable, clueless lounge-lizzard so that you never quite fully trust his motives, but can't help give him the benefit of the doubt and can't wait to see what he does next.

Mackinnon utilizes facial expression and physical gestures to convey what she cannot with words, and maintains strong stage presence despite the lack of lines.

Rachel, delighted at the prospect of having the freedom to start a new life realizes, "I could be anybody." Changing her name and lying about her past, she erases the thoughts of her family and friends to face life with a fresh vigor.

With forever anxious eyes, Newton's Rachel desperately seeks the best in every situation. Her painstakingly humorous efforts to reason out and justify the bizarre occurrences in her life sustained our fondness for this naive woman.

Newton's versatility allows her to keep the audience on the edge of their seats in anticipation of her next flighty move, and to later reach into the depths of her soul to shed Rachel's defensive, jovial shell and uncover the unsure woman inside.

Likewise, with periodic appearances to do prop changes between scenes, Robert Corddry, Michelle C.T. Hendrick, Zachary Galvin, Micah Hollingworth and Brandon Whitehead brought Christmas to life with their stints as carolers. Their songs were entertainment in themselves, and their animated, comic gestures and expressions relieved tension between and broke up the scenes.

While the humor was first-rate and served as a buffer for the characters and audience, the lack of commitment by Rachel to deal seriously with the profound issues presented in Reckless was at times frustrating.

It was not until the end of the production that Rachel wakes up from her numb, emotional daze and deals with the pain of having thrown away, or rather, having been virtually forced out of the life she originally tries to make for herself.

Lucas' attempt to avoid serious confrontation works well to communicate the sentiment that "People are capable of anything if they are willing to work hard and tell themselves the truth," as Rachel is told at one point.

One of the morals of the story here is that, as Rachel realizes with exasperated relief, "Things just happen." For a woman who spent her entire life reacting to her surrounding and not living for herself, this revelation allows her to stop trying to make sense of every event.

Resolution for Rachel (with respect to her past) comes at the end of the play through individual rectification rather than understanding from direct confrontation between the characters. The lesson we learn is that sometimes you need to step completely outside of your own life to recognize your self-imposed limitations and realize your potential.

Productions like Reckless serve as reminders of the small treasures beheld by this huge, sometimes grossly underrated public university. The entire cast was excellent (with a side-splitting performance by Tone Nunes as an obnoxiously flakey game show host) and carried off Lucas' multi-layered comedy/drama with style.

■ Too Much Joy

continued from page 8

been a hypocrite and anyone who's ever taken themselves too seriously."

And through the whole interview over the phone, speaking to Blumenfield from somewhere deep in the corns of Kansas, I can hear the smile on his face with each answer to every question. That tongue in cheek self depreciating humor which IS Too Much Joy. Do yourself a favor and go see these guys.

Too Much Joy, Material Issue and The Mighty Lemondrops will be playing tonight at Pearl St. in Northampton. Doors open at 8:00. Ticket prices are $8 before the show and $10 at the door. 18+.

■ River

continued from page 8

'doomed' written all over his forehead. It was effective, I'll admit, but must tragic fate always intervene in these types of films?

The sterling performances keep with the rich look and feel of this film. Craig Sheffer (Nightbreed) is fine, it's the role that's stale. Tom Skerritt (Alien) is wonderful, but, considering the weight of his role, he's hardly there. Emily Lloyd (Wish You Were Here) does her best as the 'girlfriend;' her scenes were crisply acted.

A River Runs Through It is a cleverly convincing, tender entertainment. Redford's visuals are breathtaking, his steady camera captures the fly fishing sequences as poetry in motion. Yet his continued reliance on narration to move the story along is a sure sign he's playing it safe — a little too safe.

But the film's initial charm and eventual nagging flaw is that it chooses easy Hollywood sentiment instead of full-circle drama. While this could probably be forgiven, River will be remembered as the film with too much narration and not enough imagination.

Grade: B

UPC productions
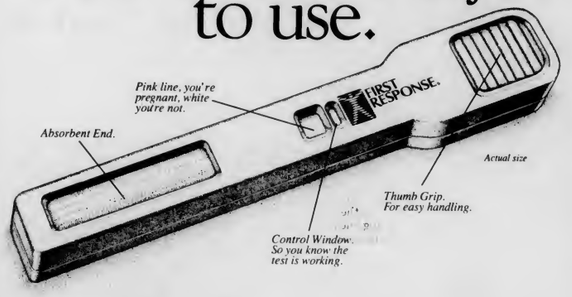
MEMBERS!
Old & New ....
Due to Election Day, we will not be holding a formal meeting today, but an "Election Day Extravaganza" in our office, 406 Student Union (right above the Credit Union). We hope this gives everyone time to vote!
Stop by anytime between 5pm-6:30pm to find out any new information, or on upcoming shows Al DiMeola, Mongo Santamaria & Charlie Sepulveda & Indigo Girls
Refreshments and pizza rewards for those who flyer!

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
TUESDAY
SHARK NIGHT
- Singles Pool Tournament -
- $2.00 Entrance Fee
- Free Pizza Slices
- Play For Cash
- Sign Up: 7:00 - 7:45
- 20 oz. Drafts: $1.75
WATCH ALL THE SPORTS ON SATELLITE DISH
University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

A pregnancy test you don't have to be a Chem Major to use.



The First Response® 1-Step Pregnancy Test requires just one easy step — no cup.
So leave the test tubes and complicated procedures in your chemistry lab. This one-step, one-piece pregnancy test is our easiest test ever made. Just hold the absorbent end of the tester in your urine stream. Within three minutes you'll know. If a pink line appears in the result window, you're pregnant. If it remains white, you're not. Even if it's your first time using a home pregnancy test, First Response® 1-Step is so easy to use, it's virtually mistake proof.
For more information call us at 1-800-367-6022, Mon-Fri 7am-5pm EST.

So easy, you can trust the result.*
*Highly accurate in consumer testing.

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

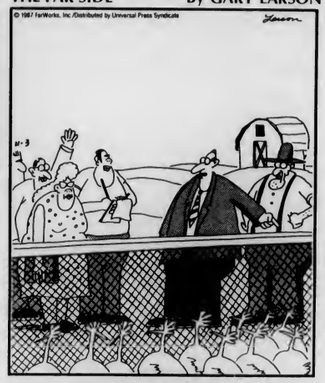
JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON



Ornithology 101 field trips

VOTE TODAY!

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A publicity effort pays off — thnks to a lot of hard work and planning. You jump over a hurdle with relative ease. Adventure beckons as you push a personal ambition to the limit.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can steer yourself and hard-working crew to success now. With work finished in a breeze, sail into a romantic evening. Be honest if you prefer to play the field.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep your wits about you today. It is difficult to say if you are being deceived or deceiving someone else. Either way, get the problem out in the open. Talk things over.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Waffling about a situation will only make things worse. Take a firm stand and face the music: you might be pleasantly surprised. Zoom ahead with a stunning, new project.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Concentrate on work even though you would rather be playing. Do not let someone's emotional storms rain on your parade. Stress your loving temperment and avoid anger.

LIBRA (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A break in a relationship does not have to occur if you keep the communication lines open and discuss matters calmly. Travel plans could go awry.

SCORPIO (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Try not to make a big deal out of a difference of opinion. If a family member wants to argue, back off. Keep a key goal in sight at all times.

LIBRA (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not let old habits come out of the woodwork. It is only too easy to slide back into worn-out behavior patterns. Turn yourself into a financial wizard by consulting experts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Try not to throw your weight around this morning. Instead, foster a spirit of cooperation. Take a long look at your philosophy of life. Examine your deep-seated beliefs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not get mixed up in a heated domestic argument. Tend to your everyday work; it could be just what you need. Determination is your passport to success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid far-fetched financial schemes, even if they are proposed by a fairly solid citizen. The sensible thing is to keep you money in the bank.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be cooperative where shared resources are concerned. Put several hours of hard work on a group project, then call it quits. Gather with good friends tonight and cast any troubles overboard.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

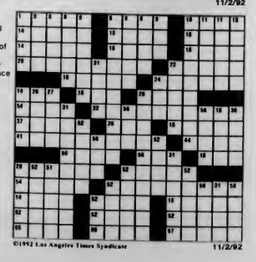
ACROSS
1 Luxurious
6 San —, Italian port
10 Vigorous spirit
14 French income
15 Always
16 Knowledge
17 Home of a biblical witch
18 Italian tourist mecca
19 Home of the leprechauns
20 Plead poverty
22 Rocky debris
23 Nellie or toast
24 Tourist stops
25 Toronto museum, for short
26 Maglie or Mineo
29 An Indic language
30 "Illiad": e.g.
32 Necessary for victory
37 Light craft
39 Cougar or Jaguar
40 Growing out
41 November surprise, perhaps
44 Location
45 Nothing, in Paris
46 Craggy hill
48 Once around the track
49 Next to last of a series
52 Raced in the Tour de France
54 Motto
55 Roosevelt, Truman and Clinton
59 Hindu god
60 Number of Muses
61 Soldier hero and actor Murphy
62 Printer's direction
63 Declare positively
64 Exhausted
65 Belong: Lat.
66 Butter sections
67 Seed coating

DOWN
1 Type of school, for short
2 Carson's successor
3 Reverse
4 Big blow or actress Gale
5 Messenger of the gods
6 Hoover, Ford or Bush
7 Lloyd Webber musical
8 Coordinate
9 Mousha, in old Rome
10 November events
11 Actor Peter of "Casablanca"
12 Role in "The Tempest"
13 State birds of Hawaii
21 Norwegian saint
22 Find a solution
24 "La Fille — gardée": Ashton ballet
25 Four-sided fig.
26 Colorful fish
27 Type of skirt
29 Volunteer campaign workers
31 Furrow
33 Salt
34 Part of a comet
35 Kett of the comics
36 Ooze
38 Ancient Roman official
42 Caress
43 — Onio
47 Fashion anew
49 Old hat
50 Prepares for publication
51 Parts of churches
52 American poet Stephen Vincent
53 One-seed fruit
55 Kathleen Battle, for one
56 Lemon additives
57 Pastel color
58 — good example
60 Forty winks

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

R	A	T	E		R	A	I	S	E		A	W	N
A	N	O	N		A	L	I	S	E		O	P	E	X	E
J	A	M	E	S	D	O	N		P	E	X	E
A	T	E		A	B	U	S	E		T	I	R	E	D
			M	E				S	I	M	I	T	H
C	A	J	O	L	E		O	T	I	C		A	S	H
A	M	A	S	S		L	A	S	S		M	M	E
L	I	O	N	S		P	I	L	L		S	M	E	L	L
E	R	E		S	A	R	I			S	M	E	L	T
R	E	M		A	L	O	E		S	T	O	R	E	S
			A	R	R	A	N	G	E	S
S	H	R	E	D		C	R	O	N	E		S	P	A
L	A	P	S	E		L	E	W	A	R	C	H	E	R
A	I	L	E	N		A	B	E	T		R	I	T	E
B	L	A	N	K		A	I	R	E		O	K	E	S

11/2/92



©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/2/92

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Dan Wetzel
Copy Editor	Michelle Robbins
PhotoTechnician	Josh Reynolds
Production Supervisor	Mike Carvalho
Production	Dana Dorman, Kelly D'Amato

Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Chicken	Cheese Spinach Strudel
Bagel Dog	Stir Fry Beef
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Grilled Chicken	Cheese Spinach Strudel
Flat Bread Sandwich	Stir Fry Veggies

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Promising season awaits for swim team

By ROBERT FERREIRA
Collegian Correspondent

Rigorous preseason training has the UMass women's swimming and diving team fueled and ready. Their season opens tonight at 7:00 p.m., when they will go head to head with Smith College in Boyden pool.

The team went 6-5-0 in last year's dual meet lineup and went on to place 7th in the New England Championship Meet. Under the direction of head coach Bob Newcomb, and assistant swim coaches Ed Melanson and James Sweeney, the team is hoping to improve on last year's winning record.

"We're really amazed with the way the team has responded to the training," said Newcomb. "We have just hammered them this fall and they come back every day tired and sore, but with smiles on their faces. That to me is a sign of a team that's going someplace."

The team practices 20 hours per week. Besides swimming, their training includes weight lifting, running, and grueling biathlon workouts. "We've set up our program with a more scientific training approach this season." said Newcomb.

"This group feels like they have something to prove this year," said Melanson. "We're off to a good start. I'm positive, but we've got to work hard every day if we're looking to be one of the top teams in New England."

The Minutewomen have lost a total of nine swimmers from last year's line up. They have had a decent recruiting season and have fifteen new faces.

"The team is led by captains Kari Edwardsen and Teresa Konieczny. Both are returning seniors. Edwardsen, who swims the 100 and 200-yard backstroke and the 200-yard individual medley, said, "This is probably one of the better teams we've had."

Konieczny, a distance freestyle swimmer, will be competing this season in the 500, 1,000, and 1,650 yard swims. Konieczny agrees this year's team is one of the best teams they have had, "not only in terms of swimming ability, but in attitude," explained Konieczny.

"Personality is something this team definitly isn't short of," added the captains.

Other returnees to keep your eyes on are senior Beth Wadick and junior Kim Broad. Wadick is returning after taking a year off to complete an internship. "She has astounded us with her pre-season swimming." said Newcomb. Broad placed 2nd in the mile swim at last year's New England meet.

Brown University transfer Julie Veremey and Syracuse transfer Jennifer Perkins are both new assets to the team. Veremey, a junior, is a top competitor for the 200 yard butterfly, and the 400 yard individual medley.

Perkins, a sophomore, specializes in freestyle and butterfly events. Newcomb grinned and said, "We've stolen a very powerful, and very talented athlete from Syracuse."

Promising freshmen include Laura Gunn, Jessica Griffith, Sarah Baker and Heather Saunders. Gunn's forte is primarily in freestyle and butterfly events, however, she is a versatile swimmer. Griffith is predicted to surprise a lot of people in her breaststroke events.

Baker's forte is sprinting, and she should prove to be an asset in the relays. Saunders, a competitor for the 100 and 200 yard backstroke, and the 100 and 400 yard individual medley.

From a pre-season estimate, "Veremey, Perkins, Gunn and Griffith are all potential top six placers for New Englands," said Melanson. "They should score very high for the team."

The women's diving team, under the direction of Newcomb, and assistant diving coach, Bill Rozen, will be looking forward to another promising season.

Junior diver Allison White is the defending New England champion on the three meter board, and was voted co-diver of last year's New England meet.

"The name of (White's) game is consistency," said Newcomb. "She is the performance leader of the diving team."

Freshman diver Amanda Moynihan is likely to be a tough competitor. "She has a good work ethic, and has come a long way on the boards," said Newcomb.

In addition to the traditional New England meet, held in February, the team may also look forward to a new mid season Atlantic Ten Championship meet to be held in December.

"The A-10 meet gives us an opportunity to set goals for the mid season." said Captain Konieczny.

"This year we have more of a focus to win back all of our close meets that we lost last year," stated Captain Edwardsen.

Newcomb explained that development is the key to their program. "We've taken swimmers that haven't even been mentioned in our pre-season preview and turned them into New England champions." Newcomb added, "What has made our program thrive in the past is the development of our student athletes. Physically, mentally and academically."

■ cross country

continued from page 12

right mind set knowing we were no where near full strength."

While things seem horrible now the season can still be salvaged. With either a first or second place finish in the ECAC's on November 14, the women could qualify for a trip to the nationals.

"We have two weeks to get ready for this and it's the only thing saving us right now," said LaFreniere. "If the women want it bad enough they'll pull together and do it. We need to work hard the next two weeks and hope people start to get healthy."

This feat is quite possible seeing that the top opponents at the ECAC's are the same teams UMass has seen for the past month and has already beaten (UConn, B.C., and Rhode Island). The meet will be held at Lehigh University in Bethleham, Pennslyvania on a course that LaFreniere said suits the talents of UMass very nicely.

"The course is all grass and very wide," said LaFreniere. "The wideness will be an advantage to us because we will be able to get by people more easily."

■ hoop

continued from page 12

Lewis mode. Off guard Peter Dukes can bomb with anyone, as his 75 treys last year can attest. A return trip to the NCAA's might be a reach for Mike Montgomery's squad, but it is a possibility if someone helps out up front where Keefe is gone.

PAC-10 Also Rans: Arizona State (Ya think Bill Frieder is glad he left Michigan?), Washington, USC (wow, will they miss Miner and Duane Cooper), Washington State and Oregon.

All-PAC-10 Team: Center: Haskins (OSU), Forward: Mills (Arizona), Forward: Hendrick (Cal), Guard: Lollie (Stanford), Guard: Reeves (Arizona). Watch out for Kidd though.

Some personal thoughts on the Sportsworld:

Magic Johnson's decision to retire caught me by surprise. It seems that the lifestyle and the turbulence Magic felt in returning were too much for him. I am not trying to be critical, but I hope Magic did not think that it was going to be an easy ride coming back after all that has happened to him.

The one thing Magic did do in this latest retirement was let his teammates down. I know that basketball pales in comparison to one's life, but Magic didn't re-retire because of his health, it was outside factors that caused it.

It was pitiful to see George Bush when he was on the Sports Machine last night. The only person I know who was mad that he missed the Machine is Mike Morrissey, and I don't think that I have to say much more than that.

Both Bush and and host George Michael were pathetic, especially when Michael talked about the two other candidates not responding to Michael's requests. This is why the Captain, Lou Albano, is going to get my write in vote later today.

The Celtics will be better off if Sherman Douglas starts at the point and Dee Brown brings his athleticism off the bench.

Like I said earlier, the Pittsburgh Steelers are going to win the Super Bowl.

Lennox Lewis shocked me when he knocked out Razor Ruddock so early Saturday night. But maybe it shouldn't for a few reasons. No. 1, Ruddock's defense and fight plan suffers when he tries to load up with his left hand. No. 2, Lewis is a good boxer who will exploit his opponents' mistakes. And No. 3, Ruddock has got to be a little shopworn after going 19 rounds with Mike Tyson. Even if Tyson couldn't finish him, and was past his prime, he still issued Ruddock a beating.

Riddick Bowe will knock out Evander Holyfield on November 13th and then will get revenge by beating Lewis in a rematch of their 1988 Olympic clash.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Institute for the Healing of Racism 7pm tonite CCRM 185

UPC General Committee Meeting!: Tonight, 11/3. Instead of the usual UPC meeting, we will be holding an informal election day gathering in the UPC office (406 Student Union, just above the credit union). Get info., talk, laugh, and pizza rewards for those who help flyer! Stop by between 5:00 to 8:30 pm. See you there!

AIRLINE TICKETS

Airline Tickets take $50-$100 off any fare call Stuart at 516-767-7646

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Tired of your science major? Try Food Science Call Dr. Chinachoti 545-1025

Video
The Union Video Center is offering workshops on video production. Get hands on training with professional grade equipment. If you're interested in video, don't miss this opportunity. The UVC is located in the Student Union. 545-1338
Life is short, video is forever.

Write a letter Save a Life
Amnesty International Meeting
Nov. 3 7:00 pm Campus Center rm 905-909 some signs say Nov. 4 but actual date Nov. 3 My apologies.

COLLEGE PIZZA

College Pizza
Fall Special
Small cheese $3.50
Large cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings $6.99
Free soda with large sub salad or spaghetti
549-9098 549-8073
MUST MENTION THIS AD

EXTREMELY IMPORTANT

Tarot Reading by appointment. Anytime Call Mitch at 548-9781

FOR RENT

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $895/mo 256-0741

FOR SALE

Brother Wordprocessor WP-760D+ with spreadsheet brand new with one year warranty.
Only $298
546-0390

Like new Brother word processor WPD 760D plenty of features
A steal at $210 or best offer
548-1197

Stereo Components: Used/reconditioned, area's biggest selection. Buy/Sell/Trade at Stereo/Video Exchange, Sundays 10-4, inside Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Other days call 256-0941

Tendy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O.

HELP WANTED

Alaska Summer Employment fisheries earn $600+ a week in canneries $4000/month on fishing boats. Free transportation! Room and Board! Male or Female. Get a head start on this summer. For employment program call 1-206-545-4155 ext. A5001

Be on T.V. Many needed for commercials. Now hiring all ages, for casting info. call (615)779-7111 Ext. T-458

CAN YOU MANAGE AN EXTRA $2500? Practical experience for Business/Marketing Majors: Manage credit card promotions on campus for a National Marketing Firm. Hours flexible. Earn up to $2500/term. Call 1-800-950-8472 ext. 17.

College Pro Painters
Earn $8000-$10000 this summer running your own business. Informational session on Wed. Nov. 4 room 902 Campus Center. Info call 1-800-346-4649 or Brendan at 549-8109 All are welcome

Couples — Property Manager Free Amherst apartment plus salary Debbie 258-0741

Evening Jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action $7/hr. On buslines. 584-9830

Fundraisers for Christmas Kettle program, outdoor work needed for 3 hour shifts from Novehber 21 thru Christmas. Reliable and dependable individuals a must. Contact Lisa at the Salvation Army M & F 3-7 and Thurs 1-6 $4.50/hour

Postal jobs available! Many positions. Great benefits. Call 1-80-333-3737. ext. P-3308

$500.00
If you have access to a video camera, we're looking for students to film a mini-video. May lead to permanent position. For information, call C.B. productions Inc. M-F 9-5, (617)332-9608

$200 - $500 WEEKLY
Assemble products at home. Easy! No selling. You're paid direct. Fully guaranteed. FREE INFORMATION - 24 HOUR HOTLINE. 801-379-2900 Copyright # MA15KDH

WANTED: TRAVEL REPS for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SIESTA, ask for Bonnie

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons - first lesson half price 665-1178

Italian Tutor
Native Speaker
Call 546-1347

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

LEGAL INTERNSHIPS

Spring 1993 Internships with the Legal Services Center! Get hands-on experience in the legal field - work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal professional necessary - training provided. Contact Legal Services today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center. November 13 is the application deadline.

LOST

Brown clutch purse - Purse desperately need contents
Reward 549-1198

Glasses in black case somewhere between E.-Lot and Central - Call 546-5258

ROOMMATES WANTED

2 girls needed to share largest bedroom in a 3bdrm Puffton APT. 549-7319

SERVICES

Free Peer Counseling lesbian, gay, bisexual issues. Phone or walk in. LBG counseling collective. 408G Student Union 545-2645

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1908

Resumes
Need help? I have experience with resumes. Quick service, free advice, excellent quality, and LOW prices. IBM laser printing service available.
Call Andy 549-8463

Tarot readings
Call Chris 256-0821

RSO FAIR '92

RSO FAIR '92
Monday, November 9
12-4 SUB
FREE food, entertainment, prizes, Demonstrations and information.
5-College Community Welcome!
SPONSORED BY
Div. of Student Activities

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed - Free cover page, spell check, laser printout. $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795

Typing-Word processing
Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations. Laser Printing
Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268

WANTED

We want your 2BDRM Puffton lease!!
Starting January 1. Call us first! Reward if we sign it!! Call 549-7319

Cash for your Clunker!
Get paid for your worthless car! Call 549-4897 and ask for Crusty for details. This is not a joke. I need your car!

Singer – Do you want to sing the National Anthem at UMass Basketball games? Contact Margaret in the Athletic Dept. For information 545-3190

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young-Mi 546-0580 or Jen 548-4978

Efficiency one Bedroom
Starting mid-Dec. or Jan 1
Upperclass honors student female.
Call Jen 548-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

Field hockey tunes up against Bulldogs

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts field hockey team's regular season finale at Totman Field is not an ending of sorts, but rather a beginning. Although this will be the last regular season home game ever for seniors Joy Blenis, Kathy Phelan, Philippa Scott, Ainslee Press and Tina Rusiecki, do not shed tears for those women. They have a lot more work to do, or so they hope.

The matchup (2:30 p.m.) between the Minutewomen (17-1) and the hapless Yale squad is more like a mismatch, a game that pits the number three team in the country against a unheralded Ivy League school, the second Ivy League team UMass has faced this year. The Minutewomen easily disposed of Dartmouth earlier this season by a score of 2-0.

The game will serve as a final showcase of UMass' talents before this weekend's Atlantic 10 Championships, which take place in Piscataway, New Jersey, home of Rutgers University. UMass head coach Pam Hixon is probably just as concerned about her own team as she is against the visiting Elis.

The Minutewomen have performed at a consistently high level throughout the year, and as last weekend's victory over Springfield College will show, the team was not hindered but helped by the recent layoff.

The game is a beginning because the Minutewomen, with a strong showing today and this weekend at the A-10s, will lock up a first round bye in the NCAA Tournament and will host a second round game at Totman Field. In order to accomplish this, UMass must remain among the top four teams in the country by the end of this week.

To win the game, the Minutewomen must do as they have done all season: control the play at midfield. With midfielders Blenis, Press, Holly Hockenbrock and Colleen Duffy on the field, UMass will likely be able to handle the ball during most of the game, and feed it to forwards Danielle Borges, Tara Jelley and Jenn Salisbury.

Hixon said she was concerned of the forwards' lack of scoring punch, but Borges and Salisbury each netted a goal last Saturday, and they have upped their play.

The defensive trio of Kathy Phelan, Tracy Barclay and Natalie Hart have shown sufficient talent to stop any threat Yale could possibly mount, but just in case, goalie Philippa Scott will be in net as a backup.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
Kathy Phelan is one of five UMass field hockey seniors who will playing their last career regular season home game against Yale today at 2:30 p.m.

Women receive NCAA berth

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

For the tenth time in 11 seasons the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team yesterday earned a spot in the NCAA tournament.

Massachusetts (15-3) will face the University of Connecticut (15-4-1) Saturday in Storrs, at 1 p.m. The winner of the first round match-up will play the University of Hartford (18-1) in the quarterfinals.

"The team is happy they are in," UMass Assistant Chris Parker said. "They worked hard for the bid and they want another shot at UConn."

The Huskies defeated UMass 1-0 on Oct. 22 in Storrs. Connecticut broke the scoreless tie in the first half and then held on during a ferocious Minutewomen onslaught in the second half for the win.

Last season UConn ended the Minutewomen's season with a 1-0 first round victory in Storrs.

"I was hoping we'd get UConn," UMass goal keeper Briana Scurry said. "We want to give them a little pay back. Getting in feels great. I know what it was like as a freshman when we didn't make it and I didn't want that to happen again."

UMass Assistant Coach Felicia Faro said, "We have a personal vendetta with UConn. Last time we just didn't get the breaks but this time we will. When we get a scoring opportunity we will finish it."

Massachusetts, ranked No. 10 nationally, sealed up its invitation with back-to-back victories over Southern Methodist and Central Florida over the weekend.

"We came in and proved we deserved a playoff bid," Faro said. "We got two big wins on the road and this is great momentum to go into the playoffs with."

The other brackets in the field of twelve include, the SMU (15-5) at Duke (14-4-2) winner will face Virginia (14-4-1).

The Portland (18-1) at Stanford (15-1-1) winner will match up with Santa Clara (11-4-2).

The North Carolina State (15-5-1) at William and Mary victor will play defending national champion North Carolina (22-0).

Women's XC finishes seventh

By JASON NASH
Collegian Staff

"In sickness and health until death do us part" was a vow women's cross country head coach Julie LaFreniere hoped she would not have to face when she went to the altar with her team at the beginning of the season. While this marriage has been nothing but smooth sailing for most of the season, Friday's meet in Boston proved that the honeymoon is over.

Plagued with a virus that has strangled four of the top five runners for over three weeks, the University of Massachusetts women's cross country team finished a sub-par seventh overall at this weekends New England Championships. What makes the performance even more heart-breaking is the fact that UMass has already beaten five of the six teams that finished ahead of them previously this year.

Kelly Liljeblad, finished first for UMass and 17th overall in her worst run all year long. The virus had hit Liljeblad as bad as anyone and was the only reason for the lack of her usual superwoman-like performance.

"I let Kelly run even though she was sick all week," said LaFreniere. "I know if she was healthy she could have finished second or third."

UMass next four were Freshman Julie Moreau (34th), Tricia Mathiesen (40th), Mo Meldrim (42nd) and Kerry Acre (60th). The usual second and third finishers, Kim Liljeblad and Becky Johnson, were not allowed to run.

"The women (Liljeblad and Johnson) wanted to run," offered LaFreniere. "They ran sick last week at the A-10's, but I just couldn't let them do it."

Those who ran for UMass found it hard to get exited for the meet. With the team knowing their best performers not were racing, a let down is always possible.

"This is very depressing," said LaFreniere. "But, I had a good idea this was going to happen. They weren't in the

Turn to CROSS COUNTRY, page 11

Magic Johnson retires again

By JOHN NADEL
Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Magic Johnson, who returned to the Los Angeles Lakers on Sept. 29 after missing last season with the AIDS virus, said yesterday he is retiring for good.

Johnson announced his decision just four days before the beginning of the NBA season.

"After much thought and talking it over with Cookie and my family, I decided I will retire — for good — from the Lakers," Johnson said in a statement issued by the team.

"It has become obvious that the various controversies surrounding my return are taking away from both basketball as a sport and the larger issue of living with HIV for me and the many people infected."

Several NBA stars, including fellow Dream Team member Karl Malone, have expressed concern about playing with Johnson for fear of contracting the virus. One NBA general manager, speaking only on condition that he must not be identified by name; told the New York Times that Johnson should step aside to avoid any controversy.

A source close to Johnson who spoke on condition of anonymity confirmed that Johnson's retirement was related to the controversy that continued to surround his comeback, and not his health.

The source referred to an article in the New York Times on Sunday that examined the hazards of playing with Johnson as an example of what was bothering the athlete.

"It was not the same for him," the sources said. "It was not fun for him anymore."

Johnson played in five of the Laker's eight preseason games, averaging 10.4 points and nearly 12 assists a game.

"I've come to realize that it simply isn't possible to return to playing in the NBA and still continue to be involved in all the things I want to do," Johnson's statement said.

College hoop, Magic and the boxing ring

I'm going to make my last conference review of the year in today's column. The conference reviewed will be the PAC-10, after the review, I guess some random thoughts that come to my head will fill the page.

PAC-10: This conference welcomes a new Kidd on the block, while bidding farewell to some tremendous talent in the likes of Don Maclean , Tracy Murray , Adam Keefe , Sean Rooks and of course Harold Miner .

Arizona , despite losing the inside play of Rooks look to be the conference favorite. Lute Olson has himself a good backcourt in shooter Khalid Reeves and playmaker Damon Stoudamire. Ed Stokes is going to have to have a big year up front, while Mr. Versatility, Chris Mills will have to be a leader for the Wildcats.

Jeff
CROFTS

California is following the lead of George Jefferson and is 'movin on up, to the top'. To the top of the PAC-10 that is. The addition of local point guard supreme Jason Kidd to an already impressive stable of young studs, makes Lou Campanelli's squad that much better. Brian Hendrick , a senior forward who missed much of last year with a knee injury, is healthy and ready to return to the All-PAC-10 team, a team he has already made three times! If Hendrick provides leadership to his youthful teammates, the Golden Bears will be growling all year long.

UCLA lost a lot in the three M's, Maclean, Murray and tough guard Gerald Madkins , but there is still a base of talent left for Jim Harrick . If former high school legend Ed O'Bannon can regain his form that he had before a knee injury than Harrick's cause would be helped greatly. Mitchell Butler and Shon Tarver will be as physical as any guard tandem in the PAC-10. The Bruins will definitely fall off of their 28-5 record that they had last year.

Oregon State is the X factor in the conference. Last year was a strange one to say the least for coach Jim Anderson. Tragedy hit the Beavers when forward Earnest Killum died from a stroke. Talented forward Chad Scott didn't help matters with his academics, or lack of academics that is, limiting him to non-conference games. This year there is enthusiasm because of center Scott Haskin, who made the All-PAC-10 team last year, and guard Charles McKinney, a tough player. If Scott is totally eligible this year the Beavers will be tough, very tough.

Stanford lost Keefe to graduation but the Cardinals are still a good team. Senior Marcus Lollie is the best point guard in the PAC-10 and forward Brent Williams is a smooth scorer in the Reggie

Turn to HOOP, page 11

Wednesday November 4, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 40

Sunny this morning, showers in the afternoon. Temps in the 60s.

Sports:
Mike Hodges' 20th-ranked football team prepares to face the Richmond Spiders and former UMass head coach Jim Reid, now Richmond's assistant head coach. Page 12.

Arts & Living:
College rock standard R.E.M. is the subject of "Behind the Mask," a book which attempts to reveal the mystery behind the band. Page 7.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Clinton wins landslide victory

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press

Bill Clinton was elected the nation's 42nd president on Tuesday in a Democratic landslide that swept George Bush from office and ended 12 years of divided government in Washington. Bush conceded defeat and wished the Arkansas governor well in the White House.

Voters were renewing Democratic control of Congress and said pocketbook concerns had mattered most as they chose the new generation of leadership.

Bush vowed to ensure a "smooth transition of power" to the new president. He said he had telephoned his congratulations to Clinton, and added, "I wish him well in the White House. Regardless of our differences, all Americans share the same purpose," he said.

The president spoke before supporters with First Lady Barbara Bush at his side. He thanked Vice President Dan Quayle and James A. Baker III, his closest confidante in three decades of politics.

Bush looked ahead to his retirement to the grandparent business, and said to his wife, simply, "It's over."

Independent Ross Perot said "the people have spoken," and offered his congratulations to Clinton.

Clinton, who campaigned as a "different kind of Democrat" and pledged to rebuild the economy, ran strongly in all regions of the country. He won customary Democratic battlegrounds, captured key battlegrounds in Illinois and Missouri and put Vermont and Kentucky in the Democratic column for the first time in many years.

The 46-year-old governor will become the nation's third-youngest president when he take office Jan. 20, along with Vice President-elect Albert Gore. Together, the two men savored their triumph in Little Rock, where thousands of supporters gathered to cheer their success and plot the presidency to come.

Perot, the man who electrified the campaign and ran a respectable third, had conceded earlier. The television networks declared Clinton the winner about 10 minutes before the polls closed in the far west.

With 52 percent of the precincts reporting, it was Clinton with 44 percent of the vote, Bush with 39 percent and Perot 18 percent.

The Associated Press tally showed Clinton had won 323 electoral votes and led for 57 more — far more than the 270 need to win the election. Bush had 58 electoral votes, a far cry from the 426 he compiled in 1988.

Presidential politics aside, the voters were kind to most congressional incumbents. Most were re-elected easily, with the exception of Democratic Sen. Terry Sanford in North Carolina and Republican Sen. Robert Kasten in Wisconsin. Carol Moseley Braun won her race in Illinois, the first Black woman ever elected to the Senate.

Clinton said he felt "wonderful" as he wrapped up a campaign in which he cast himself as the candidate of new economic opportunity and appealed over and over for voters to summon the "courage to change."

Throughout his campaign, Clinton called himself a "different kind of Democrat" with alternatives to old-style Democratic economics, and he emphasized his support for moving welfare recipients into jobs and more law enforcement personnel onto the streets.

ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE PHOTO
President-elect Bill Clinton, seen here with wife Hillary on the campaign trail earlier this year, emerged the clear winner in Tuesday's race. Bush called to wish him well.

Rep. Olver wins in 1st District

Democrat will return to Washington for full term

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

HOLYOKE — U.S. Rep. John Olver of Amherst beat Republican challenger Patrick Larkin of Pittsfield in the race for the 1st Districts Congressional seats yesterday.

Although final results were not yet available at press time, Olver had 71,333, or 56 percent, to Larkin's 55,463, or 44 percent, of the votes.

Olver credited his victory to the support of a broad-based coalition which included organized labor, teachers and environmental and women's groups.

"This is wonderful — I see so many of you who were out late last night and early in the morning working for this campaign," Olver told a group of approximately 200 supporters who gathered at the Yankee Pedlar Inn in Holyoke.

"I think you've sent me back for a full term to work with a new administration of Bill Clinton and Al Gore," Olver said. "We'll work to rebuild the economy and build the education system we need. And we'll work to pass a national health care plan to provide insurance for every single American citizen."

Olver was elected in June 1991 in a special election to fill the seat vacated by the death of U.S. Rep. Silvio Conte.

As Olver entered to make his victory speech accompanied by his wife, his supporters chanted his name for several minutes as Fleetwood Mac's "Don't Stop" played in the background.

Olver referred to this summer's redistricting which changed the composition of the 1st District, removing

Turn to OLVER, page 2

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN
Students celebrating the victory of Democratic candidates, Gov. Bill Clinton and Sen. Al Gore as the election results came in late last night.

Students come out in numbers to vote

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

The high student voter turn-out in the Amherst precincts with the largest number of registered students indicates the students have a strong interest and concern for the future, said many workers at the polling stations.

"This restores my hope that students really do care about voting and making a contribution to their own lives," said Lesley Crouse, a worker in Precinct 4.

Esterica McGill, the warden of Precinct 2, said the line to the polls had been steady since 7 a.m. "Almost all of the voters registered in this precinct have voted. This is an unusually high turn-out, she said."

Precincts 2, 4, 5 and 10 have the most significant number of registered student voters.

In Precinct 2, out of the 1525 people registered, 1384 voted. In Precinct 4, 621 people voted out of the estimated 750 registered voters. In Precinct 5, 1011 people voted out of the 1250 registered voters. In Precinct 10, by 7:30 p.m., 546 people had voted out of the estimated 675 registered voters.

Dave Allshouse, a junior, said it is important to get involved in voting, but it is even more important to get involved during presidential election years because it is such a significant decision. "It is a privilege to vote and it is very easy to do, so there is no reason not to vote," he said.

Katie George, a clerk in Precinct 5, said many more students vote in the presidential elections than in the

Turn to STUDENTS, page 10

Government gridlock may now be over

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Bill Clinton's sweeping victory and the election of dozens of fresh faces in Congress created instant expectations for a break in government gridlock and a rush towards solutions to fix the economy.

After 12 years of Republican rule at the White House, the country is turning toward another course, with Clinton's activist government in command. It is an unmistakable vote for change.

"We're going to have a very active government for awhile," predicted Michael K. Deaver, one of the top advisers in Ronald Reagan's White House. "That's going to get the town bustling. All the communications people and lobbyists are going to be active again - health care, job bills, tax proposals."

"Hold on to your seats," said Burton Yale Pines, chairman of the National Center for Public Policy Research, a conservative think tank, predicting a surge of legislation when Congress returns in January. Bills that President Bush vetoed, family leave for instance, are sure to be back next year and coast through.

There will be a giant turnover in jobs, as more than 3,000 Republican political appointees are replaced by Democrats.

Real estate agents already are licking their chops in anticipation of sales.

Clinton offered a generational and ideological change. At 46, he will be the first baby boomer in the White House.

Come January, more than 100 new House members will take their seats. Intent on restoring their legitimacy in the eyes of voters, lawmakers will be intent on getting things done.

Stephen Wayne, a Georgetown University specialist on the presidency, said Clinton's victory generates "a kind of new optimism that government can work."

Fixing the economy is job No. 1. And Election Day provided an unwelcome reminder of the problem: The government's gauge of future economic activity fell in September for the third time

Turn to GRIDLOCK, page 10

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darlenne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Gay Lesbian Bisexual Issues

The Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Affairs editor position at the Collegian is now open.

An interim editor has been appointed for BGLAD week, but we are currently accepting applications.

Please come down and apply in person.
Ask for Brooke C. Wheeler.

113 Campus Center
545-0719

Be a part of the Collegian.

It's the end of the world as we know it, and the Collegian feels fine.

THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE AND WORLD SECURITY STUDIES
Presents:

"THE ELECTION RESULTS AND U.S. FOREIGN POLICY"
A Five College Faculty Panel with:

JAMES DerDERIAN, University of Massachusetts
MICHAEL KLARE, Five College Program In Peace & World Security Studies
SUE PETERSON, Smith College
Wednesday, November 4th
8:00 PM
Stoddard Auditorium, Smith College

This event is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible. Sign interpreting is available with two weeks notice. For more information call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Wednesday, November 4

Panel discussion — "Election Results and U.S. Foreign Policy" will be discussed by Five College faculty at 8 p.m. in the Stoddard Auditorium at Smith College. The event is free and open to the public.

Meeting — A Holocaust Memorial Week Planning Committee meeting will be held at 11 a.m. in Hillel's Student Union Office. Come and brainstorm.

Lecture — "Who the Hell Cares About Nursing Theory" will be held with speaker Gertrude Torres, RN, Ed.D from 4 p.m. - 6 p.m. in Campus Center 174-176. There is no charge or registration fee.

Meeting — The Debate Club will be holding its weekly meeting at the Debate Trailer, located below Thompson Hall at 7 p.m. All interested are welcome to attend.

Thursday, November 5

Conference — "Circa 1492, The Impact of the Reconquista on Muslims and Jews," a two-day conference, will include the following:

Welcoming Remarks: 1 p.m. Dean Lee Edwards, FHFA

Session I 1:30 p.m. - 3 p.m.
Session II 4 p.m. - 6 p.m.
Keynote Address: 8 p.m. Memorial Hall

Additional sessions will be held on Friday, November 6. All events in take place in UMass Campus Center Room 904-908 Panel Discussion — "Liberal Arts in the Marketplace: Options and Opportunites" will be discussed with a distinguished panel at 8 p.m. in Campus Center Room 163. Learn what a liberal arts degree can do for your future. Meet alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world.

Concert — "Voices Sepharad" a concert of Judeo-Spanish music and dance. The event will take place at 7:30 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. Admission will be $3 for students and $5 for the general public.

Announcement — Spring '93 Pre-registration guides will be available on Mon., Nov. 9, 9 a.m. - 4 p.m. 2nd floor lobby Whitmore.

Olver

continued from page 1

Northampton and adding Holyoke, as an unsuccessful attempt by Gov. Weld and the Republican Party to unseat him.

"The governor tried very hard," Olver said. "What we've seen tonight is that the city of Holyoke has taken up the slack for the loss of Northampton."

Olver also won Pittsfield, Larkin's hometown, with unofficial totals giving Olver 11, 302 votes to Larkin's 10,489.

Eileen Moss, Olver's press secretary, said Olver won Pittsfield because the voters there saw that he had been an effective congressman.

"People in Pittsfield saw what [Olver] has done in Congress for the past 16 months," Moss said. "Olver's strong point is the issues, and we were able to focus on these."

Moss said the campaign was hurt by Larkin's "misrepresenting" Olver's record, including his assertion that Olver did not support a federal balanced budget amendment. Moss said Olver supported a balanced budget proposal that was different from Larkin's and which did not involve cutting social security.

Olver's campaign suffered from several mistakes. Olver had to issue a public apology after charging that Larkin had held a "no-show" job as a congressional staffer and for the actions of a campaign staffer who taped a private conversation between a reporter and a Larkin supporter.

UMass sophomore Neil Carpenter, the president of the University Democrats and a former intern for Olver, said he believes Olver has been a strong supporter of public higher education. Olver is a member of the education committee in the House of Representatives.

"Olver understands the need for increasing financial aid and is willing to put his money where his mouth is," Carpenter said. "The full returns aren't in on him yet, but he really cares about higher education."

Moss said Olver helped establish the Center for Management Productivity at the University, where UMass works with local businesses to increase productivity.

Correction

In a Nov. 3 Collegian article, it was inadvertently omitted that Chi Omega is a national sorority. The Collegian regrets the error.

Aren't you glad you voted?

For the Serious Student

- Quiet Apartment Living
- Convenient
- Affordable
- Flexible

THE BROOK
253-3834

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days
8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9)
Amherst • 253-5072

You're the BEST..why not work for the BEST?

It all starts at one of our Job Fairs

Sunday, November 8, 10-2pm

All Job Fairs are at the Gatehouse Base Lodge at Sugarbush South in Warren, VT. For more information call Sugarbush Personnel at (802) 583-6400

Sugarbush Resort is known for having the friendliest, most professional and dedicated employees in the ski business. Why do we attract the best employees?...Simply because we have the best ski mountain, the best daycare, the best food service, the best training and the best jobs. Add to that, more things to do, more career opportunities and more fun and you get more happy people. Sugarbush employees get to enjoy the resort and be part of the spirit that is Sugarbush. Join the fun, be part of the Best Team in the Ski Business.

Come to one of our Job Fairs, meet the hiring managers from all departments throughout the resort, find out what jobs are for you and join the Sugarbush Team.

Sugarbush is an Equal Opportunity Employer

SUGARBUSH RESORT
RR 1 Box 350 Warren, VT 05674

CONTACT LENS CARE

AT THE UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES

We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.

•••

Offering a broad array of contact lenses with a large in house inventory.

•••

The new daily wear disposable and frequent replacement contact lenses are now available.

•••

All fittings are done by our eye doctors with experience in contact lens care and solving contact lens problems.

•••

Emphasis is placed on your ocular health and professional service.

uhs
EYE CARE PROGRAM

Convenient hours and convenient on campus location.

For questions or appointments, call 549-2671

Local News

Panel to report suggestions for racial solutions

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

Students and the University of Massachusetts administration must learn to approach cultural diversity in positive ways, and the campus must become more pro-active than reactive toward racial issues, according to the Massachusetts Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights' chairperson Dorothy S. Jones.

The volunteer 13-member committee will be releasing its 46-page report, "Campus Tensions in Massachusetts: Searching for Solutions in the Nineties," that is based on the comments from 29 panelists, representing speakers from UMass and Smith College this Monday. The report will be suggesting actions the University and other college campuses should take to avoid more racial explosions.

"More has to be done or there will be more trouble. You don't wait till the whole thing blows up," Jones said.

Other college campuses across the nation have also been experiencing racial tensions, according to Jones. She said this is because many students coming to college have never faced the culture diversity present at the University.

Yet Jones, citing that she was the Cambridge's public schools' desegregation director for nine years, said she is positive about the improvements.

"It is great that we have so many different students to make up an interesting whole," Jones said. "The core curriculum needs to respect diversity in a positive way. The college has a responsibility to provide it. Life would be dull if we were all alike."

Although the University's Human Relations Director Grant M. Ingle said he has not received a copy of the report, Ingle said he plans to have three-credit multicultural course that first semester freshmen and transfer students would be required to take. Grant said although the courses would be broad-base, they would be pertinent to the students' major. He added it would be similar to the writing requirement.

"[The courses would be] introducing students to the culture of the college and introducing students to multicultural issues of concern," Ingle said.

Yet Jones and Ingle said it would take a while for the changes to be felt throughout the campus.

Ingle said the racial problem at the University is only a piece of the racial difficulties in society.

In addition to encouraging more diversity at the University , the Committee's 12 recommendations are for more financial aid and scholarships for financially needy minority students. They also suggested students having a greater voice in curriculum revisions for multicultural affairs.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

PEEK-A-BOO -- UMass students cast their ballots yesterday. Local election officials said that a record high number of students voted for president as well as Congressional seats and several referendum questions.

UM student's condition critical

Two pedestrians remain in hospital after car accident

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Staff

Two University of Massachusetts undergraduates remain hospitalized at Baystate Medical Center in Springfield after being hit by a car on University Drive on Monday night.

Carrie M. Crossland, 18, of Cance Residence Hall, is listed in critical condition at Baystate. A Baystate spokesperson said Crossland is in the hospital's intensive care unit. Hospital officials would not comment on the extent of her injuries.

Jennifer L. Coughlin, 18, of Mackimmie Residence Hall, was upgraded from critical to fair condition yesterday afternoon. A University spokesperson reported Coughlin had undergone surgery Tuesday morning.

The two were struck at approximately 6:40 p.m. by a car driven by Noreen Murray, 20, also a UMass student. No charges have been filed against Murray. The accident is still under investigation.

A state accident re-construction team has been called in to assist in the investigation, according to University officials.

After the accident Monday night, the residence hall staffs of Mackimmie and Cance counseled residents and provided accurate information about the accident in order to prevent the spread of rumors.

"We want our residents to know that counseling is available to anyone who feels the need," said Susan Lang, the Cance House Residence Director. Lang added her priorities in dealing with the accident are providing accurate information, in addition to supporting residents and staff.

"We tried not to put people in a position where they got panicky," said Carrie Walker, a Cance Resident Assistant. "People asked the typical questions, but it wasn't mass hysteria."

Serious vehicle-pedestrian accidents have occurred before on campus. On Sunday, Sept. 23, 1989, former UMass basketball player Lorenzo Sutton was struck at the corner of North Pleasant Street and Massachusetts Avenue.

TOM HALLER / COLLEGIAN

WHICH END IS UP? – A Washington residence hall student finds a creative way to express his frustrations with the pressures of midterms.

Chinese journalist advises retaining U.S. trade status

By GEORGE ZHU
Collegian Staff

On a visit to Harvard University Qing Dai, a famous Chinese journalist said last Wednesday the United States should continue their trade status to China for "for the sake of ordinary Chinese people to change their social status."

A renowned reporter for the Guangming Daily, Dai was recently awarded the Golden Pen for Freedom by the International Newspaper Publisher Association for her excellence in advocating freedom of expression and human dignity in China.

Dai, who is visiting Harvard University under a fellowship from Nieman Foundation, was detained by police in Beijing for 10 months following the massacre on June 4, 1989. She was then expelled from the communist party, because of her role in the democracy movement.

Jianying Ye, Dai's late foster-father, was one of the People's Republic of China's founders, and one of the 10 marshals commissioned by Chairman Mao in the 1950s.

In last 10 years while the U.S. has been extending China's preferable tariff status, the foreign enterprises, joint enterprises and private enterprises in China have been flourishing, but the central planning economy is weakening, Dai said.

As a result, China's economic structure has been changed significantly. Millions of unemployed people have been able to find a job in companies that the communist government has less direct control over, according to Dai.

"The impact of the most-favored-nation status on China is that it has in fact helped to solve a most urgent and most populous human rights problem there," Dai said.

Dai thanked the international community for its concern and support during her detention in Beijing two years ago. After Secretary of State James Baker personally raised her case to the Chinese leaders during his visit late last year, the government finally allowed Dai to leave China for the United States.

However, Dai said she disagrees with Congress for imposing various conditions on China in order to renew its most-favored-nation trade status.

"Undoubtedly I was one of the beneficiaries as a result of the international pressure in pushing China to improve its human rights record," Dai said. "Nevertheless, the worst violation committed by the communist regime is to set a permanent status for each individual based on ideology. If you are put on the bottom of the society, you have no status right, no education right, no marriage right and no relocation right. You don't even have the most fundamental human rights."

"I was once asked, 'If for the millions of people to have their rights to live and change their status, still put you in jail. Do you accept that?'" Dai said. "I replied, 'Yes, I accept it.'"

Although Dai said her imprisonment was mainly the result of her own activities, she said, "The Chinese law has many

Turn to STATUS, page 4

Bennett suing Boston for civil rights damages

BOSTON (AP) — The man once considered a prime suspect in the murder of Carol Stuart is suing the city, Police Commissioner Francis M. Roache, and several officers alleging his civil rights were violated.

William Bennett, who is seeking an unspecified amount of money, filed the lawsuit on Monday in Suffolk Superior Court. The lawsuit also names Detective Capt. Edward J. McNelley, the department's homicide chief, and six other police officers.

Bennett, who has an extensive criminal record, became a prime suspect in the case after Charles Stuart told police he and his wife were shot by a black man, who robbed them, as the couple left a childbirth class.

Carol Stuart, eight months pregnant, died Oct. 23, 1989. Two months later, Charles Stuart died in an apparent suicide attempt after his brother, Matthew, implicated him.

"It's in the public interest to have the facts of this case fleshed out in court," said Bennett's lawyer, Steven J. Rappaport.

"Let's put it in front of a jury and let them decide whether Bennett was treated properly."

The Bennett suit seeks damages for civil rights violations, invasion of privacy, infliction of emotional distress, malicious abuse of process, defamation and conspiracy.

The lawsuit accused the officers of building their criminal case against Bennett by threatening, coercing and intimidating witnesses. For example, officers tried "to plant controlled substances in the homes of witnesses" to pressure them into incriminating Bennett, the suit states.

A spokesman for the Boston Police declined to comment on the lawsuit, which he said the department had not received.

The lawsuit was filed on the same day Matthew Stuart pleaded guilty to helping hide the gun his brother allegedly used to kill his wife. He said he thought he was helping his brother in an insurance scam.

Matthew Stuart pleaded guilty to concealing stolen property, compounding a felony, conspiracy to obstruct justice, insurance fraud and carrying a firearm. He was sentenced to three to five years in prison and five years probation.

Bennett last month filed suit seeking $200,000 from the Stuart estate for "injuries suffered by the infliction of emotional distress" and legal fees.

A wise man once said that it is of foremost importance to be comfortable with yourself before attempting to get along with others. Maybe you could spend some time by yourself, just thinking. Go for a long walk, perhaps, or merely lie on your bed and stare at the ceiling for an hour - whatever turns you on. But take this advice to heart, folks, because it's a crucial lesson to be learned in life.
THE ART OF GETTING ALONG.

■ status

continued from page 3

was mainly the result of her own activities, she said, "The Chinese law has many flaws and the government often fails to implement it."

"Since I did what I did, I should bear its consequences," Dai said.

Greetings, students. My name is Bob. I usually hang out with Collegian Night Staff weirdos, but I'll be your friend, too, for the right price. Take a ride down the escalator to Room 113 in the Campus Center, and bring cash.

It'll be a rockin' good time.

Cops say body found chained to tree suicide

NEEDHAM (AP) — Authorities said the dead man found chained to a tree in a wooden area last week was a probable suicide, rather than a murder victim.

"Although bizarre, it's extremely tragic," said Michael McGorty, a spokesman for District Attorney William Delahunt.

The Norfolk County district attorney's office has identified the man as Douglas H. Glawson Jr., 35, and said investigators now believe the disabled veteran may have meant to let himself die of exposure or starvation.

Tipped by an anonymous caller, police found Glawson's remains Wednesday about a quarter-mile from the commuter railroad tracks near Route 128. Officials estimated that he had been dead for at least six months.

Initially, police investigated Glawson's death as a homicide. But McGorty said Monday that based on "the history of the individual," detectives believe Glawson may have chained himself to the tree to commit suicide.

Glawson, whose last known address was in Somerville, had been living in area homeless shelters, McGorty said.

"Information came to us from one of those shelters that this individual has been known to go around with a heavy chain around his neck. He had some mental disorders," McGorty said.

The exact cause of Glawson's death could not be determined because the body was badly decomposed. He was identified through dental records.

The greatest things in life are those that you work hardest for.

U M A S S
DEBATE TEAM needs
NEW RECRUITS
FOR THIS SEMESTER
INTERESTED?
Come to a weekly meeting this wednesday at 7pm at Debate Trailer, located below Thompson
For more information call 545-2055

Eating Disorder Programs • Fall 1992
Sponsored by University Health Services
• • •
Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For Individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays and Wednesdays Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
• • •
Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Northwestern College of Chiropractic is accepting applications for its 1993 entering classes.
(January, May and September)
General requirements at time of entry include:
- Approx.. 2-3 years of college in a life or health science degree program.
- A G.P.A. of 2.5 or above.
- A personal interest in a career as a primary care physician.

Northwestern offers:
- A professional school of 500 students with student faculty ratio of 12:1.
- A spacious 25 acre campus in suburban Minneapolis.
- Full accreditation by North Central Association of Colleges and Schools and the Council on Chiropractic Education.

Call: 1-800-888-4777 or
Write: Director of Admissions
2501 West Eighty-Fourth Street ■ Minneapolis, MN 55431-1599

Concerned About Your Relationship with Food?
A Peer Support Group will be held weekly for those struggling with anorexia, bulimia or compulsive overeating.
Time: Mondays 4:30 - 6:00
Place: Campus Center
check daily schedule by the elevator for room number.
Confidentiality Respected

Meditation. 禅
Mental clarity.
Mystical experiences.
Emotional balance.
Spiritual depth.
It will be with you for the rest of your life.
Learn how.
Now.
A special program for people 18 - 29.
Free Music Meditation tapes for you!

Now 2 Classes Every Wednesday!
Nov. 4 - Dec. 9
Introductory: 7:00 - 8:15
Advanced: 8:30-9:45 pm
11/4 Rm. 905-09 11/25 Rm. 803
11/11 Rm. 803 12/2 Rm. 803
11/18 Rm. 911-15 12/9 Rm. 803
UMass Campus Center
FREE
Taught by The Boston Meditation Society

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

The 'people are scum' philosophy

"People are scum." Daniel in his glorious British wit was telling me his philosophy of life." In America everyone uses each other — take Ethiopia. Pretend you lived there. You have no shelter or food. You're hungry, everyone's hungry. You have one thing in mind, survival. To survive you would work with your people to get the food essential for your very existence. No one would care about the color of your skin or what kind of car you drive, all anyone cares about is finding food. You have one goal and you would work together to find it. In America there's so much trivial crap going around and between people that no one but yourself matters. . . people are scum."

E.C. THOMAS

Daniel's seriousness and his "Masterpiece Theatre" tone of voice had me hooked. It was hard to look into those Caribbean blue eyes and not believe him. The subtlety of his words were slowly winning me over. We were parked on the side of a road, consumed by trees and early morning stars, sipping whiskey and talking. I love talking with Daniel. He's one of the few I know who listen to every word I say without taking my thoughts for granted.

But as we talked that night, with each passing hour I felt smaller and smaller, simply because I believed in humanity. Despite the precedents of my life, I had faith in the goodness of people — Daniel doesn't and never truly has.

"People have this inane need to surround themselves with a lot of people, 'friends' they call them," he paused slightly and sighed with an acute frustration. "They fill up their existence by gaining more and more 'friends'. I mean it's all meaningless bull. These people aren't friends, they're like possessions in the game of status quo — who needs that really? You need five or so friends to be happy, once you increase that number you start to lose the true friendships that matter — it becomes trivial."

I've forgotten now how I responded exactly. I remember talking about how I wanted to help humanity in some way. As utopian as it sounded I continued defending the good in people.

But the more Daniel spoke the harder it became to find the logic in my defensive reasoning. I felt rather naive, for Daniel's words reflected the very cluttering of people in my life. Ever since I went home that night, Daniel's words have plagued me. I began thinking about the many people in my life that I tend to call friends. The question of who merits such a title was always in the back of mind.

Tonight those thoughts again visited me. I started thinking about how many people I labeled friends have come and gone in the last year of my life. The number haunts me. Who I've grown up with, who I've been with, who I live with, it amazes me that when I really lay it all out, few of these people really know and care about me — very few are "friends." I'm baffled by my ignorance of what is so apparently obvious.

I saw one of those deceptive persons I carelessly deemed a friend tonight. It hurt a lot that I had trusted him with such a precious thing as friendship. But it hurt even more that he was just one in a number of people who have left a rather large footprint on my heart. Oddly enough he'll probably become a fossil in a lot of people's lives. Maybe people like that don't even deserve thought, but I kind of feel sorry for him. Anyone who makes a mockery of a friendship is the one who in the long run is going to be hurt.

Daniel has been subtly preaching to me that the only one you can trust and worry about is yourself. Now that I think about it, it's kind of ironic that he talks to me, the defender of the universe. I think that he feels a sort of pity for me, because I'm so idealistic despite the realities I've had to face. I hate admitting it, but his 'people are scum' philosophies are tangible references to my life. There have been many times that people have been too quick in their judgements on me, or too quick in their exits. I don't know how much longer I can keep this torch of hope alive in me. There are few people who actually ignite my faith.

Respect, trust are the keys to a working friendship. I feel rather stupid that its taken me so long to realize that few of my "friends" even know what these words mean. . . in fact, its only about five. . . maybe six.

E.C. Thomas is a Collegian columnist.

Don't let Housing put an end to coed bathrooms

Wake up UMass! Just when we thought puritanical moralism went out the door with Jerry Falwell, Jim Bakker and the rest of the Moral Majority, we find that it's back — this time in the form of Housing Services' crackdown on coed bathrooms.

Coed bathrooms have long been a tradition at UMass. Since many coed floors (including my own) have just one large bathroom, these bathrooms have naturally been used by both sexes. The toilet and shower stalls are private, secure and convenient for all floormates. Residents, especially females, are not faced with the safety hazards of walking through dimly lit, glass-littered stairwells to get to another bathroom.

Coed bathrooms, like coed floors and residence halls, have proven to be a successful living arrangement. They are a place where residents (and RAs) can communicate with fellow residents. Coed bathrooms create a natural environment where people of the opposite sex learn to live with each other and respect each other. I have yet to find a student who grew up in a home with a single sex bathroom. I am also unaware of any single sex bathrooms in the homes of administrators, faculty or off-campus students.

This brings us to the decision of Housing Services administrators to impose their morals on the adult undergraduates who call the residence halls their home. Jimmy Swaggart and Pat Robertson would be proud. In selected buildings, Housing Services has placed signs over the bathrooms doors designating them "male" or "female." RAs are required to police the bathrooms to flush out and cite violators. Resident Directors, who do not have single sex bathrooms in their residence hall apartments, are expected to mete out punishment to any and all coed criminals.

Housing Director Joe Zannini should be ashamed. Does he have single sex bathrooms in his home?

And why haven't I heard anything from the Student Government Association on this matter? Are the concerns of dorm residents not important enough? Was this new policy implemented with their consent?

Housing Services should spend more time on dormitory repairs and housing assignments, and less time imposing their "family values" on the residence hall population. Since I expect that they won't, the SGA should make coed bathrooms a priority issue and stop any further erosion of our student rights. And finally, residents should realize Housing Services can't write up every resident in the system and that there is strength in numbers.

Kathleen Collins
Southwest

UMass is what you make it

The past few weeks have been bad for me. Those of you who know me know why. It's UMass. A state of war exists between this institution and myself.

I hate UMass. It's a diabolical, sadistic example of what happens when gutless swine get together mismanage public funds until their eyes are red and their bungling little paws stiff from bungling. UMass festers, oozes, moves with all the cunning of a 12-foot brain damaged Mako in the kiddie pool. It's a squamous, rotting sack of flesh that drags you down, smothering you.

Chris J. PETROPOULOS

Are there any good things about UMass? Yes: the top floor of the library, the Campus Center at four in the morning (for the solitude), the basketball team, and "Cast of Thousands."

Are there things that could be done to make UMass better? Yes, simple things that could be done now or easily by next year.

First, pave all the grassy fields around the dorms and make them parking lots. This would end the torment for those of us with cars, remove the fear of attack walking to and from E lot, and with all the extra spots, allow free parking for all. The parking office could be burned to the ground and each paper-pushing zombie who works there fired, saving the University badly needed funds.

Then radically change how the student activity fund is administered. Currently, I neither belong to nor support any of the RSOs. Yet my money is being divided up between them. Every student should pay into the fund and be issued a bond representing their payment. Each student should then be able to place their funds with any RSOs they find worthy of support. If they chose not to join any groups, they should get all their money back at the end of the semester. This would allow us to abolish the Student Activities Office and fire those racketeers.

The 24-hour Student Union Bar and Grille. How can a campus this size not have a place to get eggs and sausage all night long? With good food and a small, law-abiding tavern, this place would rake in the cash. I'd gladly run it, and split the take with UMass 50/50. I'd be able to retire in three years.

Considering that the Bar and Grille would create a rise in student drinking, all UMass police should be required to sign a statement to the effect that they will not arrest underage drinkers.

Instead, the police should busy themselves arresting people who are not heavy drinkers but toss Frisbees and smoke clove cigarettes on the grounds so that they offend one's sensibilities.

Finally, the University should come clean as to where on campus the state's facility for destroying illegal drugs is, and who exactly is in charge. I've tried to find out. As usual, UMass won't give me a straight answer. But where ever the furnace is, it's a time bomb ticking away.

Imagine: a drug disposal sight, on this campus? Bad craziness.

Chris J. Petropoulos is a UMass student.

Material Girl is just a prostitute

After reading Adam Scott Roberts' review of Madonna's Sex | Collegian, Oct. 29], one can conclude that it is difficult, if not impossible to call Madonna a feminist spokeswoman for sexual equality. A more justifiable description would be to say she is the highest-paid prostitute in the world. She has become part of the establishment as the Material Girl who counts the money she has made on her violent pornographic fantasies which rape and pollute our minds with her vulgar acts.

No wonder the media esablishment has given her so much air time while completely ignoring the radical feminist scholars who could really enlighten the world with the love message. When will the truly wise women recieve the recognition they deserve so that the bondage which ties lovers of equality together is the cosmic energy of erotic love? These are the kinds of orgasms which move the heaven and earth and create social harmony between the sexes. The power of the love relationship will create a new world vision radically different than the world view we see in everyday life of sadomasochism and Madonna.

Libby Hubbard
Amherst

Men don't make the rules of life

The article titled, "Women left in Stone Age," was nothing more than the poorly transcribed mind of a hot-headed feminist. I support equal rights.

Yet it is disturbing to see the feminist movement sunk by people who squint so much to see their objective that they damage their vision. The point was made that "Denying abortions to women is a sneaky way of removing them from the work force, and placing them back in the private home front."

This is as asinine as the idea that women discriminate against men in the work place, because the average life expectancy of a man happens to be several years less than a woman's. In simpler terms, it's a fact of life. Men don't make the rules of life, God does. If you have any problems, bring them directly to him.

Martin O'Toole
Orchard Hill

Black Affairs

The Black Affairs Page is a bi-weekly focus page highlighting Black culture, politics and student life. The opinions expressed on this page do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian.

"You people know best how to solve your own problems." – H. Ross Perot, former presidential candidate

Who will serve as our next President?

President Bill Clinton! Scream and shout Black people, the lord has finally answered our prayers. After 12 years of Ronald Reagan and George Bush, we finally have a Democrat in the White House to save our souls. Soon we will all be free.

And soon we will all wake up.

The harsh reality is that Bill Clinton is not going to deliver us to the promised land. In fact, none of the White men who have sat in the oval office ever have or ever will.

Ever since the late 1860s when president Abraham Lincoln helped to pass the 13th amendment which abolished slavery, Black people have put their hopes and dreams in the hands of one of the two parties which they felt would offer them the best deal for surviving this racist country of ours.

Back then the Republican party was the party of the emancipators and abolitionists, the party whose first president to sit in the White House was Lincoln himself.

The Democratic party, on the other hand, was the party of southern slave owners, who utilized the Ku Klux Klan as an American terrorist group to suppress to political gains of Blacks through violent lynchings, rapes, and other forms of repression. This party was, by the way, America's first political party and produced most of her earliest presidents.

This year, in 1992, we have yet another southern Democrat who appears to have our best interests at hand: President-elect Bill Clinton of Arkansas. Will he really help our plight here in America? Don't count on it. But first, let us examine the record of this man.

Bill Clinton supports the death penalty, a policy that clearly aids in the extermination of our people. He even flew to his state to personally preside over the execution of a mentally retarded Black man.

Bill Clinton is against affirmative action. He says he believes in equal opportunity, but not mandated equal results. After over 300 years of slavery, lynchings, and segregation, Bill Clinton still insists that any guarantees toward our survival in America is preferential treatment.

This past spring, Bill Clinton attacked Rap singer Sister Souljah, calling her racist and comparing her to David Duke, the former Grand Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan. It was a clear attack against Jesse Jackson, who hosted her at a dinner, to show White America that he could stand up to Jackson in a way that Michael Dukakis failed to do in 1988.

Once again, a White politician had exploited us for political gain.

Martin F.
JONES

And yet, millions of African-Americans, at the urgings of Jackson himself, have gone to the polls to send Clinton to the White House, claiming that he is the lesser of two evils.

This scenario is historic. In 1876, Rutherford B. Hayes was a Republican candidate who was elected in the same manner as Bill Clinton. At that time Blacks were blindly loyal to the GOP much as they are now to the Democrats.

Hayes called himself the candidate of change and promised White voters he would move the party away from its liberal roots while assuring Black voters he would protect their interests in the process.

Hayes received the backing of Black politicians who insisted that he was the lesser of two evils over Democrat Samuel Tildon, the candidate of the party that was most opposed to civil rights.

During his tenure in the White House, President Hayes turned his back on the Black voters and instead favored the White voters that his campaign brought back into his party. Under Hayes, many of the political, social and economic gains made by Blacks after the Civil War were lost.

Will history repeat itself with Bill Clinton in the White House? Just wait and see.

Malcolm X talked about the power of the Black vote when he was alive. He spoke of how Blacks had no real power because they were always locked into an allegiance with one of the major parties. He was right. We have always been forced to choose the candidate that one of these parties sends to us. We have fought and died for the right to vote, but in reality we remain politically disenfranchised. According to Malcolm, if Blacks were to ever free themselves from such blind party loyalty, they would become a decisive force in almost every major election.

With the success of Ross Perot, it is clear that Black people need to organize themselves as an independent voting block. This voting block could be even further shaped and empowered under the direction of a national Black political party. And if we wanted to have a real voice for our interests, we could even elect our own president through this party who would serve as the legitimate, democratically- elected leader of Black America.

This president would be a leader chosen by us — not for us — and would be empowered to represent us. If we had such power during this election year, Bill Clinton, for all of his deceptions, attacks and fake promises towards our people, may have found himself headed back to Arkansas where he belongs.

This election saw the plight of Blacks in America totally ignored by both major parties. In the end, we must remember that we can never successfully choose between the lesser of two evils. There is only one evil, and it is aimed at us.

Martin F. Jones is an Amherst resident.

Dr. Jeffries offers us a wealth of knowledge

On Thursday, November 12, Dr. Leonard Jeffries will be speaking at UMass. Since the day I heard this news I have heard the rumblings of protest from several communities. I would like to take this time to remind you that many of those people who are protesting have never even heard Dr. Jeffries speak. These people are unfamiliar with his background and credentials. They are basing their opinions on what the media has portrayed.

Sandra K.
WEST

People say he is anti-Semitic, yet they overlook the fact that a dozen Jewish scholars from across the country sent him information that supported his findings. They also would be surprised to learn that he was the President of a Jewish Fraternity during his college years. In his field, both friends and enemies alike have the utmost respect for him.

Dr. Leonard Jeffries is a world renowned scholar in Black Studies with numerous degrees and has written numerous books. Dr. Jeffries received a Ph.D in political science and African Studies at Columbia University in 1971. Prior to that he received numerous awards and four fellowships. He has done extensive research in Pan-African studies from politics to economic development. Dr. Jeffries has organized and facilitated international conferences around the world in Africa, the Caribbean and South America. He has been the chairman of the Department of Black Studies at the City College of New York since June, 1972 to the present. Black students are entitled to this wealth of knowledge that Jeffries has to offer us as African- Americans and on the struggle of Black people around the world. We will not be denied the right to hear him speak!

I challenge all students, Black, Jewish, White, and others to attend Dr. Jeffries' lecture and dispute his claims if necessary. Go out and dig, do the research and find facts to support your position on his research. If anything, we can all learn from this. Listen to Jeffries, hear what he has to say, and then make your decision. Don't crucify the messenger just because you don't agree with the message!

Sandra K. West is a UMass student

Community Calendar

Wednesday, November 4

Meeting — The UMass Black Student Union will be holding its General Assembly at 6:30 p.m. in the Malcolm X Cultural Center.
An update on the ongoing negotiations with University administrators and the Justice Dept. will given at the meeting.

Radio — "Reports in Color" a weekly community forum sponsored by the Black Mass Communications Project will be broadcast from 6 to 7 p.m. on WMUA 91.1 FM.

Thursday, November 5

Vigil — There will be a candlelight vigil from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. on the south side of the Student Union to protest racism. For more information, contact the Office of Third World Affairs at 546-2517.

Friday, November 6

Dance — "Help Somalia Jam!", a benefit to aid Somali civil war and famine victims will be held at the Campus Center Auditorium. Music by DJ Knockout and DJ Malkes. Also featured will be a live performance by Loose Caboose. Tickets $3 in advance, $4 at the door. For more information, contact Moise at 546-2994, or Hiza at 546-4501.

Saturday, November 7

Food Fest — "A Taste of Culture: Foods from the African Diaspora" Smith College Lilly Hall, M'Wangi Cultural Center at 3:00 p.m. Admission is $3 at the door. Sponsored by Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Inc.

Party — Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority and Iota Phi Theta Fraternity will be hosting a party in the Southside room of the the Hampden Student Center from 9 to 2 am. Music by DJ Knockout.

Sunday, November 8

Open House — The Sylvan Cultural Center will be holding a fall open house from 8 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. in Room 02 in the basement of Cashin. All students are wlcome to attend.

Meeting — Nommo News will be holding a staff meeting in Room 103 New Africa House at 5:00 p.m. All students interested in writing for Nommo are encouraged to attend.

Poverty and affluence in the Black community

When I was a boy growing up in Dayton, Ohio's African-American community on the city's west side, I was fully aware of what "Blackness" meant. We didn't experience the ugly oppression of Jim Crow segregation, yet we still confronted a less severe form of discrimination every day.

Blacks were permitted to vote, but were silently denied credit at every institution. White-owned boarding houses in Gettysburg Avenue, which was the outer boundary of the Black west side, had signs posted in their doors and windows: "No colored."

Nevertheless, there was also a deep sense of shared commitment for group advancement, and a willingness for individual sacrifice for the benefit of one's friends and neighbors, which permeated the entire Black community.

Denied full access to the White world's opportunity, people learned to go beyond the prejudice and to rely on each other. Black doctors served Black patients, rich and poor alike; Blacks with legal problems sought out attorney James McGee, a prominent community spokesman who would be later elected the city's first African-American mayor.

Dr. Manning
MARABLE

Black folk were aware of "class distinctions" which cut across our community, but the income distance between the Black middle class and the poor was less than two paychecks. Middle class social status was not just tied to one's income; it was also a reflection of educational attainment, the character of one's children, and a person's service to his or her church and neighborhood associations.

Social clubs had a role in group uplift, working to tutor Black teenagers on weekends. We also knew without being told that despite the value of our homes, automobiles, or other personal property, that any one of us could be harassed or called "nigger." Our core strength within the Black community was our unity.

Black empowerment in the 21st century will require African-Americans to revive those linkages across class and income boundaries. If we have any hope in destroying the barriers of institutional racism which affect all of us. This means a special obligation among the new generation of Black professionals, who never experienced Jim Crow segregation or the non-violent struggle in the streets to achieve civil rights.

Our civic associations, fraternities and sororities, our neighborhood groups and alumni of historically Black institutions, all have a job to do. We must take aggressive steps to halt the violence between young Black people, replacing apathy and hatred with a commitment to excellence, hope and advancement. If we remember the positive lessons of our own history, we will rediscover the the tools necessary for a renaissance of Blackness.

Dr. Manning Marable is professor of political science and history at the University of Colorado-Boulder.

Arts & Living

New R.E.M. bio: fables of their construction

Colorful book is a photo-filled stumble

By SHARON MURPHY
Collegian Correspondent

R.E.M. - Behind the Mask
Jim Greer
Little Brown & Co.

I will admit it, and my friends can back me up one hundred percent: I am one of the biggest R.E.M. fans alive. The amount of posters, magazine clippings, and god-knows-what-else I have on my walls have left people to tell me that I have an official 'shrine' is my room. All it lacks is the candles and incense.

In addition, I am apt to pick up anything about R.E.M., no matter how much it costs. The past year I have been busy purchasing collectors items and more recently, biographies.

The newest one in bookstores is R.E.M. - Behind the Mask, by Jim Greer. Greer, the Senior Editor at Spin magazine wants to give the R.E.M. fan a historical overview of revealing the "mystery" of the band.

Longtime fans will not need an overview. What they want is a more in-depth look at the band members themselves. It is an easy five-minute story to tell how Bill Berry, Peter Buck, Mike Mills and Michael Stipe got to where they are now, from playing local clubs and pizza parlors in Athens, GA, to winning Grammys and MTV awards. Unless one is a new found R.E.M. fan, these facts are useless.

The book will disappoint many longtime fans. The reader gets the impression that Greer is close friends with R.E.M., then turns around and makes some silly errors.

For example, under one caption it is said that "Fall on Me" is one of the best tracks on Fables of the Reconstruction, when it was on Life's Rich Pageant (come on!). Even worse, there is the mentioning of the band getting signed to IRS records after their president, Jay Boberg, sees R.E.M. in New Orleans on March 12. 1980. When in reality, the band did not even form until April 5, 1980 (whoops!).

Such errors are going to make fans wonder if the band gave him the wrong information (Stipe is famous for doing this) or it is a common error.

The biggest attraction to the book lies in its collection of photographs and "artifacts," some of which are almost ancient in appearance. However, some of them are poorly done and the layout for some does not fit a certain chapter at all.

In one chapter, a picture of Stipe from the 1990 release Out of Time is placed near a write-up about their early days. This can totally make one diehard fan like myself squirm at the awkwardness of the page.

Some of the photography itself is second-rate with poorly focused pictures in some sections, and just simply bad pictures of the band (the Grammy overleaf is the worst!).

There are, however, also great inserts of interviews with Peter Buck and Michael Stipe. As well done as they are, Greer decides to insert them in the middle of an important story.

One of the best parts of the book, besides the interviews, is the section entitled "Discography, Tours, and Guest Appearances". It contains one of the most in-depth discographies, including 36 bootleg recordings and every minor appearance or production of someone else's albums.

In the tour section, there is a listing of everywhere R.E.M. has done a concert or radio performance, including one that they did at our Fine Arts Center and WMUA in October of 1984. However, there are obvious guest appearances left out, including MTV's "Unplugged" and last year's "Saturday Night Live."

Some biographies either tell the standard story of how a band came to be and their rise to success or show a photo album filled with candid pictures of the band in photo shoots. R.E.M. - Behind the Mask is a mixture of both. This works well at some points, yet at others horribly.

If you are seriously interested in some other biographies, especially for those new R.E.M. fans, here are two that I can recommend. The first is a British import which is a rare find but an excellent book titled Remarks: The Story Of R.E.M. by Tony Fletcher.

Secondly, and probably the best book and most accessible for a baby R.E.M. fan is Party Out Of Bounds: The B-52's, R.E.M., and the Kids Who Rocked Athens, GA by Rodger Lyle Brown. A basic introduction for those who want to be weaned onto R.E.M. (and it has some great party ideas, too!).

R.E.M. - Behind the Mask is a great book for the average rock 'n' roll fan who loves those big glossy photos to drool over, but the band's story is one that more substantial R.E.M. fans can find else where.

COURTESY WARNER BROS.
R.E.M.

This week on HSCN: Boyz, Godfather and a Pope

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES
Nia Long and Cuba Gooding, Jr., of "Boyz N the Hood."

By JAMIE GORNSTEIN
Collegian Staff

Hello, movie lovers and welcome to yet another installment of the Campus Cable Connection. For those of you who keep close tabs on this column (thank you faithful readers), you would have noticed the nausea-invoking Godfather III was shown on HSCN, much to my dismay. However, this week, I am pleased and honored to say the one, the only, the original and the best Godfather will be gracing your television sets. Plus, there are many other of my favorite picks and pans this week, so keep it tuned to good ol' Channel 7. Now here are the movies that will be shown from today 'till Nov. 10.

April Fool's Day—Deborah Foreman, Griffin O'Neal, Clayton Rohner. A star-studded cast here, huh? Ridiculous plot of a woman with more than a few screws loose who decides to play some practical jokes on her college friends, as she hosts a weekend getaway at her parents' mansion. Give me a break! Anyone with a shred of intelligence would not find this one remotely believable, and I found myself laughing more than once at the very fake-looking corpses. I think I saw a price tag hanging from one of them! Sheesh. NO STARS.

Boyz 'N The Hood—Morris Chestnut, Cuba Gooding, Jr., Ice Cube, Larry Fishburne. Whew! Thank goodness, a quality movie. This film is a rare treat directed with superb mastery by novice John Singleton. It is about a father and son relationship that deals (quite tastefully, I might add) with the issues of AIDS, drugs, gang violence, and other relevant subjects. The acting is intense. The music is outstanding and the cinematography is phenomenal. Not one to miss! ****

Children of the Corn—Peter Horton, Linda Hamilton, R.G. Armstrong. Not one of Stephen King's finer stories about a town taken over by psychotic kids in the Bible Belt. They murder their parents in a gruesome scene in the beginning of the movie, but it goes downhill from there. Thirtysomething's dead Peter Horton and Terminator 2's Linda Hamilton are the only saving graces of the film. A couple of scenes to make you jump, but not enough to save the movie. *

The Day the Earth Stood Still—Michael Rennie,

Turn to HSCN, page 8

AL Di MeoLa
WhEN: Nov. 10th 1992
THE WORLD Sinfonia TRIO
WHeRe:
FROM.
PRiCE:
& 5 OTHERS
DAY OF SHOW:
Tix

Concert of Judeo-Spanish Music & Dance
VOICES OF SEPHARAD
Thursday, November 5, 7:30pm
Bezanson Recital Hall (Fine Arts Center)
General Admission: $5 / Student: $3
Hillel Activity Card Holders & Music Students: FREE
"Graceful, fiery & elegant, VOICES OF SEPHARAD explore in song and dance a stunning Jewish cultural tradition."
Sponsors: UMASS Hillel, UMASS Arts Council, UMASS Dept. of Music & Dance, 5-College Hillel

HSCN

continued from page 7

Patricia Neal, Hugh Marlowe. This 1951 film is a classic movie in the Gornstein house back in good old Framingham. If you murmur even a single word during the movie, Dad Gornstein'll shoot you in the face with a bazooka. In other words, it's an amazing film way, way ahead of its time. It is about an alien, who comes to Earth, to deliver a very important peace message that is not received as well as anticipated. Words to the wise...Klatu Barata Niktoh! ****

The Freshman—Matthew Broderick, Marlon Brando, Maximilian Schell. A very funny movie about an NYU [New York University] student who becomes involved in the Mob. Brando is simply outstanding as his "Godfather-like" self in this film with a tres-New York flavor. Not in the same ballpark as my favorite film with Brando in it this week (see the next movie down), but an enjoyable flick nonetheless. 1/2

The Godfather—Marlon Brando, Al Pacino, James Caan. Francis Ford Coppola's brilliant adaptation of Mario Puzo's novel is just simply indescribable with respect to sheer and utter perfection. The film reflects upon a Mafioso godfather, Don Corleone, and his family. The only controversial scene is whether or not James Caan actually dies at the toll bridge. HA! Just kidding. ****

Hairspray—Sonny Bono, Ruth Brown, Divine, Ricki Lake. Very funny film about the integration of a dance show in the early 60's. And, as my sorority sisters, who see me in the bathroom every morning, will agree that I should have starred in this one. Ricki Lake is an excellent actress with a lot of hidden talent (perhaps it was hidden in all that hair!). Catch this one at least once. The music's a lot of fun. ***

I Love You to Death—Tracey Ullman, Kevin Kline, Joan Plowright. Believe it or not. This film about a man who constantly cheats on his wife and she unsuccessfully tries to kill him. It is actually based on a true story! Laughable film noir goes a tad flat at the end. But it is a treat to watch, especially the scenes with River Phoenix and oh-so-cute Keanu Reeves. The scene, with Kline going to confession, is a classic! 1/2

Major League—Charlie Sheen, Tom Berenger, Corbin Bernsen. This film is sooooo predictable, but who the heck cares? The Cleveland Indians' owner dies and his wife is left to manage the team. She wants to relocate the team to Florida and can only do so, if the team comes in dead last. The players who make up the team are so hysterically bad, but great fun to watch. The film is completely devoid of all surprises. They, of course, win the League Championships. Charlie Sheen has a typically fantastic performance as "Wild Thing." ***

Pacific Heights—Matthew Modine, Melanie Griffith, Michael Keaton. Lots of M's in this movie, huh? Griffith and Modine are landlords who get a tenant, Keaton, who just won't leave. Another movie that is very predictable, except for one jumper. I had to be practically scraped off the ceiling. Keaton is a slithery, evil character, not a very challenging role for him, but he done very well. You will cheer for Griffith in the end. ***

Places in the Heart—Sally Field, Lindsay Crouse, Ed Harris. Two Oscars clinched for this stupendous drama about a cotton farmer's widow. Issues in this film deal with rural poverty, racism, and other politically charged elements. Sally Field won Best Actress and writer-director Robert Benton (not to be confused with Robby Benson) won for his original screenplay. One of the better films about the 1930s Depression next to The Grapes of Wrath. 1/2

Prince of Tides—Barbra Streisand, Nick Nolte, George Carlin. From what I have been told, it is not as good as the book. But I was extremely impressed by the film directed by Streisand about a Southern football coach, who has to deal with his marriage falling apart, his sister's attempted suicide, and his growing attraction to his sister's psychiatrist. The story is very powerful. The acting is outstanding, and Bohr-bra is like BUTTAH! Please...talk amongst yourselves...*

Movies that are on HSCN, but were not reviewed: An Angel At My Table, House Party II, My Girl. The Pope Must Diet, White Men Can't Jump, Labyrinth and Young Guns.

STUDENT FITNESS MEMBERSHIPS!!!!!

One Easy Payment! No Gimmicks!

$139.00 *SPECIAL RATE! September to May

MEMBERSHIP INCLUDES*:
- Tennis
- Nautilis
- Free Weights
- Basketball
- Racquetball
- Aerobics(includes step)
- Fitness testing
- Sauna
- Massage Therapy
- Cardiovascular (Stairmaster®, LifeCycles®)

*Not all clubs feature all amenities Nominal Fee

Comparable Value $400 if paid monthly! You save nearly 50% by paying for your membership on the day you join! Hurry! Act right now & Save!

ATHLETIC CLUBS of AMERICA

659 Amherst Street
SUNDERLAND: (413) 549-3638
(Formerly Winners Athletic Club)

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA

$10 HAIRCUTS!

Make an appointment with Heather or Liz, between 9am and 1pm, and your haircut will be only $10!
Good Monday through Friday.
Expires 11/4/92

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton / Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

Five College Career Fair for Students in the Sciences

3:00-7:00 pm
Thurs. Nov. 5

Smith College
Neilson Browsing Room

Explore internships and full-time employment opportunities with these organizations

1. BASF Bioresearch Corp.
research assoc oncology, immunology or molecular biology
2. Brown University Graduate School graduate school programs in the sciences
3. CEIMIC Corp.
analytic chemist (BS/Chem) and in envir. media (MS & Ph D)
4. Mass Exec. Office of Envir. Affairs regional planner, environmental analyst, envir. engineer
5. MIT Lincoln Laboratory electronics, digital commun, satellite commun, radr systems
6. New England Aquarium fellowships, educators, graphic design, exhibits, etc
7. U.S. Dept. of Interior/Fish & Wildlife internships physiology, hydraulic engineering, ecology, behavior
8. Wyeth-Ayerst Research
BS/MS chemists and biologists
9. Cancer Prevention Research Institute internships in biochemistry and epidemiology
10. Bristol-Myers Squibb
asst. scientist/assoc. clinical scientist
11. Brown Univ. Assoc. Provost's Offic research in bio, chem, physics, computer science
12. Mass. Dept. of Environmental Mgmt river basin planning, dev. of natural resources educ
13. Medical Information Tech, Inc.
software applications consultant, programmers
14. Neurogen Corporation
pharm.,mol bio,biochem, electrophysiology
15. Student Conservation Assoc. paid internships: environ. educ., wildlife research 16. Jackson Laboratories internships and research
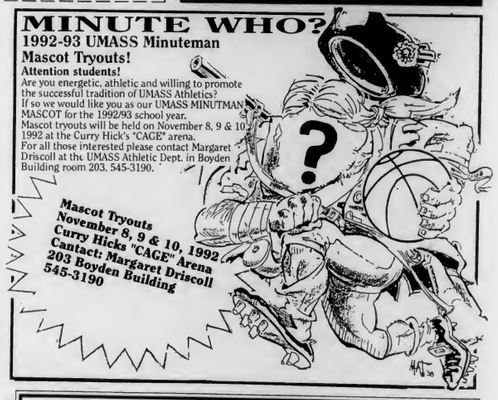
17. Pfizer, Inc.
pharmaceutical research and marketing

.....and more!!

Co-Sponsored by the Career Offices at Amherst, Hampshire, Mt. Holyoke, Smith Colleges & The University of Massachusetts

THE MATHER CAREER CENTER
Career Planning and Placement • Cooperative Education • Internships
Fraternity/Sorority Park - on the Orchard Hill bus route. (413)545-2224.
Where Careers Take Off!

MINUTE WHO?
1992-93 UMASS Minuteman
Mascot Tryouts!
Attention students!
Are you energetic, athletic and willing to promote the successful tradition of UMASS Athletics?
If so we would like you as our UMASS MINUTMAN MASCOT for the 1992/93 school year.
Mascot tryouts will be held on November 8, 9 & 10, 1992 at the Curry Hick's "CAGE" arena.
For all those interested please contact Margaret Driscoll at the UMASS Athletic Dept. in Boyden Building room 203. 545-3190.



Mascot Tryouts
November 8, 9 & 10, 1992
Curry Hicks "CAGE" Arena
Contact: Margaret Driscoll
203 Boyden Building
545-3190

TIME OUT

Tonite
BUD NIGHT
Free Prizes, T-shirts, etc

Free Antonio's Pizza
every Tuesday & Wednesday 10 - ?

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

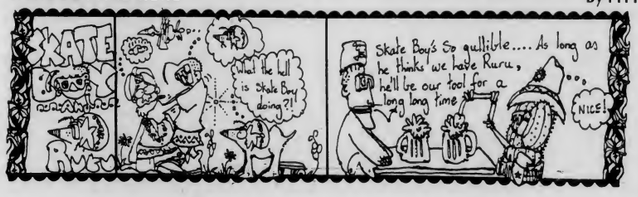
CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT



THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

"Well, if I'm lucky, I should be able to get off this thing in about six more weeks."

Quote of the Day

"I have no political horizon."
– George Bush, U.S. President
Jan. 20, 1989 – Jan. 19, 1993

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The mood is cheerful and buoyant, just right for advancing your employment or financial plans. Joint efforts with VIPs prove especially lucrative. Re-evaluate your investment portfolio.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stick to your work routine and get better organized. It is OK to be a "good sport" so long as you do not let other people take advantage of your gentle disposition.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Once you get up a head of steam, you can be a real go-getter. Redouble your efforts to get a new venture under way. Stop worrying about those things you cannot change.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Financial need may be the motivating factor behind the energy you direct to your work. Valuable information is at your fingertips; use it wisely. The more you give, the more you will receive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Try to let someone down gently, but be firm. Fooling around is not your cup of tea, especially on the job. Focus on financial affairs. Do not waste time on frivolous pursuits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Distant horizons beckon; it may be hard to hold you back! Break loose this evening and tackle a new venture. Although your feelings are close to the surface, you hide them well.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have a chance to add to your back account or blow the extra cash on clothes. Resist the temptation to splurge. Pay back an older sibling instead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Plunge ahead fearlessly with your plans. Obstacles can be transformed into stepping stones! A good relationship grows into something even more rewarding.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Duty calls, and you have some catching up to do. Even if you stay at home today, you will have plenty to occupy your attention. Watch your language. Angry exchanges should be avoided.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Trust your initial impression; it is probably right on the money. Avoid going overboard on luxuries you do not need. Social prospects are looking up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A temporary delay might hamper progress but not your expectations. Go over financial arrangements with a keen eye to eliminate waste and inefficiency.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Some new and clever ideas could be worth pursuing; keep them in mind for later on. A partner has other plans for you today. Treat loved ones with respect and sensitivity.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

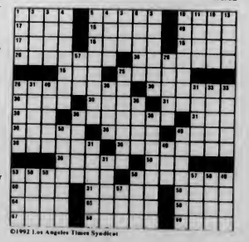
ACROSS
1 Perches
5 Stage
10 Knocks
14 Pirates' bounty
15 Place for a boutonniere
16 Ready for publication
17 Green Gables girl
18 Stadium
19 Spouse
20 Beauty contest
22 Footrest
24 Fruit stone
25 Staff of life
26 Stashaped
30 Burr or Hamilton
34 Inlet
35 Midwest country
37 Fancy leather
38 Tool for Bunyan
39 Enlivens
41 Nothing
42 Flaxen cloth
44 Comic's e.g.
45 Monsieur
46 Involve
48 Most daring
50 Jargon
52 Part of USMA
53 Huntsman's cap with ear flaps
56 Source of drying oil
60 Toward shelter
61 Say "hello"
63 European cinema
64 Raise
65 Cosmetician Lauder
66 Word with weed, wood or work
67 Tattered
68 Emits smoke
69 Cozy home

DOWN
1 Smack
2 Hebrides Island
3 Chinese society
4 Spire
5 Baranauskia fruit
6 A Richard Rodgers' partner
7 Imitate
8 Man of the casa
9 Happy
10 Make over
11 First father
12 Pocket bread
13 British gun
21 Feel rocky
23 Shade of brown
25 Shining
26 Dieter's need
27 Poison
28 Happening
29 Journey
31 Fencing move
32 Arabian rulers
33 Lease again
36 Neck area
39 Doddering
40 Wood eaters
43 Part of EST
45 Rainy day wear
47 More immense
49 — ordinaire
51 Scandinavian
53 Tram anagram
54 Bread spread
55 Adjacent to
56 Onionlike plant
57 A name for Ireland
58 Son of Seth
59 "— Tread on Me"
62 French season

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

P	L	U	S	H		A	E	M	D		E	L	T	A
R	E	N	T	E		E	V	E	N		L	O	R	E
E	N	D	O	R		P	I	S	A		E	R	I	N
D	O	W	N	I	N	G		S	T	A	R		N	O
			H	E	L	A				M	O	R	E	S
R	O	M	E		A	L	P	A
E	P	I	C		T	I	T	L	E		D	I	E	S
C	A	N	O	E		C	A	R	E	E	N
A	D	A	P	T		S	T	A	T	E
			R	I	B		T	O	R		M	A	P
P	E	N	D	A	N	T		D	E	M	O	C	R	A
A	S	I	A		R	I	N	E		A	U	D	I	E
L	E	S	S	E	E		P	A	T	I	S	S	E	R

11/3/92



©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Today's Staff

Night Editrix ..... Tami Monahan
Copy Editor ..... Christina Rothwell
PhotoTechnician ..... Jessica Taverna
Production Supervisor ..... Alan Blagg
Production ..... Jim Ganley, Theresa Giammattei, Mike Carvalho

Menu

LUNCH
Clam Roll
Hamburger

BASICS LUNCH
Clam Roll
Oatburger

DINNER
ITALIAN NIGHT
Fried Mozzarella
Eggplant Parmigiana
Fettuccini or Rotini with Sauce

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Announcing

THE ELIE WIESEL PRIZE IN ETHICS ESSAY CONTEST

PURPOSE: THE ELIE WIESEL PRIZE IN ETHICS ESSAY CONTEST, sponsored by The Elie Wiesel Foundation for Humanity, challenges students to identify, define, and analyze contemporary ethical questions, issues or dilemmas, and think carefully about complex human and social problems.

ELIGIBILITY: The Essay Contest is open only to full-time undergraduate Seniors enrolled in an accredited, four-year college or university in the United States. Students must have registered senior status during the Fall 1992 semester.

ESSAY TOPICS, CONTEST & LENGTH:
"The Meaning of Ethics Today: Choices, Challenges and Changes."
"What is the Ethical Legacy of the 20th Century?"
"Can Ethics Be Taught?"

In 3,000 to 4,000 words, students are asked to develop a substantive, informed, and judicious argument defending an ethical perspective and principles relative to one essay topic.

Questions students might consider in addressing the 1993 topics could include the following:

- What are the most important moral choices faced today?
- Why must individuals speak out when confronted with human suffering and injustice?
- What are our ethical obligations to preserve and protect our physical environment and natural resources?
- How should we respond to new, and not so new, ethical issues in business, medicine, law, government, and human rights?
- What are the significant moral or ethical issues raised by technology in the 1990's?
- How does an individual or a group reconcile desire for autonomy with the necessity for cooperation within a community, a nation, or the world?
- How can educational institutions affect morality?
- How should one respond when writers and philosophers - sometimes great writers and great philosophers - use language and concepts which encourage racism, ant-semitism and other forms of prejudice and hate?

The essay may be developed from any point of view and can be in the form of a case study, a personal experience, or an analysis that is literary, philosophical, historical, biographical, sociological, theological, or psychological.

Essays must be in English and must be the original, unpublished work of the author.

First Prize, $5,000, Second Prize, $2,500, Third Prize, $1,500, and two Honorable Mentions, $500 each.

Submission Deadline: 12 Dec. 1992.

For Further Information, See Faculty Coordinator,

Professor James Young, 452 Bartlett Hall

■ gridlock

continued from page 1

in four months.

Clinton aides said his first proposals would be aimed at sparking the economy. He is expected to propose investment tax breaks and tens of billions of dollars in spending on public works projects to create jobs.

Clinton promised tax cuts for the middle class, but that might go on hold because of the record budget deficit that topped $290 billion.

Voters also made clear they want the President and Congress to produce a plan to control soaring health-care costs and provide coverage for the more than 40 million Americans who have no health insurance.

■ students

continued from page 1

state and local elections. "In previous state and local elections somtimes just 10 students have voted," she said.

Phyllis Hastings, the warden of Precinct 4 said the low student turn-out in local and state elections is to be expected. "Students local political interests are in their home towns. The presidential election attracts the most students," she said.

Mary Andrews, the warden of Precinct 10, said she enjoys it when students come to vote for the first time. "It is fun to show them how to use the polling machine. I hope it is a good experience for students too," she said.

Josh Wardrop, a sophomore engineering major, said he thought is was great that a group of his friends got together and voted. "It is our generation that will be deciding on issues and by voting we are showing we care about what happens to the country," he said.

George said students seemed prepared to vote on the whole ballot because they asked a lot of questions about it.

"The students were in the poll booths reading the ballot for a long time, so I think they answered more than just one question," Hastings said.

Hastings said she was glad to have a precinct including students because she likes working with them. "I think the students are sincere about voting and happy they can do their bit for the country," she said.

John Mitchell, a first-year student who is undecided, said he wanted to vote to try and make a change. "It's our future and when students complain about the government when they haven't voted, I think it is hypocritical," he said.

■ west

continued from page 12

team, especially come playoff time. If another forward like Richard Dumas or Cedric Ceballos steps up off the bench to help Barkley, watch out for Phoenix.

The Seattle Supersonics have the talent to win it all. Shawn Kemp showed in the playoffs just how much of monster he can be. If Gary Payton plays the point the way he should and Benoit Benjamin plays the pivot the way he could, the Sonics would be very scary. Seattle has everything, they just have to show it.

The Golden State Warriors are as exciting a team as there is in the NBA. Problem is exciting doesn't always mean good. In Billy Owens, Tim Hardaway, Chris Mullin, and Sarunas Marciulionis, though, Don Nelson does have a talented base to work with. If they only had a center.

The Los Angeles Clippers are on their way up. Danny Manning plays well for Larry Brown as does Ron Harper. If Mark Jackson takes over at the point the way he can and Stanley Roberts does damage in the post, look out!

The Los Angeles Lakers fell back when Magic re-retired. Look out for rookie Duane Cooper, though from USC, he can really run the break.

The Sacramento Kings are in sad shape with Mitch Ritchmond, Lionel Simmons, Walt Williams, and Wayman Tisdale their only viable players.

Conference Prediction: Seattle over Phoenix (No, I am not drunk).

Jeff Crofts is a Collegian Columnist!

THE EDWIN M. ROSSMAN ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS

SPORT MANAGEMENT

DATE: WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1992
TIME: 3:00 PM
LOCATION: CAMPUS CENTER 168C

SPONSORED BY:
MATHER CAREER CENTER
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
SPORT MANAGEMENT

This is an opportunity to meet with alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world. Don't miss this important panel discussion!

ALUMNI PANELISTS:

Paul Baldrate - B.S., 1989	Assistant Manager and Membership Coordinator Plymouth & Worcester Athletic Clubs
Pam Batalis - M.S., 1991	Sales Representative Reebok Northeast
Tom Cafaro - M.S., 1979	Athletic Director Nichols College
Heidi Holland - M.S., 1981	Director of Media Relations Boston Bruins
Pam Stone - B.S., 1988	Public Relations Manager Spalding Sports Worldwide

For more information, please contact:
Mather Career Center
545-2224

LIBERAL ARTS IN THE MARKETPLACE: OPTIONS AND OPPORTUNITIES

QUESTION:
What do the screenwriter of Young Indiana Jones Chronicles, orchestrator of the presidential debates, and the publicity director for the Boston Red Sox have in common?

ANSWER:
A liberal arts degree from UMass in the Faculty of Humanities and Fine Arts.

THE FACULTY OF HUMANITIES AND FINE ARTS PROUDLY PRESENTS DISTINGUISHED ALUMNI PANELISTS:

Richard Bresciani '60	Director of Publicity, Boston Red Sox Boston, MA
Edward Fouhy '56	Founder & President, Concorde Communications Washington, DC
Jon Hensleigh '81	Screenwriter & Producer New York, NY

DATE? Thursday, November 5
TIME? 8:00 PM
WHERE? Campus Center 163
WHY? Learn what a liberal arts degree can do for your future. Meet alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world.

Don't miss this lively and informative event!

■ east

continued from page 12

potential. Patience is the key. "Shaq" is worth the wait.

7. WASHINGTON BULLETS: The emergence of Pervis Ellison suprised some, and finally satisfied others. The play of Michael Adams and Harvey Grant was consistent. And, they picked up Rex Chapman. That is it. Not really much else worth mentioning about last year.

Is Michael Jordan still breathing? Then the Chicago Bulls will contend for the title. Clearly the most dominating player in the game. Jordan is coming off two consecutive Most Valuable Player awards, and the Bulls are coming off two consecutive N.B.A. Championship seasons. He, along with Scottie Pippen and Horace Grant, lead the championship team that not only put points on the board (fifth in N.B.A.), but also played exceptional defense (third). They are going for their third straight championship, which if accomplished it would be the first time since the Boston Celtics back in the 1960s. Let us look at the Central Division:

1. CHICAGO BULLS: Is this team overexposed? I think so. Is this a three man team? Practically, I believe, and a darn good one. Will they "three-peat"? It's a definite possibility.

2. CLEVELAND CAVALIERS: The only other team in the conference besides New York and Chicago that have a chance at the ring. Led by underrated superstars Mark Price and Brad Daugherty, the Cavs, if healthy, should contend. Larry Nance (33 years-old) and John "Hot Rod" Williams are key players to the Cavs' success.

3. DETROIT PISTONS: Isiah Thomas, Joe Dumars, and Dennis Rodman are the only three reasons why the Pistons will not drop into the division cellar. Daly is out, and Ron Rothstein is in. Rothstein has to deal with the differing personalities on this team as well as Daly did. If not, the Pistons are in trouble.

4. CHARLOTTE HORNETS: They have Larry Johnson, one of the next great forwards in the N.B.A.. They have Kendall Gill, one of the next great guards. And, they picked up one of the best players in the draft, Alonzo Mourning. The key to Charlotte's success stands but 63 inches off the ground. If point guard Tyrone "Mugsey" Bogues produces, this team could make the playoffs.

5. ATLANTA HAWKS: Dominique Wilkins is back after missing 40 games due to injury. Kevin Willis is back after averaging over 15 rebounds per game, and Stacey Augmon is back after a steady rookie season. The problem: who plays point guard? Newly acquired Mookie Blaylock could be the answer.

6. PACERS: Picked up Pooh Richardson and Sam Michell, lost Chuck Person and Michael Williams in September trade. Reggie Miller is one of the league's best shooters, and Detlef Schrempf is the league's best sixth player. Now that Person is gone, who will they go to come playoff time? No need to worry, the Pacers won Not make the playoffs.

7. MILWAUKEE BUCKS: If you need to remain patient with Shaquille O'Neal and the Magic, imagine how it is needed here. They have some young players, including draft picks Todd Day and Lee Mayberry, and they have some veterans, including Moses Malone and Alvin Robertson. All of this is irrelevant, though. This year, the Bucks are going nowhere.

Prediction for the 1992-1993 Eastern Conference Final: Knicks over Bulls in seven games.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian correspondent.

It's a noise we love to make, and for years we have been makin'.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian. Twenty-five years in the business and still puttin' out.

TONIGHT
KARAOKE
Any Menue Nachos
$2.00
9:30-10:30
THE 24 PUB
CELEBRATES 1968-1992 IN AMHERST
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

D.P. Dough delivers CALZONES
call 256-1616
Now Open at 11:30 A.M.

$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES
EXPIRES 8/30/93
Delivery Only
One coupon per 2 calzones.

$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES
EXPIRES 8/30/93
Delivery Only
One coupon per 2 calzones.

TRAVEL SMART THIS WINTER!
FROM NEW YORK
Roundtrip / One Way
London $305 $165
Paris $398 $219
Rome $525 $320
Oslo/Stockholm $458 $229
Tel Aviv/Istanbul $639 $329
Guatemala City $390 $205
Costa Rica $430 $225
Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Customs-immigration and departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420* *in NYC

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Anthropology majors and prospective Anth majors: Anth undergrad caucus meeting today 3:30 MacInner E-14 ALL WELCOME

Multicultural Night international Entertainment and cuisine needed for campus wide event (ingredients will be provided) Show UMass your culture! Call by Nov. 6th 253-0522

AIRLINE TICKETS

Airline Tickets take $50-$100 off any fare call Stuart at 516-767-7646

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Department of Landscape Architecture announces its Fall Workday Saturday, November 7, 1992. YOU supply tools WE supply lebor Call 665-7207 by 11-6

Greeks and clubs raise a cool $1000 in just one week! Plus $1000 for the member who calls! and a free HEADPHONE RADIO just for calling 1-800-932-0528 ext. 65

Need a locker? We have them at OCHO! 42B Student Union

PVDC Oil Coop. Purchase home heating oil at reduced cost. Register at OCHO. 42B Student Union or call 545-0865. Save money and stay warm

Student Renters and landlords should stop by the off campus housing office to pick up the latest landlord/tenant guide, it's free and an absolute must for all your housing questions call 5-0865 or stop by.

The off campus housing office at 42B Student Union offers a great way to find subletting or sublet a property over intersession all leasing questions answered with a smile call 5-0865 or stop by.

Tired of your science major? Try Food Science Call Dr. Chinacholi 545-1025

Video
The Union Video Center is offering workshops on video production. Get hands on training with professional grade equipment. If you're interested in video, don't miss this opportunity. The UVC is located in the Student Union. 545-1336
Life is short, video is forever.

COLLEGE PIZZA

College Pizza
Fall Special
Small cheese $3.50
Large cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings $6.99
Free soda with large sub salad or spaghetti
549-8098 549-6073
MUST MENTION THIS AD

EXTREMELY IMPORTANT

Tarot Reading by appointment. Anytime Call Mitch at 548-9761

FOR RENT

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

FOR SALE

Brother Wordprocessor WP-760D+ with spreadsheet brand new with one year warranty. Only $298 546-0290

Like new Brother word processor WPD 760D plenty of features A steal at $210 or best offer 546-1197

Stereo Components: Used/reconditioned, area's biggest selection. Buy/Sell/Trade at Stereo/Video Exchange, Sundays 10-4, inside Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Other days call 256-0941

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Packs + case and manuals Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O.

HELP WANTED

Alaska Summer Employment fisheries earn $600+ a week in canneries $4000/month on fishing boats. Free transportation! Room and Board! Male or Female. Get a head start on this summer. For employment program call 1-206-545-4155 ext. A5001

College Pro Painters Earn $8000-$10000 this summer running your own business. Informational session on Wed. Nov. 4 room 902 Campus Center. Info call 1-800-346-4849 or Brendan at 549-8109 All are welcome

College Pro Painters Informational session room 902 cc will be held at 7 pm tonight

Couples – Property Manager Free Amherst apartment plus salary Debbie 256-0741

Evening Jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action $7/hr. On buslines. 584-9830

Earn $2000 + FREE SPRING BREAK TRIPS! North America's #1 Student Tour Operator seeking motivated students, organiations, fraternities and sororities as campus representatives promoting Cancun or Daytona Beach! Call 1-800-365-4654

Fundraisers for Christmas Kettle program, outdoor work needed for 3 hour shifts from November 21 thru Christmas. Reliable and dependable individuals a must. Contact Lisa at the Salvation Army M & F 3-7 and Thurs 1-6 $4.50/hour

Postal jobs available! Many positions. Great benefits. Call 1-80-333-3737, ext. P-3306

SPRINGBREAKERS
Promote our Florida Spring Break packages. Earn MONEY and FREE trips. Organize SMALL or LARGE groups. Campus Marketing, 800-423-5264

$500.00
If you have access to a video camera, we're looking for students to film a mini-video. May lead to permanent position. For information, call C.B. productions Inc. M-F 9-5, (617)332-9606

$252.50 Sell 50 funny college t-shirts and make $252.50. No financial obligation. A risk free program. Avg. sales time = 4-6 hours. Choose from 18 designs. Smaller/larger quantities avail. call 1-800-733-3265

$200 - $500 WEEKLY
Assemble products at home. Easy! No selling. You're paid direct. Fully guaranteed. FREE INFORMATION - 24 HOUR HOTLINE. 801-379-2900 Copyright # MA15KDH

WANTED: TRAVEL REPS for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SIESTA, ask for Bonnie

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons - first lesson half price 665-1178

Italian Tutor
Native Speaker
Call 546-1347

Physics and Math Tutor
M.A. in Physics
Experienced teaching assistant
Call 256-0260

LEGAL INTERNSHIPS

Spring 1993 Internships with the Legal Services Center! Get hands-on experience in the legal field – work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal professional necessary – training provided. Contact Legal Services today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center. November 13 is the application deadline.

LOST

Brown clutch purse - Purse desperately need contents Reward 549-1198

Glasses in black case somewhere between E-Lot and Central - Call 546-5258

PERSONALS

Bonnie Becker is finally 21!
Now when you give strange men your wallet they'll know your real name!
Happy 21st Love, Lauren, Jen, Elyse, Tanya, Mara

Kristin
Happy 21st Birthday!!
Karyoke will never be the same
Have fun – We love you

Paul in my nutrition discussion You've got a gorgeous smile!

ROOMMATES WANTED

2 fun roomates needed as of Jan. 1st $140/month including heat and hot water 549-4911

2 girls needed to share largest bedroom in a 3 bdrm/Puffton APT. 549-7319

SERVICES

Free Peer Counseling lesbian, gay, bisexual issues. Phone or walk in. LBG counseling collective, 408G Student Union 545-2645

LEGAL QUESTIONS? The Legal Services Center offers free legal assisance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Resumes
Need help? I have experience with resumes. Quick service, free advice, excellent quality, and LOW prices. IBM laser printing service available. Call Andy 549-8463

Tarot readings
Call Chris 256-0621

RSO FAIR '92

RSO FAIR '92
Monday, November 9
12-4 SUB
FREE food, entertainment, prizes, Demonstrations and Information.
5-College Community Welcome!
SPONSORED BY
Div. of Student Activities

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed - Free cover page, spell check, laser printout, $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795

Typing-Word processing
Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations. Laser Printing
Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268

WANTED

We want your 2BDRM Puffton lease!! Starting January 1. Call us first! Reward if we sign it!! Call 549-7319

Singer – Do you want to sing the National Anthem at UMass Basketball games? Contact Margaret in the Athletic Dept. For Information 545-3190

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women
Need housing for spring semester
Desire place near UMass
Call Young-Mi 546-0980 or Jen 548-4978

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

NBA preview: Knicks take it

"I've never felt this good about a team as this one. But I won't be happy until we win a Championship." Patrick Ewing said. It is obvious why Ewing said this. He is tired of waiting. He has always been the franchise player on an unproven team, and the critics have terrorized him for it. Some have the gall to even say that Ewing is overrated. Well, Patrick Ewing should finally be smiling on June 1993. Because now, the New York Knicks have surrounded him with talent. Last year, Pat Riley quieted his critics by winning 51 games in his first season as the New York coach, taking the over achieving Knicks to the Eastern Conference Final. They proved to be the Chicago Bulls' toughest opposition, before bowing to defending champion in seven games. This year, they have added Rolando Blackmon, Charles Smith, and Glenn "Doc" Rivers, who have each added depth to the needed positions. Let us look at the Atlantic Division: (in order of predicted finish)

Andrew
BRYCE

1. NEW YORK KNICKS: With these players added in the off-season, and Pat Riley, the league's best motivator at the helm, the sky is the limit for Ewing and his mates.

2. BOSTON CELTICS: Despite losing Larry Bird to retirement, and the aging frontline mates, 39 year-old Robert Parish and 34 year-old Kevin McHale, are not getting any younger. Reggie Lewis is emerging into a superstar. With youth at the perimeter spots, and the pickup of free agent Xavier McDaniel in the off-season, the Celtics should stay competitive.

3. NEW JERSEY NETS: Chuck Daly is in as head coach, Bill Fitch is gone. Good move, Nets. Look for Derrick Coleman to explode into an all-star status. Watch for Kenny Anderson to take over as floor general for the Nets, and Drazen Petrovich to remain the consistent scorer he was last year.

4. MIAMI HEAT: Ron Seikaly has turned into a consistent center, Glen Rice's move to small forward has put him into all-star status, and All-Rookie selection Steve Smith proved he could play in this league. Twelfth pick Harold Miner should prove to be a steal. Look for this team to contend for the title in the upcoming years. Not this year, though.

5. PHILADELPHIA 76ERS: Can the Sixers make up for the loss of all-star Charles Barkley? Is first round draft choice Clarence Weatherspoon the answer? Can new coach Doug Moe gel this team together? If these questions are answered positively, then the Sixers could surprise.

6. ORLANDO MAGIC: Twenty year-old Shaquille O'Neal is here, and without playing a game, he is considered one of the National Basketball Association's best centers. He, along with Terry Catledge, guards Dennis Scott. Catledge and forward Nick Anderson make for a young team full of

Turn to EAST, page 10

Minutemen hang in at No. 20

By CHRIS CUDDY
Collegian Staff

Fresh of their sixth straight win of the 1992 season, the University of Massachusetts football team is still ranked 20th in the nation in Division 1-AA, one week after debuting at that slot.

The Minutemen travel to Richmond, VA this weekend to take on the Spiders, and it will mark a reunion of sorts, as UMass gets its first look at Jim Reid since he left Amherst in a cloud of controversy last January to take the reigns as assistant head coach and defensive coordinator.

However, don't look for the Jim Reid factor to play a big part in Saturday's game, because as Mike Hodges puts it, "We're not playing Jim Reid, we're playing Richmond."

During the preseason, many figured this weekend's match-up between the Minutemen and the Spiders would be a battle of Yankee Conference also-rans, but as it stands now it turns out to be an all important game in the hunt for the Div. 1-AA playoffs.

The Minutmen sit at 6-1 good enough for sole possesion of second place in the Yankee Conference, behind defending champion Delaware.

Richmond is 4-2 and in a tie for third place with Villanova, and a loss versus UMass would all but knock the Spiders out of playoff contention.

For Mike Hodges and company, however, the ball is in their court as wins in each of their last three games would all but lock up a playoff spot for the Minutemen.

"Every game from here on in is a big one," Hodges said. "We're probably not going to get in [the playoffs] via the automatic bid [YanCon champions] so we'll have to take care of it on the field. I don not really know how the selection process works, but if we win the rest of our games there should be no questions."

In his first season at the helm, Hodges has compiled more wins thus far this season than any other Div. 1-A or Div. 1-AA coach hired over the past off season.

Hodges has to be a strong candidate for coach of the year honors, as he has taken the Minutemen from the brink of death (or so everyone thought) to the verge of the NCAA playoffs in one short season.

Minuteman tailback Rene Ingoglia, who left Saturday's game in the third quarter with an injured ankle, was seen hobbling on the UMass campus on crutches, and all indications are Ingoglia will not suit up on Saturday.

The good news for the Minutemen is that starting full back Mike George and starting free safety Allen Gibson should be back in action against Richmond after missing the two previous games.

Game Notes: Saturday's game at UR Stadium will be the first (and only thankfully) game the Minutemen will have to play on artificial turf this season.

This weekend should see Jim Maguire break the all time UMass record for consecutive extra points made, as the barefoot kicker from Cohasset, MA needs just one to tie the record of 33 held by Silvio Bonvini.

The wild, wild west of the NBA

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

Here is an outlook on the Western Conference in the NBA:

The Midwest Division: This is the weakest division in all of the NBA.

The Utah Jazz loom as the favorite of the division. Sure their offense is about as exciting as watching grass grow. But, it is effective with John Stockton feeding Karl Malone or Jeff Malone throwing up some off his off-balance jumpers for the duece. The addition of Jay Humphries gives coach Jerry Sloan a nice three guard rotation. The defense will miss the injured Mark Eaton but they will survive.

The San Antonio Spurs are a team which is unpredictable. Jerry Tarkanian has himself the best center in the game in David Robinson, and that alone makes the Spurs capable of doing some damage. The loss of Terry Cummings (leg injury) hurts but Sean Elliott can make that point moot if he performs as he is capable. The Lloyd Daniels saga makes this team very interesting no matter what happens.

The Houston Rockets are a team which is capable of doing a lot, given the right coaching. Hakeem Olajuwon is a great center, Otis Thorpe is a great power forward, while the backcourt of Vernon Maxwell and Kenny Smith scares many, including the Rockets. Maxwell and Smith is the most erratic backcourt pair in the league, but they are soooo talented, especially Maxwell.

The fact that the Denver Nuggets are the fourth best team in this division says a lot more about how weak the Midwest is than how improved the Nuggets are. Dikembe Mutumbo is a force in the middle and that is usually a good place to start. The backcourt is a mess with Dan Issel trying Mark Macon at the point and moving Reggie Williams from small forward to the off guard. Question, what the hell happened to Chris Jackson and his jump shot?

The Dallas Mavericks are a team beset by questions. When is Jimmy Jackson going to get signed? When is owner Donald Carter going to get over Roy Tarpley? When is the guy who traded Rolando Blackman for a 1995 draft pick going to get fired? Is Fat Lever ever going to recover from his knee problems?

Pity poor Jimmy Rodgers, coach of the Minnesota Timberwolves. The Wolves are improving, though, through the draft and trades. Christian Laettner will add toughness up front, Chuck Person will add brashness and shooting ability, and Michael Williams is a point guard who wants to be there (unlike Pooh Richardson).

The Pacific Division: This is probably the most established division of the four in the NBA.

The Portland Trailblazers have talent galore, but do they have the championship instincts? Having Rod Strickland in place of Danny Ainge makes the backcourt stronger but not smarter. Tracy Murray will is a good shooter which the frontcourt needs. The talent is there in Blazerland to win it all, but the fragile mental psyche is also capable of causing a collapse.

The Phoenix Suns have added Charles Barkley and Danny Ainge at the expense of Jeff Hornacek, Andrew Lang, and Tim Perry. That alone makes the Suns a tough

Turn to WEST, page 11

Rugby finishes season

By STEVE GREGG
Collegian Correspondent

In the Final Four of the New England Tournament, the UMass rugby team knew it would take a stellar defensive effort to get by top-seeded Harvard. And in the first half, that is exactly what UMass had, holding the high-powered Crimson attack to just two tries and a 12-0 lead.

Despite not scoring, UMass was buoyed by their first half defensive effort, and they knew the match was not out of reach.

However, 10 minutes into the second half, senior co-captain and outside center Pete Lorri had to leave the game with a concussion and a bruised calf. With him seemed to go the UMass defensive intensity, and Harvard took advantage of the defensive letdown for 42 second half points.

The Minutemen were able to score just six points against the stingy Crimson defense as junior Rich Halloran converted on two penalty kicks making the final score 54-6.

UMass tried to rally against the University of Connecticut on Sunday in a rematch of the early-season thriller in which UConn stole a 13-12 victory with a last second penalty kick. At stake was a trip to the Eastern Regionals in Philadelphia.

UConn struck early and often with 20 points in the first 10 minutes against the injury-plagued Minutemen. It was not until senior co-captain Dave Lally came in for injured freshman Greg Davy that UMass began to settle down. UConn still held a 32-0 halftime lead.

The second half saw the return of an inspired UMass defense, as they attempted a second half comeback against UConn.

On offense, Josh Benson made a dramatic 30-yard run to set up a UMass lineout near the UConn goal. Unfortunately, Benson paid for his heroics with a broken leg, adding to the growing list of UMass injuries. Brett Sherman was able to convert Benson's effort into UMass' only try of the weekend.

With their renewed defensive effort, UMass was able to hold UConn to 14 points in the second half, making the final score 49-5, UConn.

Seniors Lou Masiello and Matt Washek both enjoyed good games against Connecticut.

GAME NOTES: UMass finished their regular season ranked fourth in New England. They will play their final fall home game this Saturday at 12pm against traditional late-season rival Berkshire Men's Club.

Patriots weak in N.E.

By HOWARD ULMAN
Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. - Forget about wondering when the New England Patriots will win again. When will their offense score again?

The offense was pointless in last Sunday's 16-7 loss at Buffalo, and the team is winless midway through the season. Next up is New Orleans, one of the NFL's stingiest defenses.

The Patriots have no rushing touchdowns and only 10 by passing. They have 87 points in eight games, which projects to the second lowest non-strike total in their 33 year history, even lower than the 181 they scored when they went 1-15 in 1990.

"It's hard to score points on any defense in this league," quarterback Tommy Hodson said. "We have to continue to be optimistic and think we can do it, and I think we can."

There is, however, cause for pessimism:

- The Patriots are using their backup quarterback, Hodson, because Hugh Millen is sidelined with a separated left shoulder which should keep him out of his second straight game Saturday, and third overall.
- Left tackle Bruce Armstrong, who went to the Pro Bowl the last two seasons, is out for the year with a knee injury suffered at Buffalo.
- The 196 yards the Patriots squeezed out against the Bills was their lowest output of the season. Now they must face the Saints, who gave up 154 yards to Tampa Bay last Sunday and are third in fewest points allowed, 12.9 per game.

The Patriots defense held Buffalo to 288 yards and scored the team's only touchdown on Vincent Brown's fumble recovery that gave them a halftime lead, 7-0, for the first time this season. Two Buffalo points came on a safety.

Trailing 9-7 in the fourth quarter, New England was in field-goal range at the Bills 13-yard line when Hodson lost a fumble. Buffalo scored on the next possession.

"It's been difficult," center Gene Chilton said. "But I think once we get this thing going and we can get some field position and get some drives going maybe I'll have the ball in my hands some more."

Thursday November 5, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 41

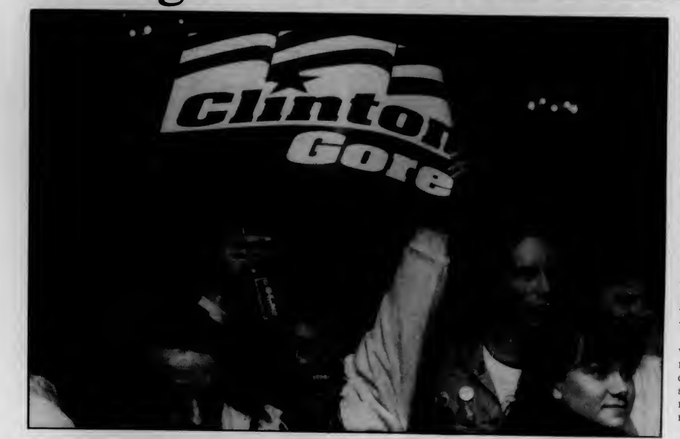
Partly sunny, mid-50s.
Enjoy it while it lasts.

This Weekend:
If you're done with your mid-terms and want to celebrate, perhaps you'll want to stroll down to Pearl St. and hear the soulful sounds of Mathew Sweet. Page Wi.

Sports:
We hope you've been waiting with great anticipation to find out who the Collegian's Athlete of the Week is. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Younger voters swell Democratic ranks



ROBERT O'CONNELL / COLLEGIAN

Democratic faithful experience the sweet taste of victory during a party to celebrate Bill Clinton's victory over President George Bush at the Hotel Northampton Tuesday night.

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Democrat Bill Clinton won the White House by reversing the exodus from his party of young people, independents and suburbanites.

The affinity young voters felt for Clinton and his youthful running mate, Al Gore, perhaps best illustrated the dramatic difference four years can make.

President Bush carried voters under the age of 30 by a 63-37 percent margin in 1988, one exit poll showed. Clinton was 10 points ahead of Bush in the same age group this time, even with independent Ross Perot siphoning off 22 percent.

According to the massive Voter Research & Surveys exit poll, Clinton had an even bigger edge, 14 points, among the very youngest voters, those aged 18-24. He picked up 48 percents of first-time voters, compared to 30 percent for Bush.

"This completely reverses the Reagan-Bush gains of the last 12 years with younger voters," said Republican pollster Bill McInturff. He attributed the falloff to "the whole image of the Republican Party, the way the convention played, the whole sense of status quo vs. change."

"There was a young generation of voters who were very, very impressed with Ronald Reagan, in large measure because he held out a promise of economic opportunity," another Republican pollster, Vince Breglio, said. "For many of them, that promise paid off. For the more recent generation of young voters, that promise has rung hollow."

Clinton's pollster, Stan Greenberg, said younger voters responded "when we spoke about growth, about the economy, about both the country's long-term decline and the need for stimulating this economy."

Democratic strategist Mark Mellman said the Clinton campaign had "cut across all demographic and geographic lines." Final exit poll results showed one major exception — white voters, who went for Bush 41 percent to 39 percent.

A 1988 exit poll showed Bush taking the over-65 group by 10 points; Clinton had a 13-point edge this year. "We had sort of the May-December coalition here," said Clinton strategist James Carville, referring to the oldest and youngest voters.

Suburbanites were another disaffected component of the 1980s Republican coalition. For years they helped Bush and Reagan offset huge Democratic majorities in cities like Detroit, Cleveland and Philadelphia. This week, Clinton, Bush and Perot split suburbanites 43-37-20 percent.

Independents went strongly for Bush in 1988, by a 14-point margin, but Clinton led this year's race despite Perot's obvious appeal to the group. The Arkansas governor had 38 percent followed by Bush at 32 percent and Perot at 30 percent.

The independents helped Clinton compensate for attracting only 77 percent of the Democrats.

UM faculty laud Clinton victory

Professors see Democrats shifting nation's priorities

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

Bill Clinton's victory in Tuesday's presidential election will have a positive impact on a wide range of different issues facing the nation, according to a number of University of Massachusetts professors.

David Schimmel, who is a professor in the School of Education, said Clinton's administration will change many current government policies. Not only will his cabinet appointments create waves in Washington, but also Clinton's appointees to the Supreme Court will have a huge impact on controversial issues such as abortion.

"With Gov. Clinton as president, I see the country going in a very different direction in judicial appointments," Schimmel said. "I anticipate the appointment of people who see abortion as a right and who tend to promote separation of church and state. Regarding education issues, I see Gov. Clinton committed to providing increased assistance by the federal government to schools themselves and to students as president."

Associate legal studies professor Matthew Chametzky said in the past Reagan and Bush appointments to the Supreme Court have been mostly wealthy men. Chametzky said he hopes to see Clinton put women and people of color into positions of power, so the country's cultural make-up will be truly represented.

"Reinstate vitality into Roe vs Wade. And, stop the erosion of the 4th Amendment," Chametzky said. "Reflect a more multicultural view of reality in their approach to the law."

Clinton's plans for school choice within the public school system is better than Bush's platform for funding

Turn to FACULTY, page 6

Senate approves funding for Jefferies' UM lecture

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

After over two hours of controversial debate, the Undergraduate Student Senate voted to loan the Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity $1,000 to fund a visit by Dr. Leonard Jefferies.

According to a written statement provided by the fraternity, Jefferies has been charged with making anti-Semitic and racist remarks directed toward white students during his lectures.

Justin Harris, secretary of the fraternity, said "it is important for Jefferies to speak because he advocates the rights of the African-American community." Harries said he believes Jefferies will enlighten and educate the campus community.

"Students have the right to hear [Jefferies'] speech because it will initiate dialogue and only then will students be willing to sit down and talk about racial issues," Jones said.

Senator Kevin Jourdain said he believes in the right to free speech, but feels the issue of whether the SGA should loan money to the fraternity to fund Jefferies' speech is a question of judgment.

"When the SGA agrees to loan the fraternity money, they are condoning Jefferies's speech. The message SGA is sending to campus will become a problem in the future," Jourdain said.

Junior Jon Aronson, the chair of the governmental affairs committee, said he was shocked so many students deemed this issue so controversial when so many other lecturers have made prejudicial remarks about other communities.

"When the SGA endorses money to the fraternity, they are not endorsing the speaker. They are endorsing the right for a group of people to hear him," Aronson said.

SGA President Jennifer Wood said student money often goes to fund controversial events and it is the SGA's responsibility to serve all the different interests of the students.

"The SGA is not the moral conscience of the University and the issue is whether to allow a group to bring a speaker to campus that is important to them," said Wood.

Steve Sparling, chair of Black and Jewish relations at Hillel, said the student

Turn to JEFFERIES, page 6

Journalism said unequal

UM teacher says women face hurdles

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

not there," she said in a interview Monday.

Turn to JOURNALISM, page 7

Women still face discrimination and harassment in the field of journalism, according to a University of Massachusetts journalism professor.

"I think that women have made tremendous strides in journalism, in terms of numbers, representation and coverage given, but it's taken a long time," said professor Karen List. "There's still a lot that needs to be done."

List has been a member of the University's journalism department since 1988. In 1991 she was nominated for one of three UMass Distinguished Teaching Awards.

List said pay inequity is one sign of discrimination in journalism, a field where men outnumber women two-to-one. She also said the "glass ceiling," referring to an invisible barrier which keeps women from rising to prestigious positions in their fields, is still prevalent in journalism.

"In entry-level positions there is more equality, but, other than that, it's

COURTESY KAREN LIST
Karen List

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England

The Collegian (USPS 144-640) is published each weekday during the calendar year except vacations and holidays. The newspaper is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life and changed its name to the Massachusetts Collegian in 1914 and then the Collegian in 1934. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0718

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editor .....
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day
Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety

• A passenger on a PVTA bus reportedly became very upset when the bus driver stopped for an extended period of time at a bus stop on Wednesday morning. Police said the driver chose to stop because he was ahead of schedule on the Campus Shuttle Loop Two at 7 a.m.

• Graffiti was discovered on a urinal and bathroom wall in the University Library Wednesday morning. Police said the graffiti was found at 7:45 a.m.

• University police responded to an accident involving two automobiles on University Drive Tuesday evening. Aaron Kuzmeskus of Gill struck Denise Rainville of Amherst from behind as their cars were travelling at 5:45 p.m. yesterday, according to police. No injuries were reported.

• Police escorted an "unwanted" person from campus after University Library staff members complained of the person's presence on Tuesday at 9 a.m.

• A door on the second floor of the University Library was found damaged on Tuesday morning. Police said no entrance was gained.

Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual FORUM

The GLB Forum runs each Thursday and consists of event listings of interest to the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual community. The GLB Forum is compiled by the GLB Issues Editor who can be contacted c/o the Collegian.

Thursday, November 5

Lecture — Margaret Cerullo, a professor at Hampshire College, will speak on "Who's in the White House? Does It Matter? A Radical Queer Agenda for the 90s," at 4 p.m. in the Campus Center.

Film — A French peasant rescues and nurses a German soldier back to health and the two men unexpectedly fall in love in We Were One Man. 7 p.m. Campus Center Room 903.

Reading — Louise Rafkin, editor of Different Daughters: A Book by Mothers of Lesbians, will give a reading from her newest work, Queer and Pleasant Danger, at 7:30 p.m. at Food For Thought Books, 106 N. Pleasant St, Amherst.

Meeting — The Lesbian and Bisexual Women's Union will meet from 9:30 p.m.-11:30 p.m. in the LBGA office, 413B Student Union.

Friday, November 6

Social — The Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance will host a coffee social at 3 p.m. in the Campus Center Room 903.

Film — Paris is Burning will be shown at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center. No need to be shady, just fierce!

Saturday, November 7

Rollerskating — The Queer Student Groups of the Five Colleges are sponsoring "College Queers on Wheels" at Interskate 91 from 11:30 p.m.-1:30 a.m.

COLLEGIAN STAFF / CORRESPONDENTS

NEWSWRITING WORKSHOP
TONIGHT 7:30 PM
COLLEGIAN BUSINESS OFFICE

WITH CATE CHANT
WRITER FOR THE DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

TRAVEL SMART THIS WINTER!
FROM NEW YORK
Roundtrip / One Way
London $305 $165
Paris $398 $219
Rome $525 $320
Oslo/Stockholm $458 $229
Tel Aviv/Istanbul $639 $329
Guatemala City $390 $205
Costa Rica $430 $225
Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Customs-Immigration and departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*in NYC

Dear 5-College Community
X'Mas is around the corner, so we want to make a special offer on our entire collection of jewellery, apparel & decorative crafts.
BASHA'S BARGAIN BASEMENT
A Shopping Enthusiast's Dream Come True
Every Red Tagged Merchandise in our Basement
is
BUY ONE GET ONE FREE
That Includes Elegant Silver Jewellery, Richly Colored Hand Embroidered Ladies Dresses & Exquisite Hand-Crafted Gifts.
THESE GREAT BUYS WILL BE ON TILL DEC. 31
But Do Not Wait because the Stock is Limited and there will be no Rain Checks!
Basha's
ORIENTAL RUGS
East Asian Manufacturers & Importers
241 Main St., Northampton, MA 01060 • 413-586-6030

Campus Design & Copy
#03 Student Union
(413) 545 - 2271
1992
Students Working for Students
RÉSUMÉS
RÉSUMÉS
RÉSUMÉS
$15
All Inclusive
Layout, typesetting, 10 copies, 10 matching envelopes and one year storage

THERE ARE CERTAIN UNIVERSAL CONSTANTS THAT MUST AFFECT THEMSELVES FOR LIFE TO CONTINUE ALONG THE SEMI-REASONABLE TRACK IT HAS SO FAR.
1.) GRAVITY MUST WORK.
2.) HATCH FRIES MUST BE GREASY AND CRISPY.
3.) THE DC'S MUST NEVER SERVE YOU THE SIZE PORTION YOU REQUEST.
4.) THE DORM DRYER WILL ALWAYS REQUIRE EIGHT QUARTERS TO FULLY DRY YOUR CLOTHES.
5.) THE DORM CABLE MUST NEVER RECEIVE REAL CABLE CHANNELS.
6.) WHITMORE MUST NEVER PROCESS YOUR PRE-REG FORM CORRECTLY.
7.) YOU MUST NEVER GRADUATE WHEN YOUR PARENTS WANT YOU TO.
COLLEGIAN.
ONE THING YOU CAN ALWAYS COUNT ON.

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8 A.M.-11 P.M. Tel: 549-2692
The Elections may be Over but the $avings Continue at Scotts!
PRICES GOOD THRU 11/7/92
Permit NOT required for Keg purchases
MICHELOB REGULAR, LIGHT, DRY 24-12 OZ. CANS $12.99 +DEP.
GORDON'S GIN SALE PRICE 13.99 MAIL IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $10.99 1.75 L.
POPOV VODKA SALE PRICE 10.99 MAIL IN REBATE -2.00 FINAL COST $8.99 1.75 L.
HEINEKEN $9.99 +DEP. 12 PK. BOTTLES
SUTTER HOME CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON 2 FOR $8.99 750 ML.
DOMAINE ST. GEORGE RED & WHITE TABLE WINES $5.99 1.5 L.
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
Tele-check for your personal check.
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Play all Mass Lottery games here!
FULL SELECTION OF NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE & BEERS

Local News

Last Call

Amherst may not be the only college town which is trying to repeal liquor licenses from local area bars.

In Kent, Ohio, where Kent State University is located, the city council is asking the Ohio department of Liquor Control to not renew two local bars' licenses, according to the Daily Kent Stater.

Cheer's Bar and Grille and The Shark Club have been cited by the council for violating a slew city laws, such as underage drinking and disorderly conduct of patrons.

Cheer's incidentally made this column back on Sept. 15 for it's weekly specials, which include a "Ladie's Night" where "ladie's drink for 50 cents all night" and a "ladie's wet T-shirt and guy's best buns contests."

Cheers co-owner Tony Jabor denied most of the violations, claiming he ran a clean bar.

"There's been one or two [violations] but not all of these," he said. "No underage person has purchased a beer at Cheers. We're probably one of the strictest places around. We run a very, very respectable operation. We feel there is some discrimination going on here."

Councilwoman Carol Neff said Cheers has become a problem in the neighborhood surrounding the bar. Noise and patrons leaving late at night are most often cited problems, according to Neff.

Prohibition revisited

Seattle state Rep. Mike Heavey, a democrat, needs to have a drink and relax.

However, if his new plan to end underage drinking is enacted, he won't be able to consume alcohol anywhere in a one-mile radius of the University of Washington.

Heavey has proposed a plan which would ban alcohol in fraternities, sororities, dormitories and privately-owned residences within a one-mile radius of the University, according to The Daily, Washington's student newspaper.

"Because there are 18 or 19 year-olds suddenly on or near a university campus, what makes them think it's suddenly legal to drink or that it's there right to drink?" Heavey said.

Heavey said he does not believe current laws are doing enough to curb the evils of underage drinking and his proposal would sufficiently put an end to the problem.

Counter-arguments to his plan, such as student rights, are pushed aside.

"Why all this tolerance?" he asked. "Underage drinking is illegal in all circumstances."

Party favors

Playboy Magazine's search for "Women of the party schools" has arrived at the University of Texas in Austin and some students and professors are not pleased.

The April 1993 edition of Playboy will feature nude, semi-nude and fully-clothed women from the top 10 party schools in the country. Texas was selected as one of these schools.

"[The pictures] cater to a narrow sexual image of women," sociology Professor Susan Marshall said.

Demetria Williams, coordinator for the UT chapter of the National Organization for Women, referred to Playboy as "pornography."

"The question is, is pornography perpetuating violence against women?" she said.

Elizabeth Norris, a representative from the magazine is not concerned with the negative publicity.

"We have tons of women," Norris said. "In the South, California, Texas and Florida we expect a lot of people."

The actual school which made the top ten would not be revealed by Playboy, which will pay a model more for a nude photo than a clothed one.

Norris said Playboy is looking for more than just beauty and through an interview process will select three total women from each school.

Election seen as positive

Gay community hopeful about Clinton's intentions

By STACY MALONE
Collegian Staff

Bill Clinton's victory in Tuesday's presidential election could be a major step forward for members of the gay, lesbian and bisexual community if he follows through on his promises to extend their civil rights, according to a University of Pennsylvania sociology professor.

George Lakey, author, lecturer and professor, gave the keynote address for Gay Lesbian Bisexual Awareness Day titled "Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Liberation after the Election: Mainstream or on the Margin."

George Lakey MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

Lakey, who is a Quaker, first got involved in activism in the 1960's when he was arrested during a civil rights protest.

"My Quakerism has inspired me to bring my message to the people," Lakey said. "My life is committed to service."

Lakey has given over a thousand workshops on over four continents and has taught sociology at Swarthmore College and the University of Pennsylvania.

Lakey said there are similarities and differences between the gay community and other communities in society.

"There are people in our movement who will say we are like the Italians and the Poles and are digestable by society, because they believe that people are born as gays, lesbians and bisexuals," said Lakey.

"There are also people who say we are not like the Italian and Poles, because our characteristics of oppression are different and are harder for the American society to digest," Lakey said.

Ben Zeman, a UMass graduate student, said he doesn't believe the gay community will be digested by American society, because of sexuality and the ideals of sexism.

Zeman said another difference between the gay community and other communities is that people do not always know if someone is gay, lesbian or bisexual.

Zeman works at the Program for Gay Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns, which is sponsoring the Awareness Day events.

Matthew Jaquith, a 1989 UMass graduate, said the "similarity I see among all of these groups is that they are all scapegoats. When we become a visible group, we get a lot of the anger from society."

Lakey said when the mainstream doors open to the gay community, members should walk through the doors. However, gays, lesbians and bisexuals must also seek other options.

"The Clinton/Gore ticket has an open appeal for the gay community. The politicians have bid for our support and when they win we are getting a piece of the pie," Lakey said. He asked the audience if they believed the Democratic victory would open doors to allow the gay community into American society.

"Hopefully Clinton will make all of the changes and implement all the policies that he spoke about during the campaign," said Wendy Mataya, a labor studies graduate student.

Mataya said during the convention when Clinton spoke about gays in a positive light she felt like he had hugged her.

John Beck, a UMass student, said he hoped Clinton would follow up on his promises to the GLB community.

"Clinton said he would lift the ban on gays in the military, sign a freedom of choice act and sign a federal GLB civil rights law," Beck said. "Whether that was all election year hogwash or it will actually happen, I don't know, but I'm hopeful."

Workshop tackles issues concerning GLB students

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

Gay, lesbian and bisexual people came together to explore their feelings about coming out and being out and to discuss ways to combat homophobia at a workshop yesterday.

The workshop, titled "You've come out. You're still out. Now what?" was facilitated by George Lakey, one of the founders of the Movement for a New Society in Philadelphia and an activist for gay rights.

Coming out refers to the process by which gay, lesbian and bisexual people recognize their identity and share their identity with friends, family and colleagues.

The workshop was part of Bisexual Gay Lesbian Awareness Days which is sponsored by the Program for GLB Concerns.

Confidentiality was a key concern for those attending the workshop, which was held in the program's office in Southwest Residential Area. The turnout was small, but the reduced number fostered an air of privacy.

Discussion revolved around learning to live with discomfort and maximizing the knowledge gained in life. This involves releasing the negative feelings that GLB students felt from experiencing homophobia.

The workshop centered around "getting in touch with yourself." Those at the meeting said they had experienced pain, fear and anger.

Turn to WORKSHOP, page 8

Students combat anti-Semitism

By MIMI FELLNER
Collegian Staff

Approximately 20 concerned students gathered earlier this week to discuss ways to try to eliminate the various forms of anti-Semitism Jewish students endure on campus.

"Jewish students are not comfortable with being proud of the fact that they are Jewish because they feel intimidated here [at UMass]," said Yehudit Heller, the assistant director of the Hillel House staff.

The group, including student officer for Black/Jewish Relations Steve Sparling, Hillel President Josh Slomich and members of the house council and staff, offered ways to try to eliminate the recent rise in hate graffitti on campus and raise awareness about anti-Semitism.

But hate graffiti, students said, is not the only way anti-Semitism thrives on the UMass campus.

"This form of discrimination has taken on several faces this semester," Sparling said.

Many Jewish students had to miss exams and papers due to the High Holy Jewish holidays earlier this semester and make up the work later on. But many say they had to endure uncaring attitudes from their professors on the importance of major Jewish holidays.

The group also discussed the dilemma of having final exams scheduled on Saturday, which poses a problem for many students who observe the traditional Sabbath day of rest.

Students at the meeting said they are encouraged to seperate their religion from their studies.

"It's an administration problem. There is too much bureaucracy and Jewish students have no power," Sparling said. Many students said they took exams on the holidays to avoid problems with their professors.

A group representing Hillel is planning to meet with Chancellor Richard O'Brien to try to resolve these problems.

The University does recognize some of the important Jewish holidays and Jewish students are excused from classes, in accordance with State Law Chapter 375 of 1985. However, students are not given those days off from classes and still have exams scheduled on those days.

Many at the meeting said they feel the University should understand that Judaism is not only a religion but a way of life.

"This is all ludicrous. It's a spit in the face," said senior Harry Horowitz, who claims that the SUNY college system in New York offers Jewish students days off for their holidays. There is no reason why UMass shouldn't follow suit, he said.

Jewish students also face more blatant forms of anti-Semitism. Recently, there have been several personal graffiti attacks at students, ranging from Nazi swastikas to derogatory slurs and remarks. Often, students don't report the incidents to police, and as a result, awareness of the problem is minimal.

Jewish students say they have tried to assimilate their culture into the wider student population and many say they would rather not stand up for who they are in fear of causing problems for themselves.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Was it all just lip service?

Kent O'Brien sighed heavily. "I guess this means we can all lay back and watch the government control our lives now," he said as he took a sip of some Blue Wall coffee. "Let smiling Bill just start telling us what's the correct way to think."

"Feeling bitter old boy?" grinned Eustacia Fields. "I'd feel sorry for you if I really cared, and I think you've got it wrong anyway. I believe it was Fuhrer Bush who wanted to control our bodies and brainwash us with God and Country."

Nathan
CRICK

"Oh, please," Kent scowled. "I can't stand how everybody distorts simple faith and patriotism into some kind of fascist mindset. And Bush isn't controlling your bodies, he's just trying to save unborn children. Doesn't that count for something?" he paused. "Oh, you voted for Clinton, I guess that would be a no."

Eustacia continue to smile happily. "You're not bothering me, Kent. In two months Bush will be gone and all of your election rhetoric will be as worthless as Bush's administration."

"Oh, Eustacia," Kent sighed. "How gullible you must be. Do you honestly think Bill Clinton is going to live up to all his promises? Did you decide to read his lips too? I bet you think he's not going to raise taxes on the middle class either. Wake up my dear, you're living in a dream world."

"Like you haven't been in one for 12 years," she retorted.

"I never claimed that Reagan or Bush were flawless. You apparently think Clinton is some kind of saint, and I would never be stupid enough to believe that for anybody."

"Oh, give me a break," laughed Eustacia. "You would've kissed Reagan on the lips if you had the chance. Hell, you probably even believed him that trees caused pollution. The guy was almost as bad as Stockdale, and he apparently believes water lilies are the cornerstone of our ecosystem."

Eustacia nodded thoughtfully. "Yeah, you're right. I really should've voted for the guy who lied about taxes and Iran-Contra and Iraqi arms sales and accused Clinton of being a communist. That's honesty."

"You could've voted for Perot too, you know," he said.

"He's a fascist millionaire pig," stated Eustacia.

"Aaah, it's always refreshing to hear such critical analysis of a candidate," said Kent, sipping his coffee. "And Bush is the same I assume, and probably every Republican in the United States as well. Talk about closed minds."

"We've talked too much about Bush already," she smiled. "And while we're on the subject, did you hear Bush talk last night? The guy was wasted," Eustacia laughed. She half-closed her eyes and started wobbling around in her chair. "I jush wanned to shay that Americans still shame the... uh... share the hame values. I'd like to thank Jim Baker, my wife and, uh... my friend Jim Baker, and..."

Kent rolled his eyes. "Yeah, like Clinton probably didn't get stoned out of his mind. That's all we need, a burnt President."

"I'm glad you agree," said Eustacia.

"I don't agree with anything," said Kent seriously. "I think that Bill Clinton has deceived this entire nation that he is a freethinking moderate, when in fact he's just more of the same garbage. He's going to make this a welfare country where nobody is going to be able to rise out of their subservience to the government because free enterprise will all but be destroyed. He's a liar and is going to run this country into the ground."

"Kent, just shut up," stated Eustacia firmly. "Why can't you just try to hope he'll make this country better?"

Kent shrugged. "Because he'd just let me down."

"He better not do that to me," she said bitterly. "If he does, I don't think I'll ever be able to put faith in a leader again."

Kent nodded slowly. "Well, I hope for your sake he doesn't. I don't like the guy, but it would be more of a shame for him to alienate people like you from politics than anything else he could do to this nation."

Eustacia smiled. "Thanks a lot, Kent. I just wish I could say the same for you," she laughed.

"Alas, the price of conservatism," he sighed with a smile.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

The wealthy are least charitable

Although it is comforting to know that the fiscally fortunate among us are not automatically cursed with the genes of Ebenezer Scrooge, your toast to the generosity of Chuck Collins and other offspring of successful businesspersons (Collegian, Oct. 27) was a bit too sweet to swallow.

A dash of bitter truth appeared from the selfsame Associate Press a week earlier. A survey conducted by the advocacy group Independent Sector reports that charitable giving across the nation has declined from 75 percent of American households to 72 percent in 1991. The survey, conducted by the Gallup organization, also points out that households with incomes under $10,000 gave 3.6 percent of their income in 1991 while the percentage for those in the $60-75,000 bracket was 1.7.

On the brighter side, the only age group showing an increase in giving during the same period was the 18-to-24-year-old. Keep it up! Remember the less fortunate!

John McDonald
University Library

No action, no change

I don't feel I can write about the election. It's over, Clinton won and I am happy about the outcome. This was the first presidential election I was able to vote in, and it was definitely a nice change to think I could help by taking part in changing things that desperately needed to be changed... and that's what I think I shall write about.

Andrea
SPITZER

UMass is very different from my hometown. There is diversity; that's the most important difference. My town has yet to accept the fact that others besides White Protestants have as much of a right to live there as anyone else. Well, to be fair, there are a few Jews and some Asian families. That's their solution to diversity.

Coming to UMass was at first a great shock to me. I have come to appreciate that diversity, and it has taught me a lot. Yet there is an issue I must address.

Many people, usually those referred to as minorities, feel they are not well represented on campus. They cite the media, the percentage of minorities on the faculty and administration and the hateful violence directed toward them as evidence of this misrepresentation. I have no doubt these people are under-represented. What bothers me are the people who complain and raise issues yet are unwilling to act on their beliefs.

All important changes in our society that have been brought about by dissent and anger, outrage and resentment, have come about because of people who genuinely cared, people willing to fight. Martin Luther King, Theodor Herzl, Ghandi and many others have fought, lived and died for their causes. Without people like them, how would our world have changed?

And without people on campus willing to fight for their beliefs, how will things here change? How will we be assured of equal representation for everyone? I am not trying to be dramatic — all changes, no matter how small or isolated, are as important as ones that affect everyone, worldwide.

I do not want to preach, to tell people what to do, or make myself seem righteous. I want to see fairness in all aspects of campus life for absolutely everyone on campus. I have learned from my years here that people of every color, race, sexuality, political background or religion can get along and can work together peacefully.

For those who think things here are not fair or equal, make yourself heard, be active and fight for what you believe. Write for the newspaper, protest, have meetings — anything that lets people see your side.

The changes you can bring around may help people for a long time after you leave.

Andrea Spitzer is a Collegian staff member.

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

Why is it that whenever I hear the words "pulled out of a mall in New Jersey" I expect the phrase "and shot" to immediately follow?

Are you White? Male? Heterosexual? Fairly wealthy? Well then, we've got the cologne for you: "Oppression" by MENnen.

I hear that serial killer trading cards are big sellers back East. Odd how that doesn't surprise me. I wonder if they come with gun... er... gum. And if they do, what flavor?

Doctor of Neutopia?

Let's all play the name game and have some Avanti pizza before we go dancing at Katina's. Eh, strike that. Do people eat Rads pizza at the Vertex?

Well I hear Dr. Leonard Jefferies is coming to campus. Jefferies is the former NYC University professor who was canned recently for what some called anti-Semetic remarks. Personally, I think people should be allowed to say what they like no matter who or how many agree with them. 'Course that doesn't mean I condone it all. At any rate, this should be an interesting speech. Maybe it'll be half as interesting as how this racially and ethnically divided campus reacts to it.

Happy thought of the week: "Your entire life could be a dream from which you'll wake up at any moment to discover your life is much worse than you thought."

I'm part of that very select group of people on campus that believe we're cultured and refined because we don't like "Bud."

Marc
ELLIOTT

Funny to see organizations, professors and unions fall all over themselves the past couple of weeks to come forward and say "Racism bad." Gee, here's a revelation.

Sinead, I realize you have something to say, but there are more constructive ways of approaching problems than ripping up pictures of the pope.

O.K. — the campaign is over so now us columnists are going to have to find some other ridiculous nonsense to write about. But until next week here's the Elliott election wrap-up:

• So Perot spent in the neighborhood of $100 million on this campaign, eh? Politics is the easiest way to waste money, I guess. Remember "Brewster's Millions?" Whoa. How much does it take to buy a couple electoral votes in this country anyway? Hey Ross, I thought you said you'd win all 50. Darn. Slight miscalculation there.

• Too bad Bushy Boy, it was a close one. I'd guess you didn't want the job back anyway. Now it's time to decide if you're going to join Carter and build houses for the homeless or follow Teflon Man's footsteps (watch it, the trail may be pretty slippery) and lecture in Japan for millions. Then again you could spend your sunset years tooling around in that high-speed fishing boat of yours, burning up all that fuel you fought so hard for in the Gulf. But don't try to stay on unemployment too long. Remember — you kept vetoing that bill. 'Course dad's money has served you well, eh? Say George, did you really get a quail-hunting license on Tuesday? At least now we know you can't win an election by calling your opponent a "bozo" and comparing him to your dog.

• Now that we're entering the presidency that doesn't inhale, I wonder if we'll be doing anything about the air quality around here. I hope he'll just admit running for president was a ego thing and be done with it. I mean, how many people have their faces shaded over their office stationary?

• So, which did you find scarier? Clinton or the economy?

• I'm not going to pass any judgements or anything, but at an election rally for Bush and Quayle Thursday, Clinton counter-rally rats were chanting "four more days." All you math majors out there who ignored Barbie's banter will notice that at the time it was five days until election day.

Ya know, if it weren't for the Collegian, the Grad Voice would have nothing to write about.

Eh.

Marc Elliott is a Collegian columnist.

Treat your car with respect, or you risk its cruel revenge

As a public service, I am going to risk being labeled a hopelessly witless vessel of confusion by relating a recent experience of mine. I am about to lay myself across the tracks of the Happy Valley Ridicule Railroad with the hope that someone will learn and benefit. Please promise not to laugh.

Last fall, when I escaped those communal experiments in mass insanity and privacy deprivation that are euphemistically referred to as dorms, my father sold me his mint condition '87 Toyota. For over 12 blissful months, this hand-me-down auto and I were involved in an all-consuming love affair. She was always there to take me wherever my heart desired, and in the beginning, my gratitude was immense. But as in many relationships, something went subtly wrong, and I began taking her for granted. In short, I was naughty to my car. But she exacted a final, merciless revenge, and left me a sadder but wiser automobile owner.

When I first noticed that the steering wheel was trembling as I drove, I went into denial and blamed it on poor road conditions. But deep inside, I knew that my car was displaying the distressing symptoms of my own callous neglect. Aside from a few monthly pauses to refuel, I had been treating her like a cross between a Timex watch and the Velveteen Rabbit, catching air on speed bumps and then ignoring her in the aftermath.

But since nothing horrendous had ever gone wrong mechanically, it was easier for me to ignore the barely perceptible spasms beneath my hands. I'll admit that when I made plans to visit my parent's home in a suburb just south of Boston, it did cross my mind that this might not be a wise venture. However, I decided to have the car looked at as soon as I returned to Amherst. If the tremblings were going to escalate into a full-blown problem, they would have done so already, right?

Lori
O'CONNOR

Wrong.

Traveling at 75 mph on the crowded Mass Pike during rush hour, my left front tire exploded. One moment, I was humming along to the radio without a care in the world. The next, I was screaming hysterically and babbling to myself in tongues, certain that my wheels had just transformed themselves into butternut squashes and that I was, without a doubt, going to die. And the last thing that I would ever hear would be John Lennon telling me that everybody's got something to hide except for him and his monkey. Oh, the horror.

Somehow I managed to regain control of the lurching wheel and maneuvered my crippled vehicle into the breakdown lane. When a police officer finally arrived, he found me numb with fright and balanced precariously upon the guardrail, a can of mace clutched firmly behind my back in order to discourage any unwarranted friendliness from strangers in the night. He said that he could change my tire, but when I told him I had no spare, he called for a tow and vanished.

The tow truck arrived over an hour after my car first impersonated a Tilt-a-Whirl, and by then my nerves were stretched so tightly that you could have used them to floss teeth. I couldn't even walk; my knees were weak from watching, bug-eyed, as scores of 18-wheelers passed within spitting distance. I was a frightened, freezing, tear-stained, stumbling excuse for a human being.

Nearly six hours after leaving Amherst, my odyssey in anxiety came to an end, and I collapsed quivering upon the front steps of my childhood home, thankful to be out from behind the wheel of a car whose temper tantrum had made Stephen King's Christine look positively angelic. My father listened quietly to my breathless narrative, and then motioned for me to follow him outside. He opened my trunk and lifted up a highly camouflaged compartment that I hadn't known to exist. For several seconds my eyes refused to convey to my brain the significance of what lay there.

It was a spare tire.

Okay, so it is semi-amusing. Ha ha. But I haven't put on the proverbial dunce cap just to make you smile. Learn from my ineptitude. Act right away when your car falls ill. If you can't, don't drive. Hoofing it may be tedious, but it is far more palatable than what the stakes may cost you in the foolhardy game of automotive Russian roulette.

Lori O'Connor is a UMass student.

Drunk designated driver leaves partier stranded

This Halloween I decided to stay in and relax. But after lots of encouragement, I decided that going to an off-campus party wouldn't be that bad after all. With the cold October air blowing through the open window I dressed as a football player.

My main concern was who would be the designated driver. After being promised we had two, I felt more at ease to attend the party.

Adam Scott
ROBERTS

The beer was cold and everything was going fine. College students dressed like fools; enjoying ourselves.

When I finished my second beer, I was told that the designated driver was leaving with his girlfriend. I immediately asked a friend, "Now who's going to drive?" She said not to worry, Albert (not his real name) would drive us. The evening progressed as we all enjoyed ourselves. The party wasn't the best but the alcohol did enhance the atmosphere.

As soon as I saw Albert drinking I threw out my cup. I grabbed a huge bag of potato chips and began downing the salty chips to help absorb the alcohol in my system. I became livid for allowing myself to be put in this situation. How could this happen? One of the reasons I didn't want to go to an off-campus party was the fear of not having a sober driver.

I started yelling at my friends for continuing to drink. I asked each of them, "How are we getting home?" And one said, "I don't know, but we will." I felt like crying. The thought of calling the police to break up the party entered my mind, anything to get home safely.

In the distance, I saw the lights from the Southwest towers illuminating the brisk Halloween evening. I thought about walking. However, the narrow unlit road was creepy and I feared getting hit by a car. I felt I was the only responsible person out of my friends because I was the only one concerned about getting home. In addition, I was the only one to stop drinking.

I wanted to call a friend, but I didn't know where the phone was. I attempted to enter a person's bedroom to find a phone, but other activities were transpiring (!). At this point, I tried to get people together to leave. I could have driven, but was highly self-conscious. Was I sober enough to drive? Or was I just neurotic? Visions of being arrested entered my mind and I wanted to cry.

Finally, I grabbed the guy who became "the third designated driver" and demanded he take me home. He had been drinking, but wasn't drunk. Otherwise, I wouldn't have gotten into his car. I put my seatbelt on and held onto the door bar so tightly my hand began to sweat. Within one minute, the drive down that long side street was over. I was in front of my building and as I got out I said to Albert, "Have a safe evening. And thank you so much for driving me home. I didn't mean to be a pain. Bye."

Fortunately I got home safely. This past Halloween has touched upon my life in a way that will affect many future decisions. When I become a parent, I pray I won't have to tell a story like this to my children to teach them a lesson. But, then again at least I'll be able to tell the story.

Adam Scott Roberts is a Collegian staff member.

The Jolly Roger's true meaning to sailors on the S.S. Butterfield

Any insinuation that the pirate flag flying above Butterfield dorm is a tribute to any neo-Nazi group is undoubtedly the product of an overactive imagination coupled with someone's desire to impress their self-proclaimed radical friends.

I suppose that the Pittsburgh Pirates are secretly in league with Tom Metzger and the White Aryan resistance movement. L.A. Raiders fans, look out, you are doing the wave for Hitler youth! Wait a minute — remember that TV movie "The Wave"? My God, I've stumbled upon a plot involving Butterfield, TV, pro sports and the neo-Nazi movement! Call the STPEC department, send in the paraprotestor crack building takeover units!

You boneheads!

The symbol of the Jolly Roger existed long before the White Aryan resistance was ever imagined. The pirate was indeed a criminal, and the Jolly Roger was a sign of destruction for many innocent people.

The symbol of the pirate to us, however, has a connotation of the person who chooses to live outside society's norms. To us it is a symbol of our defiance. Defiance of the unjust policies foisted upon us by Housing Services, defiance of idiots who choose to be narrow-minded and unaccepting of people as individuals. This is what the flag means to us.

The White Aryan Resistance is using our symbol — people like us have existed for far longer than they have. Socrates, Spartacus, Elijah Lovejoy, Susan B. Anthony, Frederick Douglass — these are people embodied in our reason for flying this flag, for they were pirates of the mind.

Word has it that housing is now planning to take down the flag and the antenna to which it is affixed. This should come as no surprise to anyone.

It's important we realize that this event is not happening in a vacuum. That is, it is not a singular, unimportant incident.

Can this be possible, that someone wants that flag down because it is racist? Or is it a thorn in the side of a few select but self-important, petty bureaucrats, as this dorm had been for years, and this is merely a very underhanded example of taking advantage of a real problem, i.e. racism, for someone to work out their own personal problem?

Yes, the whining voice of someone so unhappy with their own life that they try to foist the blame onto the rest of us is a voice frequently heard on this campus, and unfortunately across this nation.

The difference is that those of us who realize the petty whiner for whom he or she is can also respect their right to be stupid in public.

Yea, the S.S. Butterfield is under sail, so prepare to be boarded, o ye of weak minds and character.

Marc Randazza
President, Butterfield Dorm
This letter was signed by 38 residents.

Faculty union wants safety for all

This Board condemns absolutely any and all forms of racism on this campus, and expresses its solidarity with those who are the targets of racist attacks.

We call on the administration to work expeditiously toward creating a safe environment on campus for all students, one in which racial prejudice or victimization of any kind finds no place.

Executive Board
Massachusetts Society of Professors

WMUA condemns racist behavior at UM

In light of recent events on the University of Massachusetts campus, we at WMUA feel it necessary to make clear our feelings. The Management Board of WMUA denounces racist behavior in all forms. Racism is deplorable, hateful and narrow-minded. As part of the University system, we are deeply concerned about racial attacks occurring on our campus and intend to do everything in our power to ensure that such attacks do not occur again.

We at WMUA strive to maintain an atmosphere of racial diversity in which all are welcome. We hope that elsewhere on campus, whether it be in administrative offices or residential areas, this policy of openness and acceptance is adopted and adhered to. As one University, and one community, we cannot allow such racist discrimination of any kind and eradicate racism at this University.

Although few may be guilty of such acts, we are all responsible. It is incumbent upon our organizations, and us as individuals, to combat racism wherever we may find it. Finally, the Management Board of WMUA recognizes the hurt and anger felt by the University's communities of color and wishes to extend to you a healing hand and a commitment to your safety and well-being.

Emily Stewart, Chairperson
WMUA Management Board

■ faculty

continued from page 1

private and public schools, according to associate education professor Patricia Anthony. She said because Clinton's plan concentrates on the public schools, it is "helping kids that are usually left behind [with bad school systems]."

"Bill Clinton has had an excellent record for improvements in the public education system in Arkansas," Anthony said. "I think we now have a real advocate for education in the White House."

Assistant political science Professor Peter Haas and Environmental Director Joseph Larson said they to see Clinton becoming the environmental president that Bush only preached about being.

"With the election of Gov. Clinton, I expect less weakening of environmental policy and I expect him to take steps to stop the efforts of the Bush administration to weaken environmental policy," Larson said.

"With the economy in the state it's in, we're probably not going to be able to strengthen environmental controls, the best we can expect, even with a president committed to environmental goals, is to hold the line," Larson said. "When the economy grows, we'll have a chance to improve."

Although many voters felt Bush would handle foreign affairs better than Clinton did, two foreign affairs specialists said they believe Clinton will tackle international problems in a tactful manner. Political science professor Karl Ryavec, who is an expert in Soviet and Eastern European government, said Clinton will become more involved in foreign affairs.

"Under President Clinton, I expect a much more active policy in foreign affairs and less acceptance of governments as they are," Ryavec said. "I expect a bit more pressure on government to act more humanely."

"With the election of Gov. Clinton, I anticipate more emphasis on human rights and less interventionary action from a geopolitical point of view," associate political science professor James Der Derian said.

Psychology professor Ervin Staub said Clinton has energized the nation as John Kennedy did, and with this spirit he will reach out to the international community.

"Bill Clinton did extremely well in coming out and trying to create a new spirit of community, in calling on people in trying to energize them as Kennedy did," Staub said. "One question is whether Clinton will try to bring this spirit of community and caring into the real world, into human rights issues, moving outward, into concerns like Bosnia."

Material from the University News Office was used in this article.

■ Jefferies

continued from page 1

body should not unilaterally endorse Jefferies because it will cause a tremendous amount of pain to the Jewish community.

"Jefferies's speech will divide people on campus. It will not initiate positive steps in bridging the gap between the Jewish and Black communities," Sparling said.

Corey Rinehart, a member of the fraternity, said he believes the SGA should be commended for giving a loan to the fraternity.

He said the Black community feels alienated because they are not represented enough at the University. "The loan is the most representation the Black community has seen in a long time," he said.

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

New! American Beer Exciting!
$7.29 case cans
(Quantity Discounts Available)

S.S. Pierce Vodka $8.99 1.75 L

MILLER "Lite" Cans $11.99 case

Brooklyn Lager $4.99 (6/pk. Botts)

HEINEKEN Regular $8.99 12/pk bottles
Amstel $8.99 12pk/botts.
Catamount (your choice) $8.99 12/pk botts

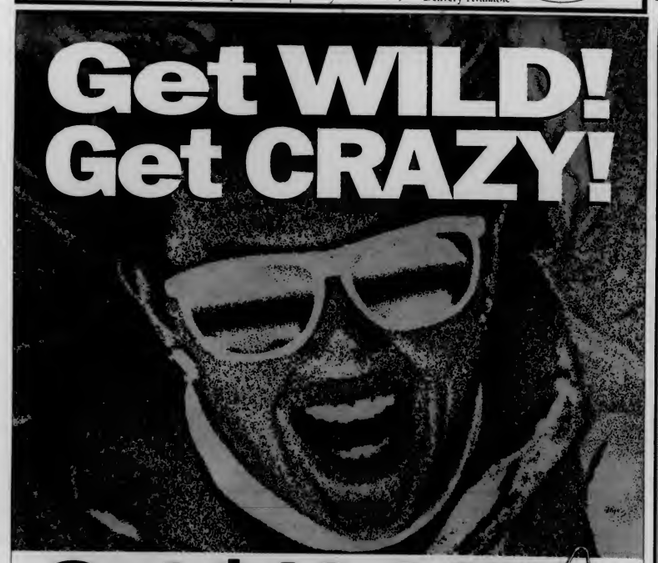
Concha y Toro (your choice) $4.99 1.5L

Southern Comfort $7.99 750 ml

Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits
Many More In-Store Specials
All Beers plus Deposit (Especially on wines) Delivery Available

LATE NIGHTS, SWEATY PALMS, WAXY FINGERS, BORDER TAPEY SHOES, GRAPHICALLY CORRECT.
COLLEGIAN

Get WILD! Get CRAZY!



Get $10 Off!

Stratton has a lower price for anyone pursuing a higher education. $24 midweek. $29 weekends. $34 holidays. So you can save $10 every day but holidays (when you'll still save $5), and you'll also get up to 92 exciting trails, a 12-passenger gondola, plus all the extracurricular fun you can handle. Now, how's that for financial aid?

Current and identifiably valid college photo ID required at time of purchase. If your college ID has no photo, please provide other photo ID. Sorry—no pix, no tix.

© Stratton Corporation 1992

"Thank you! for your patronage." The Simpson Family
4Seasons
ROUTE 9, HADLEY 584-8174
Between Burger King & Double Decker
DISCOUNT LIQUORS • BEER • WINE
KEGS • AND ICE

Rolling Rock cs. bar bott. $12.99 + dep.	ICE!! 10 lbs. $1.00 50 lbs. $4.50
Busch Bar Bottles case $9.49 + dep.	KEGS!!
Pabst Bar Bottles $7.99 + dep.	Natural Light 1/2 bbl $32.90 + dep
Narragansett cs. cans $6.99 + dep.	Miller, MGD & Lt. 1/2 bbl. $38.99 + dep.
Bud, Lt/Dry 12 pk bott $6.49 + dep.	Busch 1/2 bbl $38.99 + dep
Miller, MGD & Lt. 12 pk bott $6.49 + dep.	Just to Name a Few ....
Coors, Lt/Gold 12 pk bott $6.49 + dep.	4 Seasons Vodka 1.75 L $8.99
Bass Ale 6 pk Bott. $5.69 + dep.	Vanya Vodka 1.75 L $8.49
Catamount 6 pak bott. $4.99 + dep.	Jack Daniels 750 ml $10.99
MD 20/2O All Flavors 750 ml $2.00	José Cuervo Gold Tequila 750 ml $10.99
Boones Farms All Flavors 750 ml $2.00	Myers Rum 750 ml $10.99
Cisco All Flavors 750 ml $2.50	Tired of stores with BAD ATTITUDES? At 4 Seasons you'll be treated with gratitude! And... WE DELIVER

HOURS Mon.-Sat. 9-11 • 10% Senior Discount Everyday
Keg deposits Held Up to 30 Days on VISA MASTERCARD CHECK CASH

Whatley man commits suicide

WHATLEY, Mass. (AP) — An estranged husband broke into his wife's home and wounded her with a shotgun before shooting himself to death, state police said Wednesday.

The husband was violating a judge's restraining order telling him to stay away from his wife.

The couple was identified as Maurice Theriault, 56, and his 53-year-old wife, Nancy. She was in fair condition Wednesday at Baystate Medical Center in Springfield with a gunshot wound in the arm.

State Police Sargeant Leonard Von Flatern said the husband broke into his wife's house in Whatley with a 12-gauge shotgun, but she was away.

He waited until she returned and assaulted her, sending her fleeing into the street, according to the officer. He shot her there, dragged her back inside, assaulted her again, and then turned the gun on himself, Von Flatern said.

Authorities were called to the scene after neighbors heard a shot and the wife's screams late Tuesday evening.

There were no immediate details on how long the couple was separated or specifics on what may have

TO READ US IS TO LOVE US. COLLEGIAN

■ journalism

continued from page 1

Coverage of women in the news is also a problem, but List said that has begun to change recently.

"I think that it has improved dramatically just recently and I really think that a lot of that has to do with the Clarence Thomas/Anita Hill hearings," List said. "I've noticed just in the newspapers that I read that a lot of issues of concern to women have been covered in the last year that had not been previously covered."

In order to continue breaking down barriers to women in journalism, such as discrimination and harassment, List said the issue needs to be addressed outright.

"It has to be put on the agenda, whether in the newsroom or at the university," said List. "People have to feel that those who are in positions of authority understand this issue and take it seriously."

"I think most women have their stories to tell, either with assignments they've been given or problems with harassment in the newsroom or problems with harassment by sources," List said.

List referred to a recent article in the Washington Journalism Review as an example. The article quoted a University of Maryland survey which polled 102 female journalists working out of the congressional press galleries in Washington. More than 60 percent said sexual harassment had been a problem for them.

"I think that's incredible. That's more than half the women working at that level," List said.

List earned her bachelor's degree from the University of Missouri School of Journalism in 1970. She holds master's degrees in journalism and history from Pennsylvania State University in 1973 and 1974, respectively. In 1980, List earned a doctorate from the University of Wisconsin-Madison School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

In addition to UMass, List has taught journalism at the University of Missouri and the University of Rhode Island.

List worked for two years as a reporter for the Metro-East Journal in East St. Louis, Ill. She has published numerous research papers, several relating to the portrayal of women in the media.

During her second year at UMass, List created a course titled "Women in Journalism" to address some of the problems women face in the media. List said a need for discussion on women's participation and coverage in journalism prompted her to create the course.

"Since I've started the "Women in Journalism" course here, I've been hearing a lot of students telling me how much they appreciate being able to study these things," List said.

A Panel Discussion

Race, Gender and Sexuality in the Newsroom

Panelists include:

Athelia Knight, Staff Writer, Washington Post
Ellen Kleig, Assistant City Editor, Boston Globe
Stephen J. Simurda, Free-lance Journalist

Moderator: Chancellor Richard O'Brien

Friday, November 6, 1992

2:30 - 5:00 P.M..

Campus Center 163C

Sponsored by Department of Journalism and Office of Human Relations

STUDENT FITNESS MEMBERSHIPS!!!!!
One Easy Payment! No Gimmicks!
$139.00 *SPECIAL RATE! September to May

MEMBERSHIP INCLUDES*:
• Tennis • Racquetball • Massage Therapy
• Nautilis • Aerobics(includes step)
• Free Weights • Fitness testing • Sauna
• Basketball • Cardiovascular (Stairmaster®, LifeCycles®)

*Not all clubs feature all amenities Nominal Fee

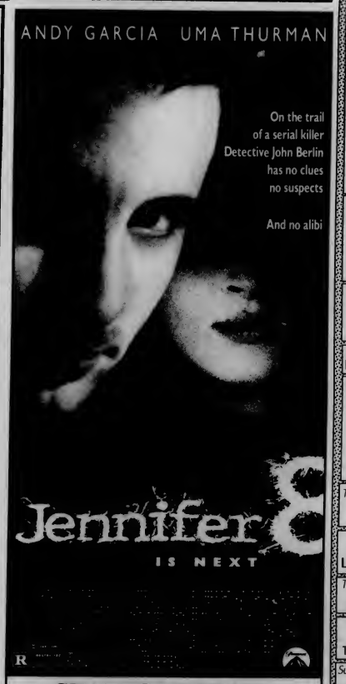
Comparable Value $400 if paid monthly! You save nearly 50% by paying for your membership on the day you join! Hurry! Act right now & Save!

ATHLETIC CLUBS of AMERICA

659 Amherst Street
SUNDERLAND: (413) 549-3638
(Formerly Winners Athletic Club)



STARTS FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6TH AT SELECTED THEATRES

Pearl Street

DANCE CLUB

Wednesday - DANCING WITH DJ JOB

Thursday - WHMP EIGHTEEN & OVER DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS R. WHMP broadcasting live.

Friday - DISCO 2000 with DJ JOB and WTIC's Lear Jet
♦ Free Admission Before 10:00pm ♦
♦ Free All Night w/College I.D. ♦

Saturday - WHMP THE AREAS BIGGEST & BEST SATURDAY NIGHT DANCE PARTY WITH DJ JOB

LIVE MUSIC...

Thurs., Nov. 5-7:00pm/18+/Rock 102
MATTHEW SWEET
The Jayhawks
Downstairs–9:00 pm/18+/
The Green Rosettas present the music of
FRANK ZAPPA'S JOE'S GARAGE
Duck Duck

Fri., Nov. 6-8:30pm
Free Rock Friday
THE BOMBASTICS
John Monopoly
♦ Free Before 10pm♦
♦ Free All Night w/College I.D. ♦

Sat., Nov. 7-8:30pm
MAX CREEK

Sun., Nov. 8-7:00pm/18+/
YOUSSOU N' DOUR
Proceeds to benefit the Northampton Center for the Arts

Mon., Nov. 9-8:00pm/18+/
Free Show
From The H.O.R.D.E. TOUR
WIDESPREAD PANIC
Tickets Available TIX UNLIMITED

Thurs., Nov. 12-8:30pm/18+/
SHOCKRA
Borderland

Fri., Nov. 13-8:30pm
Free Rock Friday
BOP HARVEY
Monghani

Sat., Nov. 14-8:30pm
ROOMFUL OF BLUES

Tues., Nov. 17-8:00pm
WRSI Holiday Party
LOS LOBOS

Thurs., Nov. 19-8:30pm/18+/
Record Release Party
BIM SKALA BIM

Sat., Nov. 21-7:00pm
WRSI Holiday Party
LUCINDA WILLIAMS

Tues., Nov. 24-8:00pm/18+/
HOUSE OF PAIN

Sat., Dec. 12-8:30pm
JOHN CAFFERTY & THE BEAVER BROWN BAND

Sun., Dec. 13-8:00pm/Rock 102
ARC ANGELS

Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Dynamite Records, For The Record in Amherst, Ticket Pro (800) 828-7080.
10 Pearl Street Northampton • 584-7903

■ workshop

continued from page 3

Many expressed feelings of rebellion, along with a feeling of being overwhelmed. They said they all felt as though they were in a space, all alone, with no one to help. Some said this program helped them deal with their sexuality and all the emotions surrounding it.

Lakey had many activities to help put across his ideas. He involved the group in two-person encounters. They focused on goals and what each participant wanted out of life.

Other activities included role-playing and networking. Lakey said these were meant to be more therapeutic and helped relieve the anxiety that had built up.

The workshop was emotional and Lakey had to pause to let each participant fully explore their feelings. He commented that he was "amazed by the richness of experiences."

Lakey also asked people to tap into their resources and use their emotions to help enrich their lives.

The agenda for the meeting included setting goals, creating action plans, and supporting the gay community. He said homophobia needs to be combatted and the community needs to stop infighting and work together.

The workshop was based on increasing self-exploration and personal awareness. The issue of sexual orientation was never directly addressed, because all the participants said they were relatively comfortable with their sexuality.

Republicans blame loss on Bush

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

Members of the University of Massachusetts Republican Club called President-elect Bill Clinton's convincing victory over President Bush in Tuesday's election a "sad day for America."

"Basically, I would move out of the country and go to Russia," said senior Kevin Jourdain, former president of the Republican Club. "But I'm living there right now."

"I'm disappointed to say the least," he added.

Members of the Club agree Clinton didn't really win the election — Bush lost it for himself. Jennifer Fazzi, vice president of the Republican Club, said she believes Bush wasn't true to his conservative values. "It's a sad day to be an American," Fazzi said.

"The fact is that Clinton was in the wrong place at the right time," Jourdain said.

While Bush tried to use the issue of character against Clinton, Bush hurt himself with his "read my lips" speech, according to Jourdain.

"That put a nail in [Bush's] trust campaign," said Jourdain, who said he believes there was too much emphasis on the economy in the campaign. He questioned if the economy would even be an issue in upcoming years.

Although Jourdain said he thinks the economy is destined to improve in the next year despite Clinton's leadership, he said he is going to give him the benefit of the doubt in his time as president.

Jourdain predicts that in the next election a much more conservative candidate will take the Oval Office. Jourdain also said he thought Clinton won only because of an anti-Bush theme and his platform of change.

Bush lost because of the economic recession, according to Jourdain, who attributed the high voter turnout to voters' fear of the future. He said the Republican Party's strong point is historically the economy and Democrats usually focus on social causes. But because the economy was a weakness for the party, Bush had no chance. If the economy was fine, Bush would have won, Jourdain said.

Jourdain said he doesn't think Clinton will be an effective commander-in-chief and that he'll have to heavily rely on his large staff of handlers and assistants. It will be interesting to see how Clinton works with the Democratic majorities, he added.

Perot also hurt Bush in the key electoral states, although not too severely, Jourdain said, adding that he was surprised Perot received 18 percent of the vote. He said he expected Perot would only get eight or nine percent of the vote.

Paraphrasing Bush, Jourdain said he encourages people not to give up hope in the Republican process.

Program helps minority students

By LISA CASEY
Collegian Correspondent

Members of the University of Massachusetts men's and women's basketball have been doing more than simply practicing their jump shots — many are currently involved in a tutorial outreach program for minority high school students in urban areas.

The program, called Bridging Worlds, is headed by Steve Satell, an academic interventionist for the Committee for Education of Black and Other Minority Students and TAP (an honors program in the School of Management), and by Tim Kingston, head academic coordinator for the UMass basketball team.

The program is sponsored by Afro-American studies professors Michael Thelwell and John Bracey of the New Africa House.

Bridging Worlds involves minority students from Springfield and Lowell. Its goal is to encourage these students to fulfill their academic potential and to help them better understand and conquer the hardships of life and society by learning how their actions today have a strong bearing on their future.

The tutors in the program, who must meet certain criteria to participate and receive credit for their involvement, serve as role models for the high school students by talking about the problems which they have overcome to reach their personal goals, and encouraging the students to do the same.

The tutors discussed the trials of achieving academic success and discussed various problems which can inhibit success to the 30 students that attended the program at Commerce High School in Springfield.

"Who here likes to win?" asked Steve Satell, head tutor. Approximately three-fourths of the students raised their hands.

"You must learn from your losses before you can win. Failure to succeed comes from failing to try," Satell said.

Kennard Robinson, tutor and senior basketball team member, emphasized the importance of students believing in themselves.

"I proved them all wrong," said Robinson, referring to the National Collegiate Athletic Association. Robinson had been prohibited from playing basketball his freshman year due to Proposition 48, an NCAA clause that forced him to devote his time to academics.

As a result, Robinson worked hard and eventually surpassed his academic expectations.

Laurie Dendarski, tutor and member of the UMass women's soccer and basketball teams, urged students not to sell themselves short by not fulfilling their potentials.

Shawn Polk, tutor and member of CEEBMS, discussed the difficulties she faced her first year. "I knew I was smarter than what I was putting out, and I had to start working harder to prove it," said Polk. She admitted that her success was due to her strong desire to fulfill her goals.

Tommy Pace, tutor and former member of the UMass men's basketball team, urged students to push themselves academically and to act on every opportunity they find in their education.

"I wish I learned more and concentrated on education when I was younger, but instead I took the easiest classes to get by," Pace said.

Tutors will return to the high schools in the spring to follow up on the students' progress. In the mean time, the tutors will keep in contact with the students through letters during the year and will give the high school students a first-hand look at higher education during a day at UMass.

OFFICIAL COLLEGIAN FILLER

Winter Session 1993
January 4-25

Yes, you can!

REGISTER FOR WINTER SESSION CLASSES.
SPECIAL ENROLLMENT RESTRICTIONS DO NOT APPLY FOR WINTER SESSION.
SO, IF YOU'RE A UMASS STUDENT, ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS JUST SIGN UP.
OVER 100 CREDIT COURSES.
EARN 3 CREDITS IN JUST 3 SHORT WEEKS!
REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.

CATALOGS AVAILABLE ON CAMPUS OR AT THE DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION, 6TH FLOOR GOODELL.

Division of Continuing Education

PLOUT OU NA ENT ERIS DICOS I DETAIL MOON. COLLEGIAN. KEEPING YOU ON YOUR TOES.

LIVE IN SPRINGFIELD, MA.
PARAMOUNT PERFORMING ARTS CENTER
JOAN BAEZ — FRIDAY NOVEMBER 20TH
SANDRA BERNHARD — SUNDAY NOVEMBER 22ND
GEORGE CARLIN — SATURDAY JANUARY 23RD
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT BOX OFFICE (413) 734-5874; STRAWBERRY RECORDS; NORTHAMPTON TICKET OFFICE (413) 586-8686 OR TICKETPRO PHONE CHARGE AT 1-800-828-7080

CAFE DICARLO
5-College Student Dinner Special
Choice of:
• Lasagna al Forno
• Chicken Parmigiana
• Shrimp all' Arrabbiata
• Pasta Primavera
Complete Italian Dinner, including choice of entreé, salad, bread, soda or coffee for $6.95, with college I.D.
Sunday thru Thursday 11:30 to 10:00.
Offer expires Nov. 30, 1992
71 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA
253-9300

Creative Computers
Specializing In Collegiate Computer Needs!
GUARANTEED LOWEST PRICES!!
386SX-25MHz System - $779
386SX-33MHz • 486DX-33MHz
386DX-40MHz • 486DX-50MHz
In Amherst: 256-6474

Main St RECORDS — One of the area's largest selections of Imported, Independant & Domestic Records, Cassettes and Compact Discs — 586 5726 — 213 MAIN ST
SON OF Main St RECORDS — Tens of Thousands of Used, Cut outs & Collectible Records and Cassettes — 586 1707 — 21 STATE ST
NORTHAMPTON

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

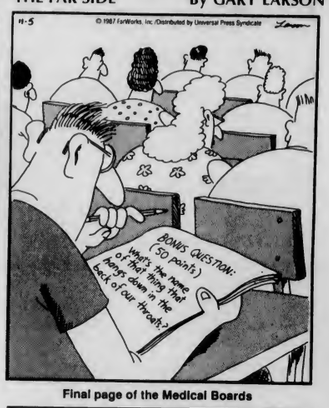
JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON



Final page of the Medical Boards

Quote of the Day

"Do you know me? I was president of one of the most powerful countries on the planet. Now I'm just another has-been politician. But sometimes I need people to know who I am, that's why I carry the American Unemployment Card. Because term limits work."
– George H. W. Bush

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Although a job offer sounds good, employment benefits could give you second thoughts. Banish self-imposed restrictions. You are much more creative than you think!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A wonderful day lies ahead if you work with a will to get things settled. Be careful not to let someone down. Your psychic sensitivity is on the rise. Trust your instincts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Face facts. Someone is less dependable than you would like. Rely on your own efforts. This evening could mark the end of your participation in a group.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good eating habits and regular exercise will boost your stamina. Kick the junk food habit once and for all! Invest in something that really interests you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A confident attitude makes you popular now. Do not waste time on trivial matters when there is a big audience you can influence. Refuse to let others dump their problems on you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An abrupt change of pace occurs. A business or marriage proposal is featured. Take your own sweet time to think it over. You may have to change certain social plans to accommodate others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may be hesitant to promote yourself or your plans today. A staunch ally goes to bat for you in a dramatic fashion. Do your best to live up to this person's expectations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not play games with another person's emotions. If you are not serious about a commitment, say so, but in a gentle manner. A romantic partner could throw you a curve!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can do your best work alone today — far from distractions and interruptions. Do not get frustrated if new methods prove difficult to master. Persevere.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stop doubting your unique abilities. Hard work and perseverance will help you accomplish miracles. Counsel an associate who has financial woes. Romance is fulfilling.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Draw the line with a family member who does not want to shoulder responsibilities. Someone may pressure you for an answer to a recent query.

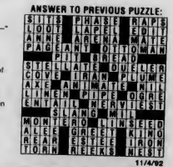
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your spirits get a big boost when a pal calls with exciting plans. Go along with the tide. It could turn out to be an interesting adventure. Be your own best friend.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

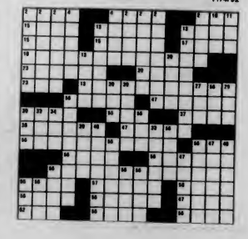
ACROSS
1 Aptly named British spa
5 Twice CCCII
9 Embrace
12 Soprano Petina
13 — Lama
14 Measured portion
15 Amaze
16 Round cheeses
17 Type of exam
18 Strauss operetta
21 "From — With Love": 1963 Bond flick
22 Stravinsky
23 Table scrap
24 Gilbert and Sullivan operetta
30 "— count the ways"
31 Nets
32 "Le Roi d'Ys" composer
35 Latin lesson word
37 With "The," Chicago area
38 Wintry save sight
41 Tom of "The Seven Year Itch"
44 Rodgers and Hammerstein musical
46 Bog
49 Not looted by
50 Stand in the way
52 "The —": Tchaikovsky opera
55 Touch on
57 Conductor Santi
58 Bridge, in Boulogne
59 Pod lookalikes
60 Made of wood
61 Seed coat
62 Mount —, Nev.
63 U.S. weather satellite
64 Oxford feature

DOWN
1 Café
2 Dudley Moore role
3 Tops in loyalty
4 Does a museum job
5 June honorees
6 Potters shape this
7 Satiric verse in Greek literature
8 Countenances
9 English or French follower
10 "Born in the —"
11 Sal
13 Exit
14 Threshold ledge
19 Exclamation of horror
20 Billy or Pata
25 Miss Hogg
26 Heroines v. Ilion site
27 Goddess who rescued Odysseus
28 — volante
29 Cleo's killer
30 Labor-dispute actions
32 Ignited
33 Alas, to Hans
34 Prevaricate
36 Possess
39 Do a tailoring job
40 Agreement
42 Menlo Park name
43 Like Deli watches
45 They're dead ducks
48 Hat type
47 Blissful
48 Get comfy
51 — Bull
52 Wharf
53 Corrida shouts
54 Market, of a sort
55 Jungle swinger
56 — canto

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



11/4/92



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jason George
Copy Editor ..... Lisa Donadio
PhotoTechnician ..... Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor ..... Seth Kaye
Production ..... Janet Riley, David Maryakhin, Michele Bakis

Menu

LUNCH
Kielbasa Grinder
Hot Turkey Sandwich
BASICS LUNCH
Tomato Casserole
Hot Turkey Sandwich

DINNER
Roast Pork
Cheese & Macaroni
BASICS DINNER
Garbanzo Beans
Cheese & Macaroni

Costas, SportsCenter head list of Art's honors

Broadcasting excellence, especially in sports, depends on how you relate to your audience. Whether it is on ESPN, NBC, CBS, or ABC, the men and women who translate sports make it easier to watch and learn, and for this they deserve the highest honor: Art's Awards for Sports Reporting.

Arthur
STAPLETON

Students living on this campus may lose touch with the sports world, especially without the services of God's gift to the fanatic, ESPN. Over the summer, this writer overdosed on SportsCenter, the best possible review of the athletic arena.

This all-sports network is characterized by charismatic broadcasters and influential advice. From Chris "Boomer" Berman to Dick "Prime-time baby" Vitale, it doesn't matter what team you follow, because ESPN keeps you on top of every team.

Best tandem on television: "Welcome to Happy Hour" is the lead used by ESPN's Keith Olbermann and Dan Patrick to introduce their nightly show, usually the 11:30 p.m. edition of SportsCenter. The best thing about these two is that they mesh together as a pair, not as two individuals. Patrick is known for his famed calls of "Freeze it!" and "Good!"

Whether it is baseball or hoops, Patrick is entertaining as well as a fountain of knowledge. UMass got a full dose of Mr. Patrick last season both during and after the broadcast of the midnight game in the Cage against Siena. By staying around to talk to the Minutemen fans, this man won my accolades.

His partner Olbermann came out of nowhere to grab the spot along side the famed Patrick. The best clip this summer was one of the Keith Olbermann fan club, along with a guy dressed like his hero of SportsCenter.

Worst tandem on television: I've heard of beating a dead horse, but this one is needed. Channel 40's SportsSunday Live with Mike Ratte and Jim Cline doesn't live up to the hype its station tries to gather. Wait, it doesn't receive the good hype, but the show is ripped by this prognosticator every Friday.

The reason this show turns me off is the fact that Jim Cline tries too hard to be funny, and he seems extremely shallow when it comes to sports, trying to be a fan of every successful team. Hey, Jim, jump on the Cowboys bandwagon, cause it left the station on Sunday.

On the other hand, Mike Ratte has talent, and I commend him for putting up with a partner who should be working for a PBS affiliate instead of NBC. Ratte's work thus far has caught my eye, and some esteemed station must put him out of his misery and give him another job, preferably ESPN or CNN.

Ratte gives insight to many things, but he doesn't overdo it. He can interview influential people like John Calipari and not get emotionally involved.

Well, the best place to continue is "Prime Time, Prime Time," with Berman, Tom Jackson and Chris Mortensen. You know it is football season when the boys of pigskin start and end your Sunday of sports. Berman has the most character of any sports journalist, and his versatility gives ESPN high ratings. This man is the one who has taken the country by storm with his creative nicknames, having them become household items (Do the names Fred "Crime Dog" McGriff and Lance "Oh, darn, you sunk my" Blankenship ring a bell?).

Jackson provides the player insight needed to make the fan aware of strategy in the game. After starting rough around the edges, he has become one of the mainstays when it comes to the NFL. Mortensen seems to dig up the dirt on what is going on behind the scenes in the league.

Not many announcers can affect a sport like Keith Jackson has changed college football (woah nelly, let me tell ya about Jerome Bettis; he's rumblin', stumblin', bumblin' all the way to the end zone).

Former coaches don't make good announcers in this writer's opinion, but there are exceptions. One of these is none other than John Madden, who is a football god. I have one comment on Mr. Madden: he's so great that the best video game ever is his.

When it comes to hoops, the professional ranks are topped by the tag team of Marv Albert and the "Czar of the Telestrater" Mike Fratello. Albert is the voice of the NBA, and his memorable calls are numerous: "Ewing is hearing it from the capacity crowd!" or "Oh, what a move by Jordan!" Marv is one of the most popular guests on Late Night with David Letterman, and he has his own following up at Syracuse, his former school, as well as colleges across the country.

Fratello, a former graduate of Hackensack High, my alma mater, has proved that this former Atlanta coach does have a place in the NBA: broadcasting. He goes well with Albert, and NBC should never lose the NBA contract with these two running the games.

College hoops is controlled by one man that has changed the way people view the sport. He is none other than Vitale, who possesses more energy during a broadcast than anyone else ever could.

His vocabulary has become synonymous with hoops for college fans, especially his "T-O baby" and "Diaper Dandy." Vitale is another former coach who has made it big, and he supports his partner, whoever it is.

Mike Lupica is a journalist who covers sports as well as it could be done. This syndicated columnist appears on ESPN's Sports Reporters and should be given his own show. Lupica has the best ideas in sports, and he needs to be commended, not chastized.

Art's All-Time Favorite Broadcaster: This one goes to the jack-of-all-trades — the incomparable Bob Costas. From the Olympics to baseball, football to hoops, Costas is the man when it comes to reporting on sports. Talk about versatile, this man even has a really late night talk show on television, as well as his Costas Coast to Coast radio program.

Read Collegian columnist Arthur Stapleton every Friday.

Experience MINUTEMANIA

Become a student booster. Get the benefit of Advance Ticket Pickup plus:
- Minutemania T-shirt
- Game Receptions
- Souvenirs
- "The Maniac" Newsletter
- And your Minutemaniac membership card!

Sign up! Become a MINUTEMANIAC!
Join at: 203 Boyden
545-3190
Contact: Margaret Driscoll

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE

ELECTION WEEK SPECIAL

$3.00 Pitchers
50¢ Drafts
$1.00 Miller Genuine Draft Bottles
$1.50 Vodka & Sprite

Wed Nite--Come Sign Up for Guest Bartender Nite

Thursday--FREE APPETIZERS 9:00-10:30
Wings, potato skins, chicken fingers, etc.

Friday--All You Can Eat Buffet $2.00

Try our Sunday Brunch 11:30-1:30
all-you-can-eat $3.99
sausage, bacon, ham, roast beef, eggs, hash browns, quiche, french toast, assorted muffins, danish and desserts

Pitchers of Mimosas $5.50
Bloody Marys $2.00

DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARD NOMINATIONS

DEADLINE EXTENDED: NOVEMBER 12, 1992

DO YOU HAVE A PROFESSOR OR TA AT UMASS WHO IS
- ...Really Good?
- Generates Excitement?
- Makes You Think IN New Ways?
- Influences Your Life?
- Helps you with your career choice?

If you do, the Distinguished Teaching Award Committee wants you to nominate her or him for a DTA Award

TO: DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARD COMMITTEE
GRADUATE DEAN'S OFFICE
514 GOODELL BUILDING
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

■ swimming

continued from page 12

Captain Kari Edwardsen said.

Sat., Nov. 7, at 1:00 p.m. the Minutewomen will host UVM in Boyden pool

"Saturday will be the first significant test for us," said assistant coach Ed Melanson. "UVM is one of the better teams in New England."

■ Scott's

continued from page 12

the Bruins will make the playoffs.

• The Shirl figures the Red Sox might as well go for Ruben Sierra. "Let them spend some big bucks for another superstar then watch him fade into obscurity."

The Shirl, building a better tomorrow.

• So if all goes well, the Fumblers win their final eight, squeak in as a wildcard and the rest, as they say, is history.

• If there's a better feeling than running a table in pool, I'd guess it's by illegal means.

• Looks like Coach Mac has been sickened to the point where he has to take a couple of weeks off. So who's going to run things on the sidelines? My phone should be ringing any minute now, but my trustful agent has advised me to only accept if they are renamed the Montague Maulers.

• I've never mentioned a 12th-ranked water polo team in this space. There, now I feel better.

• Keep your feet in bounds and your eyes on Santana.

David Scott is a Collegian columnist.

I'D JUMP THROUGH HOOPS FOR UMASS BASKETBALL. ONLY IN THE COLLEGIAN.

Men's XC places third

By GWENDOLYN McLAURIN
Collegian Correspondent

The UMass Men's cross country team pulled off an amazing upset this past weekend by finishing third at the New England Championships at Franklin Park in Boston.

Matt Simon and Erik Andelman had an outstanding race as they finished together, placing ninth and 10th respectively. Coach Ken O'Brien said that he knew that they would be a force if they got the chance to run together. Prior to the New Englands, they only raced together once earlier in the season.

O'Brien also felt that the rest of the team "held their end of the bargain" and were very solid throughout the whole race. The coach also thought the whole team performed very well and that the race was basically error free. O'Brien said he was very pleased that all of his runners placed in the top fifty, calling this "the best race of the year, so far."

The field consisted of teams from Divisions one, two and three from Maine to Virginia. The pre-race poll had placed UMass in the second five (sixth place through tenth). But by the end of the day the Minutemen had captured third.

O'Brien said that he was very happy that all of the team's hard work had finally paid off. He said that he has been watching them improve measurably in the practices but that it had not paid off during the meets. He also said that this was a great confidence booster for them as they are going into the Nationals.

The Nationals will be held at Lehigh University on Nov. 14. Although O'Brien said that he thinks the top five spots are pretty much locked up, he said he sees a field of about twenty teams that could grab the next few spots on any given day.

For the Serious Student
- Quiet Apartment Living
- Convenient
- Affordable
- Flexible

THE BROOK
253-3834

WELCOME BACK!

Round Trips from New York. Starting at:
CANCUN $ 310
LONDON 330
SAN JOSE C.R. 470
BERLIN 498
WARSAW 625
BANGKOK 949
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change & availability. Call about one ways. We issue EURAIL passes on the SPOT!
Council Travel
79 South Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
256-1261

READ OUR LIPS ... LOW, LOW PRICES!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEER WINE LIQUORS

BUD, BUD LIGHT, & BUD DRY CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES $12.49 + DEP.
SAM ADAMS BOSTON LAGER CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BOTTLES $16.99 + DEP.
ROLLING ROCK 12 PACK BOTTLES $6.49 + DEP.
CORONA 12 PACK BOTTLES $8.49 + DEP.
GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY & GOLDEN ANNERVERSARY LIGHT CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS $7.79 + DEP.

ROBERT MONDAVI WINE OF THE MONTH WOODBRIDGE CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON $4.99 750 ML
NEW! ALMADEN CHARDONNAY, ZINFANDEL, & CABERNET SAUVIGNON $5.49 1.5 L
IGNLENOOK WINES $6.49 3.0 LITER CHENIN BLANC, FRENCH COLUMBARD, RHINE, ROSE, CHABLIS, BLANC DE BLANC, BLUSH, WHITE GRENACHE, WHITE ZINFANDEL
1990 CHATEAU PITRAY FRENCH RED BORDEAUX $6.99 750 ML
BARTLES & JAYMES WINE COOLERS ALL FLAVORS SALE $2.99 MAIL IN REBATE -$1.00 AFTER REBATE $1.99

J & B SCOTCH $24.99 1.75L
GORDON'S VODKA AFTER REBATE $9.49 1.75L SALE $11.49, MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00
SCHENLEY WHISKEY SALE $11.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 COST AFTER REBATE $8.49 1.75L
GILBEY'S GIN SALE $11.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$3.00 COST AFTER REBATE $8.49 1.75L
RON ROBERTO WHITE RUM SALE $10.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$1.50 COST AFTER REBATE $8.99 1.75L

not responsible for typographical errors
OPEN: 9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
• TWO CONVENIENT LOCATIONS •
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS 11/5/92 THRU WEDS. 11/11/92
Full Redemption Center

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon.– Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Japan-America Club general mtg. tonight 7:30 pm Mtg. rm to be announced or call 256-4654 for more info.

AIRLINE TICKETS

Airline Tickets take $50-$100 off any fare call Stuart at 516-767-7646

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Department of Landscape Architecture announces its Fall Workday Saturday, November 7, 1992. YOU supply tools WE supply labor Call 665-7207 by 11-6

Tired of your science major? Try Food Science Call Dr. Chinachoti 545-1025

COLLEGE PIZZA

College Pizza
Fall Special
Small cheese $3.50
Large cheese $5.99
1 or 2 toppings $6.99
Free soda with large sub salad or spaghetti
549-6098 549-6073
MUST MENTION THIS AD

EXTREMELY IMPORTANT

Tarot Reading by appointment. Anytime Call Mitch at 548-9761

FOR RENT

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom new homes on bus route call 586-4270

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

Amherst 3 bedroom condo avail. Feb. 1st A room and 1 bedroom apartment avail Jan 1st. Lincoln Real Estate 25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7879

1 Bdrm apt in Puffton! Move in anytime only 434 (includes heat, hot water) Well Kept! See it! 549-3542

FOR SALE

Brother Wordprocessor WP-760D+ with spreadsheet brand new with one year warranty. Only $286 546-0390

Like new Brother word processor WPD 760D plenty of features A steal at $210 or best offer 546-1197

Stereo Components: Used reconditioned, area's biggest selection. Buy/Sell/Trade at Stereo/Video Exchange, Sundays 10-4, inside Jackson's Flea Market, Mountain Farms Mall, Hadley. Other days call 256-0941

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Packs + case and manuals Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O.

HELP WANTED

Alaska Summer Employment fisheries earn $600+ a week in canneries $4000/month on fishing boats. Free transportation! Room and Board! Male or Female. Get a head start on this summer. For employment program call 1-206-545-4155 ext. A5001

Couples — Property Manager Free Amherst apartment plus salary Debbie 256-0741

Earn $1000/week at home stuffing envelopes! For information, send long SASE to CJ Enterprises, 6ox 67068K, Cuyahoga Falls, OH 44222

Evening Jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action $7/hr. On busines. 584-8939

Fund Raisers for Christmas Kettle program, outdoor work needed for 3 hour shifts from November 21 thru Christmas. Reliable and dependable individuals a must. Contact Lisa at the Salvation Army M & F 3-7 and Thurs 1-6 $4.50/hour

Postal Jobs Available! Many positions, Great benefits. Call 1-800-333-3737 Ext. p-3306

SPRINGBREAKERS

Promote our Florida Spring Break packages. Earn MONEY and FREE trips. Organize SMALL or LARGE groups. Campus Marketing, 800-423-5264

$500.00

If you have access to a video camera, we're looking for students to film a mini-video. May lead to permanent position. For information, call C.6. productions Inc. M-F 9-5, (617)332-9606

$200 - $500 WEEKLY

Assemble products at home. Easy! No selling. You're paid direct. Fully guaranteed. FREE INFORMATION - 24 HOUR HOTLINE. 801-379-2900 Copyright # MA15KDH

WANTED: TRAVEL REPS for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SIESTA, ask for Bonnie

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons - first lesson half price 665-1178

LEGAL INTERNSHIPS

Spring 1993 internships with the Legal Services Center! Get hands-on experience in the legal field -- work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal professional necessary -- training provided. Contact Legal Services today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center, November 13 is the application deadline.

LOST

Glasses in black case somewhere between E-Lot and Central - Call 546-5256

Lost Ski Club jacket Sat - Alumni w/knd uptown -- red North Face -- Reward offered please call office 545-3437

Green & White House on Halloween were you there? I lost my camera -- Pentax IQ 200M. Reward for info leading to its return, Joanne 6-5624

MUSICIANS

Bassist and Drummer needed for rock band. Call Jason 6-7301, or Steve 6-1086 for info.

PERSONALS

Hair Cost
Anyone with a clue recognized the energy and enthusiasm with which you all performed. Mark et. al., great work and thanks for sticking together. Pay no attention to those who have proven themselves ignorant

Hey Kimmy Z.
Happy 21! The tequila shot is on me. Love,
The Guy in Chico

Jim Somppi
Holy Sh-t -- 4 years!!!
I love you, sunshine --
Forever and ever

ROOMMATES WANTED

Female to share 3 bedroom house in North Amherst over intersession and/or Spring. On bus route Call Candace or Michelle 549-4301

2 fun roommates needed as of Jan. 1st $140/month including heat and hot water 549-4911

2 girls needed to share largest bedroom in a 3 bdrm Puffton APT. 549-7319

3 Responsible women Need housing for Sping semester Desire place near UMass Call Young-Mi 546-0580 or Jen 546-4976

SERVICES

Free Peer Counseling lesbian, gay, bisexual issues. Phone or walk in. LEG counseling collective, 408G Student Union 545-2645

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Resumes
Need help? I have experience with resumes. Quick service, free advice, excellent quality, and LOW prices. IBM laser printing service available. Call Andy 549-8463

Tarot readings Call Chris 256-0821

RSO FAIR '92

RSO FAIR '92
Monday, November 9
12-4 SUB
FREE food, entertainment, prizes, Demonstrations and information. 5-College Community Welcome! SPONSORED BY Div. of Student Activities

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed - Free cover page, spell check, laser printout. $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795

Typing-Word processing Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations. Laser Printing Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268

WANTED

We want your 2BDRM Puffton lease!! Starting January 1. Call us first! Reward if we sign it!! Call 549-7319

Singer -- Do you want to sing the National Anthem at UMass basketball games? Contact Margaret in the Athletic Dept. For information 545-3190

WANTED TO RENT

3 responsible women Need housing for spring semester Desire place near UMass Call Young-Mi 546-0580 or Jen 546-4976

We want to take over your lease! 4 person apt. in Brandywine or Puffton Starting in January 546-2296

Sports

Scott Reed — Collegian Athlete of the Week

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

After the final buzzer sounded at the New England Championship water polo game Sunday afternoon, the two teams involved lined up for the traditional hand shaking.

At the end of the University of Massachusetts line was senior co-captain Scott Reed, a four-year starter who could finally say he played for a N.E. title team after two straight losses to Brown University in the championship game.

At the end of the Brown University line was Ed Reed, the 20-year head coach of the Bears whose efforts and love for the game has brought respectability to the Eastern League in a sport dominated by west-coast teams.

When the two met they hugged not only for a game well-played, but as the father-and-son team they are.

"I was happy, but I felt bad for him," the younger Reed said, even though his father had won the previous 17 N.E. titles. "He built the program from scratch, and now he's losing it. It's tough to watch him coach a team that isn't as good as teams he's had in the past. I feel bad for him, but I also feel great for me."

Such is the life for Scott Reed, who won't even talk to his father during the week before UMass and Brown add another game to their spirited rivalry. It's not that they can't communicate, but until the game is over, his father is "the enemy."

"It sounds funny, but that's the way it is," Scott said. "I can talk to my mother with no problem, but I have to get focused. I can't think of him as my father."

As a member of the UMass swimming team Scott has been on three straight N.E. title teams, but the honor is new for water polo. His 29 goals are fourth on the team, and his 35 assists lead the team. Figure in 24 steals and unbounding endurance, you have a player that can do it all.

"Scotty tends to lead by what he does in the water," said UMass coach Russ Yarworth, who sees Reed as one of his most respected water polo coaches. "He's not a real vocal captain, but you don't always have to be to get your point across. What he does is give 100 percent all the time. He gets his point across with his plays.

"When Ed told me five years ago that he felt comfortable with Scott coming to UMass to swim and play water polo, I took it as a very strong compliment."

This weekend the team travels to the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Maryland for the Eastern League Championship, with the top two teams earning berths to the NCAA Championships at the end of the month. UMass, 14th-ranked and 24-1 overall, has been named the number one seed in the tourney, but Reed says they aren't getting the repectability that such a seeding deserves.

"The Mid-Atlantic teams think Princeton should be number one," he said. "They just think that we're not a real team. It's kind of upsetting. We've beaten all these teams, except Slippery Rock, and we have the best record on the east coast."

This weekend the Minutemen will have a chance to silence the critics. If they win their first game against Villanova, they will play the winner of the Navy/Brown game. This could mean a last match-up between this father and son duo. It would be just another game for Scott, but for the first time, with NCAA implications. If they don't meet, Sunday's game will have been the last between these opponents.

And Scott can say that he beat his father in the big game in his senior year.

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
Matt Reed of the 12th ranked UMass water polo team garnered The Collegian Athlete of the Week Award for his strong play.

Minutewomen win opener 199–99

By ROBERT FERREIRA
Collegian Correspondent

"V-i-c-t-o-r-y," is what the University of Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team roared this past Tuesday night, when they defeated Smith College in their season opening meet in Boyden pool.

The Minutewomen drowned out Smith by a whopping 100 points. The final score was UMass 199, Smith 99.

"Smith would not have been competitive with us if we had put our top-line swimmers in their top events," said head coach Bob Newcomb. "So instead we swam our second level, placing swimmers in off events and they still swam very well."

The team swam a solid performance and pulled top place finishes in several events. Lifetime bests were swam by juniors Kate Riddell during the 100-yard backstroke of the 400-yard individual medley relay (1:06.6) and Michelle Munyon in the 100-yard breaststroke (1:12.74).

Lifetime bests were also swam by freshmen Sarah Baker during the 100-yard freestyle of the 400-yard freestyle relay (0:57.14), Jessica Griffith in the 50-yard freestyle (0:26.08) and also in the 200-yard individual medley (2:20.22), Barbara Mullen in the 200-yard backstroke (2:32.01), and sophomore Kristen Miles in the 200-yard backstroke (2:28.03).

Top place finishes were executed in 13 out of the 16 events. The Minutewomen stole 1st, 2nd and 3rd places in the 1000-yard freestyle, the 400-yard freestyle relay and in the first one meter diving event. The team held on to a wide point lead throughout the meet.

The first place time for the 1000-free was 11:20.87 by junior Carolyn Curran. First place for the 400-free relay was 3:55.52 by freshmen Sarah Baker and Darbie Honey, junior Stefanie Souto and senior Captain Kari Edwardsen.

The first place score for the one meter diving was 194.45 by junior Allison White. Due to a broken three-meter springboard, two one meter diving events were held.

"This meet was an opportunity for us to see our freshmen perform and compete," said Newcomb. "The team was unified and was there for each other."

"Considering everyone swam off events, we did great,"

Turn to SWIMMING, page 11

Minutemaniacs are back again

By DAVID SCOTT
Collegian Staff

The gang's all here. Harper's back. Lou's back. Coach Cal is back. The Minutemaniacs are back.

UMass basketball is coming off its best season ever and it may be more than just a coincidence that last year was the first for the Minutemaniacs, UMass' athletic team booster club. Now the club returns for it's second season, bigger and better.

"It's a good way to hang out with some crazy people," said Minutemaniac Mark Benek, a junior from New Ringgold, Penn. "Basketball games are a good place to show some school spirit."

The student booster club was founded last year by UMass student Gabe Tucker and offered a way for die-hard sports fans, especially basketball followers, to join together with fellow fanatics during UMass home games.

This year the club has a new president, Kevin Coulombe of Haverhill, as well as guidance from the Athletic Department from of Margaret Driscoll, assistant to UMass interim Athletic Director Glenn Wong.

Driscoll and Coulombe have revamped the Minutemaniac package to include a special feature where members will be allowed to pick up their tickets a couple of days prior to regular distribution of student tickets for UMass home games. The $25 membership fee also includes a T-shirt, game-receptions and a newsletter.

"We've had to limit the membership to 200 in order to preserve the benefit of having advanced ticket pick-up," Driscoll said.

The Cage has seating for 2,000 students and plans are still being finalized for student seating in the new Mullins Arena. Details for the advanced ticket pick-up for Minutemaniacs are still being worked out, Driscoll said.

"The main perk is that members will be able to pick tickets two days before anyone else," said Coulombe, a senior sport management major. "Sleeping out for tickets in the middle of March is fun once — but that's about it."

While the club has its roots in basketball, the hope is for Minutemaniacs to help support other UMass sports teams in the future.

"It's a booster club for the entire UMass Athletic Department," Coulombe said.

Applications were handed out beginning at last Saturday's Midnight Madness and membership is growing quickly.

"It's a great opportunity to support one of the country's best basketball teams," said freshman Lisa Carparelli, from Cheshire, Conn. "Being a Minutemaniac, I know I'll be surrounded by others who love basketball as much as I do."

Some of the money raised from membership collection will be used to purchase the new UMass mascot costume. Tryouts to become the UMass mascot will be held this coming Sunday in The Cage at 9 p.m. and Tuesday night at 8:15 p.m. Hopefuls must contact Driscoll prior to tryouts.

Scott's shots

Foxboro's Fumblers and you, together discovering new levels of absurdity.

• So, the prophecy for this Saturday's matchup with Richmond came true. It is an important game and we can guarantee at least one great Jim Reidism. Something to the effect of, "What a great day for football, those young men really played their hearts out."

David
SCOTT

How does a team go into a game being ranked 20th, then win over a better than average team and still remain at No. 20? No matter, let the wins and the defense do the talking.

• Jim Rudy's Lady Kickers will venture to Storrs for a rematch of last year's opening round game. It's not a stretch to imagine both Connecticut powerhouses falling in consecutive weeks to Rudy's Beauties. It appears as though the team might be peaking at just the right time.

Give credit to Skye Eddy for accepting her new role up front — the move has already provided one game winner.

• There's something more to the whole Magic story. We might never know what that is and sadly the "comeback" has put a blemish on Magic's fine career.

• There's a new guy roaming the UMass Sports Information office and early indications are that Lamar "Take A" Chance is going full steam for the Cravat King title.

The Rook proudly displayed a tantalizing tie decorated with sneakers last Friday. Coach Cal take heed, there's a new Chance(llor) in town. Just remember, it's MY contest. Welcome aboard.

• Boston Garden was rocking last Friday night with the sounds of some fine music emanating off the banners, but there's no comparison to the electricity generated by one Larry Joe Bird. The reverberating energy felt when Bird would hop off the bench with that glare, wipe his soles and proceed to dominate a game can't be duplicated by all the speakers in the world. Where have you gone Larry Bird?

• By the way, the refurbished parquet looks nice, but it's nothing compared to the shine applied to the floor at the Montague Inn courtesy of our esteemed barkeep, Tina.

• Early results from key states in battleground areas are still too close to call at this hour but we project that

Turn to SCOTT'S, page 11

MATTHEW SWEET

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Putting it plainly, Matthew Sweet appeals to both the hopelessly romantic and the hopelessly cynical. His songs reveal a genuine affection for classic pop, while at the same time skewing relationships, faith and the human spirit.

His third effort, a seamless melting pot of above-average pop with a tinge of folk and rock, is Girlfriend. He toured this summer with the Indigo Girls and now he's here at Pearl Street. Putting it plainly again, Matthew Sweet is a show that shouldn't be missed.

Sweet, born and raised in Lincoln, Nebraska, has always had an affinity for new-wave cover bands. After graduating in 1983, he departed for Athens, GA, the birthplace of R.E.M. and the B-52's, to attend summer school. He soon found himself in a local band, Oh-OK and later formed his own group, Buzz of Delight; both released EP's on DB Records.

A few years later, a 20 year old Sweet departed Georgia with his wife for New York City, where a record deal was waiting from Columbia Records. His first album, 1986's Inside, was received enormously well. Rolling Stone declared that "Sweet's a pop addict and his melodies are so effortlessly catchy to dismiss his songs as slight — a big mistake." The magazine gave the first solo effort three-and-a-half stars.

After a stint as bassist with the Golden Palominos to help record and tour with their 1987 disc, Blast of Silence, Sweet returned to solo songwriting with 1989's Earth.

Earth got rave reviews but no one seemed to notice. Ken Tucker called Earth "the first perfect pop album of 1989" and Rolling Stone once again gave Sweet three-and-a-half stars.

This brings us to Girlfriend, an album that has a harder edge than Sweet's first two albums. With a cool 1957 Tuesday Weld cover photo seems almost glamorously misleading as Sweet delves into more personal and reflective territory.

"The album reflects the actual overlapping of the end of one relationship and the beginning of another," Sweet recalls. "The songs are semi-autobiographical in this sense only."

Songs like "Looking at the Sun" and "Thought I Knew You" (Sweet says "this one is about feeling betrayed, bitter."), along with "You Don't Love Me" mirror Sweet's real-life divorce from his wife and past relationships.

Sweet also explores other issues, such as the difficulty of belief in God in today's secular world in "Divine Intervention." And in "Don't Go," the songwriter tells of a person who's grieving over a death they can't accept.

But Sweet's pop fans won't be disapointed. Girlfriend, and indeed Sweet himself, is more mature, yet still as engaging, enjoyable and entertaining. Sweet is ever-climbing the ladder of success and if Girlfriend is any indication, he'll be at the top in no time.

Matthew Sweet will play Pearl Street in Northampton tonight at 7 p.m. with special guest The Jayhawks at 8 p.m. Tickets $8 Adv. Call 584-7771 for more information.

THIS WEEKEND

The Green Rosettas: a different garage band

Pearl St. presents vintage rock opera

By RACHEL D. MEDANIC
Collegian Correspondent

COURTESY KATE WRONSKI

Dave Aaronoff of Duck Duck will be performing with the Green Rosettas as they present the stellar rock opera, "Joe's Garage" tonight at Pearl Street.

Is music something that will be the prime cause of unwanted mass behavior in our future? In Frank Zappa's rock opera, Joe's Garage it is.

Zappa's political commentary, in the form of bawdy satire, on the censorship controversy that political conservatives have created in the past decade will be performed tonight by the Green Rosettas at Pearl Street.

Joe's Garage is about Joe, a garage band guitar player who decides to pursue a career in music which leads to his demise. Joe is arrested because his music is too loud and upon release from prison, he attempts to reform himself by attending church social activities.

His contraction of a painful social disease there leads him to seek the advice of L. Ron Hoover (a takeoff on L. Ron Hubbard) of the First Church of Appliantology. The opera takes off when L. Ron tells Joe his problems can be solved by having himself sexually stimulated by government sponsored homo-replicas (sexual appliances).

It is no coincidence that the performance will happen in the aftermath of the presidential elections. The band members of the Green Rosettas decided this would be prime time to put on the on the opera. In addition Zappa had intended to run for president this year but decided against it because of health problems.

To the delight of hardcore Zappa fans, the 15-member band has painstakingly figured out all the music themselves. Joe's Garage, one of Zappa's lesser-known pieces, will also charm non-Zappa fans with its extensive vocal arrangements, traditional use of a complex technical style and poly-rhythms set into time signatures which are unreasonable for the performer and unbelievable to the listener.

The Green Rosettas originated in Lowell, Ma. and have been working hard on the rock opera since this summer. Aaronoff called it, "a project with a point to it." Besides appealing to the general public, Aaronoff says the rock opera is "like a musician's inside joke." The band formed because they wanted to see the rock opera done live and since Zappa stopped touring in 1988, they decided the only way to see it done live was to do it themselves.

Typical humor of the opera is, L. Ron Hoover's song in scene nine, "Don't you be Tarot-fied, Its just a token of my extreme, ...Don't you never try to look behind my eyes, You don't wanna know what they have seen," and SY BORG'S (a nuclear-powered, Pan-Sexual Roto-Plooker- a type of sexual appliance), "Your place or mine? See the chrome, Feel the chrome, Touch the chrome, Heal the chrome, See the screaming, Hot black steaming, Iridescent naugahyde python screaming, Steam Roller!"

Joe's Garage is one of two rock operas Zappa has written, the other being Thingfish. In the background to the opera, Zappa writes that the opera was originally meant to be done, "...like a really cheap kind of high school play...with all the sets made out of cardboard boxes and poster paint."

In Joe's Garage, the music is the dialogue. The opera consists of three acts and is narrated by the Central Scrutinizer (a robotic law enforcer).

The band got their name from the last scene of the opera where Joe has ended up after a great deal of torment. Joe finally gets released and gives up music and gets a job at the Utility Muffin Research Kitchen where he applies "Green Rosettas" on an assembly line to passing muffins and donuts.

But perhaps what Zappa wants the listener to keep in mind more than anything else, he writes in the opera's background, "Desperate nerds in high office all over the world have been known to enact the most disgusting pieces of legislation in order to win votes (or, in places where they don't get to vote, to control unwanted forms of mass behavior). Naturally our government is no exception. . .Just be glad you don't live in one of the cheerful little countries where, at this very moment, music is either severely restricted. . .or, as it is in Iran, totally illegal."

"But as for the sucker who will write the review, If his mind is prehensile, He'll put down his pencil, And have himself a squat on the Cosmic Utensil, Sit 'n' Spin until you rot, On the Cosmic Utensil, He really needs to squat, On the Cosmic Utensil, Now that I got that over with, I'll just play my imaginary guitar again . . . (Scene 16: Packard Goose)."

The Green Rosettas will be performing at Pearl Street tonight at 8:30 p.m. Tickets $5.

THEY'RE PAY-PERS, IDENTICAL PAPERS ALL THE WAY.
THEY READ ALIKE THEY FEEL ALIKE, WHAT A CRAZY PAIR.

ANY WAY YOU CUT IT, IT STILL COMES OUT CUT.
COLLEGIAN ADVERTISING.
IT WORKS.

Aerobic Instructor Training Program
with Vicki Dailey
▪ 8 week program ▪
▪ Choreography ▪
▪ Motivation techniques ▪
▪ Cueing techniques ▪
▪ Safety ▪
▪ Elders ▪ Pregnancy ▪
▪ Nutrition ▪ Anatomy ▪
▪ Instructor training material ▪
▪ Cassette tape ▪
▪ CPR certificate ▪
Employment opportunities upon successful completion of course
Sunderland
Amherst • Deerfield
Call 549-3638 or 773-5851 for interview and audition
Program to be held Saturday, 12-3 pm at ATHLETIC CLUBS of AMERICA
659 Amherst Street
SUNDERLAND: (413) 549-3638
(Formerly Winners Athletic Club)

PIONEER BOWLING CENTER, INC.
2 West Street, West Hatfield
Massachusetts 01088
247-9506

STUDENT SPECIAL
Every night
Call ahead for availability
99¢ per string with 5-College I.D.
Easy To Get To!
A Perfect Night Out For Friends & Dates
300 Club Lounge For Patrons • 21 yrs. w/I.D.

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street
South Amherst

AMHERST SUNSHINE CARWASH

Automatic wash/wax
Daily 8 - 5 pm
Self Service
wash/wax 24 hrs.
Vacuum Cleaners
381 College Street (Rt. 9 East)

CHINA GARDEN
"The Collegian's choice in delightful dining"

$2.00 OFF with purchase of $15 or more with this coupon
MSG
Enjoy A Taste of Real Chinese Food
Sunday - Thursday, 11:30-10:00 pm
Friday - Saturday, 11:30am-11:00pm
Lunch Hour: 11:30am-3:30pm 7 days a week
FREE Delivery Service • BYOB
The Valley's only Dim Sum Brunch
• Dim Sum (Chinese Brunch-Mandarin & Cantonese Styles)
Every Day 11:30-3:30
Sample our New Vegetarian Menu
13 N. Pleasant St., Amherst,MA • 253-4280/4281

BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL OF AMERICA
If you are over 18, and would like to earn Full Time Income Working Part Time Be a Bartender
•Day/Evening 1 Week
•Local/National Placement
•Limited Openings Remain For September, October, and November Classes
•Make Your Move Today and Receive Additional Savings on Tuition Fees
Call Today! 747-9888 • 1655 Main St., Suite 202 • Springfield
MC/VISA/AE

WEEKEND HAPPENINGS

Calendar of events in the 5 College Area

THURSDAY

IN CONCERT— Relax this noontime with Lynn Sussman, clarinet, and Friends at Smith College's Sweeney Hall today. Sussman and Friends will play wind music by Millhaud and Ligeti as part of the Music in the Noon Hour concert series. 12:30. Free.

THEATRE— Amherst College Department of Theatre and Dance presents Woyzeck/ Amerikan, a work adapted from Georg Buchner's 1830's anti-heroic fragment Woyzeck. Directed by Michael Birtwistle and set by him in the repressive, contemporary culture of right wing para-military survivalists, this production will run through Saturday. 8 p.m. Free but reservations necessary.

IN CONCERT— Mathew Sweet to perform tonight at Pearl Street in Northampton. Sweet's debut was heralded by Rolling Stone's Anthony DeCurtis as rewarding "repeated listenings" and earned Sweet 3 1/2 stars. Sweet will play an 18+ show that begins at 7 p.m. Special guests The Jayhawks will also appear. $8 in advance.

EXHIBIT— The eighth annual Midway show, "6 at Midway" to kick off today and run until Dec. 3. The show features work by second year MFA candidates, including computer graphics, sculpture, printmaking, painting and ceramics. Sponsored in part by the UMass Arts Council, this exhibit may be viewed in the Student Union Gallery. Free.

READING— Prize-winning author Louise Rafkin will read from her latest work, Queer and Pleasant Danger tonight at Food for Thought Books in Amherst. Rafkin's reading is held to celebrate Bisexual, Gay and Lesbian Awareness Days that have run since Oct. 31 and go until Saturday. 7:30. Free.

IN CONCERT— Voices of Shepard to perform a program of Judeo-Spanish music and dance tonight at 7:30 in Bezanson Recital Hall. Presented by The Hillel Foundation with co-sponsors the UMass Arts Council, UMass Music Department, 5-College Hillel and the UMass Dance Department, this four member ensemble will explore Jewish cultural traditions with Spanish origins through song and dance. $5 general/ $3 with ID.

FILM— As part of the Imaging Peace Film Series, a program focusing on "Media Manipulation: Power, Propaganda and History Redefined" will be presented at AC's Stim Auditorium. Films Faces of the Enemy and Manufacturing Consent: Norm Chomsky and the Media will be shown. 7 p.m. Free.

CONFERENCE— "Circa 1492: The Impact of the Reconquista on the Muslims and Jews" will include discussions on "Unity and Disunity" (1:30-3:30 p.m.) and "Iberuans in Exile" (4-6 p.m.). Welcome/opening at 1 p.m. Events in Campus Center Rooms 904-8. Free.

LECTURE— Marilyn Young to present "John D. Lax Lecture - In the aftermath of War and Revolution: Post-Vietnam America, Post-Cultural Revolution China." MHC Mary Woolley Hall, New York Room, 4 p.m. Free.

FILM— Ali: Angst essen Seele auf/Ali: Fear Eats The Soul. This 1974 German flick will be shown tonight for free at AC's Merrill II at 4 and 7:30 p.m.

OPEN HOUSE— For anyone interested in on- and off-campus research and educational opportunities in Coastal and Marine Sciences. With affiliations with marine research centers such as the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute and the Northeast Marine Environmental Institute, the five-college program is able to arrange research cruises, field trips and comprehensive exposure to the field. SC Clark Science Center. McConnell B05. 7:30 p.m.

FILM— Copper Giloth and Justin West to present a thirty minute documentary, Robert Mallary - Pioneer in Computer Art. A reception will follow. Herter Auditorium. 231. 8 p.m. Free

IN CONCERT— Bongos to Circus will jam the night away at the Hadley Pub in Nohho Tickets only $1.

FRIDAY

IN CONCERT— The Bombastics will do their thing at Pearl Street tonight at 8:30 p.m. Special guest John Monopoly will accompany. The best part is that it's Free. Dance party later with DJ Job, hosted by WTIC Lear Jet, and it's still free if you get your fanny in by 10 p.m.

ART CLASSES— Learn how to create the rich tonal qualities of pastel art at the Guild Studio School tonight through Sunday. Barbara Johnson, with an MFA from UMass will provide students with an introduction to the medium using the still life and live models as subject matter. Register for classes by calling Julie Held at 584-3299.

DISCUSSION— A Panel Discussion focusing on "Art and Social Responsibility" will be held at HC's Franklin Patterson Hall from 3-5 p.m. Free.

IN CONCERT— Tom Savoy will perform tonight and tomorrow at The Coolidge Park Cafe at the Hotel Northampton from 8:30 p.m. - 12:30 a.m. For an evening of yummy food and great tunes, come on out!

THEATRE— The Valley Light Opera presents Gilbert & Sullivan's merry Mediterranean musical, The Gondoliers. Amherst High School hosts this tale of love, marriage and mistaken identity tonight through Sunday, and again Nov. 13 & 14 at 8 p.m. with a 2 p.m. matinee Sunday (and no evening performance). $10 general/$7 students & seniors.

CULTURE— Come on down to Smith College for International Students Day! Sponsored by the International Students Organization at Smith, the event will feature a cultural show, vendors and tasty international eats! 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. in Scott Gym, 50 cent admission fee.

PARTY— The MHC Asian Students sponsors a jammin' food festival and party tonight at MHC's Chapin Auditorium (food) and Blanchard Campus Center (party). $6 for both, $2 for party only. 5 p.m.

FILM— Desperately Seeking Susan, starring Collegian staffer Adam Scott Roberts' demi-Godess idol, Madonna, will be shown tonight. This off-beat comedy, directed by Susan Seidelman will run at 7:30 and 10 p.m. at AC Campus Center. $1.75.

MUSIC— The Smith College Choir Alpha will perform a musical based on the text of the book of Ruth in a Musical Shabbat Service. SC Helen Hills Chapel, 7:30. Free.

FILM— The Second Sight Film Collective brings you Over The Edge, the tale of an American family that discovers that affluence doesn't guarantee acceptability. Starring Matt Dillon. HC Franklin Patterson Hall, 8 p.m., nominal fee.

IN CONCERT— Linda Ladarach, violin and Larry Schipull, piano will perform music by Beethoven, Ginastera and Franck in a faculty recital. MHC Pratt Auditorium, 8 p.m. Free to the public. .

SATURDAY

IN CONCERT— The Talich String Quartet presents works by Beethoven and Janacek as part of the Sage Hall Concert Series. Show begins at 8 p.m. in SC's Sweeney Concert Hall. Admission $13.50 & $10 faculty, staff & seniors/$6 students with ID.

MULTI-DISCIPLINARY— Seven area women artists present "LOVE'S BODY SPEAKS," an original multi-media performance and art show to run this afternoon and tomorrow. The show consists of movement, images and lyrical expression to celebrate the connection between creativity, spirituality, sexuality, and the natural world. The live show runs at 2 p.m both today and tomorrow. The exhibit will run through Nov. 20 at the Nacul Center in Amherst. Donations accepted.

IN CONCERT— The Springfield Symphony Orchestra to perform Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 2 and Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 3 under the direction of Raymond Harvey. Show begins at 8 p.m., at Symphony Hall in Springfield. Ticket prices range.

CULTURE— Sample food, enjoy music and appreciate moving prose as the women of Delta Sigma Theta bring to us "A Taste of Culture: Foods from the African Diaspora." SC M'Wangi Cultural Center, Round Room, 3-5 p.m. $3 at door.

IN CONCERT— Minibus cruises into Sheehan's Cafe with new drummer Mark Poitras aboard. The five-member band will play a mix of rhythm and blues, reggae and progressive rock. Show kicks off at 9 p.m. $3 at door.

LECTURE— Cheryl Sisk of Michigan State University will present "Photoperiodism, Rhythms and Clocks" as part of a lecture series on "Neuroendocrine Mechanisms of Reproductive Maturation in a Photoperiodic Species, the European Ferret." SC Hillyer Hall 117. 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. Free.

FILM— Total Recall, starring the ever-sexy Sharon Stone and he-man Arnold Schwarzenegger will be shown at MHC's Gamble Auditorium. 7 and 9 p.m. $2.50.

MUSIC— Mount Holyoke College V-8's perform with The Cornell Hangovers in a surprise-laden Acapella Jam. Blanchard Campus Center, 7 p.m. $3.

IN CONCERT— Pianist/composer Liz Story will perform pieces from her latest release "My Foolish Heart." Come and see the woman that the New York Times heralded as offering "music that defies category, but is elevated and technically accomplished." Story will play at the Iron Horse in Northampton tonight at 7 p.m. $11 in advance, $12.50 at door.

COMMUNITY— Chabad House at Amherst will sponsor a Shabbat Service and Meal. 10 a.m., Free.

IN CONCERT— Max Creek will rock the house at Pearl Street tonight at 8:30 p.m. $6 in advance, $8 at door. 18+ show. Dancing with DJ Bob will also start at 9 p.m. and run into the late night hours.

SUNDAY

IN CONCERT— Bill Morrissey, folk songwriter great will perform works from his latest album, "Inside," heralded by Rolling Stone magazine as "classic folk music graced with an astonishingly subtle simplicity" which earned Morrissey 4 stars. Advanced tickets available by calling or stopping by For The Record in Amherst or the AC Box Office. Show starts at 8 p.m. in the AC Campus Center. $10/$2 with ID.

IN CONCERT— The Franz Liszt Chamber Orchestra from Budapest will perform a program of Purcell, C.P.E., Bach, Rossini, Dvorak and Liszt/Wolf. AC Buckley Recital Hall. 8 p.m.

WORKSHOP— "Separation of Church and State: What Has it Meant and What Should it Mean" will be presented by First Amendment Consultant Herbert Greenhut of New York. This workshop will deal with issues relating to religious freedom and church-state relationships. 10 a.m.-4:30 p.m., $6 all day registration. Call Debbie Roth-Howe to register and for more info.

IN CONCERT— The Smith College Glee Club, joined by the Virginia Glee Club to perform three choruses from Irving Fine's Alice in Wonderland. Under the direction of Lucinda Thayer (Smith) and John Liepold (Virginia) the groups will perform separately (Virginia to perform American folk music and spirituals) and combine after intermission to do Leonard Bernstein's Chichester Psalms. 3 p.m. in John M. Greene Hall. Free.

PLANTS— Get in tune with your natural self at the Annual Chrysanthemum show at SC's Lyman Plant House today from 11 a.m. - 4 p.m. Free.

IN CONCERT— John McCutcheon will make his Iron Horse debut tonight at 7 p.m. Performing his latest pieces "What it's Like" and "Live at Wolf Trap" to name a couple, McCutcheon will thrill you with tunes ranging from folk to jazz.

LECTURE— Lecture and tea demonstration presented by Grand Tea Master Soshitsu at MHC's Pratt Auditorium. 3 p.m. Free.

IN CONCERT— Performing "Beautiful and threatening songs about death and loss. Old, new and perennial modal music of Anglo North America," Cordelia's Dad will make their statement tonight at the Iron Horse.

READING— Carol Edelstein and Lisa Shea read from their own works today at the SC Neilson Library Browsing Room. 4 p.m. Free.

IN CONCERT— The Lenox Brass Quintet will present works by Purcell, Greig, Pezel, Karg-Elert, Holst, Horovitz and the group's own Robert Carriker as part of the "Music and More" Catherine A. Dower Performing Arts Series at Westfield State College. 3 p.m.

FILM— 8 1/2, directed by Federico Fellini tells the story of a film director who retreats from his wife and mistress into his fantasies. A nominal admission fee will get you into this film sponsored by Second Sight Film Collective at HC Franklin Patterson Hall. 8 p.m.

IN CONCERT— The Northampton Center for the Arts and Pearl Street Night CLub present YOUSSOU N' DOUR tonight at 7 p.m. for an 18+ show. Tickets are $13 in advance.

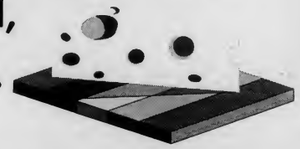
IN CONCERT— The University Chamber Choir and Madrigal Singers, under the direction of E. Wayne Abercrombie, will present an evening of music. The Madrigal singers will perform Renaissance works from Germany, Italy, France and England. The Chamber Choir will present works including Choral Dances from Gloriana by Benjamin Britten, Handel's Messiah (along with the Springfield Symphony) and a section of Bloch's Sacred Service. 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $6/$3 with ID.

"YES, BUT IS IT ART?"

THE COLLEGIAN IS LOOKING FOR WRITERS TO COVER GALLERY BEATS.

INTERESTED?

ARTS WRITERS MEETINGS ARE SUNDAYS AT 2PM, CC 113.



* H'ORS D'OEUVRES NOT INCLUDED

COURTESY MICHAEL BOCANDE

YOUSSOU N' DOUR — This talented performer will be at Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton on Sunday, November 8 at 7 p.m. 18+ show only, kiddies.

NEW

IMPROVED!!

FROM THE MAKERS OF SCOOBY SNACKS...

GREAT FOR KID'S LUNCHES! E-Z OPEN CONTAINER.

HICKORY FLAVORED

COLLEGIAN ©®™

MAKES IT'S OWN GRAVY

CRUNCHY ON THE OUTSIDE, CHEWY ON THE INSIDE.

IT'S THE LEFT THING TO DO.

UNDERGRADUATE TESTED, MOTHER APPROVED.

DO NOT OPERATE HEAVY MACHINERY WHILE UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF COLLEGIAN.
NO ANIMALS HAVE BEEN HURT IN THE TESTING OF COLLEGIAN.
COLLEGIAN HAS BEEN SHOWN TO CAUSE CANCER IN LABORATORY ANIMALS.
CONTENT SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE.

BECAUSE IT ALL ENDS UP IN THE SAME PLACE EVENTUALLY.

House of Love: for sale

By PAMELA AUCOIN
Collegian Correspondent

Babe Rainbow
House of Love
Fontana

The House of Love's latest offering Babe Rainbow opens to the sound of an explosive guitar riff, and equally disturbing lyrics "Drown the soul, and through the eyes/You'll see a future, so cold and lonely/Hunt the tiger and kill the jungle/How money cooks inside us all."

Majestic, ringing guitars, (inviting comparisons to the late Smiths guitarist Johnny Marr) cleverly belie some of the material's dark undertones. At its best, Babe Rainbow shows House of Love at the top of its form, presenting us with catchy, Echo and The Bunnymen influenced pop songs. At its worst, it is merely generic pop that is pretty boring.

Singer/lyricist Guy Chadwick's lyrics work best when tackling the ugly, sadistic side of love in songs like "Crush Me," "Cruel" (the titles give you an idea), and especially sound great against the melodic, edgy guitar sounds.

Lines such as "Somebody got a hold of my head/put it into a can/and changed the way that I feel/somebody got a hold of my hand/and put it right through glass" evoke the kind of tortured feelings one feels when they are in a relationship that is harmful, but refuses to let go.

The listener may not realize that the slow, pretty ballad "Don't Fade Away" is about neglecting a lover, urging that person to never leave their side, and taking advantage of them later.

That combination also drives "High In Your Face", featuring the kind of memorable chorus you sing along to enthusiastically while driving with your friends. "Cruel," "Don't Fade Away" and "Feel" benefit from subtle, lush female background vocals.

The worst songs are the most pretentious, where Chadwick uses abstractions to describe concrete emotions wrapped around banal melodies.

Chadwick's strength is in his directness, not in delivering lines such as "I love surgery/not just chemistry," or "With cellophane/Go cover up your eyes."

"Girl with the Loneliest Eyes" and "Philly Phile" are so melodramatic and cliche-ed that you may be forced to reach for the fast forward button. When Chadwick sings "Call out the cops/Mop up the blood/Up with the sheep/and down with the lambs,/for you/Sail on the sea/but give me the wheel/Your culture's too young/You're just not the same as me", one begins to wonder if Chadwick's under a little too much stress.

Morbidity works sometimes, but sung in Chadwick's emotionless voice it sounds like he is desperate for filler lines. Still, Babe Rainbow should not be overlooked, because when it works, it works well.

COURTESY SUZI GIBBONS
"Babe Rainbow"

Alice in Chains get Dirty in new disc

By JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

Dirt
Alice In Chains
Columbia Records

With their second album, Dirt, Alice In Chains has established themselves as one of the elite bands to rise out of the Seattle scene. The 13 track Dirt is an dark album which pulls no strings, it hits hard from the first song, "Them Bones," to the last song, "Would".

The dark content of Dirt for the most part deals with the drug problems which Alice band members have had in the past. To get their points across, the band uses the familiar guitar-driven sound that they made so popular with their first album Facelift.

The aforementioned "Would" found success when it originally was released from the soundtrack to the movie Singles. "Would" starts off at a slow pace before the voices of lead singer Layne Staley and guitarist Jerry Cantrell take over and lead the song to it's frenzied finish.

The opener, "Them Bones," grabs you right away with Cantrell's guitar smoking from the outset. It stays that way from beginning to end in "Them Bones," and gets you ready for the rest of Dirt.

The drums of Sean Kinney constantly pound throughout Dirt, letting up not once. It is Kinney who combines with bassist Mike Starr to back the blistering pace of the guitar action.

The moody "Rain When I Die" is a grungy, tough song about estranged love with lyrics like, "Could she love me again/or will she hate me/Probably not, I know why, Can't explain me."

The song, "Sickman," has a Metallicaesque feel to it with a fast rythm switching back and forth with a piece with amore melodic tone to it.

The title track has an opening similar to Soundgarden's "Rusty Cage" before turning into a glum, guitar heavy song about drug abuse with lyrics like, "I

TURN TO DIRTY, PAGE 7

ALL THE NEWS THAT FITS. COLLEGIAN.

安城中國飯店
AMHERST
CHINESE FOOD
WE DO NOT USE "MSG"
• MANDARIN & SZECHUAN CUISINE
• HOMESTYLE COOKING
• FRESH VEGETABLES FROM OUR FARM
• EAT IN OR TAKE OUT
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
• OPEN 7 DAYS • NEWLY REMODELED
MASTERCARD & VISA ACCEPTED
253-7835 253-2813
62 MAIN STREET, AMHERST

ALLEY OOPS & Miller Lite Live Concert Series present: Time Trippers
Alley Oops 525 PLEASANT STREET NORTHAMPTON 584-2491
Get Your Fraternity & Sorority Party Reservations

CORRUPTION ON CAMPUS.
GEOPOLITICAL UPHEAVAL.
GOVERNMENTAL DISORDER.
HATCH FRY THEFT.
IF YOU NEED TO KNOW IT.
IF IT AFFECTS YOUR LIFE.
IF IT VIOLATES YOUR PERSONAL SPACE.
WE'VE GOT IT.
COLLEGIAN.

AL Di MeoLa
WheN: Nov. 10th 1992
with the WORLD Sinfonia TRIO
& special guest Andrea Ryabov Trio (From Russia)
WHeRe: Bowker Auditorium UMASS 8pm
FRoM: UPC Productions
PRICE: $13 UMASS $15 OTHERS
DaY of SHoW: $14 UMASS $16 OTHERS
tix at all the Fine Arts Center Box Office, UMASS

8th Annual...
MID 6 WAY
srirupa dasgupta paula sethre
susan minnich carol struve deborah santini missy therien
STUDENT UNION ART GALLERY
NOVEMBER 5 - DECEMBER 3
11 - 4 DAILY
Opening Reception November 5, 5-7
This exhibition is sponsored in part by the UMASS Arts Council.

School Ties fails to make critic's grade

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

School Ties is well-meaning, to be sure. It's an "Afterschool Special" given a fifties, clean-cut spin. But whatever its earnest, lofty intentions, School Ties so steeps its anti-predjudice message in predictable melodrama and stock characters that it nearly ridicules itself.

Brendan Fraser (fresh from Encino Man, ouch!) plays David Greene, a Jewish, working-class high school student who is recruited by an exclusive Massachusetts prep school for his senior year — just to play football in order to beat a rival school.

The group of elite seniors accept him almost immediately. They're an almost earthy display of WASP-y pretentions. Greene hides his faith instinctively, and the group bonds by singing rock and roll songs into hairbrushes and by scoring on the field (how cute).

David hides his Jewish heritige by putting his Star of David necklace in a Band-Aid box. You know sooner or later someone's gonna need a band-aid and then, whoops, the secret's out. When it does, his friends respond ignorantly (of course), snubbing and insulting their former friend.

Even his bubble-gum (and token in the worst sense of the word) girlfriend (Melrose Place's Amy Locane) decries that her friends will think low of her if she dates a Jewish boy.

But then School Ties departs from its original formula into a subplot that is a staple of nearly every boys/military school movie ever made: the dreaded and overused plot contrivance, the honor code. It becomes a convenient lesson in judging people that is about as deep as a 'very special episode' of "Saved By the Bell."

TURN TO TIES, PAGE W8

Actress Rydes her way to top

Part one of a Winona Ryder filmography: Heathers

By ADAM SCOTT ROBERTS
Collegian Staff

This is a three part series highlighting a trio of actress Winona Ryder's best films.

She's young, she's sexy, she's beautiful, and she's one of today's most sought after actresses. But before she heats up screens this Friday the 13th in the eagerly anticipated Bram Stoker's Dracula, let's take a stroll down movie lane with an actress named Winona.

The Petumala, California native hasn't always been known as Ms. Ryder; just before the release of 1986's Lucas, the Jewish actress changed her name from Winona Horowitz to the more Hollywoodesque Ryder.

It was only six years ago that the fifteen-year-old actress made her screen debut in Lucas. She had chopped hair and played the typical high school geek that played in the band. Every time her mouth opened she would be whining.

In love with Lucas (Corey Haim), Ryder came across as sympathetic to her fellow nerd-friend who wanted to be liked by all. Who ever thought that the "plain Jane" (so to speak) who screamed from the football bleachers "Throw it to Lucas!" would go on to play Veronica Sawyer in 1988's Heathers, "which remains the definite black comedy of Reagan-youth lust and greed."

Before the beautiful girls of West Beverly, and before her highly publicized romance with actor Johnny Depp, the bitch-clique of three Heathers and one Veronica stormed fictional Westerburg High in Sherman, Ohio.

Dressed like debutants with killer wardrobes, with a midwest version of Valley girl talk, the "swatch-dogs and diet-Coke heads" are members of the most powerful clique in school.

Winona Ryder is the only girl in the clique not named Heather. Instead, Ryder's Veronica is among the cheerleader babes that stomp on all the little people in high school. However, Veronica is sick of her friends and she feels that she must stop Heather Chandler (the leader of the clique) at any cost.

One of the most memorable scenes in the movie is when Veronica, er, vomits in a fraternity house hallway.

TURN TO RYDER, PAGE W8

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES

Actress Winona Ryder (r.), seen here with Keanu Reeves in the upcoming Bram Stoker's Dracula.

COLLEGIAN.

SONY • JVC • TECHNICS • AIWA • PANASONIC • SHARP • TDK • MAXELL
STEREO BLUES?
UNDERGROUND SOUND CAN HELP
UNDERGROUND SOUND has been an expert, cost effective repair service for home audio, car audio, video components and musical instrument amplifiers since 1981. We also sell new and used components and install car audio systems at competitive rates. Stop Procrastinating—Get It Fixed—Listen To Music—Be Happy.
UNDERGROUND SOUND • 103 NORTH PLEASANT STREET, AMHERST, MA • 253-9507
WE ARE LOCATED BENEATH PANDA EAST RESTAURANT

The Area's BEST CHINESE FOOD & SUSHI BAR
Enjoy the finest, freshest sushi, sashimi, tempura teriyaki and more at Panda East's new Sushi Bar. Also enjoy the finest Chinese Cuisine — Fresh, local specialties, low-priced luncheon specials and banquet facilities for your group or large party.
PANDA EAST
103 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
256-8923 • 256-8924

DOMINO'S PIZZA
NOBODY KNOWS LIKE DOMINO'S
How You Like Pizza At Home.
Amherst 256-8911
South Hadley 535-1111
HOURS: SUN-THURS 11AM to 2AM
FRI-SAT 11AM to 3AM
AVAILABLE FOR CARRY-OUT OR DELIVERY
FREE DELIVERY
VISA NOW ACCEPTING ON DELIVERY IN SELECTED AREAS
LUNCH SPECIAL
GOOD 11AM to 3PM
MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA+
ONE TOPPING+ 2 FREE COKES $5.99
ADDITIONAL TOPPINGS EXTRA ONLY
LARGE CHEESE PIZZA
ONE TOPPING PLUS 4 FREE COKES $7.99
ADDITIONAL TOPPINGS EXTRA ONLY
BUY A LARGE CHEESE PIZZA FOR THE PRICE OF A SMALL
MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA for $4.99 or 2 for $8.99
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA & GET SECOND OF EQUAL OR LESSER VALUE FOR ONLY $1.99
LARGE CHEESE PIZZA $5.99

Classic Santana plays the Paramount

By MICHELE BAKIS
Collegian Staff

COURTESY POLYGRAM

Carlos Santana will take you back in time at the Paramount.

It is rare to find a group retaining popularity for as long as Santana has. They started close to 30 years ago, becoming successful almost immediately. Carlos Santana's devotion to the guitar is clearly audible through his decades old music. Intense guitar and percussion are strong constants in Santana's work.

The group originally formed as the Santana Blues Band in 1966. Early in their career, this San Francisco based band performed for a crowd of half of a million at the Woodstock Festival in 1969. Other accomplishments include performances at the U.S. Festival, Live Aid, and Freedom Tour '87.

Blues for Salvador, Santana's last solo effort, was awarded a grammy for best rock instrumental performance in 1988. Santana has been awarded nine Bammies (Bay Area Music Awards) including best album for Moonflowers, best group, and Carlos Santana himself won "Musician of the Year."

As a child Carlos Santana followed his heart and strayed from the traditional music form taught to him by his father. Santana's distinctive style has been influenced by his exposure to vast musical styles as well as a desire to produce music that makes people dance. Carlos has a number of solo projects in addition to his work with the Santana band. He has recorded seven albums exclusive of the Santana band, working with such artists as Buddy Miles, Mahavishnu John Mclaughlin, and Turiya Alice Coltrane.

Santana has an impressive record of playing benefit concerts and reaching out to those in need. In the early seventies Santana, along with the Rolling Stones, played a benefit concert for earthquake victims in Nicaragua. Since then Santana has performed for Live Aid, Amnesty International Concert Tour, Crackdown, and has been involved in raising money for children in El Salvador as well as the recent earthquake victims in California.

In just over two decades, Santana has produced 20 albums with over half of them attaining platinum or gold status. Some of their most popular works include, Abraxas, Caravaseral, and Moonflower.

Santana's latest release, Milagro, has a wide range of styles. Milagro is the premiere album on Santana's custom label Guts and Grace. The album was recorded live as a tribute honoring the memories of Bill Graham and Miles Davis.

As Carlos notes, "It was of utmost importance to record as live as possible for the purpose of capturing the moment, raw, naked, and pure. There was no time to think, only to feel and project." Milagro appeals to a large number of listeners because of all of the different influences incorporated into the music. There are hints of jazz, blues, rock, Afro-Cuban, pop, gospel, as well as other music which defy categorization. All of these are infused with Carlos Santana's incredible guitar.

Santana will be performing on November 7 at 8 p.m. at the Paramount in Springfield.

■ Dirty

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5

from the walls/ and go crazy like you've made me."

Other songs which come across the same way "Dirt" does include "Godsmack", "Hate to Feel", and "Junkhead". All of these songs are dark and gloomy, and are heavy on the guitar side.

The best song on Dirt is undoubtedly "Down In A Hole". The song starts off beautifully, featuring the two voice harmony of Staley and Cantrell, before it becomes a full fledged rocker with the chorus sticking in your head for hours.

Alice In Chains with two deep, dark, and heavy albums to their credit, have proven that they are one of the best bands on the scene today. It is rare to have a band in these days which prefers substance over style, but that is exactly what Alice In Chains is all about. The band's songs are about their problems and real issues, nothing else. After you listen to Dirt, you feel as though your problems are not so bad, after all.

CTB CENTRAL TRAVEL
Amtrak
BUY YOUR AMTRAK TICKET FROM CENTRAL TRAVEL AND BE ELIGIGLE TO WIN A
FREE TICKET TO MONTREAL
ASK US ABOUT AMTRAK'S DAILY SERVICE DIRECT FROM AMHERST TO MONTREAL, ONLY $55 ROUND TRIP!
FROM THE AGENCY THAT CARES...
CENTRAL TRAVEL
549-4900
25A PRAY ST., AMHERST, MA
(IN THE D.H. JONES REAL ESTATE BLDG.)

the Vertex nightclub
FRI. NOV. 6
LOBSTERZ FROM MARZ
GRATEFUL DEAD TRIBUTE BAND
SAT. SELECTROCUTION
KARAOKE MONDAY
ROUTE 9 • HADLEY

Wanted
STUDENT
Legal Assistants
Application Deadline: Nov. 13th
• No experience necessary; paralegal training provided!
• Work directly with attorneys and clients
• Receive up to 15 academic credits
• Function as a paralegal in a busy law office
• Gain valuable, hands-on experience in the legal field
• Apply TODAY. Call Legal Services at 545-1995!

JOIN HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
256-6446
Be FIT FOR LIFE
You are invited to our 20th Anniversary Open House this Sat. & Sun. Refreshments served in the lounge 9am-4pm. Aerobic classes 10 & 11:15am Sat., 10 & 4pm Sun. Take a swim in our Olympic Size Pool or work out in one of our 3 Exercise Rooms. Open 8am-9pm.
MasterCard VISA

■ Ryder

CONTINUED FROM PAGE W6

The girls move outside and Heather says "I get you into a Remington Party. And how do you repay me? On the floor!"

Veronica yells out with such gut feeling "Lick it up baby. LICK it Up!" This was clearly Ryder's best line. She acts out her bottled up feelings with such "umph" that I'd bet you all wanted to just yell and cheer.

Heathers is a movie that gave us teenagers all those snobby, elitest and degrading quotes we'd all love to say, but were afraid to use. That's probably why we loved those "snoots" of Westerberg.

With each scene the plot twists and turns to make it a "Twizzler" film. The set-up suicides also known as "accidental deaths" are hysterical. (Did you ever find yourself singing that cheesy song "Teenage Suicide, Don't Do It" by fictional rock group Big Fun?)

The film also gave us Shannen Doherty (originally from TV's "Our House"). She played Heather Duke, the bitchiest of the three Heathers. I can only assume that Shannen drew from her role in Heathers and brought it to her Brenda Walsh character on "Beverly Hills, 90210.

Yet another career was to be launched by this film, the teen heartthrob himself, Christain Slater. Slater took his Jason Dean (J.D.) deranged view on life to his role in Pump up the Volume. In fact, that film should have been called J.D. After Westerberg because in Pump Up the Volume, it's really just the old J.D., corrupting a different school in a different state (just minus the Heather factor!)

But the best thing that Heathers gave us was a remarkable actress called Winona. Compared to none other than Natalie Wood, she continues to make her mark in Hollywood by making great films.

Next week, I'll take a look at two of Ryder's more recent efforts in Edward Scissorhands and Mermaids to explore a different side of an actress that gives new meaning to the word charisma.

ACRONYMBLE WINNERS

Happy Acronymble Day, boys and girls! It's that day, Thursday, when we pick the three best submissions for last week's letters.

FIRST PRIZE, the real ACRONYMBLE BOARD GAME, the very same entertainment system available in the University Store, goes to AIMEE AQUINO of 211 J.Q.A. for her nimble noodle, "Really Strong Rum Smells Xcellent. Come on down, Aim-ster and collect your prize from the illustrious Editor-in-Chief, Dan Wetzel. If you win twice you can win dinner with "Wonderbuns."

SECOND PRIZE, the ever fashionable Acronymble t-shirt which sports a meticulous design,in an alphabetical theme, on its cotton blend front and back sides, will be donned by DANIELLE GALVAGNI who submitted this gem, "Rhonda Sometimes Receives Skeletal X-rays." Come claim your prize, Danielle!

THIRD PRIZE, the Acromyble poster, goes to PAM O'CONNOR of Northampton who wrote the naughty noodle, "Raunchy Sister Roberta's Smut's X-rated."

Don't get weepy if you're entry wasn't chosen this week! Next week's letters are B,B,B,B, and B. Submit your noodles to 113 Campus Center, The Collegian Arts Desk. The deadline is Wednesday, November 11.

■ Ties

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6

And then, seemingly out of nowhere, comes a refreshing and even daring conclusion. Realistic and cleverly open-ended, it somewhat overcomes the melodrama that preceded it, yet not enough to make School Ties worth the journey there.

School Ties is inoffensive enough, and its message is duly noted, yet the film plays itself a little too safe (and erratically) for comfort. It seems to be giving into the notion that being politically correct equals being bland.

By not giving Fraser some character shading (a flaw or two, perhaps?), School Ties presents itself as a clear "me good, you bad" scenario. It vainly tries to be righteous and message-driven, yet it places itself too deeply in the normative, Hollywood fantasy structure, the same place that made prostitution seem downright glamorous in Pretty Woman.

Ultimately, School Ties' intelligent conclusion nearly saves the film. It left me wishing the entire film was as risky and loaded. It's gaping lack of character development (in the entire cast) that regrettably makes School Ties more well-meaning than well-made.

Grade: C

COURTESY JENNIFER BURDICK

MINIBUS — Five guys will do their thing at Sheehan's Cafe, Saturday, November 11 at 9 p.m. Tickets $3.

ONLY 28
COLLEGIANS
UNTIL WINTER BREAK.

Breakfast Special (8am-10am)
Scrambled Eggs - Home Fries - Toast
$1.49
SUNDAY-FRIDAY SPECIALS
(4:00pm - 9:00pm)
Meatball Grinder $2.65
Italian Dinner Specials
(4:00pm - 11:00pm)
Pizza Slice (Large Cut) 99¢
Large Plain or Pepperoni Pizza with your choice of a pitcher of soda or a pitcher of beer $8.75
Now Through November 24th at
the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful Newly remodeled Facility • Sunny Greenhouse • Sushi Bar • Beautiful Lounge with Big Screen TV.
Serving Lunch & Dinner 7 days a week • Lunch Specials served daily
"Largest Chinese Restaurant in Hampshire County"
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30AM-10PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS TILL 11PM
WITH COUPON 10% OFF DINING ROOM OR CARRY OUT • DINNER • ONLY
EVERY MONDAY THROUGH THURSDAY IN OUR LOUNGE 4PM-7PM. ENJOY Happy Hour $2.00 Appetizers from our special menu • $1.00 Draft Beer
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte. 9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte. 9 & University Dr. • 256-8800

AFFORDABLE CONDOMINIUMS AVAILABLE FOR RENT
• ONE
• TWO
&
• THREE BEDROOMS
THE BROOK AT AMHERST GREEN
• QUIET
• CONVENIENT
&
• FLEXIBLE
253-3834

Friday November 6, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 42

Partly sunny, highs near 50. Chance of showers Saturday.

Section:
Mark K. Anderson continues his quest to find the real story on what happened to the "New Monkees" in this week's Views. Page 7.

Sports:
The 12th ranked Water Polo team heads to Annapolis, MD this weekend to compete in the eastern championships. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN

WHO'S GOT THE PUCK — Nathan Lee a senior Geography major is on the defensive playing table hockey in the Student Union game room.

U.S. imposes tariffs to back American soybean farmers

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration, seeking to force trade concessions for American soybean farmers, announced Thursday that it was imposing punitive tariffs on $300 million worth of European imports.

The move would effectively triple the import price of a bottle of European white wine, and it threatened to set off a full-scale trade war between the United States and the 12-nation European community.

U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills announced that effective Dec. 5. the tariffs on a 750-milliliter bottle of white wine from Europe would rise from seven cents to 200 percent of the prices paid by importers.

American consumers would not likely feel the effects of the higher tariffs until January because many importers have stockpiled shipments in anticipation of such a move.

Several importers said that if the tariffs take effect virtually all European white wines would disappear from American store shelves. This is because the importers would cut off orders rather than risk being caught with expensive inventories they can't unload at triple the current price.

U.S. officials released a two page list of 240 wines that would be hit with the higher tariffs. The United States imported $270 million worth of white wine from Europe last year, with France supplying $125 million of that amount. Other big suppliers were Italy, $98 million, and Germany, $35 million.

Wines from Spain, Portugal and Greece were also targeted for the new 200 percent tariff.

In addition to the $270 million in white wine imports, Hills also announced that 200 percent tariffs would be imposed on $30 million in imports of wheat gluten, primarily used as a binder in pet food, and in rapeseed oil, a cooking oil.

Germany is the principal European exporter of wheat gluten and rapeseed oil to the U.S. market.

Hills said that she was delaying the effective date for the new tariffs to allow negotiators time for one last-ditch effort to resolve the underlying trade dispute involving American soybean sales to Europe.

"We have demonstrated extraordinary patience and we are open to further negotiations in the 30 days before the duties become effective," Hills told reporters.

"However, given the trade harm the United States is suffering, I must proceed with a compensatory trade action."

The administration claims the unfair subsidies cost American producers $1 billion a year in lost sales.

Hills expressed the hope that talks over the next month would succeed but also issued a new target list of $1.7 billion worth of other European products.

She said the administration would broaden the tariff targets beyond the original $300 million unless the negotiations succeed.

New Judicial Advisors provide info and support

By KELLY SPANG
Collegian Correspondent

The Judicial Advisors program is designed to provide students involved in judicial cases at the University with information on their rights and ensure that students are sufficiently prepared to represent themselves in a hearing.

The program is new to campus, established through a coordination of the Student Attorney General's Office and the Dean of Students Office.

"Advisors are available," says Paul Vasconcellos of the Dean of Students Office, "to make sure people have all the information they need."

About 20 students from many different majors volunteered to participate as advisors. Each advisor receives comprehensive training in campus discipline, the Code of Student Conduct, and procedures involved with hearings and prehearings.

"An advisor is a support person," says Deirdre Bannon, senior history and English major, head of the advisory program, "so that students won't be so nervous at a hearing.

Students may utilize advisors to prepare their opening and closing statements, but each student must represent him or herself at a hearing.

"All we can really do," explains Bannon, "is provide tips on how to prepare a case."

Advisors are not permitted to speak at hearings, but they may be present to make sure students do not incriminate themselves and to ensure that procedures are followed during the hearing. The only communication an advisor is allowed to have with a student during the hearing is to slip notes. No verbal communication is tolerated.

Many of the advisors are also on the hearing board, so they have an understanding of how the proceedings work. Real training for advisors Bannon believes will come with participating in actual counselling of students.

"Students' rights" Bannon says is why the program began. Many students go to hearings unprepared or unaware of their rights. Through judicial advisors, Bannon hopes students will become more aware and know that sanctions brought against

Turn to ADVISORS, page 4

Panel analyzes Clinton

Predicts no foreign policy changes

By GEORGE ZHU
Collegian Staff

One day after Bill Clinton was elected president, a panel of experts Wednesday predicted no major foreign policy changes in the Clinton administration.

Three political science professors from the five colleges joined the panel forum titled "The Election Results and U.S. Foreign Policy" at Smith College, which was sponsored by the Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies.

"Foreign policy played little role in this year's election," said Sue Peterson from Smith College. "And George Bush was unable to translate his overwhelming support over his foreign policy agenda into electoral victory."

Peterson said strategic and domestic economic imperativeness would operate very similarly on Bush or Clinton, setting the broad parameters of American foreign policy. This would narrow the foreign policy options available to Bill Clinton as he assumes the office of the president.

"The economic imperativeness of a new world order suggests in fact again the election of Bill Clinton makes very little difference in terms of explaining broad contours of American foreign policies," said Peterson.

However, Peterson pointed out there are three areas in Bill Clinton's foreign policy outlook that differ from what we would see in a second Bush term:

• Clinton's belief that economic security is the real basis of the national security, his idea of forming an Economic Security Council, and more importantly, Clinton's distrust of free trade, his "protectionist impulse."

"This will lead to a lot more protectionism, to a lot more closure of the American economy and potentially to conflict with our trading partners, particularly Japan," Peterson said.

• Clinton's internationalism. The lesson that Bill Clinton learned from the Vietnam war is to avoid fighting

Turn to PANEL, page 6

15 tourists detained in illegal immigration case

By SANDRA HERNANDEZ
Associated Press

BOSTON — A Malaysian tour guide accused of trying to smuggle illegal immigrants into the United States and 15 other travelers held for more than two weeks were ordered to leave the country Thursday after federal prosecutors dropped the charges.

"I'm ordering everyone in this case to be on flights out of this country today," said U.S. Magistrate-Judge Marianne Bowler.

Bowler said she was disturbed by the way prosecutors had handled the case.

"There have been a number of problems in this case," she said. "Time was of the essence in this case."

Chee Kheong Choong, and the 24-member tour group he led were detained as they arrived Oct. 21 at Logan International Airport. The tourists had planned to visit New York, Atlantic City and Philadelphia when they were taken into custody to ensure their testimony against Choong.

Some of the attorneys for the 15 tourists still in custody said their clients had been traumatized by their detention and were anxious to leave.

"My client feels bruised by the experience," said George Gormley, a lawyer for Ng Lai Kneng. "She was very concerned by being thrown into jail while she was 12,000 miles from home."

Others said their clients should never have been detained since they were witnesses.

"If my client was a white European, this would never have happened," said attorney Henry Owens. "These people were intimidated, they were harassed, they were threatened."

Choong's lawyer, Michael Natola criticized INS officials for their handling of the case.

"There was so little evidence of wrong doing," said Natola.

"The agency was a legitimate agency that had an outstanding record in Malaysia. My question of the government is if this was an illegal scheme that had been going on for years why wasn't it discovered sooner?"

"My client told me last night that after having experienced American justice first hand he was never coming back to the U.S.," Natola said.

U.S. Attorney A. John Pappalardo's office did not immediately comment on why the charges were dismissed.

The 15 remaining tourists and Choong were expected to board a flight out of Logan International Airport Thursday evening.

The case has prompted criticism from those who say the case is racially motivated and accuse INS officials of being over zealous.

But INS officials dismiss the allegations saying "there is not a racial issue here," said Timothy Whelan, deputy director for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Boston. "We have records to show we've had many occasions where people were detained because they were not valid visitors."

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Feliner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Friday, November 6

Announcement — The Early Childhood program is now accepting applications for admission to its N-3 certification program. Applications are now available in the hallway outside of room 109, Furcolo Hall. Please call Nancy Burnett at 545-0534 to arrange for an interview.

Panel Discussion — "Race, Gender and Sexuality in the Newsroom" will be discussed with a distinguished group of panelists and moderator Chancellor Richard O'Brien. The event is from 2:30 to 5 p.m. in C. C. 163c.

Announcement — Spring '93 pre-registration guides will be available Mon, Nov. 9, 9 a.m.-4p.m. in the 2nd floor lobby of Whitmore.

Sabbath Dinner — There will be an informal Sabbath dinner at Hillel House at 6 p.m. A $3 donation is requested.

Announcement — The Department of Computer and Information Science has had an official name change to the Department of Computer Science. The department's acronym, which had been COINS for the last 20 years, will appear as CMP-SCI in all references.

Meeting — Muslim Students Association will be holding Jumaa Salat at 12:30 p.m. in C. C. 917.

Saturday, November 7

Author Appearance — Author Barbara Cooney will be signing her book, Emily. The book signing will take place at 2:30 pm at the Jeffrey Amherst Bookshop.

Shabbat Meal — The Chabad House will be holding a service and meal at 10 a.m.

Sunday, November 8

Learning Group — The Chabad House hosts weekly Jewish women's learning groups every Sunday at 8 pm. All women are welcome to join.

Honor — Author Maureen Howard will be honored for the publication of her new novel, Natural History. She will be honored at 3 p.m. at Jeffrey Amherst Bookshop.

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day

Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

• A woman reported that she got off a PVTA bus at Massachusetts Avenue at approximately 9 a.m. on Wednesday and was grabbed on the shoulder by a man, according to police. The woman then fled to her room in Kennedy Residence Hall.

• Homophobic graffiti was discovered on an elevator panel in Brown Residence Hall on Wednesday morning, police said.

• A man received a derogatory remark on his voice mail system Wednesday evening. Police said the call was discovered at 11 p.m.

• University police are investigating the theft of a strobe light from Field Residence Hall on Wednesday. Staff from the dormitory reported the theft at 8 p.m., according to police. The light is worth $37.

• A man reported the theft of a fifty dollar bill from his room in Coolidge Residence Hall on Wednesday at 3:20 p.m., according to police.

• Police are investigating the theft of a woman's wallet from her room in Mary Lyon Residence Hall which occurred on Thursday morning. Police value the wallet at $180.

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
FRIDAY & SATURDAY
9 til 1
DANCING
No Cover
Friday November 13th
Holyfield-Bowe Fight
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

Creative Computers
Specializing in Collegiate Computer Needs!
GUARANTEED LOWEST PRICES!!
386SX-25MHz System - $779
• 386SX-33MHz • 486DX-33MHz
• 386DX-40MHz • 486DX-50MHz
In Amherst: 256-6474

the Vertex nitecafe
FRI. NOV. 6
LOBSTERZ FROM MARZ
GRATEFUL DEAD TRIBUTE BAND
SAT. SELECTROCUTION
KARAOKE MONDAY NIGHTS
ROUTE 9 • HADLEY • 586-4463

The Collegian–
What a party.
If you would like to come and have some fun stop by the Campus Center, room 113 and find out more about it.

Amherst Laundromat
Open 7 days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9)
Amherst • 253-5072

For the Serious Student
• Quiet Condo Living
• Convenient
• Affordable
• Flexible
THE BROOK
253-3834

DOMINO'S PIZZA
NOBODY KNOWS LIKE DOMINO'S
How You Like Pizza At Home.
Amherst 256-8911
South Hadley 535-1111
HOURS: SUN-THURS 11AM to 2AM
FRI-SAT 11AM to 3AM
AVAILABLE FOR CARRY-OUT OR DELIVERY
FREE DELIVERY
NOW ACCEPTING ON DELIVERY IN SELECTED AREAS
LUNCH SPECIAL
GOOD 11AM to 3PM
MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA+
ONE TOPPING+ 2 FREE COKES $5.99
ADDITIONAL TOPPINGS EXTRA ONLY
LARGE CHEESE PIZZA
ONE TOPPING PLUS 4 FREE COKES $7.99
ADDITIONAL TOPPINGS EXTRA ONLY
BUY A LARGE CHEESE PIZZA FOR THE PRICE OF A SMALL
MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA for $4.99 or 2 for $8.99
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA & GET SECOND OF EQUAL OR LESSER VALUE FOR ONLY $1.99
LARGE CHEESE PIZZA $5.99

Local News

TOM HALLER / COLLEGIAN

HERE GOES NOTHING – Senior Political Science major Steve Melanson prepares for his first parachute jump in the UMass Sport Parachute Club at Turner's Falls Aiport.

More graffiti written in a residence hall

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts police said they found homophobic graffiti in one of Brown Residence Hall's elevators on Wednesday morning. Brown's janitorial staff found homophobic and racist graffiti on the 3rd and 5th floors on Oct. 10, police said.

Because the graffiti was usually written late at night, the janitors would erase it when they discovered it, according to a Brown resident.

Although Andree Castillo, a junior psychology major, has lived in Brown for over a year, he said he had not seen homophobic graffiti occurring in Brown since this semester. Castillo said he is bewildered by these written attacks.

"I think there is one group of people causing it," Castillo said.

And, Todd Bates, a senior philosophy major, also said he was surprised it happened in his dorm. Bates said he thinks perhaps it is some new students, who might feel threatened by a homosexual lifesyle.

"There is nothing threatening about the LGBA [Lesbian Gay Bisexual Association] or a homosexual lifestyle. This is probably their first experience," Bates said. "I think [the graffiti in general] reflects themes picked up by the Republican party. If a whole party can have those ideas from the religious right, there must be a lot of homophobia."

Another Brown resident, Jed Jankowski a freshman geology major, said he was unaware of the graffiti incidents, but said the University has a responsibility to educate students.

"The only way to stop something like that is to change students' attitudes, but that is very hard to do," Jankowski said.

"What is normal in [students'] hometowns could be racist, homophobic, and sexist here."

Demetvis Chavalaubous, a senior hotel restaurant and travel administration major and a resident assistant on the 7th floor of Brown, said the University needs to educate students.

"No matter what kind of security you use, it will not matter," Chavalaubous said. "You need more education so people know it is wrong."

Liberal arts and the real world

Panel discusses degree's options and opportunities

By STACY MALONE
Collegian Staff

A liberal arts degree offers a strong curriculum of knowledge for people working in the real world, according to a panel of UMass alumni who spoke Thursday night at 8:00 p.m. in the Campus Center.

The event, titled "Liberal Arts in the Market Place: Options and Opportunities" was sponsored by the Department of Humanities and Fine Arts and was facilitated by the department's dean, Lee Edwards.

Jon Hensleigh graduated from UMass in 1981 with a history degree, went to law school, worked on Wall Street and then made a transition into a career as a screenwriter and producer.

Hensleigh said to the audience of approximately 30 people that instead of specializing in a particular field it is more important to get a whole groundwork of knowledge.

"By studying a very broad curriculum you can compile a group of personal characteristics that will help you later on in life," Hensleigh said. "You have a four year block of time in an intellectual environment where you can think about things and learn. You will never have such an opportunity again."

As a graduate of UMass in 1960 from the Journalism Department with honors, Richard Bresciani used his writing and broadcasting skills from the Collegian and WMUA to get various jobs in the sports field and then the

Turn to DEGREE, page 6

Lecturer examines Clinton's stance on gay rights

By ROBERT FERREIRA
Collegian Correspondent

The election of Gov. Bill Clinton to the presidency and its effect on gay rights, was discussed at a workshop yesterday in the Campus Center.

Margaret Cerullo, a social sciences professor from Hampshire College gave a lecture titled "Who's in the White House? Does it matter? A radical queer agenda for the 90s," as part of Bisexual, Gay and Lesbian Awareness Days. Cerullo is also a lesbian and gay rights activist in the Boston area.

Her lecture examined the stance of Clinton and Gore on gay, lesbian and bisexual issues and what their plans may be to pave the road for gay rights. Cerullo said she feels Clinton and Gore will give new hope to the issue of gay rights.

"I think we will see that Clinton will provide stimulation to the government on gay rights," said Cerullo. "I think we can look forward to seeing gay men, lesbians and bisexuals being appointed to White House positions."

"My main question is whether or not our humanity will be valued outside of the gay community?" Cerullo said.

The result of two specific ballot questions in Colorado and Oregon is also a major concern, Cerullo said.

The Colorado ballot question passed and rescinded any gay rights ordinances in that state.

The Oregon initiative failed but had it passed it would have gone even further to restrict gay rights. It would have required school systems to teach that gay rights was immoral and perverse. Library material on gay rights would have been removed and all state funded monies for gay rights and gay right groups would have been done away with.

"This would have meant that gays, lesbians and bisexuals would have been denied from jobs," said Cerullo. "This is discrimination of our rights."

"The scary thing was that 43% of the Oregon public voted for putting the question into action," Cerullo said. "There is a lot of discontent in the country."

Cerullo referred to recent gay-bashings in Colorado and Oregon. In Oregon, a woman was severely beaten because, in the words of her assailant, she looked like a "dyke," and a bomb was thrown through the window of a house killing several gay men.

Cerullo chronicled past "wedge issues" of Presidential campaigns and how they have affected the outcome of previous elections.

"The Republicans were always able to win because they created wedge issues that shifted Democrats to vote Republican," Cerullo said. "Bush and Quayle's wedge issue on family values backfired."

Cerullo said the Republicans were unable to focus homophobia as a wedge issue because they could not create an image of gay people to which voters would respond negatively.

She attributed the lack of wedge issues in the '92 election as a reason for the failure of the Republicans.

Though the Clinton and Gore ticket provides new hope, Cerullo said, "I'm still scared. There is a future of homophobia and I think it's big."

"With Clinton and Gore," Cerullo added, "Hopefully we will have a climate that's more tolerable and less hateful."

Hillel House provides Jewish residences

By ANDREA SPITZER
Collegian Correspondent

The time to choose rooms for the spring semester is arriving soon. If you are looking for a community type atmosphere in which to reside, you may want to check out the Hillel House. The Hillel House is located on 388 N. Pleasant St., a mere two minute walk to campus. The top floor of the Hillel House hosts the Jewish Living Community, or the JLC, which is a residence for 26 students.

The JLC is open to five-college students of all faiths interested in Jewish awareness issues and experiences. A priority is given to UMass students. The sense of community is enhanced by Friday night shabbat dinners, study breaks, and periodic community meetings. There is a kitchenette (dairy only) and a lounge with a TV and a VCR. The residents usually form a close-knit groups, and a friendly community is formed.

While wanting to live a Jewish community is a common thread that attracts students to the JLC, the students' backgrounds are quite diverse. Some students come from religiously observant homes of all sorts; some are secular, some are more involved in culture. The JLC has been home to students from France, Iran, Israel, and the former Soviet Union.

Debbie Charnot, from Cherry Hill N.J. says that she heard about the JLC from a

Turn to HILLEL, page 6

Jolly Roger is pirated

Flag flies in the face of controversy

By PAUL PRECHT
Collegian Staff

The long-running dispute over the flying of the "Jolly Roger" flag over the Butterfield dormitory at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst has turned political and ugly.

The pirate flag with skull and cross bones has been flown intermittently from the dormitory's TV antenna since last spring. University housing officials have removed the flag on at least two occasions, citing a university policy that prohibits flying unauthorized flags over any UMass building.

University policy also prohibits student access to the dormitory's steep slate roof, according to Matt Oullett, area coordinator for Orchard Hill and Central residence halls.

At one point a flag appeared over Butterfield bearing a crude sexual insult against Oullett.

On Monday, Tana G. Henderson, a former resident assistant in Butterfield, posted a letter in the dormitory saying the flag "has become a source of frustration and discomfort for me and others on this campus."

Henderson posted a picture of the "Jolly Roger" being used as the symbol of the Aryan Youth Movement, a white

Turn to JOLLY ROGER, page 4

State study seeks out a megaplex site

By ROBERT W. TROTT
Associated Press

BOSTON — Seven Massachusetts sites would be suitable for a new stadium, according to a state study released Thursday, but only Boston and Cambridge could accomodate a "megaplex" stadium and convention center.

Stephen Tucco, the state's secretary of economic affairs, said Massachusetts is losing big revenues from large conventions and shows because most conventions are medium-sized.

"I don't have any favorites," Tocco said of the sites. "I just want the damn thing so bad."

A feasibility study by Coopers and Lybrand weeded out 14 other proposed sites because they failed to meet at least one criteria: no wetlands, hazardous waste or other environmental problems; quick access to interstate and mass transit routes; adequate land size and configuration, and "compatibility with surrounding developments."

The study said all seven sites would be considered for final approval, but only the Boston location would be seriously considered for developing up to 500,000 square feet of exhibition or convention space.

The Boston sites are the State Hospital site in Mattapan and the South Bay area, a 42-acre plot at the intersection of the Massachusetts Turnpike and the Southeast Expressway for a domed stadium.

Officials have estimated that construction and land purchases for a 65,000 to 75,000 seat domed stadium would cost $150 million to $170 million, depending on whether it has a retractable roof.

The study said that in addition to becoming the new home of the National Football League's New England Patriots, a domed stadium would host up to 22 other events a year, including concerts, college sports and motor sporting events.

Other sites under consideration include:

—An East Cambridge site, called "Northpoint," which is 46 acres between the McGrath Highway and Interstate 93.

—336 acres that includes Foxboro Stadium and Foxboro Race Track.

—A Framingham location is at intersection of the Turnpike and Route 9.

—65 acres in Lynn between Route 1-A and Lynn Harbor, north of the Saugus River.

—About 86 acres in downtown Worcester between Interstate 290 and the Providence and Worcester railroad tracks.

Sam DeSimone, a Worcester attorney serving as spokesman for a group backing a stadium there called the Worcesterdome Group, said he didn't think the state could afford to build a "megaplex."

"That kind of complex is really a difficult thing to achieve, especially in these economic times, even for Boston," he said.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

JUST A SCRATCH — Jessica Rechischalfer, a graduate of Hamshire's Medieval Studies program suits up for a duel at a Society for Creative Anachronism meeting in the Campus Center last weekend.

Rafkin gives reading for BGLAD

By ADA MICHELLE LUGO
Collegian Correspondent

A prize-winning lesbian author gave a reading from her new book last night at Food for Thought Books as part of Bisexual, Gay and Lesbian Awareness Days.

Louise Rafking read from her recent book "Queer and Pleasant Danger" and gave the audience a taste of her smart writing and charismatic approach.

The small group had the chance to enjoy the one-hour reading which emphasized the lives of gay men and women but also touched on common issues such as growing up, politics, and relationships between families.

Rafkin started the reading with a story based on the changes in the unfriendly and indifferent manner gay men and lesbian women view each other.

The author comically narrates the conversation between a lesbian who is informing her two gay male friends of "Michigan, where women go to return to their own true selves as naked nymphs," and where men are driven off the property by the chant of 10,000 women screaming, "Man on the land!"

Although the story was humorous, Rafkin also incorporated the serious issue of prejudice between gays and lesbians. Rafkin said that for many decades both lesbian and gay communities have remained separate and uncaring to one another with the male homosexuals taking most of the attention from the public eye in fighting their battle for acceptance in society.

The author said she is concerned for the large but "invisible" community of lesbian women who, "are always kicking up our heels making trouble" but whose presence is rarely acknowledged and whose voice is still greatly unheard.

"Queer and Pleasant Danger" has sensitive moments in which the author describes the delicate nature of human feelings. Love, hatred, sharing, selfishness, understanding and jealousy, are all present in the stories Rafkin admits are somewhat inspired by her own life.

The reading of her second story included the familiar tragedy of a person who, when being left behind by their lover of two years for another, fights feelings of depression and rejection.

The sad story was of a woman discarded by her lesbian lover, whom she was infatuated with, and the ironic way she uses a pet turtle given to her by her mother to find comfort.

The story brought many symphathetic sighs from the audience whom many could sympathize with the lonely heroine.

By the end of the night, the audience was eager to catch a few more glimpses of "Queer and Pleasant Danger." Rafkin also stayed around to answer questions, and accept compliments.

Rafkin has been writing for many years and has taken part in numerous "coming out" workshops for young college students.

Rafkin said she encourages young women and men to come out with their sexuality learn to be happy with who they are.

■ advisors

continued from page 1

them are serious. Any sanctions administered to a student will remain on his or her record for seven years.

The University must prove a student is guilty; all students have the option to attend a hearing to present their side of the case. Many students, however, are unaware of this option and neglect to make use of it.

"RDs are manipulating students," Bannon says, "by having them sign administrative agreements without students knowing their full rights."

By signing an administrative agreement, a student is admitting he or she is guilty even if there is a chance of getting off of the charges. Bannon wants students to be aware that they do not have to sign the agreement and have the option to a hearing.

Along with students cited as violating the Code of Student Conduct, advisors will also help complaining students prepare their case. "We take both sides," Bannon stresses.

The Judicial Advisors office is located in 433 Student Union. Office hours are uncertain right now, but students with questions are encouraged to stop by between 4-9 p.m. Monday through Friday. In the next couple weeks, there will be a schedule of advisors' hours posted on the door to let students know when someone will definitely be available for advising.

There is no phone in the office yet, but any student with questions can call the Student Government's Office 545-0341 or the Dean of Students Office 545-2684. Once a phone is installed, Bannon suggests that students call for an appointment rather than just stopping by the office.

■ Jolly Roger

continued from page 3

supremacist group, to explain her objection to the flag.

On Tuesday, Henderson found her letter covered with graffiti, some of it of a crude sexual nature signed by Marc Randaza, the Butterfield house president.

Randaza said the sexual insults are "my trademark" and "never directed against anyone in particular." Randaza called the flag a symbol of "defiance" to housing policies and social norms. Accusations of any racist motivation in flying the flag are "absurd," he said.

Henderson called the reaction to her letter "hostile" and "immature." She does not believe that the students who flew the flag were aware of its use as a racist symbol.

Ironically, both Henderson and Randaza say they had formed a friendship during last spring and summer.

Oullett said the graffiti scrawled on Henderson's letter "completely shuts down discourse." By acting with "civility" towards one another, he said, students can create a "climate of dialogue."

recycle this Collegian

MEDITATION
POWER
&
ENLIGHTENMENT

JOURNEY TO THE CENTER OF PERCEPTION
WITH THE POWER OF YOUR MIND

Course Designed for Ages
29 & Younger
FREE

Saturdays, 11AM - 12PM
The Unitarian Universalist Church
121 North Pleasant Street
Amherst

Instructor - Chitananda

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Clinton and women's rights

Goodbye Reaganomics, adios George "GulfWar" Bush, welcome President-elect Bill Clinton and Vice President-elect Al Gore. For the first time in twelve years there's a Democrat in the White House — and it's about time. Clinton and Gore, produced by the baby boomer generation, are perhaps the most dynamic duo to hit the White House in ages (sorry, George and Dan just didn't quite cut it!).

Stephanie
EISENBERG

With the Democrats finally in office, the United States is subject to many positive changes. The days of presidents with amnesia and vice presidents with spelling problems are behind us. One of the most profound changes will be in the issues that affect women, as the Clinton/Gore ticket represents modern ideals, rather than the old-fashioned, idealistic rituals favored by President Bush. Now America can look ahead toward rebuilding this great nation.

The Clinton/Gore administration fully supports rights for women, and will be one of the first administrations to incorporate their personal beliefs into the legal spectrum. Clinton seems to have a real understanding of the problems women face in this country and he offers more than a plausible solution to ameliorate them. He agrees that in today's horrible economy (special thanks to Ronnie and George), it is necessary for women to work in order to make ends meet. His "family policy" is a plan that allows women to remain in the workforce while easing their financial burdens through various tax credits.

Clinton also supports a child day care program, stressing that a mandated program will not only alleviate much of women's tensions in the job place, but will also provide children with a better start to a good education. By creating an adequate child care program, he enables women to remain in the work force, while simultaneously eroding the age old stereotype that women belong in the home front to care for the children.

Clinton also supports a family leave program stressing the importance of both maternity and paternity leave for a specified period of time. This program will benefit women in two ways. It will allow women to take a leave of absence from their job without the fear of losing it, as well as help to stress that women are not the only ones responsible for child care.

Although he also takes a firm stand on many other issues affecting women, such as gender discrimination and sexual harassment, perhaps the most controversial issue is abortion. He supports every women's right to choose, regardless of her ability to pay, and states that violating this is a fundamental violation of privacy. Abortion lies at the root of discrimination against women. Having a leader who realizes this is the first step toward alleviating all the barriers opposing women.

Bill Clinton and Al Gore bring about a much needed change to the White House. Their ideals and enthusiasm generated so much support that they easily won in a landslide of electoral votes and sent that Republican elephant packing. Perhaps poor George, his elephant, and his sidekick Dan can put their experience running a three ring circus to use, and join Ringling Bros. After all, clowns belong in the circus, not the White House.

Stephanie Eisenberg is a UMass student.

'Separate but equal' is not the solution to political salvation

In his Black Affairs page article titled "Who will serve as our next president?" Martin F. Jones [Collegian, Nov. 4] goes far wide of the mark when aiming at a prescription to remedy Black political disenfranchisement.

I agree with much of his historical interpretation of the African-American struggle, but when he calls the death penalty "a policy that clearly aids the extermination of" the Black race, he reveals himself as patently irrational and flatly paranoid. The death penalty aids in the extermination of abnormally brutal criminals. To assume that the death penalty is engineered to produce Afro-American genocide is to say that all Blacks are violent criminals. I can't believe that. Do you believe that, Mr. Jones?

Furthermore, Clinton is right in opposing affirmative action as a clearly racist policy. It is as wrong to grant employment on the basis of race as it is to deny it. I would give a job to any man, Black or White, if and only if he was the best man for the job, just as I'd expect a man of any race to hire me only under that same condition, regardless of any race.

When he concluded that political salvation for Blacks would come at the hands of no established party, I thought I saw a flash of brightness and rationality at the end of the piece. But he veered clear off the road in claiming that political separation, an exclusively Black political party, and a schism between Black America and the rest of the nation would bring equality. History shows the false promise in the slogan "separate but equal," but this is precisely what Mr. Jones promotes.

Equality and harmony among races will come through independent politics, but through cooperation, not a racial schism. It will come when like-minded people of all races get over themselves and work together to achieve blindness to race, and are willing to say, "Before I am Black/White/Asian/Native American, I am human."

Bradley P. Heintz
Southwest

Hungry new Republicans need to emerge for '96

Don't bother me. Yes, I'm still depressed.

I was going to write 60 lines of nasty stuff, but as time permits (my plane to Nova Scotia leaves this afternoon), I will try to keep this short and put a positive spin on the election.

Michael
MORRISSEY

I was shaken when the reality hit me that our president had been defeated. The last time I was so upset was the Kentucky-UMass game at the Spectrum last March. I wanted to write about how idiotic, moronic and generally stupid this country's voters are, but I would rather follow the example of President Bush and be humble in defeat.

When George Bush conceded around 11:10 p.m. Tuesday night, he showed a side few had seen before. Like a true leader, he was gracious in defeat. One of the strongest themes in his speech was his plea for the youth of the United States to move up and take control of politics.

"Don't lose your idealism, don't lose your drive," Bush pleaded. I really took that to heart for some reason. Ironically, Ross Perot said the same thing. It's funny because the two candidates were defeated at least partly because of their age, and in Bush's case, his stagnant administration.

Bill Clinton won in part because he was a fresh young face who had the youth behind him more than the other candidates. Why would Bush court the youth, especially during one of the most important speeches in his life?

Bush has always been a great American, and he realized Tuesday night that his political career is over. Yet he wants to see hungry new Republicans emerge, to fill the void of the old guard. He, like others, feels a new Republicanism can capture the hearts and minds of Americans everywhere.

The Democrats have it. While I am repulsed to say it, I have a shred of admiration for those people around campus who feel strongly enough to defend their beliefs our support a club, be it the pagans, the Radical Student Union, or the Democrats. When I watch these people demonstrate, it's sort of like a morbid curiosity. What these people believe in makes me sick, but they realize the importance of taking a political stand and fighting for what they believe in, even if it is unpopular.

If we want to take our country back, we need more young conservatives stepping up to the political battleground. It makes me sick when someone says they supported Bush but didn't vote for him, or tells me how conservative they are yet never act.

I do not think President Bush was asking too much. I know I am not. The young Republican students on this campus and in this country need to make themselves more visible, they need to stand up and say, "I hate what's happening to my campus (or country)." That's all. Contribute. Vote. Become more involved in politics.

Slick Willie was elected on the economy, and when it rebounds (and it will, as any economist will tell you), he and his wife will take credit for it, making 1996 an even more important election year. Most of you will have graduated by then (except the professional protesters, who are hopeless), and you will not only have to make a decision, you will have to make a difference.

We need to combat these "new Democrats" with our "new Republicans." I grew up adhering to the morals and beliefs of one of the greatest presidents of all time, Ronald Reagan. What he stood for is gone, but we all have to make a decision as we get ready to marry, have kids and enter the working world. We have to decide which set of values we will pass on to our children, Ronald Reagan's or Bill Clinton's.

Even in defeat, President Bush inspired me, showing how great a leader he is. I hope I was not alone. Anyway, I just cancelled my trip to Nova Scotia. I am too busy to go now. I'm preparing for 1996.

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian columnist.

Jeffries' visit a chance to learn

As a Jew, I understand much of the controversy surrounding Leonard Jeffries, but it its crucial that UMass students, especially us Jewish students, take time out and critically think about our options.

One option is to see Jeffries as solely an anti-Semite and fight and protest to keep him off campus. The second is to write him off as not having anything positive to say and to just boycott his speech. I would like to offer a third. This is the option of learning something from him and this whole controversy. But before I discuss this option, I would just like to say a few things.

American Jews need to understand that although we may deal with plenty of anti-Semitism and hatred towards us, we must recognize that we have in many ways assimilated into a white, capitalist system that has been inherently racist towards African-Americans and many others. I know that in the past and even in the present this system has also been unfair to the Jews, but I hope that we can admit that many of us, over the years, have taken advantage of, or at least benefitted from our "white-skinned priveledge".

Along with this has come a widescale abandonment of the African-American struggle by Jewish Americans (and many other white-skinned ethnic groups). Why do you think so many Jews have lived the "American Dream" while most African-Americans are still fighting the American Nightmare even though the majority of us Jews came to this country hundreds of years later? Our assimilation and too often silence, makes many of us partly responsible for the institutional and blatant racism in this country. As a result of this, there has been at times great resentment towards Jews (and others) by the African-American community.

I do not wish to apologize for, nor approve of Jeffries' anti-Semitic remarks but perhaps these remarks are in some of the racist remarks towards Palestinians and other Arabs that Zionist speakers have made on this campus.

This somewhat leads us to our third option, which is to go hear Jeffries speak, and to ask questions, and to share with him and the African-American Community our concerns, and to learn from each other. Maybe us Jewish students should decide that it is time we listen to a variety of concerns and opinions coming from the African-American community, including Jeffries', and in return the African-American students will take time to hear the varitey of concerns and opinions we have. It is also important for us to realize that just as not every Jewish speaker, whether it be Leonard Jeffries or Clarence Thomas, speak for all African-Americans.

Who knows? Maybe many Jews will appreciate some things Jeffries has to say and maybe many African-Americans will be really turned off by him. We must take this opportunity to not only point out other people's anti-Semitism, but to come to terms with our own racism and what assimilating into a racist society means. Most of all, let's take this opportunity to listen, think and share so we may all understand each other a little better.

Mark Federman
Amherst

This letter was signed by 9 students

Lawsuit against tobacco company is dismissed

By FRED PIERETTI
Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. — A judge Thursday dismissed the landmark Cipollone lawsuit against the cigarette industry at the request of attorneys for the family of a woman who claimed she died from smoking.

U.S. District Judge Dickinson R. Debevoise dismissed the case with the consent of the family, said one attorney for the family, Alan Darnell. He referred questions to attorney Marc Z. Edell, who referred questions to senior managing partner Henry Larner, who did not immediately return calls seeking comment.

A court clerk said the case was dismissed with prejudice, which means the lawsuit cannot be filed again. The judge's order did not elaborate.

Richard Daynard, a law professor at Northeastern University in Boston and Chairman of the Tobacco Products Liability Project, which encourages lawsuits against tobacco companies as a health issue, said dropping the Cipollone lawsuit would not deter future legal action against the tobacco industry.

The Cipollone decision "is still the law of the land." Daynard said, adding that he is hosting a seminar this weekend in Boston with about 20 potential plaintiffs in tobacco liability cases.

The case was sent back to federal court in Newark in June by the U.S. Supreme Court, which ruled that a 1965 federal law requiring warning labels on cigarette packages did not shield the companies from all lawsuits based on state personal injury laws. The 7-2 ruling also said smokers need to do more than prove that cigarette advertising and promotions tend to minimize the health hazards.

Edell said at the time that the ruling would likely generate more lawsuits against cigarette companies despite the court's ruling that smokers must convince juries they are not primarily at fault.

But Charles Wall, associate general counsel for Phillip Morris Companies, Inc. in New York, said Thursday the high court's ruling earlier this year made suing cigarette companies more "time consuming and expensive."

"The litigation is complex, lengthy, and difficult," Wall said.

■ degree

continued from page 3

position as Director of Publicity for the Boston Red Sox.

"I feel the liberal arts helped me so I wasn't focused in one area and gave me the opportunity to take a lot of courses that I liked," Bresciani said, "I could benefit from the more knowledge I could get."

Bresciani said to the audience to show what they want to do by getting experience, making contacts and meeting a wide variety of people who can only open doors later on.

Edward Fouhy graduated in 1956 as a history major, became a Marine, worked for WBZ TV and was involved in radio and television production.

He spent three years working for the CBS News, is the founder and president of Concorde Communications in Washington, D.C. and worked on this year's series of presidential debates.

Fouhy said as a journalist he covered all the great events, such as, Watergate and the Vietnam War and it was his liberal arts background that made him interested in seeing and covering important historical events.

"When one is a journalist, one continues to draw on the disciplines learned in the liberal arts," said Fouhy. "I think one spends, as a journalist, a lot of time looking at much that is ugly, not just in war but in Washington. It is the liberal arts that teaches us to appreciate the beauty and gives us the knowledge to appreciate it."

Fouhy said, "One does not have to wish for more than a mundane job. Liberal arts teaches us to reach for the stars. We must reach for the stars."

■ panel

continued from page 1

the wrong war. Peterson said she believes Clinton will be "an internationalist and even interventionist president, although that's certainly not something dramatically different from the early Bush years."

• Clinton's human rights agenda. Peterson cited Clinton's criticism of the U.S. foreign policy toward China in the aftermath of Tiananmen, his criticism of the Bush administration's inaction or hesitancy to provide funding to the republics of the former Soviet Union and his criticism of Bush's inaction in Bosnia.

"I think Clinton has a real commitment at least at some level to human rights and democracy as a basic principle that foreign policy should pursue," Peterson said.

Peterson said the "biggest and immediate shift in the American foreign policy after Clinton assumes office will be U.S. policy toward China."

James DerDerian of UMass agreed. He added while Clinton will be hard on China, he'll be "much softer on Israel, and Syria is going to get a lot pressure from Clinton."

Michael Klare, director of PAWSS, said: "If Bush remained president, the countries that would have to worry are countries that look or feel like Soviet Union or Warsaw Pact, or authoritarian centralized regimes like Iraq, Iran and North Korea, while the countries that would have to worry a Clinton era are those whose problems are more post-cold war than cold war like."

■ Hillel

continued from page 3

friend who was very enthusiastic about it. Debbie says "I like the close-knit community and the Jewish atmosphere. It's great having the opportunity to have Friday-night dinners together, cook together, and just be close to a lot of great people."

Adi Gildor, a sophomore Engineering major says that he chose to live in the JLC because he felt "a growing detachment from my Jewish background, especially from students my age. I wanted to live in a place among Jewish students and renew the Jewish aspects of my life." Gildor says that he likes living in the JLC because "there is a continuous activity in academic, social, and activist aspects, and there is always the opportunity to get involved."

The library and scholar-in-residence suite which currently houses Professor James Young, are a part of the University's Center for Jewish Studies which is based in the Hillel House, and is associated with the Judaic Studies Department.

Accredited Judaica classes are offered right in the Hillel House. According to Rabbi Saul Perlmutter UMass may very well have the only Hillel House in the country that offers the unique combination of these three components: a residence for students, a full Hillel program, and an academic presence.

Students who live in the JLC have access to laundry machines in the basement, and on-site parking. The student rooms are carpeted and well-furnished. the JLC is open to sophomores through graduate students, and there are still spaces available for the spring semester. The cost of the rooms is $1050 for a shared double room, and $1575 for a single.

Further information and applications are available from the University of Massachusetts Hillel, in the Hillel House, 388 N. Pleasant St. The phone number there is 549-1710. Applications are being accepted now.

SAY CHEESE!
Learn the secrets of photography.
Join the Collegian photo desk.

get Ready for MAY now!
JOIN US
The May Department Stores Company cordially invites you to a Student Reception hosted by Joseph Melvin
Chairman
of Filene's
on Monday, November 9, 1992
from 7:00-9:00 p.m.
at
Memorial Hall
University of Massachusetts
FILENE'S

ADVOCATE ★BEST★ THE VALLEY READER POLL 1992 1st Place
PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Mon. - Thurs. ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET $5.99
SUNDAY BRUNCH - ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.99 11:30 - 3 p.m.
20% OFF DINNERS FOR COMEDY PATRONS Fri. & Sat.
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
586-1202
Free Parking 北京園 on Route 9, Hadley

Commuter Area Government
Nomination papers are now available for the position of
VICE-PRESIDENT
Pick them up at the Commuter Area Government Office
434 Student Union - Questions?
545-2145
Nomination Papers Due Nov. 13.
Election 11/20

Arts & Living

A Monkee's View from the Outside

By MARK K. ANDERSON
Collegian Correspondent

Douglas Coupland defines "obscurism" in his book Generation X as follows: "The practice of peppering daily life with obscure references (forgotten films, dead TV stars, unpopular books, defunct countries, etc.) as a subliminal means of showcasing both one's education and one's wish to dissociate with the world of mass culture."

One-hunnid puhcent pure unapologetic, obscurist folly, Views From The Outside's present pursuit ("The New Monkees: Where Are They Now?") has led to countless dead-ends and setbacks since being introduced one week ago. Representing new frontiers of inanity in college journalism, the spin of this column may best be summarized by the reaction of one Warner Brothers' staffer when he heard that a story was being written on such a trivial, embarassing showbiz flop: "Wouldn't a better title be 'Where Were They Then'?"

Preee-cisely.

Living one's entire life among a generation relegated to playing the role of clean-up crew for America's most coddled and spoiled demographic can certainly induce a warped sense of cultural and civic identity. And embracing a failed attempt to propagate banal boomer icons into the present generation's popular lexicon appeared passively cynical enough for my tastes. I blame society.

Twisted motivations now aside, on to the hunt.

When we left our hero last week, he had stumbled upon so many bibliographic phantom leads as to frustrate further pursuit of library research. (Believe me, neither "New Monkees" nor "Monkees, New" can take you very far in any local card catalog or database.)

Only one approach remained. It became imperative to work towards that elusive three-hundred dollar threshold for November's phone bill. And what better way to do it than to spend one's afternoons tracking down and leaving messages with Hollywood's elite while patiently waiting for them not to call back.

(Well, truthfully, our hero was several tiers away from his quest — he waited to not get called by industry wonks who were waiting to not get called by slippery agents who were off at lunch busily not delivering messages to Hollywood's elite. Thank God for Variety or no one would ever get through to anyone in that town.)

"Embracing a failed attempt to propogate banal boomer icons into the present generation's popular lexicon appeared passively cynical enough for my tastes. I blame society."

In the end, one lead did materialize. After several days of sniffing out trails like a bloodhound (or at least like a comatose poodle with a head cold), it was discovered that someone from The New Monkees album had actually managed to avoid disappearing from civilization without a trace. In fact, this person had recently distinguished himself in turning out the very currency of our disposable culture: New Product.

More specifically, the man responsible for engineering track one on side one also happens to be the producer for the entire catalog of the band Faith No More.

"Hello Warner Brothers? My name is Richard O'Brien and I'm writing a story for the Boston Globe on the recording process for alternative rock bands. I'm interested in the work of Faith No More and would like to speak with their producer."

And about as quickly as you can read from Abrams to Zucker in a metropolitan phone book, I was talking with The Man.

Predictably, he had little to say about 1987's answer to 1967's answer to A Hard Day's Night. "I was approached by several executives at the label to turn out a song on their New Monkees project so me and my friends got toge·her, threw down the tracks and let the guys sing over it. That simple." End of story.

When pressed further on any leads as to the current whereabouts of the karaoke four, their producer related that he had only spoken with one of them in recent memory and that was over coffee several years ago. However, he did continue that, "It was no surprise that the show flopped. No one outside of our circle took the project seriously and though the music was basically catchy pop tunes, the TV show was the central focus." (And the TV show was velveeta-from-last-week's-fondue cheezy. Dogs cried and grown men howled. Nothing short of beautiful.)

After a polite thank you and goodbye, the click of the phone line truncated yet another approach to contacting those would-be agents of change who tried to rearrange the Summer of Love formula for a Decade of Lust, or at least suck some money off the poor saps who didn't know the difference.

With yet another lead evaporated into the ether, levels of frustration once again began to climb. Arisen were such questions as, "How far does an innately futile exercise need to be taken if futility was really the only initial motivation?" or more succinctly, "Who the hell cares?" and most obviously, "Who showed this yahoo where the thesaurus is?"

Still though, the lads are out there somewhere. (Although, frankly, I have no idea what I'd ask if I did eventually find them.)

All the more reason to spiral this investigative-journalism-meets-cultural-scatology story further out of proportion.

Next week: C'mon Anderson, enought already!

Audience has Too Much Joy at Pearl St.

By CUTTER GARCIA
Collegian Staff

Too Much Joy
Pearl St.
Nov. 3, 1992

This review is going to be totally biased and completely favorable. It might, in fact, even be considered a bit messy and unprofessional but if I walked away from the Too Much Joy show at Pearl St. with only one lesson learned it's, "Challenge the system and laugh when it cringes." So here goes . . .

Too Much Joy brought harmonic convergence to the universe existing within the walls of Pearl St. on election night '92. The stars aligned, bio-rythms were synchopated and republicans and democrats hugged, kissed and fondled each other while enrapt in the joy of each other's company. . . . And how was your night? The S.R.O. crowd of TMJ fans crowded the stage and began chanting early. Cries of, "TOO MUCH JOY! TOO MUCH JOY!", filled the hall as tech people were busy tuning guitars and setting microphone levels. The crowd, consisting of a colorful mass of men and women from every race, eagerly awaited the arrival of the fab four by swaying and waving their arms as the fog machine blew it's first streams of smoke, which shrouded the stage and set the mood.

The energy coming from the eager mass of fans was palpable.
It was as if they were expecting something great to happen. Something larger than life. Something so fraught with energy that it just might possibly alter life as they knew it.

And Too Much Joy, when they finally hit the stage, did not disappoint their minions.

The Joy boys came out kicking! Crunching right into the crowd with, "Making Fun of Bums" off of their Son of Sam I Am release. The song, which deals with what it must be like to suddenly find yourself homeless after taking your good fortune for granted, was a perfect choice with which to lead things off. It was very upbeat, thrashy and a great pace setter for the set to follow.

TMJ was extremely animated throughout their entire performance switching microphones with each other repeatedly and running all over the stage dancing and cavorting with each other.

Right from note one the audience members were involved with the band. People ran onto the stage to sing with the members, dance with the members and kiss the members (Make your own joke here) of the band. Normally you might expect to see burly bouncers cracking heads in a situation like this but none of that was seen.

Drummer Tommy Vinton found himself in the middle of a beat when an enthusiastic fan charged past lead singer Tim Quirk and made his way to the rear of the stage and proceeded to wrap his arm around Vinton's shoulder in a 'buddy-hug' manner. I expected to see a look of alarm on Vinton's face but instead saw a huge grin as he looked over his shoulder realizing that he was safe, all while never missing a beat. The fan stayed for a few moments and then dove back into the crowd only to be safely caught by the other Joysters on the floor.

Guitarist Jay Blumenfield had to abandon his mike when during his rendition of "Donna Everywhere," two fans decided to relieve him of his singing duties. Blumenfield smiled, turned a quick 180 degrees and sprinted cross stage to bassist Sandy Smallens where the two shared a michrophone.

It was amazing! It was fantastic! It was everything that Ed Sullivan ever feared about Elvis! And the best part was, it was standard Too Much Joy.

At one point between songs Quirk made an announcement, "I have some good news and some bad news. The good news is that we have a new president of the United States, and his name is Bill Clinton."
The audience screamed their approval with a joyous cheer and then Quirk continued, "The bad news is that he still has to answer to a higher authority . . .ME, I am The king of Beers!", and with that they segued into their song of the same name.

I got an opportunity to talk with the band before and after the show and they told me that they were having a great time on this tour. The only disapointment being that they had hoped to play some newer venues that they hadn't been in before.

They spoke highly of their relations with tour mates The Mighty Lemondrops, "They can drink more beers than we can so we like to hang out with them" grinned Quirk.

The fans were more than pleased with TMJ's performance. Delirious smiles were seen everywhere as they filed out after the performance was finished (nobody seemed to care about hearing Material Issue play - attendance was cut by more than half after TMJ left the stage). "I can die now! I got to tickle Tim Quirk!", boasted Amherst College student, Jessie Fuchs. "They were in-

Turn to JOY, page 8

ALL THE NEWS THAT FITS. COLLEGIAN.

AIDS
AIDS is everyone's problem and everyone must educate themselves now! Donate $5 or more and receive our publications. Send name, address, and enclosed donation: $ _____
MAIL TO:
THE RUBBERS BROS.™
AIDS Education Publications
P.O. Box 431 - UMC, Willbraham, MA 01095-0431
AIDS Information - Tel. (413) 734-1057

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (1ST LITE) SHOWS DAILY & CHILD 12 YRS & UNDER DAILY & SENIOR CITIZENS
RT. 9 AMHERST 584-9153
Call Theatre for Showtimes
Jennifer 8* R
Of Mice and Men PG-13
The Last of the Mohicans R
Dr. Giggles R
The Mighty Ducks PG
HAMPSHIRE 8 584-7550
Call Theatre for Showtimes
Consenting Adults R
Passenger 57* R
School Ties PG-13
Hero PG-13
Under Seige R
Candyman R

ALLEY OOPS & Miller Lite Live Concert Series present: Time Trippers
Alley Oops
525 PLEASANT STREET NORTHAMPTON
584-2491
Get Your Fraternity & Sorority Party Reservations

Pearl Street Nightclub
Coming to Pearl Street . . .
Sat., Nov. 7-8:30 pm MAX CREEK
Mon., Nov. 9-8:00 pm WIDESPREAD PANIC 18+
Thur., Nov. 12-8:30 pm SHOCKRA
Borderland
Fri., Nov. 13-8:30 pm Free Rock Friday BOP HARVEY
Monghani
Adv. Ticket Info:
10 Pearl St., Northampton
584-7771

■ joy

continued from page 7

credible! Oh, they were SO good!", squealed Hillary Brown who had driven from Middlebury, Conn. to be there.

The only complaint I heard came from Larry Harmon who wished that the Joy boys had played his favorite song, "Clowns." "I really love that song," said Harmon, "I'm sad they didn't do it. It has a lot of personal meaning to me."

Special mention must be made here for TMJ's tour manager Kerry Wittig who has, in his time, ran everything from operas to Plasmatics concerts. "These are a great bunch of guys and we're having a lot of fun. I wasn't originally a fan before I took this job but after listening to them every night I'm becoming a fan," said Wittig from behind the T-shirt stand where he was doling out TMJ concert items. Wittig was a very cool guy and it was evident that the band had met a soul mate on this tour.

Too Much Joy, put out an incredibly rousing performance which left each audience member smiling and dancing into the streets. I can't wait for January when they'll be touring solo.

Quasi-fanatical 'Spread-heads' are called to NoHo

By BILL ROGERS
Collegian Correspondent

On Monday, Nov. 9th at 8p.m., Pearl Street will be featuring a band that defines the musical sound of the dynamic, ever-changing and urbanizing new south.

Wipespread Panic is a radical band coming all the way from Georgia. They let out a distinctive straight-up sound that is firmly rooted in the guitar based rock and roll of the late '60s and early '70s, while sharing the freshness, wit and energy of their contemporary musical counterparts from the south.

Widespread Panic was the first band to be signed by the newly reincarnated Capricorn Records. The quintet, consisting of singer and guitarist John Bell, guitarist Michael Houser, drummer Todd Nance, percussionist Domingo S. Ortiz, bassist David Schools and newly acquired keyboardist John Herman, produces music that takes cues from r&b, blues and country sounds that influences earlier Capricorn artists, like The Allman Brothers and Wet Willie. On top of these lies a mixed bag of influences with dashes of psychedelic guitar, melodic bass lines and percolating backbeats from the drummers.

Since its creation in 1985, Widespread Panic has gotten to know the national touring circuit quite well. They are considered one of the finest original sounds on the circuit today.

The band has built a loyal following across the nation since it was put together at the University of Georgia, largely based on its tight, energetic live performances. The band is currently playing over two-hundred shows a year in venues ranging from New England to California.

Quasi-fanatical "Spread-heads" have been known to travel literally hundreds upon hundreds of miles to experience, firsthand, the band's no-nonsense, hard-rocking live show, which features the roadhoned musical interplay of Bell, Houser and Herman, set against the powerful rhythmical backdrop provided by Schools, Nance, and Ortiz. Widespread Panic has released one album in addition to the current self-titled release with Capricorn. In 1987, they released Space Wrangler on Atlanta based Landslide Records (altough it has been recently re-released by Capricorn). The album displays the band's songwriting gifts on such cuts as "Walkin'" and "Mercy," while also leaving room for a tasteful, innovative re-working of "Send Your Mind," an obscure early Van Morrison recording.

September 1st saw the release of Widespread Panic's Live From The Georgia Theatre thirty-five minute video,

Turn to PANIC, page 10

Winter Session 1993
January 4-25

Yes, you can!

REGISTER FOR WINTER SESSION CLASSES.
SPECIAL ENROLLMENT RESTRICTIONS DO NOT APPLY FOR WINTER SESSION.
SO, IF YOU'RE A UMASS STUDENT, ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS JUST SIGN UP.
OVER 100 CREDIT COURSES.
EARN 3 CREDITS IN JUST 3 SHORT WEEKS!
REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.

CATALOGS AVAILABLE ON CAMPUS OR AT THE DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION, 6TH FLOOR GOODELL.

Division of Continuing Education

"I got mine at Zanna!"

ZANNA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563

Hadley Coin-Op Laundromat
206 Russell St./Rt. 9
Open 7 Days 7am-11pm
Top Loaders: $1.00 • Dbl. Loaders : $1.50
Weekend Special: 75¢ dbl. Loaders

PIZZERIA

Paradiso
TRADITIONAL WOOD-FIRED BRICK OVEN PIZZA
12 CRAFTS AVENUE
NORTHAMPTON, MASSACHUSETTS
586-1468

Spirit Haus
LIQUOR STORE

Bud, Bud Light, Bud Dry 12 pk btls	$6.99 (+dep)
Golden Anniversary 24-12 oz cans	$7.99 (+dep)
Rolling Rock 12 pk btls	$6.99 (+dep)
Arctic Bay 12 pak btls	$6.39 (+dep)
Red Stripe 6 pk	$5.69 (+dep)
Martel Cognac V.S. 750 ml	$19.99
M.D. 20/20 All Flavors 750 ml	$1.99
Fleischmanns Vodka 750 ml	$5.49
Luksusowa Polish Vodka 750 ml	$12.99
Goslings Black Seal Rum 750ml	$12.99
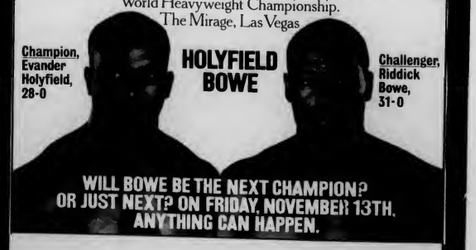
Leroux Blackberry & Coffee Brandy 1 Liter	$1.99

LOTTERY Headquarters
Beers from around the World!
Imports • Gourmet • Microbreweries
Kegs starting at $33.00
(checks/Mastercard/Visa accepted for Keg Deposits)
Malt Scotches • Cognacs • Brandies • Champagnes
Open 9 am - 11 pm
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED
338 College Street/253-5384
One mile East of Amherst Ctr. on Rte. 9

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
World Heavyweight Championship.
The Mirage, Las Vegas



WILL BOWE BE THE NEXT CHAMPION? OR JUST NEXT? ON FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 13TH, ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN.

$10.00 TICKET PRICE
• Pre Fight Buffet • Door Prizes
9:00 PM
Tickets Can Be Purchased in Advance

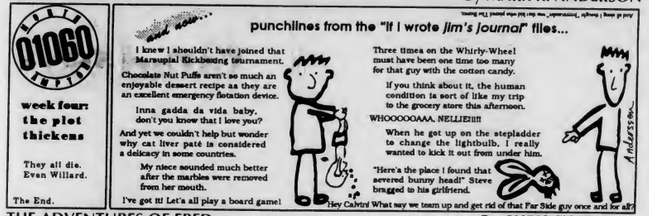
University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

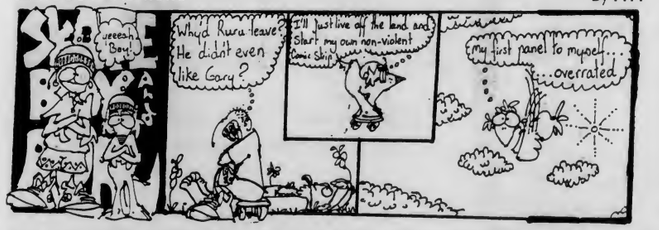
DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

WILMINGTON By MARK K. ANDERSON



THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT



THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Thor's hammer, screwdriver and crescent wrench

Quote of the Day

"To err is human, but to really foul things up takes an anchorman."
– Dan Rather

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A short trip could be on the agenda. Welcome a break in your daily routine. Business and pleasure could mix rather nicely now. Watch for an old relationship to start heating up again!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your emotions may not be in sync with logic this morning. Postpone making an important decision until afternoon. Put work ahead of pleasure. A platonic relationship delights you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You need to make up your mind in a hurry about a new opportunity. Travel or an extended course of study is possible. Keeps line of communication open. Seek new allies.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If your entertainment plans get derailed, you can always liven up the scene with a spur-of-the-moment invitation. A worthy charity approaches you for a donation. Give it you can.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can make a good impression on someone you admire. Do not fantasize about a romantic relationship, however. Tonight is for parenting or calling a family meeting.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Juggle a home-career conflict with grace. It does not pay to get overly emotional or let personal interests interfere with your work. Stand firm and challenge about business matters.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Domestic and employment affairs flourish in your capable hands. Tap your creativity. Keep to yourself when working on projects that will set the stage for stardom.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Others may drag their feet today. Stand alone and get the job done right. Strive for results, not fanfare. Spend a quiet, restful evening with your one-and-only recharges your batteries.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec 21): All may not be what it seems in employment dealings. Avoid secrecy and "underground" activities. Flow with the tide, not against it today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Emotions sizzle today. A clever idea seems red hot. Seize the moment, but be careful not to damage your reputation. Do more listening that talking in social situations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Pooled resources and team spirit make it delightfully easy to advance on the job. A thread of good will is all you need to sew up a winning day. Group functions sound appealing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Group dynamics lack power, but there are still some delightful surprises in store. A one-on-one approach brings out the best ideas. Revisiting a favorite spot makes romance special tonight.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

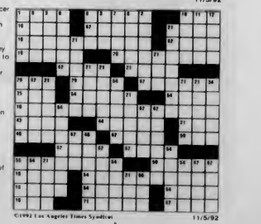
ACROSS
1 Seethe
5 Ecclesiastical wear
10 Hem's partner
13 Tourist mecca in India
14 Counterfeit
15 Cork Harbor port
16 Names in the spotlight
18 Vagrant
19 American inventor Nikola
20 Chemical compounds
22 "One — Jacks" Brando movie
25 Operatic leading lady
26 Mine find
29 Member of the orchestra
31 — five, usual work day
35 Sunday treat
36 Room or office lead in
38 Lime tree
39 Run away and hide
43 Body of land
44 Egyptian native
45 Netherlands piano producer
46 Arm of the Indian Ocean
49 Actress Olin
50 Cozy place
51 Emily or Wiley
53 Sunnybrook, to Rebecca
55 Green liqueur
59 Dark brown shade
63 Capricorn symbol
64 Advantages in a race
67 Egg on
68 Mitecus
69 One of the Websters
70 Self
71 Printer a proof
72 Story

DOWN
1 Money in Bangkok
2 Pointed arch
3 Savings accts
4 Dipper
5 Accessory for a geisha
6 Director Howard
7 Ripened
8 Shocking
9 Excuse or delay, old style
10 Parka part
11 French clenc
12 "— on first?"
15 Ristorante vino
17 Take a rest
21 Half of XXXII
23 Historic river of Spain
24 Jim Morrison's group: The —
26 Land of wealth, in the Bible
27 Famous shortstop
28 Danish poet and dramatist Johannes —
30 Toward the inside
32 Fished for moray
33 Mark over a letter
34 A Merlin
37 Barabbas, for one
40 Detriment
41 Lab vessel
42 Owner of San Simeon
47 Years and years
48 Nils of old movies
52 "Over —": George M Cohan song
54 Intended
55 Chills and fever
56 Winner at Wimbledon 1976-80
57 Powdered starch
58 Wyatt of the Wild West
60 Outrigger
61 Type of type: Abbr
62 Arthur of the courts
65 Click beetle
66 Sign on Bway.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

B	A	T	H		D	C	I	V		H	U	G
I	N	N	A		O	A	M	S		O	P	R
S	H	E	T	G	T	P	S	Y	R	A	D	N
R	E	S		R	E		S	T	A	R	D
O	R	T		P	A	T	I	N	G	E	S	I	D	A
			L	A	I	D		A	N	D		N	E	S
L	I	C	I	L	E		J	E	W	E	L	S
I	N	G		N	G	A	G	E		F	E	N
			Q	U	E	E	N	O	F	S	P	A	D	E	S
D	U	N	E		R	E	I		O	P	O	N	A	L
A	R	E	A	S		R	U	L	E	D		A	N	I
E	L	I	Y		E	S	S	A		L	A	C	E

11/5/92



©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/5/92

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Chris Cuddy
Copy Editor	Lisa Curtis
PhotoTechnician	Jacob Adelman
Production Supervisor	Nicole Dumas
Production	Brad Hutchison
	Todd Elliott

Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Meatball Grinder	Seafood Newburg
Tuna Melt	Chicken Tenders
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Vegetable Grinder	Ratatouille
Tuna Melt	Chicken Tenders

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

■ panic

continued from page 8

which was recorded before Student Run Organization audiences of Athens, Georgia. It is getting rave reviews as a masterpiece of contemporary film noir. The band is scheduled to have a third album released early next year.

Widespread Panic recently completed tour dates with the H.O.R.D.E. (Horizons Of Rock Developing Everywhere) tour. This eight day string of festival performances teamed the band up with fellow Capricorn label mates Col. Bruce Hampton & the Aquarium Rescue Unit, as well as Phish, The Spin Doctors, Blues Traveler and Bela Fleck and the Flecktones.

Widespread Panic is a definite crowd pleaser. Do not miss this show. Even if you're not sure if you like this music or not, you will never have a better chance to find out. The price is certainly right.

Widespread Panic will be playing Pearl Street in Northampton on Monday, November 9th at 8 P.M. Tickets are free, but must be ordered in advance from the Northampton Box Office.

FRANK COUCH

Widespread Panic from left to right Michael Houser, David Schools, John Bell, Domingo Ortiz, Todd Nance, and John Herman will be at Pearl St. Monday.

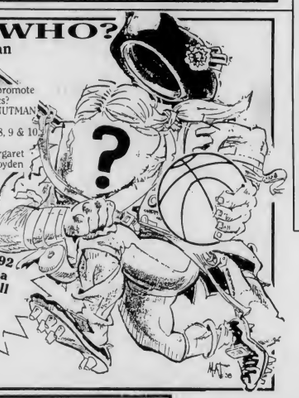
RECYCLE THIS COLLEGIAN

MINUTE WHO?

1992-93 UMASS Minuteman Mascot Tryouts!

Attention students!

Are you energetic, athletic and willing to promote the successful tradition of UMASS Athletics? If so we would like you as our UMASS MINUTMAN MASCOT for the 1992/93 school year. Mascot tryouts will be held on November 8, 9 & 10, 1992 at the Curry Hick's "CAGE" arena. For all those interested please contact Margaret Driscoll at the UMASS Athletic Dept. in Boyden Building room 203. 545-3190.



Mascot Tryouts
November 8, 9 & 10, 1992
Curry Hicks "CAGE" Arena
Contact: Margaret Driscoll
203 Boyden Building
545-3190

■ Art

continued from page 12

the Pontiac Silverdome to avenge the 38-6 playoff trouncing at the hands of the Detroit Lions (2-6). It will mark the third time that Emmitt will go head-to-head with Barry Sanders, coming out second best in the last two. The system of the Lions caused major problems for Dallas last time out, but it should be completely different due to the new personnel on defense for the Boys.

Jimmy Johnson's defense is improving week-by-week, and when football genius John Madden says during the Dallas-Philly game, "We are watching the best two defenses in football," you know the defense is successful. Dallas 24, Detroit 10.

The aforementioned Eagles (5-3) travel home to take on Art Shell's Raiders (3-5), who are coming off a bye week after the hard fought loss against the Cowboys. Jim "All guts, too much glory" McMahon once again gets the nod over Randall Cunningham, but expect a change early if he is not successful.

Randall is the reason the Eagles were winning, and he has to be at top form if they are going to contend. With McMahon at the helm, the Eagles must hope the Raiders fold. Trust me, they will. Philadelphia 17, Los Angeles 7.

Next we'll travel to Buffalo, and focus on fellow staff member Jeff Crofts' Super Bowl pick, the Pittsburgh Steelers (6-2). The hit Rod Woodson put on Warren Moon will go down as one of the influential pops in history. The Oilers without Moon are worse than Philly without Randall.

Neil O'Donnell is developing into a strong quarterback in the league, and he now must face Bruce Smith and company at Rich Stadium, any young leader's nightmare. Thurman Thomas was injured last weekend against the Patriots, and his status is questionable. The Bills (6-2) control their own destiny because Miami lost, so they are in the driver's seat. Buffalo 31, Pittsburgh 20.

San Francisco-OVERRATED. If you stress something long enough, it may finally come true.

The Niners travel to the Georgia Dome to take on the Falcons, who lost Chris Miller for the season. Jerry Glanville is sacrificing winning by putting Deion Sanders on the bench. Guess who's in trouble at home? San Francisco 34, Atlanta 21.

For those football fans who had a bad weekend, along with my friend who blacked out on Saturday, Stapleton's pigskin picks would like to leave with some advice: Have some ice cream. It will make you happy.

Arthur Stapleton is a Collegian columnist.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 12

very well in both games in Florida."

The Minutewomen, with consecutive wins over Vermont (2-0), Southern Methodist (1-0) and Central Florida (1-0), enter the tournament hot. Connecticut is not.

After jumping out to a 15-1-1 mark, the only loss coming against six-time defending national champion North Carolina, UConn has dropped its last three.

Road losses to Hartford (3-1), Santa Clara (3-0) and Stanford (2-1) have the Huskies reeling.

By hosting the game both coaches agree UConn has a distinct advatage. "We are happy to be at home," Tsantiris said. "We want to turn the home game into a big advantage with a sizable crowd."

Rudy said, "UConn has a very hostile and very anti-UMass crowd. It gets real vocal, with jeers and cat calls, on the verge of nasty."

■ football

continued from page 12

tomorrow against the Richmond "O."

The UMass offense will be will be led by quarterback Andrew McNeilly, who'll look to tight end Steve Dembrowski and split end Matt Read in the air. The running game will be led by tailback John Johnson and fullbacks Ron Drapeau and Mike George, who'll return this week after sustaining a twisted ankle. Johnson will see a lot of action, as teammate Rene Ingoglia's status is doubtful for tomorrow because of a sprained ankle suffered last week.

"We're at the point in the season now where this is a big game," said Hodges. "We still don't have the respect that I think we deserve . . . we're just gonna have to take care of it on the field."

Grand Opening

November 1, 1992

THE MUG SHOT

Create your own Customized mug with your favorite picture or sayings, or let us take your picture at our Hampshire Mall Location.
A great gift idea for friends, family or anyone.

Create a mugful of memories for a lifetime.

Coupon
Grand Opening
The Mug Shot
Coupon Value is $3.00 toward Purchase of a mug with Student ID.
Coupon Expires December 15, 1992

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT

FRIDAY NIGHT

SOUTHERN COMFORT
WATERMELON
Pink and Juicy

• Drink Specials •
• T-Shirts • Prizes •

University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湘園南湖

The Best Chinese Buffet

MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE

WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over: $2 charge for orders under $15

NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup

TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

■ field hockey

continued from page 12

has two to choose from: Lisa Fasano and Wendy Lazarus.

Fasano is the incumbant, a two-sport athlete who transferred out of Temple. A junior, Fasano has started in 12 of 19 games and has a 1.45 goals-against average.

Lazarus is a freshman who has notched a 1.69 goals-against average, proving that the fault does not lie with St. Joe's defense, but rather with their anemic offense which has scored more than two goals once this season.

"They are a turf team, so this field will benefit them more," UMass head coach Pam Hixon said. "They hit the long ball, so if we can create turnovers we can get opportunities and penalty corners.

"If we have the ball, we can score. We have to go hard and go early, trying to take the wind out of their sails," Hixon said.

Rutgers and Temple square off in Saturday's afternoon, and while at first glance, Temple has the upper hand, Hixon isn't counting out the Lady Knights.

"I haven't given the slightest thought to playing Temple yet, because I consider their game against Rutgers a flip of the coin. The tourney is at Rutgers, so they'll be trying to resurrect what has been a terrible season for them."

Despite the home field advantage, Rutgers also has the memory of a tight 4-3 overtime loss to Temple to think about. Rutgers has been outscored 28-24 and has only posted a 7-10-1 record, but they match up well with Temple.

Both teams are infamous for their physical play, and Rutgers would love to knock Temple out of the NCAA Tournament by beating them. Goalie Jodi Deem has started every game for the Lady Knights, making 220 saves and posting a 1.47 goals-against average. Nicole Wilson (7 goals) and Heather Jones (6 goals) are the offensive leaders.

Temple may have more to play for than any of the other three teams. The second seed in the A-10 tourney, the Owls are precariously perched at tenth in the country, possibly the best spot for them to be in. Anything less than a win in the A-10 Championship game may keep them out of the NCAAs, but by winning the A-10s, they may even host a first-round NCAA game. The ball is in their court, so to speak.

Toni Byard, a A-10 Player of the Year candidate, leads the Owls with 13 goals. Goalies Donna Porter and Lori Benner have shared duties with Porter (1.5 gaa) seeing most of the work. However, Temple's strength is its tenacity. The team never counts itself out, and last year in Philadelphia the Owls upset UMass 1-0 in the championship game.

Forward Tara Jelley said that Temple won't have more intensity if they play the Minutewomen, even though UMass is nearly assured a spot in the NCAAs.

"Because of last year's upset, we'll be playing with as much intensity as they will," Jelley said. "We're going in this year with more experience, and we want to win with a vengence."

If UMass wins the A-10s, they will receive a first-round bye in the NCAAs and will host a second-round game, needing only to win to advance to the Final Four. Hixon said she isn't looking ahead, however.

"It would be great for that to happen, but we've got to win to have that luxury," Hixon said. "But our mentality all year has been to only look at the team we're playing."

■ water polo

continued from page 12

teams, they're all pretty much equal. Anything can happen in tournament play."

Saturday morning the Minutemen will play 12-11, eighth seed Villanova in what should be no more than a tune-up for its second game a few hours later against the winner of number four seed Navy and number five seed Brown.

"[The players] know what they have to do. They've been very good this year about not looking ahead and taking care of the situation at hand."

The Minutemen have beaten the Bears in both of their meetings this year, including last weekend's 9-6 New England title victory, but have not faced the Midshipmen.

Yarworth feels, as he has all season, that the Minutemen have yet to play their best sustained game of water polo.

This week's problems stem around an offense he feels is a bit stagnant, even though the team has scored 43 goals over the last three games.

Also posing a problem is the wing defense when the hole-man is fronted during a man-down situation. Against Brown last Sunday UMass allowed the Bears eight man-ups, which is too many to give to most of the teams playing this weekend. The good news is that they only allowed Brown to score on one of those man-ups.

GAME NOTES - How focused are the Minutemen? After the N.E. title game against Brown Yarworth asked the team what they had accomplished. "Nothing" was the collective response. This team will not be satisfied until they are in California instead of eating turkey.

■ men's soccer

continued from page 12

they have had the habit of doing in their losses this year.

Even if the Minutemen have nary a victory against the other three teams present this weekend, the players as well as the coaches know they can play with any of the three.

Freshman Colin Johnson is guardedly optimistic about the tournament.

"We won't be overconfident, we'll be ready to play," he said. "We know we have the ability to win."

Junior Ted Priestly thinks that the key involves team play.

"It always seems that we perform better when we are the underdog," Priestly said.

Junior Justin Edelman, who hails from New Jersey and throughout his career has shined there against Rutgers, is excited about the upcoming tournament. "I'm from Jersey, and I'm anxious to show that people up in Massachusetts can play with Jersey," he said. As for the outcome, Edelman was outspoken, "I guarantee a victory, we are going to beat Rutgers."

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT

SUNDAY NIGHT GAME OF THE WEEK

• Cincinnati Bengals Vs. The Chicago Bears •

PRE-GAME BUFFET
$3.00
7:00 - 8:00 PM
Roast Chicken, Pasta, Roast Potatoes
Salad - Bread

1/2 PRICE APPETIZERS & SNACKS

At Half Time
- Sunday Nite Pig Out -

University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE

CLASSIFIEDS
- 20¢ per word per day for students - Cash in advance
- Deadline: two days prior to publication Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30 Fri. 8:30-2:30 113 Campus Center

PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Multicultural Night
International entertainment and cuisine needed fro campus wide event. (ingredients will be provided) Show UMass your culture! Call by Nov. 6th 253-0522

AIRLINE TICKETS

Airline Tickets take $50-$100 off any fare call Stuert at 516-767-7648

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Department of Landscape Architecture announces its Fall Workday Saturday, November 7, 1992
You the tools WE supply the labor.
Call 665-7207 by 11/6

Tired of your Science major?
Try Food Science
Call Dr. Chinecotti 545-1025

EXTREMELY IMPORTANT

Tarot Reading by appointment. Anytime
Cell Mitch 548-9781

FOR RENT

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom homes on bus route call 586-4270

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

Amherst 3 bedroom condo avail. Feb. 1st. A room end 1 bedroom epartment avail Jan. 1st.
Lincoln Reel Estate
25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7879

1 bdrm apt. in Puffton! Move in anytime only 434 (includes heat and hot water)! Well Kept! See it! 549-3542

Room available in beautiful renovated church. We are 2 males and 2 females with one cat. Rent $250 Cell evenings 253-7367

FOR SALE

Black Leather motorcycle jacket size 44 125.00 if interested call Kevin 546-6175

DACHSTEIN SKIBOOTS
10 1/2 – $130.00
Where there's a will
there's an A-Video -- $30.00
549-5115

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals
Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

FOUND

Found – Key in Campus Center Concourse on 11/4. Call 256-1372 to identify and claim

HELP WANTED

Alaska Summer Employment
fisheries earn $600 + a week in canneries $4000 month on fishing boats. Free transportation! Room and Board! Male or Female. Get a head start on this summer. For employment program call 1-206-545-4155 ext. A5001

Couples – Property Manager Free Amherst apartment plus salary Debbie 256-0741

Earn $1000/Week at home stuffing envelopes! For information, send long SASE to C.J Enterprises, Box 67068K, Cuyahoga Falls, OH 44222

Earn $2000 + FREE SPRING BREAK TRIPS! Worth Americas #1 Student Tour operator seeking motivated students, organizations, fraternities and sororities as campus representatives promoting Cancun or Daytona Beach!
Call 1-800-365-4654

Evening Jobs! Environmental campaign work. Fight pollution with Clean Water Action $7/hr. On Buslines. 584-9830

Fund Raisers for Christmas Kettle program, outdoor work needed for 3 hour shifts from November 21 thru Christmas. Reliable and dependable individuals a must. Contact Lisa at the Salvation Army M & F 3-7 and Thurs. 1-6 $4.50/hour

Springbreakers
Promote our Florida Spring Break packages. Earn MONEY and FREE trips. Organize SMALL and LARGE groups. Campus Marketing, 800-423-5264

$500
If you have access to a video camera, we're looking for students to film a mini-video. May lead to permanent position. For information, call C.B. Production, Inc. M-F 9-5 (817)332-9608.

$200-$500 WEEKLY
Assembe products at home. Easy! No selling. You're direct. Fully guaranteed FREE INFORMATION -- 24 HOUR HOTLINE. 801-379-2900 Copyright #MA15KDH

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun.
Call 1-800-3SIESTA esk for Bonnie

$252.50 Sell 50 funny college t-shirts and make $252.50. No financial obligation. A risk free program. Avg. sales time = 4-8 hours. Choose from 18 designs. Smaller/larger quantities avail. Call 1-800-733-3265

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons – first lesson half price 665-1178

LEGAL INTERNSHIPS

Friday November 13 is the last dey to contact the Legel Services Center about e Spring 1993 internship! Get hands-on experiance in the legel field. Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 credits! No experience required - training is provided. Contact Legel Services TODAY: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

LOST

"Gremlin" – Ten Cat lost seen in N. Amherst eres. If found please call 549-7770

Glasses in black case somewhere between e lot and Central! Call 546-5258

MUSICIANS

Bassist and Drummer needed for rock band. Call Jason 6-7301 or Steve 6-1086 for info.

PERSONALS

Chris of 18 Washington
I think you're incradibla but I don't know how to epproech you!

-- Interested

Dates desparately needed
For Mohemmed Y. and Juen Z. of Hamlin. Please call for a funky time.

Hey Breckin! Happy 21st! Watch out for cars Love ye Sarah

LISA JENIKE
HAPPY 21 BIRTHDAY!
HAVE A FUNKY ONE
LOVE COON

NIKKI
Heppy Anniversary
Love
Trevor

Rachel Kitson,
Heppy Birthdey!!
We love you!
Love
Jill, Julie, Jess and Kim

Sigma Kappa: What a weekend we have planned! Tonight will be a lot of fun -- pledges get excited! Jen P. - nice job with week of Giving. Steph W. good luck with Parent's Day. Heppy Founder's Day everyone! I'm officielly staffi in Sigma Iova, Christina T.

To our November Infants:
The kegmesters and ex-con
One more yeer to go. HA!HA!
From the "Main" women in your life.

UMass Women Swimmers
A Dancer for my b-dey, I wes delivered
For this I thenk you, it will be remembered
If I were grenied e wish it would be
'To crush UVM + show NO MERCY!
"LOUSTTA ..."

RIDE WANTED

Denver, Boulder Co. erea to Boston. By plane, trein, or car. Will pays. Around 11/25, 26, 27. Cell Pete evenings 549-9377

ROOMATES WANTED

Female to shere 3 bedroom house in North Amherst over intersession and/or Spring. On bus roure. Call Candace or Michelle. 549-4301

2 fun roomates neededes of Jen. 1st $140/month including heet and hot weter 549-4911

2 girls needed to shere largest bedroom in e 3 bdrm Puffton Apt. 549-7319

3 Responsible women
Need housing for Spring semester Desire place neer UMass. Call Young-Ni 546-0580 or Jen 4978

RSO FAIR '92

RSO FAIR '92
Monday, November 9
12-4 SUB
FREE food, entertainment, prizes, Demonstreions and information.
5 college community welcome!
SPONSORED BY
Division of Student Activities

SERVICES

Free Peer Counseling lesbian, gay bisexual issues. Phone or walk in. LBG counseling collective. 408 G Student Union 545-2645

Pregnant? Need Help?
Cell Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidentrel, cering help. Amherst Cerriage Shops, 549-1906

Tarot Readings
Call Chris 256-0821

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed – free cover page, spell check, laser printout, $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795.

Typing - Word Processing
Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations. Laser Printing
Cell Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turneround 586-5268

WANTED

We need books! Quality paperbacks and textbooks bought year round. Buying hours: Mon-Sat, 10-4. Atticus/Alibron Bookshop, 8 Main St., Amherst (next to Subway). 256-1547

We want your 2 bdrm Puffton lease!! Starting January 1. Call us first! Reward if we sign it! Cell 549-7319

WANTED TO RENT

Efficiency one bedroom
Starting Mid Dec. or Jan. 1
Upperclass honors student
Female
Call Jen 546-4978

Sports

Water Polo top seed at Easterns

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

It has not been a long time coming, but what goes around should come around for the University of Massachusetts water polo team this weekend.

As you read this the 24-1 Minutemen, who moved from 14th to 12th in this weeks national poll, will be in vans headed for the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Maryland for the Eastern League Championship.

It has been this tourney, for two years running, that has ruined UMass' post-season hopes and dreams.

"I feel we have got a legitimate team this year," said UMass coach Russ Yarworth, "whereas in the past we've had a legitimate group of individual players. It's a pretty significant difference."

UMass is the number one seed, and after Sunday's games the top team and one at-large team will gain berths to the NCAA Championships over the Thanksgiving weekend.

"We're going there with the intention of doing what we've been doing all year," said Yarworth, "which is taking it one game at a time. I really feel very strongly that if we play our game, that we can be the team to beat. But, if you look at the top five

Turn to WATER POLO, page 11

UMass looks to squash Spiders

Football team to face former coach Reid for first time

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

After a three-game homestand, the University of Massachusetts football team (6-1, 4-1 conference) hits the road this weekend, as it travels to Virginia to take on the University of Richmond Spiders at 1 p.m. Saturday.

The game tomorrow will mark the first time the Minutemen face their old coach, Jim Reid (now asst. coach/defensive coordinator) as well as an old friend, former UMass football star Joe Cullen. Reid resigned from UMass last year amid controversy over scholarship money — he has since taken up employment with the Richmond squad. Cullen joined the Spider staff this season as well.

Undoubtedly, Reid and Cullen are quite knowledgable about the UMass game plan so many think the Spiders will have an upper hand. Coach Mike Hodges disagrees.

"I'd like to know as much about Richmond as the two of them know about us," said Hodges. "But even though they know what some of our schemes are (offensively and defensively), they still don't know when we'll run what play."

Last year, the Minutemen toyed with Richmond the whole game and won convincingly, 42-14. This year, however, Richmond is much improved (6-2, 4-2 Yankee Conference) and is right in the hunt for the YanCon title, along with UMass, Delaware and Villanova.

"This is a huge game for us, like every game from here on out," said Hodges.

When you talk about Richmond, you have to mention their offense. Led by junior quarterback Greg Lilly, Richmond has racked up 464.3 total yards on offense and averages 34.6 points/game, second only to the University of Delaware (36.3). Lilly has had an incredible year so far, as he leads the YanCon in passing (117-184-4 int., for 2,032 yds and 18 TD's, 63.6 Cmp%) and total offense (252.8 yds/game). He will probably break all URichmond passing records before the end of the season.

"The Richmond offense is awesome," said Hodges. "The quarterback [Lilly] really makes 'em go. You watch the game films of him and he not only makes good choices but just sticks the ball every time he throws it.

"Lilly's rating is 196 or 197 and the next closest quarterback is about 167," he continued. "There's no one even close to him. It [Lilly's ability] will absolutely be the toughest challenge for the defense."

Lilly isn't the only player UMass will have to contend with, though. Sophomore phenom tailback Uly Scott is running away with the YanCon rushing title as he's racked up 985 yds and 10 TD's for 123 yds/game. Split end Rod Boothes (35-857, 9 TD's) and flanker Sterling Brown (33-547, 4 TD's) are Lilly's favorite targets and are expected to play a big part in tomorrows game. Boothes also leads the league in scoring (7.8 pts./game) and is third in the YanCon in kickoff returns.

Defensively, Richmond boasts two of the best players in the YanCon in inside linebacker Eric Johnson and free safety Maurice Glenn. Johnson has 110 tackles on the season (first in the league) for a 13.8 ave./game. Glenn averages 11.7 tackles/game and 93 on the year. They are joined on the defensive side of the ball by teammate Matt Joyce, who has 52 tackles and five QB sacks.

Defensively for UMass (ranked first in total defense 253.3) outside linebacker Mario Perry (6-foot-3, 220) is having a great season for Coach Hodges with 12 sacks, 43 tackles, three forced fumbles and three pass break-ups. Inside linebackers Bobby Burke and Phil Lartigue (named to the YanCon honor roll for his 11 tackle performance last week) as well as free safety Matt Rajotte and cornerback Don Caparotti will also have to come up big

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 10

Post season begins for UMass soccer teams

• NCAA test for Women at UConn

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's soccer team will face the University of Connecticut in the first round of the NCAA tournament tomorrow at 1 p.m. in Storrs, Conn.

Connecticut (15-4-1) defeated the Minutewomen on Oct 24, 1-0, but has lost three straight contests since that time.

Massachusetts (15-3) has taken the momentum from a strong second half against the Huskies and turned in three wins in a row.

"We know they can be beaten," UMass Coach Jim Rudy said. "And we know we can beat them. When our team is on, is focused and plays for 90 minutes it can beat anyone in the country."

Connecticut Coach Len Tsantiris said, "We know UMass is a good team and we will have to play strong to win. We have the players to win, we just need to perform."

In the regular season Connecticut, which has won five straight against the Minutewomen, made a first half goal by Karen Fergusen stand up, despite a furious second half attack by UMass.

"In the first half we gave them too much respect," Rudy said. "We backed off and allowed them to play. In the second we came out and took the play to them. Our players know we can play better than them."

Tsantiris said, "This is a different game, we expect things to go differently."

It may be a different game but as with all UConn-UMass games the play will be intense and physical.

"I know we will come out and play a very intense game and we expect UMass to play intense, just as always," Tsantiris said.

Connecticut combines a potent offense and a solid defense. Forward Denise Swenson has light the lamp 12 times on the year and Ferguson has pumped in another 6 goals. In net freshman Amy Schwarz boasts of a 0.79 goals against average.

UMass will counter with a renewed frontline featuring goal keeper turned frontrunner Skye Eddy making her fourth consecutive start. Leading scorer Kim Eynard has 12 tallies on the season, eight of which are game winners.

Rudy will also look to his freshman class, particularly Nicole Roberts, Rachel LeDuc and Nicki Ahrenholz, to come off the bench and provide scoring depth up front. Rudy, known in the past for his stinginess when substituting, appears now to have no problem going 16 deep.

"The young kids have been great off the bench lately," Rudy said. "Roberts has been playing very well and has upped her game recently. LeDuc likewise is played

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 10

• Men face Rugers in A-10 tournament

By ARTHUR STAPLETON and
JEFF CROFTS
Collegian Staff

It might old and it might be cheesy, but it is time for the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team to put up or shut up. Starting tonight, the Minutemen begin play in the sixth annual Atlantic 10 Men's Soccer Tournament in Piscataway New Jersey.

The Minutemen, seeded third in the four seed draw will play defending champ and hometown favorite, the Rutgers Scarlet Knights. In the other opening round matchup, pitted against each other will be the No. 1 seed George Washington Colonials and the No. 4 seed West Virginia Mountaineers.

Here is a brief synopsis on the three other teams in the A-10 Tourney:

GEORGE WASHINGTON 9-4-6 (5-0-2 A-10): The Minutemen, in Washington D.C., fell to the Colonials 3-2 in a game which was delayed by rain. At the time of the delay UMass was winning 2-1, however the Minutemen could not hold on to the lead this past Friday and fell 3-2. The loss was especially hurting to the Minutemen, dropping them from No. 1 seed to No. 3.

According to Sam Koch, head coach of the Minutemen, George Washington possesses many fine performers.

"They have a tremendous amount of individual talent," he said. "They are really fun to watch."

WEST VIRGINIA 8-6-2 (4-3-0 A-10): UMass fell to the Mountaineers in Morgantown on October 9th, 2-0 in overtime. The game was evenly played until the extra period, when West Virginia scored early and forced the Minutemen to press the action.

Koch knows that one should not underestimate the Mountaineers, despite their No. 4 seed.

"They are a hard-running team," he said. "Their strength is that they really go forward well, and they like to run."

RUTGERS 10-7-3 (4-1-2 A-10): Back on September 26th, at Rutgers, the Minutemen put forth a valiant effort against the defending A-10 champs before settling for a 2-2 tie. Despite the outcome, the Minutemen came away knowing that they played one of their best outings on the year.

"Rutgers is a team that has some talent, a lot of talent," Koch said. "They are at home, they have the home crowd and home field. The game should be exciting."

As for the Minutemen, they do have the talent to play with anyone. It is just a matter of UMass putting their talent together with their psyches and not underestimating their opponents; something

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, Page 11

A-10 title in reach for UMass

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

The Atlantic 10 field hockey Championships take place this weekend in Piscataway, N.J., and St. Joseph's is playing to escape embarassment, Rutgers is playing for revenge, Temple is playing for their playoff lives, and the University of Massachusetts field hockey team is playing for prestige.

Two wins this weekend will give UMass an easy road to the NCAA Final Four, but they must get through their conference foes first. The winner of the A-10 Championship will be the hungriest team. If UMass is hungry, it should have no problem knocking off the likes of St. Joe's, Temple and Rutgers. If UMass comes out overconfident, the A-10 title could slip away from them for the second straight season.

If their recent performance is any indication, the Minutewomen (18-1) should have no problem locking up the title. In their last five matches, UMass has outscored their opponents 21-2. Tuesday night's 7-0 victory against Yale was a demonstration that the Minutewomen are taking no one lightly.

The St. Joseph's Hawks are the number four seed in the A-10 tourney, and they will hope to upset UMass on Saturday at 11:00 a.m. The Hawks have divebombed after a 4-1-1 start, losing 11 of their final 13 games.

Their leading goal scorer is freshman Hayley Davidson, who has amassed seven goals in 18 games, and senior Jenn Dunn is the Hawk's assist leader with five. The Hawks only win in A-10 play came against Rhode Island more than a month ago.

The Minutewomen realize St. Joe's is not a very good team, which might be what scares them. St. Joe's will play with a high intensity level on Saturday, seeing that they have nothing to lose. This is the Hawks' first ever appearance in the A-10 tourney.

"We have the same attitude that we've had all year," midfielder Joy Blenis said. "We're going in with the attitude that anyone out there could beat us, so we won't be overlooking St. Joe's."

As is the case in field hockey, a hot goaltender could stop UMass cold, and St. Joe's Coach Michelle Finnigan

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 11

Pigskin picks: Week No. ten

. . . Ladies and gentleman, the winners, and the new, undisputed best football team in the world, the Dallas Cowboys. Yes, Halloween weekend marked the beginning of a change in these United States, with America's team reemerging from Texas.

Arthur
STAPLETON

As predicted here last week, Emmitt Smith had his career day against the Eagles, rushing for 163 yards, leading the Pokes to victory. Troy Aikman finally broke his personal jinx, winning for the first time against Philadelphia in his young career.

On Sunday, these same Cowboys (7-1) travel to Turn to ART, page 10

Monday November 9, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 43

Sunny with increasing cloudiness. Highs in the 30s.

Local News:
Professional journalists gathered in the Campus Center Friday afternoon to talk about problems of diversity in newsrooms. Page 3.

Sports:
Women's soccer win their first game of the NCAA championships, beating UConn 2–1 in double overtime on Saturday. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Accord reached in minority negotiations

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

After a month of negotiations between administrators and student leaders, the University of Massachusetts agreed this weekend to provide for 40 new scholarships for minority students, increase the hiring of minority faculty, and rename Columbus Day.

With the assistance of two mediators from the U.S. Department of Justice, the two sides reached agreement in their fourth session Saturday on seven student demands concerning minority programs, safety and representation on campus. The four students and about 10 administrators participating in the negotiations also planned for security and housing programs changes.

"We've made a big step but there's still a lot of work to do," said Fabiola Narcisse, president of the Black Student Union, who attended the negotiation.

The next step is to go back to the community and broaden support, said Arnold Lizano, vice president of the Black Student Union, also present at the meeting. "We have a consensus that we're doing the right thing, but we need the community's support," he said.

The mediation sessions began last month in an effort to ease racial tensions on campus and make the general climate more inclusive of minorities on campus.

Racial tensions were sparked last month after an assault on a Black resident assistant student in Washington Tower. Francis Marchant, a non-student from Framingham, was charged with assault and battery and two civil rights violations for allegedly punching and threatening Arlens Barosy and using racial slurs.

The incident sparked protests by minority students concerned with their safety, minority representation on campus and lack of education on diversity issues.

Black, Latino, Asian and Native American student groups, represented by a coalition called ALANA, extended their original two-week deadline for the administration to act on their demands until agreement was reached.

In a report to be released today, the Massachusetts Advisory Committee to the U.S Commission on Civil

Turn to AGREEMENT, page 2

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
Chancellor Richard O'Brien, top left, and student negotiators Arnold Lizano, top right, Michelle Murphy, bottom left, and Fabiola Narcisse, bottom right, hammer out the details at Saturday's negotiation session.

U.S. report targets racism on campus

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

Students and faculty are eagerly awaiting today's release of a federally funded study on racial tensions at the University of Massachusetts, Smith College and other college campuses.

After a year of researching the racial situation and listening to 29 witnesses from UMass and Smith testify, the Massachusetts Advisory Committee to the United States Commission on Civil Rights plan to present their report, Campus Tension in Massachusetts: Searching for Solutions in the Nineties, today from 9:30 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. at Campus Center 163C.

The 46-page report starts its study of racial incidents on campus with the brawl between predominantly White Red Sox fans and predominantly Black Mets fans following the 1986 World Series. One of the 13-member committee's main goals was to research steps taken by the administration to alleviate racial tensions on campus since the 1986 incident.

Of the committee's 12 recommendations, one suggests greater faculty and student diversity. The report also proposes the federal government to provide needy minority students with scholarships or financial aid while allowing students to incorporate multicultural views into the curriculum.

"I hope it will bring attention [to racial problems on college campuses]. Because tensions at UMass and Smith have been worse than ever. Administration policies need to be set, especially with the acts of hate crimes," said Kamina A. Henderson, a Smith College student and former chairperson for the Black Students Alliance who testified for the committee last September.

Although the University has become more organized

Turn to REPORT, page 6

Arab-Israeli talks await sign from Clinton team

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Until now, the Mideast has been more on Bill Clinton's mind than the Mideast.

But the president-elect will have to tune in to that troubled region if for no other reason than the Arab-Israeli peace talks taking place at the State Department in Washington.

Conscious of the fragility of the peace process launched by the Bush administration one year ago, Clinton made a point after his election of promising continuity in U.S. Middle East policy.

Beyond that broad brush stroke, campaign advisers say, little has been filled in.

Arabs and Israelis, resuming their talks Monday after a week's break for the elections, are eagerly waiting for a signal — any signal — from the Clinton transition team.

It was the subject of a lengthy meeting Thursday between Israeli Ambassador Zalman Shoval and Dennis Ross, James Baker's top policy aide at the State Department who moved with him to the White House last August to help Bush's re-election efforts. Ross is moving back to the State Department for the remainder of the administration, and one of his prime tasks will be to shepherd the peace talks.

Clinton, in the early stages of forming his transition team, has not decided who will handle Middle Eastern issues.

A mandate from the Clinton transition is essential if Baker or State Department officials are to have any influence with the parties between now and January, experts agree.

The talks owe their birth and infancy to the skilled midwifery and nursing of former Secretary of State Baker. If they agree on nothing else, Arabs and Israelis and Democrats and Republicans are in accord on one thing — that without an active U.S. role, the negotiations will languish and die.

"If they collapse, you're looking at tremendous instability in that area," said James Zogby, president of the Arab American Institute and a prominent Democratic activist.

Clinton comes to the talks with a handicap. Real or perceived, the president-elect is viewed as a supporter of Israel who does not enjoy the same trust or personal relationships that George Bush has in the Arab world.

Clinton "needs to enhance his credibility in the Arab world," said William Quandt, a Middle East expert and former aide to President Carter.

Bush gained trust of the Arab world, in part, by daring to openly criticize the powerful pro-Israel lobby in Washington and by taking on Israel's former government over its support for Jewish settlements on Palestinian lands.

His decision to help Kuwait and defy the powerful leader of Iraq also won Bush some enduring friendships among moderate Arab leaders.

Clinton has had little if any contact with Arab leaders. He has spoken of the "ties of conscience" that bind Israel and the United States, has stated his opposition to a Palestinian state, and criticized Syria's President Hafez Assad for his "egregious" human rights abuses.

"There's a lot of apprehension about the peace process, based on campaign statements by the candidate and his staff," said Khalil Jahshan, executive director of the National Association of Arab Americans.

Journalism vs. politics

CBS producer talks political reporting

By EMILY GOLD
Collegian Correspondent

A UMass alumnus who produced this year's presidential debates gave students first hand information regarding the debates and the role of journalism in politics Friday in the Campus Center.

"The purpose of American–style journalism is to get it straight, as straight as you can possibly get it."

–Edward Fouhey

In an informal and brief lecture, Edward Fouhey, producer of the CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite, discussed the significance of journalism in American society. The lecture was sponsored by the journalism department and the Collegian, and was attended by about 15 journalism majors.

"[Debates] allow [people to] draw the differences between [candidates] very sharply," said Fouhy. "What was amazing to us was the ratings. The audience redeemed all of our hope. We have a lot of faith in people, and in this case, our faith was redeemed."

According to Fouhy, it was the concentration on issues of interest that drew a national audience of about 100 million.

"We were really focused on domestic issues, and that meant that more people could participate," he said.

"In a democracy, journalism and politics have to have a one and one relationship," Fouhy said.

"The purpose of American-style journalism is to tell it straight, as straight as you can possibly get it," said Fouhy. "We're constantly going to be criticized [for the news we report.] If you want to write opinions, that's another line of work. Being a straight news reporter is the best job there is."

Fouhy encouraged students to pursue their interest in journalism.

"There are great journalists that have worked for the Massachusetts Collegian," he said. "I hope you continue that tradition."

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
CBS producer, Edward Fouhey

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Car accident victims improving

The conditions of two University of Massachusetts undergraduates who were struck by a car last Monday night has improved, Baystate hospital officials said yesterday.

Carrie Crossland, an 18-year-old freshman who suffered head injuries in Monday's accident, is in serious condition in Baystate's Critical Care Unit, according to a nursing supervisor. She had been in critical condition until Sunday afternoon.

In addition, 18-year-old freshman Jennifer Coughlin is currently listed in good condition. She had been in fair condition until this past weekend, hospital officials said.

The two have been hospitalized since Monday, when they were struck in the northbound lane of University Drive by a car driven by Noreen Murray, 20, also a UMass student.

— GREG SUKIENNIK

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Monday, November 9, 1992

Announcement — Spring 1993 pre-registration guides will be available from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Whitmore, the second floor lobby.

Announcement — The Child Care Tuition Assistance Program is accepting applications for the spring 1993 semester from all undergraduate parents who need money to help pay for child care expenses. Applications are available in the Off Campus Housing Office, 428 Student Union, 545-0865. Deadline is Friday, December 18.

Seminar — Tau Beta Sigma is sponsoring a leadership seminar in the Campus Center Auditorium from 6:30 p.m. to 12 midnight. Admission is $20 in advance, $25 at the door.

Fair — Student Activities is sponsoring an "RSO Fair" in the Student Union Ballroom from 12 noon to 4 p.m. Admission is free.

Music — The University Chamber Choir and Madrigal Singers will be performing in the Bowker Auditorium at 4 p.m. Admission is $6 and $3.

Theater — There will be a demonstration/discussion of Macbeth in Africa. Teachers of English, drama and social studies are invited to attend. Contact Five College/Public School Partnership at 256-8316.

Tuesday, November 10, 1992

Concert — UPC is sponsoring "Al DiMeola Concert" in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Admission is $14 for students and $16 for the general public.

Needed — Volunteers are needed to prepare concret for pouring of walls of temple adjacent to the Peace Pagoda in Leverett. For information call 367-2202.

Lunch — Chabad House is sponsoring a Lunch and Learn. The topic is to be announced. Admission is $3, for more information, call 549-4094.

Play — "The Apple Orchard", a play about a land development controversy in a New England University town is playing at Hampden Theatre at 8 p.m. Tickets are $5 general public, $3 students.

Lecture — There will be a lecture on "Technology and Ethics of Women's Health Care: Fetal and Infant Technologies" by Dr. Ian Holtzman at 7:30 p.m. The lecture will take place at Smith College Wright Hall Auditorium.

Yeltsin reforms face challenge in Dec. session

By DEBORAH SEWARD
Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Boris Yeltsin kept pro-Soviet protesters from marching on Red Square, but he will find it harder to parry former Communist lawmakers who want to roll back his reforms.

Both Yeltsin and his opponents have been sharpening their rhetoric and consolidating their forces ahead of a session of the Congress of People's Deputies, or parliament, that is scheduled to open Dec. 1.

At stake when the 1,046-member parliament meets are Yeltsin's special powers that expire next month unless the Congress extends them, the fate of his reform government and plans for a referendum on a new constitution.

The session also could determine whether Yeltsin emerges with enough authority intact to keep Russia's increasingly restless regions from breaking away from Moscow's rule.

Yeltsin came under strong attack from the Congress during its last meeting in April, but the Russian president emerged from the 14-day session with his powers and his government intact.

But the economy has weakened in the six months since then, ethnic warfare has erupted on Russian soil and Yeltsin's own popularity has been slipping.

Elected in March 1990 for a 5-year term, the Congress includes a majority of former Communist Party members, many of whom oppose Yeltsin's efforts to dismantle central planning and create a market economy.

These Soviet-style politicians could try to curtail the president's special powers, force him to dump some members of his reform-minded government and slow down the pace of change.

His opponents have already denied Yeltsin's request to postpone the parliamentary session until spring, and are trying to unite pro-Communist forces with Russian nationalists.

Yeltsin has shown little patience with the hard-liners. Last month he banned the anti-reform National Salvation Front and disbanded an opposition-controlled security force.

As the 75th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution approached last week, workmen began replacing the worn cobblestones on Red Square, preventing Yeltsin's opponents from demonstrating at Lenin's Tomb on Saturday.

But the repairs and dump trucks used to block Red Square weren't really needed. Only about 20,000 people showed up for a rally in central Moscow to mark what had been the Soviet Union's most important holiday.

■ agreement

continued from page 1

Rights outlined steps toward solutions to racial tensions on campus.

Under the agreement, University officials agreed to aim for a goal of 20 percent minority freshmen by Fall 1995. They also pledged to boost the appointment of minority faculty and staff. Minority hirings have comprised 23 percent of staff and faculty appointments since 1986. Minorities now represent 10 percent of the total faculty.

The administration has also agreed to:

• Fund a substitute program for Upward Bound, a program for low-income high school students, if federal funds do not come through.

• Support partial restoration of the Legal Services Center, relative to litigation involving students and non-university entities such as landlords.

• Temporarily treat the Office of Third World Affairs as the Office of ALANA Affairs and add a teaching assistant. A task force will be assembled to determine a long-term organization for the new office.

• Provide for 40 new scholarships for students of color will be created for next year at a cost of $200,000, covering all tuition and fees. UMass will hire two new minority admissions recruiters and create an associate director position to supervise minority recruitment.

• Recommend that three more graduate students of color be added to the Minority Graduate Fellowship review committee.

• Arrange teach-ins on Columbus Day. In addition, the holiday will be renamed for campus use.

• Hire additional police and security personnel over the next three years to improve campus security and implement a diversity training program for all security personnel.

Both sides recognized Saturday's agreement as a first step and praised the mediation process in bringing them together and opening the lines of communication.

"This sets a climate for dealing with issues and that the way to do it is through negotiation and cooperation," said mediator Marty Walsh.

Acknowledging that not everything is solved, Chancellor Richard O'Brien said he was "extremely pleased."

"We're all part of the problem and the solution," said O'Brien. "We're talking for the whole campus and this is a very effective first step in drawing in others to continue."

"A concrete foundation has been built, but the rest of the house is needed to be built," said freshmen Penny Cameron, a member of the BSU and ALANA coalition present at the session.

Students now plan to take the agreement back to their constituencies for feedback and support. They said they recognized the agreement with the administration to be an on-going process.

CAFE DICARLO
5-College Student Dinner Special
Choice of:
• Lasagna al Forno
• Chicken Parmigiana
• Shrimp all' Arrabbiata
• Pasta Primavera
Complete Italian Dinner, including choice of entreé, salad, bread, soda or coffee for $6.95, with college I.D.
Sunday thru Thursday 11:30 to 10:00.
Offer expires Nov. 30, 1992
71 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA
253-9300

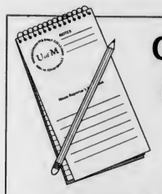
LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton /Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

CTB CENTRAL TRAVEL
Clip & Save
Bring This Coupon to "CENTRAL TRAVEL" And Save
$25.00 or $50.00 Off* on Continental Airlines
549-4900
CENTRAL TRAVEL
25A Pray St., Amherst
(In the D.H. Jones Real Estate Building)

For the Serious Student
• Quiet Condo Living
• Convenient
• Affordable
• Flexible
THE BROOK
253-3834

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9)
Amherst • 253-5072

Local News



CAMPUS SHORTS

compiled by David Massey

Raging Minuteman

Since Alex Dugan plays flute for the University Marching Band, her quiet instrument doesn't give her a chance to play with the raucous Hoops Band. But she may have a chance to play a vital role in the phenomenal success of the men's basketball team.

She's hoping to be the new mascot of the Minutemen basketball team, decked out in a custom-designed Minuteman costume to liven up the roaring fans. Dugan is one of about 10 students participating in tryouts tomorrow night to see who has what it takes to charge up a crowd with a cowbell and a cheer.

"I have been working on cheers and trying to psyche myself up for it," said the junior biology major. "By participating in the marching band, I have a lot of school spirit. Being a mascot, I can carry that enthusiasm to the crowd."

Her competition will be the likes of Scott Rosner, a sports management graduate student, who's also trying out for the position. During his undergraduate days at the University of Michigan, his roomate was the unofficial basketball team mascot — Wooly the Wolverine.

"He was a big influence on me," said Rosner. "He had a great time with it. I was talking to him and he said, 'Yeah, definitely do it.'"

This is the first time the University Athletic Department has sponsored official tryouts to find a student to fill the unpayed position of being the official team mascot and travelling with the basketball team on road trips.

Margaret Driscoll, the assistant to the director of the Athletic Department, is looking forward to the Tuesday night auditions to discover which student can "stimulate the crowd."

"We're basically going to leave it up to the imagination of whoever is trying out," Driscoll said. She's looking for "someone who can keep the crowd excited and keep the spirit of the game going." A panel of judges will choose the most spirited student.

If all goes as planned, the new mascot will be unveiled for the Central Connecticut game on Dec. 5. The flexible, unisex costume was designed by the South Carolina-based Scollon Productions, who have designed such costumes as the "Energizer Bunny," "Bugs Bunny" and "Tweety Bird."

The costume, Driscoll says, is designed to resemble a Minuteman soldier, complete with oversized head and feet, a hat emblazoned with the UMass logo, a maroon vest, black pants and boots which can be worn over sneakers.

"We wanted a character that was larger than life and animated," said Driscoll. The new mascot is being financed by the official campus basketball fan club, the Minutemaniac Booster Club.

Can't beat the real thing

Scott Rogala has a Coke habit — Classic Coke, that is. "It's gotta' be Classic Coke," says this junior undecided major. "I can tell the difference."

Rogala drinks three 2-litre bottles of Coke every week during the semester. During finals week last year, he downed seven bottles in one week.

A 2-litre bottle of Coke was recently priced at $1.69 at the campus Munchy stores. So Rogala figures he shells out approximately $100 a semester to satisfy his fix.

Rogala isn't sure the headaches he sometimes suffers are related to his caffeine addiction. Nevertheless, he's trying to wean himself off the soda by drinking milk at meals.

"[Coke] doesn't exactly taste great — it's a weird dilemma," says Rogala. "All I know is that I want to get away from it."

A study published last month in the New England Journal of Medicine found that people who are accustomed to drinking a few cans of caffeinated soda can feel flu-like symptoms when they don't satisfy their cravings.

"Anyone who drinks two or more servings of caffeinated beverages per day is at risk for possible withdrawal effects," said Dr. John R. Hughes of the University of Vermont.

The study said doctors should now question their patients to see if their complaints of headaches and fatigue are due to caffeine withdrawal.

Rogala, who usually drinks Coke to help him stay awake while studying at night, says, "It's a bad habit."

Panel of journalists examines newsroom diversity problems

By PAUL PRECHT
Collegian Staff

Because she is a lesbian, Ellen Kleig, assistant city editor for The Boston Globe, has received "internal hate mail," Kleig said at a forum on race, gender and sexuality in the newsroom on Friday at the campus center.

"It's rough out there," Kleig told the audience at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Kleig added that "99 percent of people at the Globe are accepting."

"Newsrooms are changing," according to Athelia Knight, a Black woman who has worked for The Washington Post for 18 years as a reporter. In 1978, racial minorities represented 4 percent of newsroom employees, Knight said. In the spring of 1992 they represented 9.4 percent of newsroom employees.

But the affirmative action policies that are changing the composition of newsrooms nationwide are spurring resentment among many White employees, according to Stephen J. Simurda, a freelance journalist who wrote an article on the subject for the Columbia Journalism Review.

A White reporter told Simurda, who is White, that when he sees a Black reporter, "I want to see their resume."

"Fifty percent of all daily newspapers don't have a minority journalist," Simurda said. Minorities continue to be underrepresented among editors and managers in part because they have only recently broken into the field and don't have the years of experience, according to Simurda.

"Newsrooms have to employ people of diverse backgrounds" and people who are "open to different opinions" if they are to "appeal to a broad spectrum of readers," Knight said.

"We have to put aside our baggage" of prejudices, Knight said.

Simurda echoed this thought, saying the issues of diversity are even more difficult in the "real world" than they are on college campuses.

Diversity at the Collegian continues to be a subject of dispute. Last spring, protests led to negotiations over control over the newspaper. Two former editors of the Third World Affairs page are currently suing the Collegian over the status of graduate student particiaption in the organization.

Kleig and the other panelist criticized the use of special affairs editors and pages although they said they did not have the knowledge to comment on the specific situation at the Collegian.

"It balkanizes the paper," Kleig said. Editors and reporters from different backgrounds "have to learn to work together. The larger question is whether those issues will get covered without those editors," Kleig said.

Kleig also differentiated between the role of a journalist and the role of an advocate. As an "out" lesbian, Kleig said she makes a special effort to make sure people do not think she has a special "agenda."

Knight also criticized those who assume Black journalists are only interested in "Black" issues. She cited the example of a Black journalist who served as the Post's bureau chief in Moscow.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

SAVE SOMALIA — Loose Caboose plays at a benefit dance Friday night to help feed the starving in Somalia.

BGLAD week forges awareness

Program reaches out, offers celebration and education

By AARON-JOHN RICADELA
Collegian Staff

Celebrating gay people and culture and educating heterosexual students about gay issues is what the third annual Bisexual, Gay, Lesbian Awareness Days which ended on Friday were all about, according to the director of the Program for Gay Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns.

This year's BGLAD, which is sponsored by the program comprised of 14 events including workshops, speakers and a dance, said program Director Felice Yeskel. She said the week complemented the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance spring awareness week.

"When students came in the spring, many decided that UMass was a safe place to come out, but then they had to go straight home to their friends and families and be accepted," said Yeskel. "We decided to do BGLAD in the fall to give them time to adjust before going home."

Although the University of Massachusetts is one of about 10 universities with any kind of administrative GLB program, Yeskel believes the program cannot totally eliminate homophobia.

"It's all relative. It's safer to come out here than most places, but there are people who are homophobic with closed minds who give people grief. So anyone's experience is going to be mixed. Just because we have all these wonderful programs doesn't mean anything negative won't happen," said Yeskel. She said students broke a window at the program office in Southwest's Crampton House and ripped down campus posters.

LGBA member John Beck said the Halloween-eve broken window was a sad start to the week.

"It made me wonder what I could do to reach out to those people and help them deal with their hate and their fear. I think fear is the main thing that motivates them," he said.

Despite the negative start, Yeskel said the week helped forge a multicultural community.

Events included a Halloween dance, comedy, films, gay issue seminars and an election return watch. Beck said low turnout by straight students was the most disappointing part of the week.

"I spoke at the seminar called 'Everything you always wanted to know about queers but were afraid to ask.' for heterosexual students. I was happy with the questions that were asked, but like most of the events, the audience was very, very small and it bums me out. This is a free service and it can be a lot of fun," Beck said.

"The main problem with BGLAD is that word doesn't get out enough," he said.

Beck said the week's highlight was author George Lakey's keynote address last Wednesday about homosexual liberation after the election. He said although the

Turn to BGLAD, page 6

Prof. looks at historic aftermath

Speech highlights relationship between U.S. and China

By GEORGE ZHU
Collegian Staff

In both China and the United States, 20 years have passed since the trauma of the Cultural Revolution and the Vietnam War. But New York University Professor Marilyn Young says historic questions remain.

Who did these things? Was it us? How could we with our glorious history and great civilization have done such terrible things?

"How these questions are answered speaks centrally to the future of the country rather than its past," said Young. "And how we are brought to remember the past has a great deal to do with how we are able to live in the present."

For almost 20 years, the governments in both countries have "tried to establish and retain a monopoly on the interpretation" of the Cultural Revolution and the Vietnam War, Young said.

Young made the remarks in her speech Thursday titled "In the Aftermath of Revolution: Post-Vietnam America, Post-Cultural Revolution China" as part of the 1992 John Lax Memorial Lecture at Mount Holyoke College.

Young has authored publications such as "The Rhetoric of an Empire: American China Policy 1895-1901," "Women in China: Studies in Social Change and Feminism," and "The Vietnam Wars: 1945-1990."

Young said both in the United States and China the unpleasant past has again caught people's attention.

A high-tech aerial photo of the Laotian jungle recently shown on television seemed to reinforce speculations of American POW/MIAs still alive in Indo-China, she said. And over 15 years after his death, Young added, familiar portraits of Mao are again seen in many taxicabs and buses in China.

"Probably no country in the 20th century is free of historic trauma," Young said. "And everywhere the victims insist that each horror be remembered, the perpetrators are often more insisting that all be forgotten, which is of course another way of remembering."

For everyone the horror must be interpreted and integrated into the nation's history as well as the personal history of all who survived, and in many cases the integration can be fairly straightforward, according to Young.

"For the Vietnamese, the American invasion of South Vietnam resembled earlier invasions by the Chinese, the Japanese and the French, as did the forms of the resistance," Young said.

"To be sure, the American war lasted longer and took far greater toll than earlier resistance struggles," Young said. "However, there was nothing in the nature of the war to leave the Vietnamese to question themselves or their understanding of the Vietnamese past."

Young added both the Cultural Revolution and the Vietnam War "violated the dominated basic paradigm within which the Chinese and Americans understood the history of their societies and themselves."

3rd RSO fair to showcase involvement

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

The third annual Registered Student Organization Fair will be offering free food, free T-shirts, live entertainment, raffles and opportunity for involvement today in the Student Union Ballroom.

"The RSO Fair provides a great opportunity for the entire 5-College community to learn about the diversity of activities produced by UMass RSOs," said Assistant Dean of Students Edward Korza.

According to the RSO programming assistant, Gloria Santa Anna, the RSO Fair was developed in 1990 by a steering committee of RSO leaders, the Undergraduate Student Government Association and the Division of Student Activities.

"People realized the RSOs needed a vehicle to showcase their programs to the UMass community," Santa Anna said.

Student Trustee Kevin Newnan said the fair provides an opportunity for students to see what groups are on campus and to meet people in these organizations.

"The fair is easily accessible to students interested in joining an organization and enables organizations to attract more members," Newnan said.

Santa Anna said out of the 200 RSOs, 47 are going to have booths set up in the SUB. "This year the RSOs have been more generous in donating prizes for the raffles and offering to help set up and clean up for the fair," she said.

Scott Kaufman, co-facilitator of the Distinguished Visitors Program, said the fair is a good way to get students interested in the RSOs. "The DVP is hoping to expose to students to our organization and tell them what it is all about so we can recruit new members," he said.

Adam Goldman, chairperson of the Theater Guild, said the fair is a good opportunity to advertise their new shows. "Members of the Hair cast are going to perform some songs and the Midsummer's Night Dream cast will act out segments of the play," he said.

Santa Anna said the RSOs can't survive without a continuous influx of students. "If students go to the Fair they will realize how rich this campus is in RSOs.

"There is no reason for students to feel bored or isolated on this campus because there is something for everyone no matter what your gender, religion or interests," Santa Anna said.

DiGeronimo Brothers
VICTORY Super Markets
10 University Drive - Amherst
WE RESERVE THE RIGHT TO LIMIT QUANTITIES. VICTORY SUPER MARKETS ARE NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS.
And Now Introducing at Our Amherst Victory...
BayBank And... Quick Pays or CHARGE IT
STORE HOURS: Mon. - Sat. 7am-9pm Sundays Noon - 8pm
Prices Effective thru Friday, November 13, 1992.
USDA Select Beef Loin Porterhouse or T-Bone Steaks $2.99 Lb.
VICTORY COUPON — Nepco Meat Franks 1 Lb. Pkg. SAVE $3.98 Buy 1...Get... 2 FREE
Hills Bros. Ground Coffee 12-13 Oz. Can • All Purpose • Colombian • French Roast • Perfect Balance 99¢
VICTORY COUPON — Colonial Smoked Kielbasa (14-16 Oz. Avg.) SAVE $5.98 Buy 1...Get... 2 FREE
Imperial Margarine Quarters 16 Oz. Pkg. In The Dairy... 3 For $1
VICTORY COUPON PLU 901 — Domino Sugars 16 Oz. Pkg. • Confectioners • Light Brown 25¢
2 Liter Bottle Coke • Classic • Caffeine Free Classic • Diet • Caffeine Free Diet • Sprite • Diet Sprite 99¢ Plus Dep.
VICTORY COUPON PLU 902 — Ocean Spray Cranberry Sauce 16 Oz. Can • Whole • Jellied 25¢
Victory Potato Chips 6 Oz. Bag • Regular • Ripple 79¢
VICTORY COUPON PLU 903 — Chicken of the Sea Chunk Light Tuna 6.125 Oz. Can • In Oil • In Water 25¢
Fresh Baked...Dutch Apple Pie 8 Inch (27 Oz.) At Our Bakery... $2.29 Each Nutritious Golden Ripe Bananas In Our Produce Dept... 29¢ Lb.

Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
Monday Night Football
Pre-Game Buffet
Mexican Buffet
All You Can Eat $3.00
Half-Time Appetizer Blitz
1/2 Price
49ers at Falcons
MONDAY NIGHT IS MILLER TIME!
Total Score Pool • Prizes
- Monday Night Stumper -
Drawing for Pats Tickets and Limo Ride
Week 17
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

UMass' bridges fall short

Well, it looks like we made TV again. On Oct. 28, I was walking to Franklin D.C. to consume one of those delicious entrees they call lunch when I noticed a camera crew setting up in front of the campus pond on the Fine Arts Center's steps.

Liz Walker, from WBZ-TV 4 in Boston, was standing at the edge of the pond rehearsing her spiel and trying to come up with an opening line. She said something about, "This university is supposed to be a bridge of safety. . ." Then she giggled and told the woman next to her that this line didn't work, but she wanted to work the bridge behind her into the introduction monologue.

Steven L.
COHEN

As I sat in the D.C. digesting my duchess beef pie, a revelation popped into my head and I could have sworn I saw a light bulb hovering over my head for a moment or two. It must have been something I ate.

What is it that Dr. Abel says? "Happiness is in the palm of your hand?" Well, Liz had the perfect analogy for UMass within reach but she failed to grasp it. That bridge represents UMass so well that I may be forced to mix my metaphors.

Here at UMass, we have a problem that separates us like the pond separates its opposite banks. That problem is prejudice in the forms of racism, anti-Semitism, homophobia and ignorance. The administration is supposed to forge a bridge of peace, awareness and safety from one side to the other. Except, like the bridge over the pond, they only go three-fourths of the way across and then stop. If you try to continue without the bridge or the administration then you are destined to fall in.

So what good is the bridge? I walked out there this afternoon to see. It takes you part of the way across and then provides you with a great view. The campus looks so tranquil and aesthetic from there that I felt like everything was okay. You can't even see all the pollution; it's behind you. Does this sound familiar to anyone as far as policy is concerned? You'd almost think they planned it!

What about the centers and houses set up by the administration to help and give support? They are great, except that they are designed to add support to the existing structure, not to finish the bridge. Are we doomed by this design flaw?

Do not fret. All hope is not lost. Every year the ROTC sets up a rope bridge across the pond. It has less actual structure than the real bridge and requires much greater effort to cross it, but it can get you all the way and if you falter and end up with the ducks, someone in a canoe will help you and ferry you to land.

Metaphorically, this could contain the answer. I wish I knew. I don't claim to have all the answers. The last person who did that got nailed to a cross. I can only make these observations and then ask you to think. If happiness is in the palm of your hand, don't make a fist.

If the administration is serious about doing something this time, then I have a suggestion for something to openly remind us of the talks between them and the campus' minority groups: collaborate with the art and engineering departments to create a sculpture or monument that completes the bridge. I know we are in a recession, but it couldn't cost any more than that silly piece of useless maroon sheet metal that stands on the other side of the Fine Arts Center. The University could even pay for it by selling their single greatest natural resource, the red tape they manufacture at Whitmore. It is a product all consumers should have the unique pleasure of experiencing.

Steven L. Cohen is a UMass student.

Jeffries' speech spurs discussion

The Chancellor's Commission on Civility in Human Relations recognizes the potential opportunity that Dr. Leonard Jeffries' speech affords for campus-wide discussion of some of the controversial and emotionally-charged issues splintering this campus.

We understand the anxieties of those who fear that Dr. Jeffries' talk will promote anti-Semitism and other forms of bigotry, and we understand the hopes of others that this occasion will reinforce efforts to foster respect for people of color on campus. We call upon faculty, administrators, staff and students to participate in the discussions in residence halls and elsewhere this week and immediately following Dr. Jeffries' presentation Thursday evening to explore these issues and build sturdy bridges of mutual understanding.

Those faculty willing to participate as discussion leaders or participants in residence halls and other forums are urged to contact Anne Miller, associate housing director, at 545-1964.

Joyce Berkman
David Schimmel
Co-Chairs
Chancellor's Commission on Civility in Human Relations

Aquaman: the ruler or enslaver of the seas?

The scene is familiar to any ignoramus who grew up watching the likes of Gleek and the Wonder Twins panter around the marbled floors of the Hall of Justice. Suddenly, as though from above, a God-like voice reports some distant trouble that requires the immediate help of the Justice League. Superman tears off his clothes, Wonder Woman flies around in an invisible plane (why or how this is feasible we don't know, nor do we question) and then there's Aquaman.

My roommate Dan's face lit up when I told him he reminded me of Aquaman. "Really? You think so?" he says as he gets up and starts to suck in his stomach and pop out his chest, faintly mirroring Aquaman's stoic animated stance. "He's great, you know. Ruler of the seas, he was."

At this point I'm just staring at my morning eggs and coffee, left to muse for a moment, letting my UMass argumentative mind shift into gear. I smelled abuse and I was primed to fight about it. Out of nowhere I crash Dan's mental party and state plainly, "Aquaman was a jerk."

"What do you mean he was a jerk?"

"I mean he was a jerk. Look at what he did to those poor whales, dolphins, sharks and whatever other species of water-based mammal that happened to be within radius of his mysterious radio waves that somehow got all the fish to pull a U-turn and report. Do you really think they wanted to cart him around on their backs to the scene of the crime?"

"They didn't care. They were his friends; they liked Aquaman." At this point Dan is upset and hurt; he's being forced to question a previously unquestionable figure in his life. Always a hard thing to do.

"No, no, no. That's bull. They were forced to report once those stupid white echoing lines caught up to them." I'm on a roll. Not only am I arguing on my feet, but as any good debater or chess player knows, in order to win the battle you've got to think three steps ahead of your opponent. "And haven't you noticed that they're never going in the same direction as they're needed? It's probably because they're thinking, 'Let's get as far away from Aquaman as we can before he uses his signal again.'"

Feeling pretty pleased, I quieted down to let Dan throw in some meaningless retort. By now Dan had resorted to mumbling about Solomon Grundy and the Legion of Doom. I was pleased; I got to finish my cold eggs and Dan was left to ponder past episodes of "Superfriends."

Someone once said, "For those who believe no amount of proof is necessary; for those who doubt no amount will suffice." That's the way it goes.

Pat Borelli
Amherst

SGA handles money, not moral judgments

It's ironic a university committed to that catch word "diversity" has a Student Government Association which feels that it can make judgment calls any time the mood hits them.

Officers of the SGA: you are allocating my money!

It's not for you to decide who can speak at this institution. Do your job: allocate money, not moral prescriptions. Withholding money from any organization that is going to educate me is theft.

If you are going to get into the business of monitoring those whose speech offends, attend the countless number of classes at this institution where offensive, racist bigotry is exhaled daily by tenured professors paid by the University. I do.

As far as Leonard Jeffries is concerned, you decide. If you're offended, be offended. I'm offended on a daily basis.

To sum up, there should not have been any discussion about the speaker, but about the money.

Michele Monteiro
Central

Hillel opposes speaker's bigotry

"Dr." Leonard Jeffries is an up and front anti-Semite. His message of hate has been challenged by politicians and religious leaders of varying backgrounds and philosophies. Dr. Jeffries has accused Jews of financing the slave trade and, along with their co-conspirators, the Italians, having denigrated Blacks in films.

He also believes in a perverse, reverse Aryan superiority theory, claiming that the melanin the Blacks' skin somehow makes them more "peaceful" and "sunny," unless they come under the corrupting influence of the "ice culture" in Europe. His hate is nondiscriminatory. He attacks Black men who marry White women, caustically derides "faggots," and lauded the Challenger space shuttle disaster.

It is for these reasons that Hillel, the Jewish student organization at UMass, condemns the upcoming "lecture" by Jeffries. We believe his appearance on campus is provocative, and will divide this already splintered campus.

We are further insulted by Sandra West's article on the Black Affairs page (Collegian, Nov. 4). Not only does she make several inaccurate statements concerning Jeffries, she lowers herself by engaging in classic Jew-baiting. She warns Jeffries detractors not to "crucify" the messenger. It is obvious that she is trying to link Jeffries with Jesus, thus resurrecting the age old anti-Semitic falsehood by charging the Jews with deicide.

We urge the campus community as a whole to reject Jeffries' bigotry. There has been much talk about fighting racism. Here is an excellent opportunity to prove one's mettle. We must not let Jeffries' hate go unchallenged.

Josh Slomich
President, UMass Hillel

Finger-pointing offers no solution

I could not help but respond to Cara Lee Birch's editorial titled, "Combating racism, weather permitting (Collegian, Nov. 3)." Miss Birch's angry condemnation of the administration, staff and all attempts of racial awareness are understandable but very misdirected. She offers only harsh judgment in her editorial, and no solutions.

Miss Birch rejects the concept of "healing" racism completely. Her analysis of the Institute for the Healing of Racism is obviously uninvestigated, otherwise she would know that one of the things the Institute discusses is how racism is seeped into every aspect and system in this society. She seems to think that racism only affects the victim.

How can we fight racism without trying to heal the wounds of the victims and without changing the processes that cause the perpetration?

The A.S.A.P., the Institute for the Healing of Racism, the vigil to protest racism, and the desire of the administration and staff to multiculturalize the campus are not efforts to be booed out of recognition. Would you have the faculty and staff ignorant and unwilling to face this problem? These people have real influence on the students and it is more destructive to have them be unaware. These efforts are aimed at the real source of racism: every one of us. Racism comes from within each person, which is reflected in the system. How does Miss Birch propose to deal with the problem? Providing opportunities for all the members of this campus to be together and experience each other is a way to create awareness.

The daily violence can only be changed through the personal efforts of every student, teacher and administrator as they go about their everyday business. It has to be dealt with constantly and consistently. Throwing blame and anger at the problem doesn't begin to deal with it constructively.

Cheryl M. Thomas
Northeast

■ report

continued from page 1

in dealing with civil complaints, the University should not cut back any more multicultural activities because of budget cuts, according to Haim Gunner, a School of Public Health professor who spoke before the committee.

David Schimmel, an education professor and Civility Commission co-chairperson, said he would like to see the restoration of the racial and religious sensitivity training it once had in the dormitories.

■ BGLAD

continued from page 3

students at the events take a vow of confidentiality, they were free to discuss topics in general terms.

"I found George Lakey a very interesting person. His speech helped me deal with other people's fears and reactions and helped me confront some of my own fears and insecurities," said Beck. He said he anticipated more publicity for the spring awareness week.

Yeskel said students who missed last week's events could show up at any Brown Bag at noon Mondays on the ninth floor of the Campus Center, or at the Thursday night film series at 7 p.m. in the same place.

Big money even bigger in '92

Fat-cat donors equalled reelection in '92 campaigns

By JOHN SOLOMON
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Big money was bigger than ever in the 1992 election. An estimated $100 million poured into the presidential election from corporations and fat-cat donors — exactly the kind of donations that post-Watergate reforms sought to eliminate by financing White House campaigns with tax dollars.

In the congressional races, big spending equaled winning once again, as all but a few incumbents survived the anti-Washington mood of the electorate. As usual, their warchests got plenty of help from political action committees.

"More than in any other election, in 1992 you saw the failure of existing campaign-finance laws and rules," lamented Ellen Miller, executive director of the watchdog Center for Responsive Politics.

"I think we're worse off today than before watergate, because there is more big money than ever," she said.

One man who observed the abuses of that era, former Senate Watergate committee chief counsel Samuel Dash, agreed. "I think once again we're in a situation unfortunately where money is buying power," he said.

But Dash said Bill Clinton's incoming administration is poised to make a change, noting that the Democrat has already said he would have signed the sweeping campaign finance reform bill passed by Congress earlier this year but vetoed by President Bush.

That bill would have eliminated the so-called soft money loophole that unions and corporations, forbidden from donating directly to candidates, have used to plow large sums of money, often upwards of $100,000, to the political parties.

"It will be difficult for Clinton to back away from that," Dash said.

Christine Varney, general counsel to Clinton's campaign, predicted campaign finance reform would be a concern "early on. . . . He's committed to real change," she said.

Clinton's own campaign benefited much from the Democratic Party's explosion of soft money from rich donors who'll now have an interest in the policies his administration crafts.

The same types of fat-cat donations to presidential candidates during the Watergate era led Congress to change the rules. They limited individual contributions to $1,000 per candidate per election, refined the prohibition against corporate donations, and eneded presidential candidates' reliance on private money by fully financing their campaigns and conventions with tax dollars.

But the "soft-money" loophole in those rules allowed the huge private contributions to continue, as general-purpose gifts to the political parties.

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues

The Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues editor position at the Collegian is now open.

Apply at 113 Campus Center
545–3500

Ask for Brooke C. Wheeler
The Collegian is an E/O/E

DID YOU FORGET TO SIGN UP [illegible]?

DID YOU HAVE PROBLEMS USING THE VOICE RESPONSE SYSTEM?

IF SO, COME SEE US AT 235 WHITMORE BY NOVEMBER 12TH AND WE'LL BE HAPPY TO RESERVE YOUR CURRENT ROOM FOR YOU.

IF YOU WANT TO RESERVE A DIFFERENT ROOM IN YOUR BUILDING CONTACT YOUR CLUSTER OFFICE WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 18TH TO FIND OUT IF YOU CAN RESERVE A DIFFERENT ROOM. THANK YOU.

Bullets scarce for defenders in Sarajevo

By TERRY LEONARD
Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Ammunition is so scarce in this besieged Bosnian capital that its defenders must train with air rifles.

To the north and northwest, refugees with little more than the clothes they are wearing march forlornly in columns that stretch for miles.

For those who keep track, maps of Bosnia are now sorry sketches of dead and dying cities in flame and ruin. The strategic towns of Jajce and Bosanski Brod and Olovo remain under relentless siege.

"It is quite obvious that Bosnia-Herzegovina, although advanced some months ago as a sovereign and independent state, doesn't exist any more as a proper state," said Zdravko Grebo, a law professor and former Bosnian army spokesman.

"Two-thirds of the territory is occupied," he said. "The Bosnians cannot take back all the territory they have lost. And if they did, what would they have? Nothing but wasteland."

Ejup Ganic, a Muslim member of Bosnia's collective presidency, believes the Serbs want to finish in Bosnia before Dec. 20 elections in neighboring Serbia. The elections are expected to test the political resiliency of nationalists intent on building an expanded Serbia.

Ganic and others in the government say the West must lift an arms embargo before then if Bosnia is to have any chance to defend itself.

"The radical Serbs are trying to destroy more each day," he said. "It is no secret that we are running out of ammunition."

Bosnia is also running out of time.

"Since winter is coming, even one month is too long," said Taric Haveric of the opposition Liberal Party.

"We need the embargo to be lifted and for the international community to give us defensive weapons," he said. "We don't intend to attack Belgrade, just defend Sarajevo."

Perhaps as ominous for Bosnia as the lack of weaponry is the steady collapse of a Croat-Muslim alliance against the Serbs.

Bosnia's Croats and Muslims voted together last February for independence form Yugoslavia, and they fought together against Serbs who rebelled with the help of the Yugoslav federal army.

But Muslims and Croats recently clashed openly in several fierce battles for control of central Bosnian towns. Nobody knows how much longer the shaky alliance can last.

A U.N. officer, speaking on condition of anonymity, predicted that the central town of Travnik would fall soon, after Croats abandon their Muslim co-defenders. Some military commanders allege that Croatian defenders simply gave up Bosanski Bord, the last government outpost in a northern corridor linking Serb-held regions in eastern and western Bosnia.

Ganic said Jajce fell because Croatian President Franjo Tudjman cut off its supply of ammunition, a charge Tudjman denies.

But Tudjman has urged Bosnia to accept the inevitability of breaking up into ethnic regions, a plan pushed by Serbs almost from the start.

Arts & Living

Words & Pictures of a comics master

By KIP MANLEY
Collegian Staff

To the Heart of the Storm
Will Eisner
Kitchen Sink Press

What we have here is an exceptionally difficult book to review.

No one has come as close as Will Eisner has to mastering every conceivable aspect of drawing comics. Not only in terms of technical drawing skill — which has been honed razor-sharp by over 50 years of experience — but also his ability to set a stage, to use light and shadow to convey mood, to manipulate the reader's perceptions of time and space, to guide the eye across the page in the best possible way to tell the story he wants to tell.

Eisner practically invented some of the most innovative storytelling techniques this medium has ever seen, and his accomplishments of even 50 years ago remain untouchable by most of today's artists. His textbook, Comics as Sequential Art, is essential reading for anyone who seriously contemplates writing or drawing comics.

And yet, until now, I've never met an Eisner story I liked. His masterful visual storytelling has effortlessly guided me time and again through hokey allegories, stock characters, recycled morals, and bad dialogue. Reading Eisner has always been for me an exercise in the exquisite frustration of a bad story beautifully told.

Now we have To the Heart of the Storm, a 208-page comic that is a "thinly disguised autobiography." It begins in 1942, on a troop train carrying new recruits south from New York City to an unspecified boot camp. As the train pulls away from the station, our protagonist, Willie, gazes out the window and thinks back on his life so far and what has led him to make the decision to enlist in the World War.

Storm suffers from some of the same problems as all of Eisner's stories. You wince at some of the more contrived sequences, such as the openings of both his mother's and his father's flashbacks, where one can almost hear the harps and strings and see the page wavering and blurring away. And Eisner's marked admiration for the stories of O. Henry is once again very much in evidence throughout.

But you are more than willing to indulge him in these excesses because the story that he tells is so damned interesting — and important as well.

As Willie reminisces, we see not only his story of growing up in Depression-era New York, but also, in their own words, his mother's and father's stories of growing up in turn-of-the-century New York and Vienna, respectively. And even though Eisner's stated intention is to detail the "insidious prejudice that permeated my world," this never sinks the comic with heavy-handed moralizing.

The story is told very matter-of-factly. This is what happened, this is how we responded, sometimes things got better, sometimes they got worse. The details shine here, whether in the little episodes that structure the story, in the characters as they grow and change through the years, or in the meticulous art, which is Eisner at his peak.

As these anecdotes weave themselves through Willie's life, we begin to see the long-term effects of prejudice and hatred, whether based on anti-Semitism or race or money or class or gender or something so specific as the distrust between German and Austrian Jews.

Willie's mother's family disintegrates despite her best efforts to hold it together, her older brother going so far as to renounce religion, culture, and family for a shot at medical school.

And his father has to give up his dreams of art because of his flight from Europe and war. He tries set painting for Broadway theaters for a while, but has to turn to ill-fated business ventures such as furniture or furs that he doesn't anything to do with, all so he can feed his family. And Willie himself learns to be ashamed of his parents' Jewishness — and his own — when it comes between him and his friends.

These loosely connected episodes come together beautifully in the end, as World War II looms on the horizon and Willie must decide whether he will enlist in the fight or remain behind. Both sides of the argument are handled with respect, and the decision comes as a natural conclusion to the story, rather than forced patriotism or false sentiment.

One is left with the feeling of having watched a really good. . . oh, say, Frank Capra film. To the Heart of the Storm is well told, beautifully drawn — but somewhat anachronistic.

Because the real problem with Eisner is not his occasional lapses into the hokey or the lugubrious, but that Eisner learned how to write in the comic strips and comic books of the 1940s, and while he has gotten much better over the years, he still writes from that point of view and that mindset.

For instance, Cast of Thousands cartoonist Barry Deutsch tells a story of having taken a class from Eisner a couple of years ago. Eisner was lecturing one day on the foundations of storytelling — specifically, metaphor — and using a recently completed comic of his own as an example.

The comic involved a man falling ever deeper in debt to the mob, losing his shirt at the track, and generally watching his life crumble before his very eyes. In the end, he throws himself from a bridge.

Eisner projected the last panel onto the screen. The man had disappeared beneath

Turn to STORM, page 8

Voices of Sepharad sing of ancient traditions

By ILANA GOLDWASSER
Collegian Correspondent

Voices of Sepharad
Bezanson Recital Hall
Nov. 5

1992 is the quincentennial of the expulsion of the Jews from Spain, and on Thursday, Voices of Sepharad, a four person ensemble, explored through song and dance those Spanish Jewish cultural traditions which originated in Medieval Spain. Sepharad is the Hebrew word for these traditions.

Aside from several chairs, microphone stands, the instruments and two umbrellas shrouded in bright and colorful tapestries, the stage appeared empty. Yet the vibrant, energetic movements of Judith Brin Ingber, the dancer and choreographer of the troupe, easily filled the stage's void. The talents of flamenco guitarist Scott Davies, percussionist Mick LaBriola and lead vocalist David Harris complimented the dancing, emitting a warmth and passion that quickly engaged the audience.

"The entire range of human emotion is embraced by [these songs]... we have learned a lot about the world through singing these songs."

David Harris
lead vocalist for Voices of Sepharad

The songs have messages and meanings for all occasions and sentiments. As Harris explained, "The entire range of human emotion is embraced by [these songs]... we have learned a lot about the world through singing these songs. I believe it has universal appeal." Brin Ingber emphasized after the concert how the music is not disconnected with the present, and that the lessons and messages of life the songs tell still hold true today.

There was an instrumental duet by LaBriola and Davies, whose purpose was to demonstrate the various percussion instruments played. LaBriola is a Reggae artist who is very familiar with Arabic music and Davies is a highly skilled flamenco guitarist. The combined talents resulted in an emotionally charged and impressive display of Sephardic music. LaBriola had a solo in the middle of the duet. The way he altered the tones of the percussion instruments by cupping his hand and bringing it up the length of the bongo skin, in addition to the rapid poundings of his fingers was captivating. The natural movements of his body added to the intensity of his presentation.

Two of the more somber and memorable acts represented events of Jewish history. The first one took place in the royal court of Spain, where Brin Ingber and Harris addressed the court through song, proposing the infamous Inquisition. The melodic guitar and rhythmic percussion instruments served as a background to the stirring performance. At the end of the song Brin Ingber and Harris announce that to expel the Jews is the real remedy and that the Jews are never to return to Spain.

Voices of Sepharad had recently taken a trip to Poland, where they visited the most notorious of the death camps, Auschwitz. Brin Ingber told the audience how they walked through one of the barracks, which was filled with piles of eyeglasses and suitcases with people's names on them. Seeing a glass case in the corner of the building, Brin Ingber walked over to it, hoping that it contained something that would relieve some of the pain she was feeling, she said. In it was a pile of pacifiers.

This experience influenced the strongest act of the performance. The music was slow and soft and Brin Ingber walked onto the stage carrying a baby wrapped in a blanket. She moved gracefully, smiling at her baby. With the change in music she turned away from her baby and her facial expression became one of horror, and she reacted as if being slapped by an invisible hand. Her dancing became calculated movements caused by fear. With another slap she dropped the blanket and instead of a doll, a pile of pacifiers and a fuzzy ball spilled out onto the stage.

The music amplified the pain felt, watching this woman unsuccessfully try to gather all of the pacifiers, only to turn with pleading eyes to the audience as she cradled the blanket and then her leg, as a substitute for the baby.

Sepharad is an oral tradition of songs that evolved hundreds of years ago. After their expulsion from Spain in 1492, the Jews resettled throughout the Mediterranean world, and so Hebrew, French and Turkish words were woven into the ancient Judeo-Spanish dialect of the melodies. As the communities of Sephardic (Spanish) Jews throughout the Mediterranean contributed to and changed the music in different ways, Voices of Sepharad add their own variations to the material also.

Davies explained after the concert, "The tradition is rich and vast, and yet the group is allowed free reign in the way we are doing it. We don't try to recreate the songs of the past. We seek to express our take on the music. The music is the accumulated sentiment and feelings of the culture [of the Sephardic Jews]." He also said that it is the diversity of this tradition that is part of it's richness.

Voices of Sepharad has been active for six years, and has toured throughout North America and Europe. They have an original talent for preserving an ancient tradition through visually stunning and passionate performances. Harris said that the group is hoping to be the next page in the history of Sepharad because they contribute a new twist on the tradition through the theatrical presentation. Voices of Sepharad show that the traditions are still alive and strong.

COURTESY VOICES OF SEPHARAD

The Voices of Sepharad from left to right are Mick LaBriola, percussionist, David Harris, lead vocalist, Judith Brin Ingber, dancer and choreographer, and Scott Davies, flamenco guitarist.

Winona Ryder's cutting career, pt. II

By ADAM SCOTT ROBERTS
Collegian Staff

This the second in a three-part series highlighting actress Winona Ryder's best films.

After playing Veronica Sawyer in 1988's Heathers, Winona Ryder avoided making the mistakes many young aspiring actresses fall victim to. Horribly scripted productions that could have robbed Ryder of her good name and much (if not all) of her clothing was something she probably didn't want to have on her resume.

The determined actress went on to star in such productions as 1969 and Great Balls of Fire. In Great Balls of Fire Ryder got to play the baby cousin who eventually became the wife of Jerry Lee Lewis played by Dennis Quaid.

Wearing her black and white saddle shoes and one of those old fashioned "poodle" dresses, Ryder successfully convinced me that her character was a naive child. Falling in love with her older cousin and marrying him was the way Ryder's character played "house." Great Balls of Fire was a great film choice for Ryder because it showed that she could be a versatile actress by leaving her elitist, snotty role in Heathers to play a young innocent Southern girl in love.

Leaving behind Sawyer's bitchy attitude and the naivete of being Jerry Lee's wife, Ryder entered the film world's land of make believe by starring in Tim Burton's fairy tale film Edward Scissorhands in 1990. Working with Burton was nothing new to Ryder because he had also directed her in his bizarre film Beetlejuice. In addition to Heathers, Beetlejuice opened the actress's career to future promising roles.

In Edward Scissorhands Ryder plays Kim Boggs, a high school cheerleader with long strawberry blonde hair. Kim's Avonlady of a mom Peg, played by Dianne Wiest (Little Man Tate) found Edward (Johnny Depp) while trying to sell cosmetics door to door. Peg brings him home to live with her family. Eventually, Edward becomes the neighborhood gardener because of his amazing sculptures made out of shrubbery. In addition, his scissor-hands enable him to give his neighbors and their dogs outlandish hair cuts.

Whenever Ryder's roles call for a little sarcasm, she delivers. For example, in one scene Ryder comes home late at night only to find a scary looking thing (Edward) on her water bed. She screams that there's a murderer in her bedroom. Edward reluctantly tries to get off the bed and pops the bed open and water sprays everywhere.

Afterwards, Peg says to Kim, "You scared the man half to death!" Ryder's character responds immediately with, "I scared him to death?"

Her beauty, her voice, and her ability to become the character that she portrays are a few of Ryder's strongest attributes.

Another reason why Ryder gave an excellent performance may have been because she played opposite her real life love, Johnny Depp. The real-life chemistry carried over to the silver screen because Depp's Edward fell in love with Ryder's Kim. Throughout the film Kim realizes that she has feelings for Edward but can't act upon them because of her bully boyfriend, Jim, played by Anthony Michael Hall (Sixteen Candles).

The music in this fairy tale adds to the Hollywood-ization of telling a story. It was similiar to the way it was done in Burton's Batman as well as in this summer's blockbuster sequel Batman Returns. In addition, aquas, peaches, pinks, and light blues are the colors of all all the automobiles, homes, and wardrobes of the people in the story, forcing viewers to leave the real world behind them for the 100 minutes of the film.

Edward Scissorhands is a love story and a fairy tale (but then again, what fairy tales aren't?) Ryder once again delivered a great performance in this film. A month after Edward Scissorhands release Ryder would go on to co-star with Cher as a "fish out of water" in Mermaids, which will finish the three part Winona filmography, Thursday.

■ Storm

continued from page 7

the river, leaving only his snap-brim fedora bobbing along the surface. "Now this is important," said Eisner, pointing to the hat. "This is the metaphor. Because everybody knows — when you've lost your hat, you've really lost control."

And Eisner lectured on, oblivious to the puzzled looks his bare-headed audience exchanged, and oblivious to the fact that no one aside from a few retro-hipsters and Bella Abzug has regularly worn hats since the 1950s.

That To the Heart of the Storm is anachronistic in the end does not distract from it. You may feel like you're reading a comic from the '40s rather than the '90s until you realize that a comic this personal, about growing up as a Jew in 1930s New York, could never have been told then — precisely because of the prejudice Eisner shows us.

Will Eisner definitely still has his hat on. To the Heart of the Storm is yet another high-water mark for a man who has already left an indelible stamp on the medium of comics.

RSO FAIR 92

Student Union Ballroom
Monday, November 9
12 - 4 PM
--FREE--
Food • Demonstrations
Entertainment
Information • Prizes
Sponsored by: Div. of Student Activities

Grand Opening
November 1, 1992
THE MUG SHOT

Create your own Customized mug with your favorite picture or sayings, or let us take your picture at our Hampshire Mall Location.
A great gift idea for friends, family or anyone.

Create a mugful of memories for a lifetime.

Coupon
Grand Opening
The Mug Shot
Coupon Value is $3.00 toward Purchase of a mug with Student ID.
Coupon Expires December 15, 1992

Celebration of the Birth of
Bahá'u'lláh
The Promised One of All Ages
7:30pm • Wednesday • Nov. 11th
Memorial Hall
The Public is Welcome

O people of God! Give ear unto that which, if heeded, will ensure the freedom, well-being, tranquillity, exaltation and advancement of all men
Bahá'u'lláh
Sponsored by the UMASS Bahá'í Club

Golden Key
National Honor Society

All Members:
A meeting will be held to discuss the organization of the 1993 Northeast Regional Conference which will be hosted, for the first time ever, by the U-Mass chapter. There will also be an election of new officers.

Involve yourself!
Attend the meeting on:

Tuesday, November 17th
7:00 pm
Campus Center Room 165-69

For more information call:
Gladys Rodriguez
Dean of Students Office
545-2684

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

TANGENT By KURT MATTILA

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Early archaeologists

Quote of the Day

"The greatest of all misfortunes is to do wrong."

– Socrates

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get an agreement in writing so that you can be absolutely certain of your financial position. Define your views clearly to leave no doubt about where you stand.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An issue that has been clouded finally becomes clear. Read the fine print of any document you are asked to sign. Shun the spotlight this evening; be alone with your one-and-only.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A better financial arrangement between you and your mate should give you a greater sense of security. Build a firm foundation for the future. Find out where you stand in money matters.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day to take care of unfinished projects and financial matters. You have the energetic to cut through red tape and leap over obstacles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You are frantic at getting things organized. Put those credit cards away and buy only what you can afford. Some one-on-one talks help evaluating your work performance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be cautious about any new venture that requires a large cash investment. Consolidate recent gains on the home front by working on a project with your mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get ready to make some major changes. A mistake can be corrected if you show ingenuity. Upgrade your skills by enrolling in a class or reading self-help books.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The emphasis today is on playing to win. Trust your heart about romance. A lot of good can come from alliances, even long-distance ones. Short business trips are favored.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be on the lookout for unusual opportunities. Follow up a financial or employment tip with due rein.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20): Hide your time about entertaining new contacts; nothing may come of them. A feeling of being unappreciated will soon pass. Money can be safely spent for personal pleasure.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your mate or partner could resent a recent decision. Let the steam die out before explaining your thinking. Delegating a somewhat unimportant task can all now.

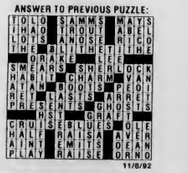
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Friends will come through for you on a pinch. Being overly critical of other people could cause them to pound you. Spending some time alone will do wonders for your mental outlook.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

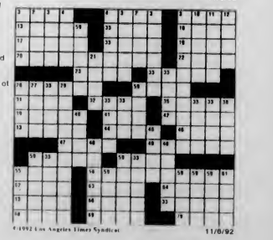
ACROSS
1 Con game
5 Like good wine
9 Rose or Fountain
13 Candle
15 Chip 'n' —
16 Constantly
17 Uneven
18 So be it
19 Notches in timber
20 Teachers
22 Do a publishing job
23 Promote
24 Alleviated
26 Basic food item
30 Fortitude
31 Reduce
32 Clever
35 Hang the arras?
39 Tarry
41 Gehrig or Costello
42 Broadcast
43 English royal house
44 Con
46 Hindu god of fire
47 Bearing
49 Indicate
51 Rapiers for fencers
53 Da Dabble and de France
55 Deed
56 Medical care of children
62 Composer of "Ihde Britannia"
63 Angers
64 Lofty nest
65 Grandstand unit
66 "... of Eden"
67 Transient money
68 Spiderlocks
69 Concordes, e.g.: Abbr
70 Podium

DOWN
1 "Watch your —!"
2 T.L.C. word
3 Footless one
4 — Verde National Park
5 Proverb
6 A.Z.
7 Robert —
8 More crowded
9 Artful dodger?
10 Get around
11 Lukewarm
12 Once, once
14 Kingly
21 Marriage vow word, formerly
25 Verdi opera
26 Have words
27 Prohibited
28 Jejune
29 Step counters
30 Surfeit
33 Spiral
34 Chancy of the movies
36 Jason's ship
37 Confined
38 Entertainer Adams
40 New York State canal
45 Conception
48 Discerns
50 To be, in Barcelona
51 Uncanny
52 Discussion group
53 That is: Lat.
54 Shoppers' aides
55 Destiny
57 Important periods
58 Woodwind necessity
59 Le Douce
60 Early AD date
61 Congeals

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



11/8/92



©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/8/92

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marc "License to Drive" Elliott
Copy Editor ..... Sarah Levesque
PhotoTechnician ..... Tom Haller
Production Supervisor ..... Lisa Jezowski
Production ..... Jason George
Mike Carvalho

Menu

LUNCH
Duchess Meat Pie
Grilled Turkeywich
BASICS LUNCH
Hummus Veggie Pocket
Grilled Turkeywich

DINNER
Basil Chicken (a.k.a. Basil Zeus)
Veal Cordon Bleu
BASICS DINNER
Basil Chicken (same as above)
Cauliflower Eggplant

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Collegian Sports. Go UMass.

START YOUR FIRST DAY WITH YEARS OF EXPERIENCE BEHIND YOU.

Bring your BSN to the Army and we'll assign a preceptor to help put you at ease.

Your preceptor will be an experienced Army Nurse who will smooth your transition from school to practice. With advice, counsel on Army nursing procedure, or just by being a friend.

With your preceptor's help, you'll meet your new challenges and rapidly move into a leadership role of your own.

If you're a BSN candidate...or you are an RN with a BSN...you'll find the rewards and responsibility you're looking for in Army Nursing. Contact your local Army Nurse Corps Recruiter.

Call 1-800-USA-ARMY

ARMY NURSE CORPS. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

football

continued from page 12

In the third quarter, Richmond took the ball after All-American linebacker Eric Johnson (15 tackles, two sacks) intercepted a McNeilly pass, and drove to the Minuteman seven yard-line. On third down, the UMass defense held tough and the Spiders had to settle for a Barton 27-yd field goal.

"They're (UMass players) an amazing group of kids," said Hodges. "They always find a way to make the plays... all of them just refuse to give up."

Game Notes: Senior placekicker Jim Maguire broke the UMass school record for consecutive point-after-attempts (by Silvio Bonvini) with his 33rd and 34th consecutive extra points... the Minutemen are the number-one ranked team in division 1-AA according the the national RPI computer rankings.

field hockey

continued from page 12

teams fight that hard, having it go down to penalty strokes doesn't give an indication to how close it was."

UMass and Temple traded goals in regulation, with the Minutewomen scoring at 15:01 in the first half on a Press penalty corner slapshot, and the Owls breaking out early in the second half and tying the score at 33:16 on a Debbie Utz shot to the left side.

"I think it was our desire that kept us going through the adversity," Press said. "We learned to fight throughout the year."

The Minutewomen tried to fight Porter, but had almost no success. Porter made 22 saves on the day (UMass outshot Temple 39-13), and her Herculean effort was, at times, the only thing that kept the Owls in the game. Her saves propelled Temple in the second half and throughout the first overtime, as the Owls made UMass play tentatively.

The Minutewomen regained momentum in the second overtime, and had a number of chances to win, including Salisbury's penalty stroke with four minutes left that was way right.

"It was a battle of wills," said Jelley. "The game flip-flopped, but we eventually overcame them."

With seven minutes left in the second overtime, Hixon had backup goalie Tina Rusiecki warmup and prepare to go in to face the penalty strokes. However, Hixon first asked Scott if she was up to the task.

"Tina's reflexes are quicker, and I wanted her to be ready to come in," Hixon said. "Scottie had to prove to me in her heart and her mind that she was ready for the peenalty strokes, and she showed it in her voice that she was."

"She asked me if I wanted to stay in the game, and I said yes," Scott said. "I've been with the team the whole way through, and I wanted to win with them or lose with them."

The win most likely gives the Minutewomen a first-round bye in the NCAA Tournament, and UMass will probably play at home next Saturday. Tournament seedings will be announced today.

In Saturday's semifinal, the Minutewomen destroyed number four seed St. Joseph's 5-0, mustering 32 shots on net. The ferocious offense spread the wealth, as five different players scored one goal each.

The Hawks (5-13-2) were backpedaling from the beeinning, and when Danielle Borges scored at 27:34 of the first half, St. Joes had an uphill climb. Kathy Phelan added a goal nine minutes later on an assist from Borges, making it 2-0 UMass.

"We didn't look past St. Joe's," said Borges. "We came out fired up, because we couldn't afford to lie back."

UMass was still fired up long after the outcome was known, as Natalie Hunt socred at 11:04 on a penalty corner to put UMass up 3-0.

The Minutewomen came out strong in the second half, as Tara Jelley and Jenn Salisbury stormed the net, with Salisbury putting the ball in the open side, making it 4-0 UMass. The Minutewomen ended the scoring at 12:10, when co-captain Blenis' slapshot on a penalty corner found the open corner.

Winter Session 1993

Yes, you can! Yes, you can! So, do it!

Register for Winter Session classes.

Special enrollment restrictions do not apply for Winter Session.

So, if you're a UMass student, all you have to do is just sign up.

WINTER SESSION:

- a unique "mini-semester," just three weeks long
- earn 3 academic credits in only 3 weeks
- over 100 credit courses, including gen. ed. designated classes

Your chance to:

- take a class you couldn't get before
- make up credits
- meet graduation requirements
- lighten your spring course load

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.

Catalogs available on campus or at the Division of Continuing Education, 6th floor Goodell.

January 4-25

Breakfast Special (8am-10am)

Scrambled Eggs - Home Fries - Toast

$1.49

SUNDAY-FRIDAY SPECIALS

(4:00pm - 9:00pm)

Meatball Grinder $2.65

Italian Dinner Specials

(4:00pm - 11:00pm)

Pizza Slice (Large Cut) 99¢

Large Plain or Pepperoni Pizza with your choice of a pitcher of soda or a pitcher of beer $8.75

Now Through November 24th at

the hatch

GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

defense

continued from page 12

UMass defenders.

Lilly got the pass away and as the offering flew over the head of Sterling Brown and past the outstretched arms of Rodney Bowens onto the UR Stadium turf, the Minutemen knew they had escaped Virginia with the W.

"That's exactly how I wanted it, in the hands of the defense on the last drive," said UMass head coach Mike Hodges. "They refused to give up, and we found a way to win."

Playing like a pack of crazed pit bulls that hadn't been fed in weeks the UMass defense sacked Lilly six times, as well as forcing three interceptions and numerous bad passes as Lilly had his worst statistical day of the '92 season (eight completions-23 attempts-87 yards-zero touchdowns-two interceptions).

The Minutemen turned those Lilly turnovers into seven points, courtesy of a Brian Corcoran sack and fumble recovery on Richmond's second offensive series.

All in all, it was a big day for Corcoran who recorded nine tackles, one sack, one pass deflection, one forced fumble, and one fumble recovery.

The Minutemen defense is now ranked second in all of Div-1AA in total defense (253.3 yards-per-game), behind South Carolina State.

Also coming up big for the Minutemen in Richmond

men's soccer

continued from page 12

[Priestly], and then the shootout."

For the Minutemen, the A-10 Championship weekend began on a sour note Thursday at the awards banquet. As a team, UMass only filled two spots on the All A-10 teams (Jacobs on the first team and Kylish on the second), a huge disappointment.

Even more dissatisfaction came with the presentation of the individual awards, especially Player-of-the-Year. Jacobs, who lead the A-10 in overall scoring with 36 points (15 goals, 6 assists) was edged out by George Washington's Marcelo Valencia.

Valencia had 7 goals and 12 assists on the season, ten fewer than Jacobs. The opposing coaches in the A-10 may not have appreciated Jacobs style of play, along with his team only reaching third place, unlike Valencia of first place GW.

"[Not being named Player-of-the-Year] gave me incentive to play harder but it really upset me that my teammates didn't get the recognition they deserve," said Jacobs.

Before a near capacity crowd of 1,507, Saturday the Minutemen came out very intense against tournament host Rutgers, getting on the scoreboard first with 7:04 left in the first half.

Jacobs took a pass from freshamn Brad Miller and blasted it into the upper left corner, past the keeper Kori Hunter, giving the Minutemen a 1-0 lead.

Both UMass and Rutgers, traded blows but the Scarlet Knights could not put one by Wolf, until 18:40 left in the game.

With 6:38 left in the game Jacobs silenced the boisterous crowd with his second goal of the game, at the same time burying the Knights for good.

women's soccer

continued from page 12

our adrenaline because we saw we had an opportunity but sometimes that advantage is a disadvantage. You have to stay disciplined because the other team is playing harder. UConn did a great job a player down."

The Minutewomen did not lose their focus and were able to control the play until LeDuc's game winner.

Massachusetts will travel to the University of Hartford (18-1) Sunday to face the second ranked Hawks in the NCAA quarterfinals.

WELCOME BACK!

Round Trips from New York Starting at:

CANCUN	$ 310
LONDON	330
SAN JOSE C.R.	470
BERLIN	498
WARSAW	625
BANGKOK	949

Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change & availability. Call about one ways. We issue EURAIL passes on the SPOT!

Council Travel

79 South Pleasant Street Amherst, MA 01002

256-1261

2 1/4 LB Burgs for 2 Bucks EVERYDAY IN NOVEMBER

BURGERS • HOT DOGS
FRIES • ONION RINGS
PHILLY CHEESE STKS
SHAKES • FLOATS

ROUTE 9 HADLEY 585-0241

ONE MILE WEST OF THE HAMPSHIRE MALL

STUDY IN SPAIN

at

THE CENTER FOR CROSS-CULTURAL STUDY

SEVILLE

Come talk with Nico Guidera about the adventure that awaits you.

Tuesday, November 10 and Thursday, November 12
UMASS/Amherst Campus Center Concourse
8:30 AM-5:00 PM

- Spring, Fall, Academic Year, January Term, Summer study in Seville
- Courses in politics and economics, history, art history, sociology, business, language, Spanish and Spanish-American literature & civilization, dance
- Homestay or student residence
- Study tours and cultural activities
- Intercambios with Spanish students

OR CONTACT:
CC-CS, Dept. UM
219 Strong Street
Amherst, MA 01002
Tel: (413) 549-4543
FAX: (413) 549-9943

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湘園南湖

The Best Chinese Buffet

MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE

WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY

Free Delivery for orders $15 and over: $2 charge for orders under $15

NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup

TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

ANNOUNCEMENTS

AASA General Meeting
7:00 p.m. Campus Ctr rm903
November 10
Asian Night Meeting

Bed and Breakfast, downtown Amherst 549-0733

Hey Bandos!!!
This is the LAST week to buy banquet tickets! They are being sold before band at chepel, and today and THURSDAY after rehearsal at the field.
PLAY THE GAME!!!

Tired of your Science major?
Try Food Science
Call Dr. Chinacoli 545-1025

UMASS RACQUETBALL CLUB
MEETING All club members requested to attend all new interested students welcome Thursday Nov . 12 7:30 p.m. Dukes Room Student Union 310

COLLEGE PIZZA

College Pizza
Fall Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 Toppings $6.99
Free Soda with lg. sub seled or spaghetti
549-6098 549-8073
Must metion this ad

EXTREMELY IMPORTANT

Tarot Reading by appointment. Anytime
Call Mitch 548-9761

FOR HIRE

In 1972 a crack commando unit was sent to prison by a military court for a crime they didn't commit. These men promptly escaped from a maximum security prison to the Los Angles underground. Still wanted by the government, they survive as soldiers of fortune. If you have a problem, if no one else will help, and if you can find them, maybe you can hire . . . The A-TEAM

FOR RENT

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom homes on bus route call 586 4270

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

1 rm in downtown Amherst house Take over my lease
250 all utilities included
Great Location!
253-4250

Room available in beautiful renovated church. We are 2 males and 2 females with one cat. Rent $250 Call evenings 253-7357

FOR SALE

Black Leather motorcycle jacket size 44 125.00 if interested call Kevin 546-6175

DACHSTEIN SKI BOOTS
10 1/2 - $130.00
Where there's a will
there's an A-Video - $30.00
549-5115

Over 30 Sega & Nintendo games Starting at $15 Call Rob 8-5486

RollerBiadas size 8
Almost new $30
253-4242

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals
Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

FOUND

Found -- Key in Campus Center Concourse on 11/4. Call 256-1372 to identify and claim

Found -- Watch in parking lot behind Whitmore. Call Lisa 6-3282. Description Needed.

HELP WANTED

Alaska Summer Employment
fisheries earn $600 + a week in canneries $4000 month on fishing boats. Free transportation! Room and Board! Male or Female. Get a head start on this summer. For employment program call 1-206-545-4155 ext. A5001

Couples -- Property Manager Free Amherst apartment plus salary Debbie 256-0741

Earn $1000/Week at home stuffing envelopes! For information, send long SASE to CJ Enterprises, Box 67068K, Cuyahoga Falls, OH 44222

Free Spring Break Vacation
Organize a group, earn commissions and free trips! Call: 800-826-9100

$500
If you have access to a video camera, we're looking for students to film a minivideo. May lead to permanent position. For information, call C.B. Production, Inc. M-F 9-5 (617)332-9606.

$200-$500 WEEKLY
Assemble products at home. Easy! No selling. You're direct. Fully guaranteed FREE INFORMATION -- 24 HOUR HOTLINE. 801-379-2900 Copyright #MA15KDH

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun.
Call 1-800-3SIESTA ask for Bonnie

$252.50 Sell 50 funny college t-shirts and make $252.50 . No financial obligation. A risk free program. Avg. sales time = 4-6 hours. Choose from 18 designs. Smaller/larger quantities aveil. Call 1-800-733-3265

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons -- first lesson half price 665-1178

LEGAL INTERNSHIPS

Friday November 13 is the last day to contact the Legal Services Center about a Spring 1993 internship! Get hands on experience in the legal field. Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 credits! No experience required -- training is provided. Contact Legal Services TODAY; 545 1995, 922 Campus Center.

LOST

"Gremlin" -- Tan Cat last seen in N. Amherst area. If found please call 549 7770

Help! I lost my red clipboard, and I'd like to get it back call Deryk at 586-8555.

Lost gold and silver seiko watch. Last seen Monday in Webster. Great sentimental value! Please return for reward. 546 5114.

Lost red wallet on CC or Marcus Hall TH at noon if found call 6-3312 Reward

MUSICIANS

Lead guitarist seeking working band or all original, years of experience 549 2885

PERSONALS

Erike -- Though u wouldn't get one? Sorry it's late
Happy B-day
Phi love
Hollie & Liza

Kira,
Six years of love and looking forward to our forever together! I love you, Happy Anniversary!

Love always,
Donna

Kristin B.
I know this semester hasn't been Great at least you aren't 28
But you are 21 and that can be lots of fun!
Get ready for an awesome night
I swear it will be all right so prepare yourself for shots because there will be lots!
Happy 21st Kristin!
We love ya
Donna, Sherri and all the sisters

Matt
Happy 21st Birthday!
I love you!
-Jennie

Mike E. Face -- Finally the blessed event has come to pass -- Happy 21st Birthday! Hopefully we'll get a chance to celebrate! Best wishes always -- you're still the idol of one! -- me

MS
You're 2 cute
PC

RIDE WANTED

Denver, Boulder Co. area to Boston. By plane, train, or car. Will pay $. Around 11/25, 26, 27. Call Pete evenings 549-9377

ROOMATES WANTED

Female sublease
single in Mill Va.
Spring Sem.
Call 253 3408

Looking for two women to share our N. Amherst Apt. $200 prmth & utilities Jan 1st Call 549-0916

3 Responsible women
Need housing for Spring semester Desire place near UMass
Call Young-Ni 546-0590 or Jen 4978

RSO FAIR '92

RSO FAIR '92
Monday, November 9
12 4 SUB
FREE food, entertainment, prizes, Demonstrations and information. 5-college community welcome!
SPONSORED BY
Division of Student Activities

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549 1906

Tarot Readings
Call Chris 256 0821

SPORTS CARDS

SportStop Cards
Coming Dec. 1st
Mountain Farms Mall

TRYDER

Enough said.

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed -- free cover page, spell check, laser printout. $1.50 page Brian 546-1795.

Typing - Word Processing
Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations. Laser Printing
Call Rosemary 323 5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586 5268.

WANTED

We want your 2 bdrm Puffton lease!! Starting January 1. Call us first! Reward if we sign it! Call 549 7319

WANTED TO RENT

Efficiency one bedroom
Starting Mid Dec. or Jan. 1
Upperclass honors student
Female
Call Jen 546 4978

Sports

Women's soccer advances in NCAA Tournament

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

STORRS, Conn. — Freshman forward Rachel LeDuc scored with 5:39 left in the second overtime period to lift the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team to a 2-1 victory Saturday over Connecticut in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

LeDuc's score capped a Massachusetts' (16-3) comeback effort. Connecticut (15-5-1) had jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the 49th minute on a goal by Mary Beth McNichol. The Minutewimen tied the game with only 7:33 remaining in regulation on a penalty kick by Kim Eynard.

"This was a great win for us," said UMass coach Jim Rudy. "I'm happy we played a full 150 minutes and never gave up."

On LeDuc's game winner, UMass' Holly Hellmuth from the left flank crossed a ball to the goal mouth. Teammate Nicole Roberts collected the pass and shot on net only to have the ball blocked by UConn defender Arne Serravezza. The ball trickled to LeDuc, who had fallen down, she got up and fired the ball into the right corner.

"I saw the ball coming and Nicole took a shot, but it was blocked and I fell down," LeDuc said. "The ball came over to me and I got up and it was right there. I just shot it into the open net. I was so excited when it went in."

The play of the game though was the play which set up Eynard's penalty shot. UMass had a corner kick and Rudy sent goal keeper Briana Scurry up to enter the attack. With all eyes focused on the pulled goalie, Lisa Mickelson served the ball long to an open Heidi Kocher who headed it to the upper left corner.

The ball was set to sail clearly into the net when UConn defender Cathy Cambia jumped up and batted the shot down with her hands. The deliberate hand ball resulted in a red card being assesed to Cambia for unsportsmanlike play. Cambia received a game misconduct and UMass a penalty shot.

"When I came up it flustered them," Scurry said. "The whole team was looking at me, the goalie was staring right at me and that freed up Heidi. The play worked perfectly."

On the penalty shot Eynard made no mistakes, slipping the shot to the left of a diving Amy Schwarz.

With Cambia's ejection the Huskies were forced to play with a player down the rest of the way, giving UMass a considerable advantage. However neither team felt the game was over at that point.

"We played even harder a man down," Serravezza said. "We picked up our intensity, we thought we could put one in and win anyway."

UMass forward Kim Eynard said, "The red card rose

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 11

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

Junior forward Colleen Milliken and the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team advanced to the NCAA quarterfinals after defeating Connecticut 2-1 Saturday.

Minutemen beat Spiders for 7th straight win

Defense comes up big, Holds Lilly to 87 yds.

By CHRIS CUDDY
Collegian Staff

RICHMOND – Prior to Saturday, no one had been able to stop University of Richmond quarterback Greg Lilly.

Leave it to the University of Massachusetts to end that streak, as the UMass defense held Lilly, the number one rated qb in the country in Division 1-AA, to just 87 yards passing (Lilly came in averaging 254 yards per game) as the Minutemen held off a fourth quarter Richmond comeback to upend the 13th ranked Spiders 17-13 before a crowd of 10,402 at Richmond Stadium.

The UMass defense kept heavy pressure on Lilly from start to finish, intercepting Lilly's second pass of the afternoon (on the game's fifth play) and pressuring Lilly into a bad pass on Richmond's final offensive play, a fourth and five offering from the UMass 12 with :39 left in the game.

It was that play that typifed the Minuteman effort for the day, as Lilly dropped back to pass and was immediately swarmed under by a slew of

Turn to DEFENSE, page 11

JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

RICHMOND – Even after going 6-1 to start off this 1992 season, the University of Massachusetts football team still had not gained much respect in Division 1-AA.

Last Saturday, however could be the day that the Minutemen gained that respect as they beat No. 13 Richmond 17-14 in front of 10,402 at Richmond Stadium thanks to a strong defense, some timely offense and a never-say-die attitude.

"These guys deserve to be ranked and deserved to be ranked higher than 20th," said Hodges. "We've played four teams in the top 20 and beat three of them and we have the thirteenth toughest schedule in Division 1-AA."

The game came down to the final play after Richmond took the ball at their own 45 with 2:43 left in the game, and marched to the Massachusetts 11 yd line. On fourth-and-five with nine seconds left, All-American quarterback candidate Greg Lilly dropped back and hummed the ball to wide receiver Rodney Bowens. The ball deflected off Bowens shoulder and went through the hands of wide receiver Sterling Brown, dropping incomplete in the endzone. The Minutemen, as well as the small contingent of UMass fans who had braved the 10-hour trip down to Richmond went absolutely wild.

"I'm gonna tell you something," said a Gatorade covered, but ecstatic head coach Mike Hodges, "the last thing I said to the guys was, 'this is where we want it on the last play - in the hands of the defense.'"

"On the last play, we were saying, 'this is our season,'" said outside linebacker Scott Assencoa.

Indeed, the UMass defense was the story again as they held division 1-AA's leading passer (ave. 254 yds passing/game), Lilly, to a mere 87 yds passing. The "D" also sacked Lilly six times.

"I feel bad for him," said UMass QB Andrew McNeilly. "I know I wouldn't want to go up against our defense."

The first points of the game were scored at 11:09 of the first quarter when Corcoran rushed in un-touched and sacked Lilly, forcing a fumble. An alert Corcoran picked up the loose ball and rambled 31 yards for the UMass touchdown.

"I came in clean, went to sack him and the ball jumped up in my face," said Corcoran. "I got past one guy and then I just waltzed in."

Richmond got on the board at 13:33 of the second, courtesy of a 20-yd field goal by Todd Barton. Three minutes later, after connecting on three consecutive passes, UMass QB Andrew McNeilly (12-25, 158 yds, 1 TD) rolled left on play action from the Richmond three yd-line, and hit tight end Steve Dembowski in the left corner of the endzone for a 14-3 UMass lead.

Before the half, the high-powered Spider offense managed their only touchdown of the game when fullback Michael Henderson bullied in from one-yard out, barely crossing the goaline. UMass answered once again, though, when Jim Maguire knocked a 38 yd field goal through the uprights for UMass's final points.

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 10

Field hockey win A-10's

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

PISCATAWAY, N.J. - The University of Massachusetts got locked into its closest and most intense game of the year against Temple University in the Atlantic 10 Championship game, with the two teams battling through 70 minutes of regulation and 30 minutes of overtime before the Minutewomen triumphed in penalty strokes for a hard-fought 2-1 victory.

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN

The University of Massachusetts field hockey team captured the Atlantic 10 Championship yesterday by defeating Temple 2-1.

Jenn Salisbury, Kathy Phelan, Tara Jelley and Joy Blenis beat Owl goaltender Donna Porter on the penalty strokes to give UMass a 4-2 edge on the strokes. After 100 minutes of bone-chilling, back-and-forth field hockey, each team prepared to take five penalty strokes.

The Minutewomen, who had missed two penalty strokes in regulation, went down 1-0 when Ainslee Press, the leading scorer on the team, missed high by a mile, and Temple's Wendy Skibitsky beat UMass goalie Philippa Scott. Momentum had shifted throughout the game, and when UMass fell behind in strokes, it seemed like Temple would forge ahead and win the championship.

"This was a game of momentum, and it was going to be decided on how much of Temple's momentum we could handle," said UMass head coach Pam Hixon. "When we missed the two strikes in regulation, I thought 'Oh, Jesus, it's going to be a long day.'"

Down 1-0 in strokes, the Minutewomen regrouped when co-captain Phelan and A-10 co-player of the year Jenn Salisbury scored to give UMass the 2-1 lead they would never relinquish. Meanwhile, A-10 Tournament MVP Phillippa Scott stopped two of Temple's last three strokes, and when Blenis beat Porter in the lower right hand corner, the Minutewomen stormed the field for their first A-10 Championship since 1988.

"It was a real heartbreaker," Temple coach Michele Madison said. "When two

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 11

Men lose in A-10 final

West Virginia wins on penalty shots

By JEFF CROFTS and
ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — Even in defeat, teams often show qualities which set them apart. This is the case with the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team, who yesterday dropped a heart breaking 1-0 defeat (settled in a shootout) in the Atlantic 10 Championship game to West Virginia.

Neither team was able to score through regulation and two overtime periods bringing the game to the five penalty kick shootout.

For UMass Todd Kylish, Randy Jacobs and Justin Edelman were able to score. They were matched by their West Virginia counterparts, heading into the final shooter, West Virginia Alek Lazic. The shootout was tied at 3-3, when Lazic went to the lower left hand corner for the goal and the victory for the Mountaineers.

Despite the loss, the Minutemen showed the qualities that brought them to the title game: unyielding effort, tremendous heart, and most of all, team spirit.

Both UMass and West Virginia appeared flat during the first half with the Mountaineers holding the upper edge. Neither team was able to find net with the ball, so it was scoreless at the half.

UMass opened up the second half by dominating the play in the West Virginia end. However, the Minutemen were still unable to cash in. Midway through the second half, UMass defenseman Ted Priestly was ejected from the game after he picked up his second yellow card for physical play. Both cards drew protests from the Massachusetts bench.

Both teams were unable to score before the final horn blew, so the game headed to overtime.

In the two overtime periods, both goal keepers, UMass' Mark Wolf and West Virginia's Mark Thienel, denied any scoring opportunities that came their way.

After the game Minutemen Kylish, Jacobs, Wolf, and Dan Chagnon were honored as members of the All-Tournament team.

UMass coach Sam Koch, was understandably upset after the defeat.

"It's a tough, tough way to lose," he said. "We really didn't play well bu1 t you really have to give West Virginia credit; they didn't let us play."

Kylish also thought it was a difficult way to lose.

"It was a tough way to lose; I've been on both sides before and its a tough lose," he said. "We got beat bad the first half, came back, then we lost Teddy

Turn to MEN'S SOCCER, page 11

Tuesday November 10, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 44

Sunny today, highs in the 40s. Wed. cloudy and showers.

Arts & Living:
They're a band, and one of their members is named Sean Cassidy, but they're not the Partridges. They're Bongos to Circus and they played the Hatch Thursday night. Page 7.

Sports:
The field hockey team took the A-10 title this weekend, and is one home game away from the NCAA Final Four. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Committee releases report on racism

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts students, faculty and staff hounded administrators with questions and accusations concerning the University's commitment to improving the general climate for minorities on campus during the official release of a federal report on racial tensions at the University, Monday in the campus center.

Top administrators, including President Michael Hooker, and two Smith students sat on the panel with members of the Massachusetts Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, who released the report before 200 people at the conference. The federally funded study outlines recommendations to racial problems at the University, Smith College and other colleges.

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

Ali Woolwich, a senior representing the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance, addresses the audience at the official release of a federal report on racism at UMass.

"I have yet to see changes," said senior Ali Woolwich, a representative of the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance, who stood up from the audience to speak. "These issues have been here since I've been here. We need an action board — not a recommendation board."

Woolwich responded to Chancellor Richard O'Brien's recognition of two mandatory cultural diversity courses.

"A person can go through UMass without addressing multiculturalism and oppression," said Woolwich, who said some arts and literature courses, which are designated diversity courses, are still focused on Western culture.

O'Brien replied that actions were agreed to this weekend during negotiations with students and not just recommendations. He also expressed doubts about the effectiveness of the diversity courses.

Kamina Henderson, a Smith student on the panel, said she is sick of recommendations which act as a band-aid over the huge wounds of "incredibly high tensions" at her school.

"It's pretty scary," said Henderson, that people who are harassing others are receiving the same diploma as her and said there's no distinction between ignorance and maliciousness.

"We want to see the perpetrators ostracized," said Henderson, who said there are people on campus feeling uncomfortable and threatened daily. "We want [the perpetrators] to feel uncomfortable. They shouldn't be coddled with education."

"We're sick of talking and no action," said Elizabeth Saleman, a student from Smith on the panel. She added that the students are sick of being the ones to educate the community and that administrators and faculty should start taking responsibility.

Ricardo Townes, Associate Director of Academic Support Services said the harassment and violence the Smith students experience and witness is horrible and pointed out that students at UMass experience similar incedents.

"We can recruit people but it doesn't stop what's happening everyday," Townes said. "Whenever you have racial incidents there's always recruitment, but all bets are off if you don't have the support system to keep them."

As he called for improvement outside the classroom as well, the two Smith panelists nodded in agreement. They clapped when Townes said, "All talk is great but we need help today for students here today struggling to make it."

Dr. Donna Goodleaf from the women's studies department at UMass stood up and said she was going to apply for tenure

turn to PANEL, page 2

Smith students examine racism

Students demand more action, less talk from College

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

Although the University of Massachusetts has been the main focus of recent racial tensions, the federal study released yesterday reports Smith College is plagued with racial hostilities, as well.

"Hate-crime [perpetrators] need to be punished and made an example of. Absolutely nothing is being done."

Smith senior Karuna Venter

Smith College students demanded more action and less talk from their administration, as the Massachusetts Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights presented their 46-page report, Campus Tensions in Massachusetts: Searching for Solutions in the Nineties, at the Campus Center yesterday. The study incorporated 29 testimonies from UMass and Smith students, faculty and administration.

Kamina A. Henderson was one of the two Smith students on the panel comprised of UMass and Smith administration and Committee members.

Henderson, a Smith student and former chairperson for the Black Students Alliance, testified for the committee last September. Although the Black Student Alliance has been a strong voice on the Smith campus, Henderson said in the report that "all the women on this panel can tell you honestly that the only way we have of achieving progress is through confrontation, sit-ins."

When the college talks with the students about racial insidents, they only discuss the issues rather than find solutions, said Henderson.

"[The Smith administration's proposals are] Band-aids over a huge gaping wound," Henderson said at the meeting. "What we need the administration to do is step on the line and expel students [for hate crimes.]"

Since the study came out, two Smith students have been accussed of racial acts by a student judicial board, according to Smith senior Karuna Venter.

Turn to SMITH, page 3

UMass student suffered stroke

By KENNETH MAISONET
Collegian Staff

Kathie Caldwell attended the University of Massachusetts last September. A graduate of Masconomet Regional High School in 1991, she was a psychology major and made the dean's list her first semester.

But the day she took her midterm exams in the second semester, March 25, 1992, Kathie suffered a catastrophic stroke, leaving her a total quadrapelegic, unable to speak or eat.

From this moment on the Caldwell family was thrust into a world of hospitals, rehabilitation, wheelchairs and adaptive equipment. "The whole thing has been a very emotional ordeal," said Mrs. Barbara Caldwell, Kathie's mother.

The Kathie Caldwell Fundraising Committee was formed this semester by a group comprising the University of Massachusetts Golden Key Honor Society, Alpha Lambda Delta and the Mortar Board Honor Society. On Saturday, November 21, 1992, a walk-a-thon to benefit Kathie Caldwell will be held at the University.

While Kathie has regained some control over her right hand, can eat pureed or soft foods, and can move her head left or right, a long-term recovery will start at the earliest stages of life, Barbara said. Kathie is totally aware of her

Turn to CALDWELL, page 3

COURTESY BARBARA CALDWELL

Kathie Caldwell

Race tension far from over at University

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

The problem of racial tension is far from resolved at the University of Massachusetts according to the Chairperson of the Massachusetts Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

During the official release of the federally-funded study on campus tensions, Chairperson Dorothy Jones pointed to examples of student's testimony which support this.

"The situation we keep hearing reflects the big world," Jones said.

In the report, Jones said minority students voice frustration with White student's naive questions, their surprise when they excel and said police officers are ill-trained. Jones stated a need to enhance campus diversity and recommended students assist in the process of making curriculum changes.

The 46-page report, Campus Tensions in Massachusetts: Searching for Solutions in the Nineties, is a result of a year of researching the racial situation and listening to 29 witnesses from UMass and Smith.

The study found that overt incidents motivated by racial and religious prejudice and sometimes physical assault continue to occur. The report encouraged such incidents to be reported and the need for students to understand the effects of discrimination.

"In my 19 years of living, I have never experienced as much racism as I have at Smith College," said student Kamina Henderson in the report.

The report also found that many minorities, some faculty, and a few administrators view steps taken to fight bias-related incidents as insufficient or ineffective. Of the 12 recommendations, the report recommends the additional assistance by the government to strengthen and diversify these efforts.

UMass student James Jemison in the report stated that Black and other minority students graduating from UMass earns two degrees —"one for rigorous academic work, the second for having survived a lot of negative hatred on the part of

Turn to PROBLEMS, page 4

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual FORUM

The GLB Forum runs each Thursday and consists of event listings of interest to the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual community. The GLB Forum is compiled by the GLB Issues Editor who can be contacted c/o the Collegian.

Wednesday, November 11

Meeting — The Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance will hold its general meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the LBGA office, 413B Student Union.

Thursday, November 12

Film — The Program for GLB Concerns and the LBGA will sponsor the film By Design about lesbian fashion designers who contrive to have a baby by looking for a substitute father. It will be shown at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 903.

Meeting — The Lesbian and Bisexual Women's Union will meet from 9:30 p.m. - 11:30 p.m. in the LBGA office, 413B Student Union.

Friday, November 13

Hearings — The Massachusetts Governor's Commission on Gay and Lesbian Youth and the Governor's Advisory Committee on Women's Issues are holding regional hearings on GLB youth from 2 p.m. - 5 p.m. in the Campus Center.

Social — The Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance will host a coffee social at 3 p.m. in the Campus Center Room 903.

Dance — The LBGA will sponsor a dance in the Bluewall from 9 p.m. - 2 a.m. Admission is $4.

Monday, November 16

Brown Bag Lunch — Margaret Hunt will address "The Uneasy Union of Gay Studies and Lesbian Studies," from noon to 1:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, 9th floor.

Student Senate Update

The Student Senate Update is a service of the Collegian provided to inform students about upcoming items on the SGA agenda.

The Undergraduate Student Senate will move to amend the Constitution of the Student Government Association at its meeting on Wed., Nov. 11, 1992 at 7 p.m. in Campus Center 163. All members of the University community are invited to attend and participate.

This is a motion to replace the Constitution of the SGA with a new one. The present constitution has not been officially recognized by the Board of Trustees. The recognition of the SGA Constitution by the Board of Trustees is fundamental to the issue of student empowerment and status of an organized student voice on this campus. Copies of the current Constitution and the proposed replacement are available in the SGA office, Rm. 420 Student Union, and will be available at the meeting.

■ panel

continued from page 1

but withdrew her application because of elitism and racism at the institution as well in the women's studies department.

Goodleaf said she would like to see ideas on how to recruit and retain other Native Americans.

Panelist Tom Robinson, vice-chancellor for student affairs, stated interest in recruitment of all minority staff and students and pointed out how two persons of color will become recruiters as part of the agreement reached this weekend between students and administrators.

"Interesting is not good enough," responded Goodleaf. "I want to know exactly when you can bring more [Native Americans] in."

As O'Brien responded that the University is aiming to increase minority faculty and that faculty are hired by departments, panelist Deirdre Almeida from the committee pointed out to O'Brien that Goodleaf's question was specifically about Native Americans.

"[Goodleaf] and I are already overstressed with the amount of work we have," said Almeida. "I, as a member of the commission, would like to see that addressed."

Robinson said he is interested in improving the situation for Native Americans as well as for all students.

Alexander Nguyen said the administration keeps reiterating the same responses every time a racial incident occurs.

"You need to hear the people on the front line," said Nguyen. "If you don't listen, the incidents will occur again."

NEWS
SPORTS
ARTS
ED/OP
COMICS
LUNCH
THE COLLEGIAN
EVERYBODY READS US.

Eating Disorder Programs • Fall 1992
Sponsored by University Health Services
• • •
Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays and Wednesdays Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
• • •
Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Collegian Graphics. We fill all sorts of odd spaces. 105 C.C.

A Player Who's About To Be Played.
EDDIE MURPHY
BOOMERANG
R
A PARAMOUNT COMMUNICATIONS COMPANY
Campus Center Auditorium
Wed. 11/11 at 5,7,9 and 11 pm

THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE AND WORLD SECURITY STUDIES,
THE HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE PEACE STUDIES PROGRAM, and THE HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE SCHOOL OF SOCIAL SCIENCE
Present:
"NATIONALISM: THE UNDERSIDE OF WORLD POLITICS"
A lecture by:
DAN SMITH
Director, Transnational Institute (Amsterdam)
Tuesday, November 10th
8:00 PM
East Lecture Hall, Hampshire College
This event is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible. Sign interpreting is available with two weeks notice. For more information call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519

STUDY IN SPAIN
at
THE CENTER FOR CROSS-CULTURAL STUDY
SEVILLE
Come talk with Nico Guidera about the adventure that awaits you.
Tuesday, November 10 and Thursday, November 12
UMASS/Amherst Campus Center Concourse
8:30 AM-5:00 PM
• Spring, Fall, Academic Year, January Term, Summer study in Seville
• Courses in politics and economics, history, art history, sociology, business, language, Spanish and Spanish-American literature & civilization, dance
• Homestay or student residence
• Study tours and cultural activities
• Intercambios with Spanish students
OR CONTACT:
CC-CS, Dept. UM
219 Strong Street
Amherst, MA 01002
Tel: (413) 549-4543
FAX: (413) 549-9943

TONIGHT
The Union Center Talk Show
LIVE! with Phil Wen 7-8pm
PLUS! The Zen Cats at 9pm (no cover)
NEXT TUESDAY (11/17) JOHN SACCO MASTER HYPNOTIST
AND - Don't forget our 4pm-11pm Special
Large Plain -or- Pepperoni Pizza with your choice of a pitcher of soda -or- a pitcher of beer $8.75
the Hatch Bar
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

Local News

Optimism for Clinton may fade

Panel says he must make fast changes in government

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

The sense of optimism following Bill Clinton's election will fade quickly if he fails to make serious and rapid changes in the nation's political structure, according to a panel discussion last night.

The discussion on the "Meaning of the 1992 Election," included U.S. Rep. John Olver, who was re-elected to his 1st Congressional District Seat on Nov. 3. It was sponsored by the Institute for the Advanced Study of the Humanities and held in the Campus Center.

The panel also included Afro-American Studies professors John Bracey and William Strickland, education professor Sonia Nieto, journalism professor Ralph Whitehead, English professor Jules Chametzky and Ellen Pader of the landscape architecture and regional planning department.

Olver said when he first arrived in Washington after winning a special election to fill the seat vacated by the late Silvio Conte in June 1991, he felt a sense of "deep gridlock" in the U.S. government.

"[Bush] was leading the country by upholding vetoes against Congressional legislation," Olver said, noting Bush's consistent vetoes on abortion, campaign finance and tax fairness issues.

Olver said the sense of "euphoria" created by Clinton's election could be temporary if he fails to reverse many of the trends of the past 12 years of Republican leadership.

"Now, there is no excuse not to produce," Olver said. "I've been telling people to either elect a Republican president and Congress and get what you saw at the Republican National Convention, or to elect a Democratic president and 'hold our feets to the fire' to get things done."

Bracey predicted a return to the "long, hot summers," which marked the racial tensions of the 1960s if "the people in power keep the same priorities," and fail to reallocate federal money to social programs.

"Try to tell someone who is homeless that there is no money to get them off the street and into a home," Bracey said. "They'll get it one way or another."

Bracey said he believed Clinton should walk several blocks from the White House at night to witness the poverty which he said is symptomatic of the problems of the nation's cities.

Bracey also said Clinton won by "freezing" the Black vote in this country and telling Blacks "we will not promise you anything, but you'll have to vote for me because I'm not George Bush."

Strickland said he believed the Republican Party had sought a long-term domination of the country's political processes through maintaining control of the executive and judicial branches and working to intimidate an already-compliant Congress.

Strickland also said he believed many have "fallen into the trap of viewing politics through personalities."

"Don't blame Clinton — it is our fault," if the Democrats fail to make changes, Strickland said.

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN
1st Congressional District Rep. John Olver.

Vigil initiates racism discussion

By INÊS VIEIRA
Collegian Staff

"UMass has to change," according to guest speaker, Nelson Acosta, director of the UMass office of Third World Affairs. He spoke at the candlelight vigil to protest racism last Thursday night on the steps of the Student Union.

Acosta said the goal of the candlelight vigil was to get students talking about one of the major problems plaguing the Amherst campus today — racial intolerance.

About 25 concerned UMass students held candles in their hands to symbolize their protest against racism. The participants formed a circle, discussing ideas on how to make the UMass campus free of racism and a welcoming place for minorities.

"The second floor of Whitmore has maybe five people of color working there, the third floor has three and the numbers decline as you go up the ladder," said Acosta. "There is no diversity of opinions at the top administration levels. The oppression issue must address how institutions are organized."

The participants agreed on various issues, namely that racism affects everyone, and that each individual should take responsibility for racist acts. Participants said there is a need to speak out and become vocal, and only then will racism be stopped.

"We're news. We're talking about making changes and building coalitions," said Acosta.

According to Acosta, students need to organize themselves and "take a stand, we must start talking. Make the connection on unity, and set up goals to work together." He also stated that having small meetings scattered throughout campus isn't enough to get everyone involved. "We need to go beyond small meetings," he said.

Acosta believes racism should be stopped through peaceful means and direct action. "You don't have to take over buildings or break windows, just stop racism when you see it."

After approximately an hour of continuous discussion, the group started to dissipate, but not before UMass student Colin Ruhe urged everyone to "Just take five minutes of your time to make things better."

Before resuming the vigil, Acosta asked the participants to carry their lit candles home as a symbolic gesture of the protest against racism.

■ Caldwell

continued from page 1

situation. She is working every waking moment to adjust. The Caldwell family say that Kathie's disposition is "remarkable."

"She's determined to make as much progress as possible. She's learning to use adaptive equipment to eat, communicate and to control her environment," Mrs. Caldwell said.

This tragedy has naturally taken an emotional toll on Kathie, her family and friends. The financial situation is of high priority at this point. While medical costs have been absorbed by health insurance, the family must pay the tab for the equipment that is crucial to her recovery.

Among the list of adaptive equipment that is needed is a fully portable but costly speech synthesis device, known as "The Liberator." This device also comes equipped with writing and printing capabilities.

"Medicaid and private insurance do not pay for the type of equipment Kathie needs. Using a communication device, operating a T.V., or home computer, adjusting one's position in an electric hospital bed, making a phone call and turning on and off lights are not considered medically necessary and therefore, are not provided," Mrs. Caldwell said.

Kathie received intensive physical, occupational and speech therapy at the New England Rehabilitation Hospital in Woburn and and was allowed to return home in mid-September.

While Kathie presently still cannot talk and has little movement on her left side, she still has some movement and function on her right side. But family members say she is still very weak.

Mrs. Caldwell maintains her optimism, and together with family and friends, they hope and pray for a full recovery.

Mrs. Caldwell recently sent a letter to Eileen Stewart in the UMass Dean of Students office to thank her for her efforts in regards to the fundraising for Kathie.

"Kathie's friends and neighbors, near and far, have encouraged her and uplifted her," Caldwell said.

Later this week the Kathie Caldwell Fundraising Committee will have a table out on the Campus Center concourse, that will provide more information on Kathie's condition and try to get more students involved in the their fundraising efforts.

For more information regarding sponsorship and/or donations to the Kathie Caldwell Equipment Fund, please contact Eileen Stewart, 545-2684 or Kathy McNaughton, 256-3585.

Commercials show women as products

By STACY MALONE
Collegian Staff

Images of women in advertisements distorts the perceptions of real women in society, according to a video and discussion Monday night in the Campus Center.

The workshop began with a video by Jean Kilbourne's titled "Still Killing Us Softly," and then opened into a discussion among the audience of about 40 people. The event was facilitated by Meagan Rosser and Holly Schick, members of the Educator/Advocate Program from the Everywoman's Center, and sponsored by WMUA.

Kilbourne's video showed how advertisements portray women in an ideal manner and how their bodies are used to sell products and give society the approval to treat women as objects.

"The advertisers sell us values, images, concepts of love, sexuality, success, reality, and normalcy," Kilbourne said. "They tell us who we are and who we should be."

Kilbourne said in commercials there is no one who is disabled, everyone is beautiful and the ideal is based on flawlessness.

She said all the women are white, slim, available for sex and women's bodies and the products are interchangeable in the world of advertising.

"The woman becomes less and less human and the body becomes a thing an object can be packaged in," she said. "Turning a human being into a thing is the way to justify violence against a person."

Kilbourne gave examples of commercials that show woman hanging out of a trash can to sell shoes and portray liberation and independence for women to sell cigarettes.

Kilbourne said a major problem in our society is that the culture has a pornographic attitude toward sex and the seriousness of violence against women is trivialized in advertisements.

"A myth that women love to get beaten develops an attitude in our society that makes it hard for the victim to get help," Kilbourne said.

As the audience watched the advertisements used in Kilbourne's video, people reacted in disgust to the way women were portrayed as pieces of merchandise and how abuse and rape is made to look casual and as a joke.

Schick, a facilitator, said they wanted to bring an open discussion to communicate and act through a coalition to combat these problems through education and awareness.

Rosser, another facilitator, said, "Advertisements not only shape our roles and our lives, but also reflects the society."

She said that a lot of women are portrayed as bimbos and even when you listen to the radio you can hear the DJs making sexist remarks.

Emily Stewart, a senior communications major and the chairperson of WMUA, said, "You must speak up if you see something offensive. This society tells me that my most precious commodity is not my mind or what I am capable of, but me in my birthday suit. Don't question yourself about speaking up, let people know when something offends you."

■ Smith

continued from page 1

The judicial board demanded an accused student to issue a formal apology to one of students victimized, in addition to writing a research paper on multiculturalism, according to Smith media relation's director Stacey Schmeidel.

Yet students and faculty said racial tensions have escalated since the judicial board gave their verdict.

"Hate-crime [perpetrators] need to be punished and made an example of," Venter said. "Absolutely nothing is being done."

One of the report's 12 recommendations is for top administrators to punish hate-crime perpetrators and to assist all government levels in strengthening multiculturalism.

Smith student Elizabeth Solernou, who testified for the Committee as the co-chairperson for Nosotras, a Latina students organization, said on the panel that minority students on campus do not feel safe.

"The College has not put forth the communication for protecting minority students," Solernou said.

The studies proposed that multicultural education should be heavily emphasized at the elementary school level, and "any multicultural education still required at the college level should be recognized as important remedial work." The report also recommends police and security to take part in multicultural education.

■ problems

continued from page 1

faculty, staff and other students."

The report found that covert bias-motivated incidents tend to be committed by young adult white males. It also found that standard courses that are components of the core curriculum lack multicultural viewpoints and recommended a review and modification of such diversity courses.

"The University does not really understand us and it doesn't understand itself," said Alexander Nguyen in the report. "If you want to be multicultural don't look at me, look at yourself first. If you want better relations on campus, look at White racism and why relations are so poor."

The report recommended structured events to create dialogue between conflicting minority communities. It also recommended increased support for minority scholarships, as it found inadaquate recruitment of minority students and faculty.

The committee also found that police personnel may contribute to the problems by "brusque, if not improper treatment" of students of color and recommended multicultural education and training.

"I'm pleased to note the recent progress [with the student-administration agreement]," said Hooker. We need to put the present report in context. I'm delighted with the civility that characterized the agreement. We need to empower dialogue."

Celebration of the Birth of
Bahá'u'lláh
The Promised One of All Ages
7:30pm • Wednesday • Nov. 11th
Memorial Hall
The Public is Welcome

O people of God! Give ear unto that which, if heeded, will ensure the freedom, well-being, tranquillity, exaltation and advancement of all men
Bahá'u'lláh

Sponsored by the UMASS Bahá'í Club

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
World Heavyweight Championship.
The Mirage, Las Vegas

WILL BOWE BE THE NEXT CHAMPION?
OR JUST NEXT? ON FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 13TH, ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN.

$10.00 TICKET PRICE
• Pre Fight Buffet • Door Prizes
9:00 PM
Tickets Can Be Purchased in Advance

University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

Winter Session 1993

Yes, you can!
Yes, you can!
So, do it!

Register for Winter Session classes.
Special enrollment restrictions do not apply for Winter Session.
So, if you're a UMass student, all you have to do is just sign up.

WINTER SESSION:
- a unique "mini-semester," just three weeks long
- earn 3 academic credits in only 3 weeks
- over 100 credit courses, including gen. ed. designated classes

Your chance to:
- take a class you couldn't get before
- make up credits
- meet graduation requirements
- lighten your spring course load

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.
Catalogs available on campus or at the Division of Continuing Education, 6th floor Goodell.

January 4-25

AFFORDABLE CONDOMINIUMS AVAILABLE FOR RENT
ONE TWO & THREE BEDROOMS
THE BROOK AT AMHERST GREEN
QUIET CONVENIENT & FLEXIBLE
253-3834

Wanted
STUDENT
Legal Assistants
Application Deadline: Nov. 13th
- No experience necessary; paralegal training provided!
- Work directly with attorneys and clients
- Receive up to 15 academic credits
- Function as a paralegal in a busy law office
- Gain valuable, hands-on experience in the legal field
- Apply TODAY. Call Legal Services at 545-1995!

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

This isn't the time or place for Jeffries to bring his bigotry

There is something on our campus as of late, something that can be felt by many, but not touched. Different people are referring to it in different ways. Some call it hatred, some violence; I call it tension, tension generated by events such as the assault of an RA in Washington Tower.

There has been an outbreak of graffiti demonstrating hatred toward groups of individuals: Jewish students, GLB students, students of color, etc. And deeper than that, there has been a feeling, a fear perhaps, in many students that this campus is not a community, that we cannot work together, and that to be different is to be in danger. And this feeling is something I worry about, something that has to change.

Everyone on campus has a right to exist in peace, a right not to be scared that someone is going to confront them, or that they will find something scrawled on their door when they wake up. Everyone on campus has a right to speak their minds, to say what they believe in. Most importantly, everyone has a right to be safe. And to ensure these rights that are shared by all, it is of utmost importance to make sure that events and stimuli that can cause tension should be kept to a minimum. It is for these reasons that I am opposed to Leonard Jeffries speaking this Thursday.

I believe in the First Amendment, that everyone has a right to speak their thoughts. I do not wish to censor or crucify Jeffries, regardless of what his message this Thursday will be. It is his past record, the things he has said about Blacks, Jews, Whites, homosexuals and the space shuttle incident that cause me to fear his presence on campus.

Andrea SPITZER

Jeffries has spoken against Black men who marry White women. He holds the Jews responsible for the slave market in Africa, as well as "putting together a system of destruction of Black people." Jeffries' bigotry extends to those he refers to as "faggots." In a speech, Jeffries referred to the Challenger catastrophe as "the best thing to happen to America in a long time" because it may slow the space program and prevent Whites from "spreading their filth across the universe." While Jeffries reserves his right to these beliefs, I can't comprehend what good he will bring to campus, what enlightenment he will provide, especially during these times of pre-existing tension on campus.

If Jeffries were to come and speak at any time, I believe many students would be concerned and upset. At a time like this however, his presence causes fear and anger, as well as disappointment that some encourage and await his arrival. Even more upsetting is that the SGA voted to use funds from all students, funds that we must pay as part of our arts fee, to invite such a man to this campus. I would not voluntarily pay to hear Jeffries speak, nor pay to bring him here. It's highly unfair that I have paid money to bring a speaker who has said such terrible things about all people that fall under his bigotry. At a time when Black-Jewish relations are being so carefully worked out, I can't help but consider this a slap in the face from those who invited Jeffries.

Instead of treating those who oppose Jeffries as troublemakers or crucifiers, try to understand our fear and anger. To say a man who has said he is "sick and tired of having the damn Jews shoving the Holocaust down our throats" is not anti-Semitic is insulting and untrue. I plan to attend Jeffries speech, to hear his message, and to learn more about him. But even if he says nothing offensive, that will not change who he is, what he is or what he has said, or the disappointment that he would be invited and sponsored in part by SGA funds. I don't think anyone is saying he, or anyone else, has no right to speak. What more people are concerned about is whether this is a good time for him to be here, and the damage he could cause with his insulting remarks. We have as much of a right to ask why, as he does to speak.

Andrea Spitzer is a Collegian staff member.

A toast to full-size glasses

It was a moment of pure revelation. What caused this heavenly event of luck? Who had blessed us with this monumental move of compassion? Why had so many lucky students been given the vast luxury usually reserved for so few in our society?

Last week at the Franklin Dining Commons students and staff alike fell on the floor to give thanks to the powers that be for a new found gift. A gift so grand mere words cowered before its being. Poets, associated with the greatest works of art, couldn't find the words to express the true gratitude that us lucky Franklin diners have felt.

How could we ever pay back such tremendous charity? How could we pay homage to the giver of such a wonderful bestowment?

David RIVERA

No, it's not diamonds. No, it's not gold. It's more wonderful, more precious. Students at Franklin were given (I don't know if I could say it) — full-size drinking glasses!

Yes, it's true, students will no longer have to suffer the indignity of stacking multiple mini-glasses to quench their thirst. Now students at UMass can feel like normal people and drink with dignity and drink with honor.

I feel pity and remorse for those students who recently moved off-campus, for they shall never reap the benefits of this coup d'etat. To all of you who had to suffer years and years with those mini-glasses, I feel a sense of sadness. You will never know what it feels like to drink from these new twelve-ounce glasses. All you can do is dream in envy of us dinning commons elite.

After I recovered from the shock of this surprise, I decided to find out who was the benevolent creature who gave us this gift from the gods. Who could be so gracious? Who could be so caring and who could possibly have that kind of political clout, clout so vast that mini-glass lobbyists were unable to stop this new-found-hero?

I called officials at Whitmore and they told me to talk to Noah Nutintado, the Dean of Dish Utensils.

"Dean Nutintado, I'm looking to write an article to show students how great you are, and how you truly care for us," I explained over the telephone.

"Well, aaah David, thanks, aaah not many aaah people aaah know aaah how hard I work aaah," he replied.

"Well sir, many students feel that this move toward large drinking glasses will help students at UMass feel like true change is on the horizon, and that true hope exists."

"Aaah, drinking glasses aaah I have nothing to do with aaah drinking glasses aaah I'm da Dean of Alloy Utensils aaah you want Donald Donutin aaah he's da Dean of Ceramic and Glass Utensils."

I apologized and hung up immediately. How could I be so stupid as to mistake this great event with the wrong person. I called Dean Donald Donutin.

"Dean Donutin, many students are grateful for the recent large drinking glass movement. What moved you to make such a bold and daring act, to stand up against the status quo and fight those mini-glass lobbyists? What made you care for the dining commons patrons who will benefit and prosper because of this mandate?"

"It wasn't easy David. For yaarz UMazz students haav had to suffaar the insult of drinking from a dwarf-like drinking glazz. This of course made students feel subhuman. It waaz psychological terror. Grades were low and so waaz morale. But not anymore. Now UMazz students can feel as privileged as all those highbrow private universities."

With tears in my eyes I went on and asked about the opposition who wanted to keep UMass in the mini-glass era.

"Well I caaan't name names, but there waaz a considerable pressure from the Bush administration. Students from Ammherzzt college also lobbied agaanzzt the change. But they of course received full-size glazzez years ago, and look how prestigious they've become. They didn't waant UMazz to add to the competition."

Dean Donutin went on to express pride in his decision and he added that UMass students can now drink "like real human beings," who will seek to reach for greater and higher hopes.

"Dean Donutin, with this new change of glasses, many students are hoping that changes in the actual food will take place. Students are hoping fresher, more nutritious food will be offered in various combinations. And maybe someday fresh fruit juice during dinner."

"Come on Dave, get real. This is after all — only UMazz."

David Rivera is a Collegian columnist.

Make political debate meaningful

I was elated to see Bill Clinton elected president, yet I wholeheartedly second Michael Morrissey's call for "hungry new Republicans" to fight in future elections (Collegian, Nov. 6). I respect the Republican stance and would enjoy the Republican steer the G.O.P. into more meaningful dialogue with the Democrats I spport.

The U.S.A. was built on the free exchange of ideas and not cheap epithets like "Slick Willie" or spurious claims of monopoly on "character" and "family values." I hope we can learn from the past mistakes and let healthy bipartisan debate restore the people's faith in the political system.

Timothy Lahey
Northampton

Remembrance: a form of honor

I would like to add some comments to several recent articles in the Collegian on anti-Semitism. The more one studies this phenomenon the plainer it appears to me that one must be reasonably clear of several of its facets.

There is a question as to the meaning of the term "Semite." It should be stated that there is no race of Semites; I mean this in the sense of being of the Black, White, etc., races. It is true that Hebrew, as in Arabic, is from the Semitic branch of languages. There are probably several million Jews, unfortunately, who may not know any more Hebrew than the general public.

If one talks about Jews as an ethnic group or more loosely as a minority it would imply that they can be distinguished from other groups because they retain the customs, language and/or some special perspective. Here again they remain more or less invisible since wherever Jews live they are as diverse in their skin colors as in their interests. This includes those who govern their entire lives in a strict or ultra-strict way on what they believe to be Judaism; or on the other hand, those who don't care about other people's religious opinions and consider all religions to be human-made. This leaves one with cultural Jews, that is people who find themselves united, even if vaguely, around the ten commandments and the golden rule: Love thy fellow human being as thyself.

Lastly, there is assimilation. Jews have been accused of being unassimilable. Historically, large numbers of Jews have made heroic, if misguided, attempts to assimilate. Germany and Central Europe generally would be good and recent examples of this failure. I say misguided because assimilation as an option does not depend on Jewish willingness but on the willingness of the non-Jewish majority populations' acquiescence even if Jews were among the original settlers.

What to do? I would not treat anti-Semitism as a disease or madness or any other way which allows such behavior to find refuge. Those who are anti-Semitic, for the most part, are quite ordinary people. Anti-Semitism is a learned behavior with very old roots. It is primarily a Western phenomenon which began by going West from the Near East in the retreating and dying footsteps of the Roman Empire. This empire, of course, became the Holy Roman Empire. I think one of the messages, as Elie Wiesel and many others have said, is never to forget the historical beginnings, the provenance, of the Holocaust. Ways to avoid forgetting are to remember, keep talking, writing and educating. In the case of the Jews and all others who have suffered in similar ways such remembering is a way of honoring those who were slaughtered. Aren't we all human beings together in so many diverse ways?

James van Luik
Visiting Professor
Amherst

Randazza nearly lobotomized me

The Butterputian pirates of the mind, could I please join up and be friends with you? I would like to pledge into this fraternity. Where else could I be with such individuals, free thinkers, geniuses of the age? No self-proclaimed radicals live up there in the clouds. If only I could be just like you!

Friends, the virus is everywhere. Ever since I was an infant the whole world has been out to get me. Us individuals are fingered for liquidation by the United Front. What is this United Front? An evil place of social reform for any people who dare to be dissimilar. There is a plot to lobotomize us Jolly Rogers. Before I read your manifesto, I had no idea what to do with myself. Thank you, O Great Socrates, or was that Randazza the Humble?

Please let me live with you artist folk. I have read many books. I know all about the real world, just like you. I have very little experience with reality, but those books sure told me what to expect. Orwell lives!

I stand alone now, but I will come to meet you Butterputians. We can be individuals together, and bond into a unit to fight this United Front. Housing Services cannot be allowed to spread the virus of conformity! It will be quite different to remain individuals defying the world if we bond though. How can we be individuals if we are on the S.S. Butterfield? If there is a president, a Mark Randazza? How can there be any individuality?

Oh my! I have had a revelation! The ship must be sunk. The Butterputians are the virus. Both Housing Services and Butterputians are collaborating with the United Front! I almost was baited into a place of residence with the greatness of my presence, with no oxygen. I was almost lobotomized by Randazza the Humble. There is little light in Butterputia; all the evil fluorescent lights have been covered with grocery bags. I would always be tripping all about, never getting anywhere. I would live in a vacuum, tunnels of self-importance leading back to my narrow little mind, just like 38 people who see it fit to sign a letter all about how they are better than the rest of campus.

I have been the victim of a hoax! I need a transfusion to clean my system after all this infection. Now everyone is out to get me, even those nasty Butterputians. There is just one option. I must leave UMass and head toward Paris. Feel free to join me. The battle verse the United Front has begun!

John Mucciaccio
Central

Third World Affairs

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Angolian rebel forces reject gov't elections

By RANCA TUBA
Collegian correspondent

Angered by the result of the elections, Savimbi ordered his rebels to overtake provinces last Thursday. The clash between UNITA (National Union for the Total Independence of Angola) rebel forces and MPLA (Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola) government forces erupted on Thursday and came to an end on Saturday.

The fighting had spread from provinces to the capital city, Luanda. The MPLA government forces over the course of the weekend retook Luanda as Savimbi's rebels fled with the help of armed civilians who vowed not to see Savimbi's rebels control the streets.

Tensions had been rising since national elections were held in September, which UNITA lost. Savimbi accused the MPLA government of ballot stealing and rigging the votes. Although Savimbi claims that the elections were fraudulent, he has given no explanation for his allegations, and he does not retain any concrete evidence about illegal activities on the part of his rivals. The United Nations states that the balloting was free and fair.

UNITA is known for its terrorist and inhuman tactics which they have used against their rivals and the people of Angola. Savimbi who is the political and military leader of UNITA is known for his brutality and racism. There is evidence of recent developments that he pertained knowledge and condoned the assassination of two high-ranking officials within his party.

As a result of the weekend clashes, UNITA's rebels suffered a major setback. Savimbi's second-in-command, and nephew were reported killed and a third top rebel official wounded. Three UNITA generals were captured, police reported.

During the 16-year civil war, the United States and South Africa backed UNITA, while Cuba supported MPLA. The weekend fighting threatened to renew the protracted civil war that came to an end last year, after the cease fire agreement in 1991 had been signed between MPLA and UNITA.

News Analysis

The agreement between the two parties was intended to guarantee peaceful multiparty elections. The uprising violence by UNITA rebels clearly indicates the unwillingness of Savimbi and his rebels to abide by the cease fire agreement.

A dusk-to-dawn curfew was imposed by the police. Police warned civilians to remain in their homes and avoid going into the streets if necessary because of snipers. State radio reported that 1000 lives were claimed over the weekend fighting. Aguiar dos Santos, a reporter for Lisbon's TSF radio in Luanda confirmed that he has seen the bodies at a Luanda police station of UNITA's second-in-command official Jeremias Chitunda, and Elias Salupeto Pena another UNITA top official and Savimbi's nephew. Since the weekend, only sporadic shooting and explosions have been heard in some districts.

Pinochet remembered

A review of dictator's economic plan

By CHRISTOPHER ROGERS
Collegian correspondent

General Augusto Pinochet Ugarte: September 1973 - March 1989

On September 11, 1973, Chile was convulsed by a violent military coup d'etat. With the presidential palace besieged and in flames, President Salvador Allende committed suicide. The military takeover and Allende's sudden death shocked the world.

The coup against the Marxist president was led by the commander in chief of the Chilean Army, General Pinochet, and a four-man military junta. A career army officer, Pinochet assumed full power as chief of state in June 1974 and remained the authoritarian leader of Chile until March 1989. By the time he finished his rule over Chile in 1989, Pinochet's presidency covered the administration of five U.S. presidents: Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan, and George Bush. (Sorry Bill, you just missed him).

Throughout his one-man reign, the international press coverage of Chile focused on human rights and other issues of interest to world public opinion. The atrocities committed by the Pinochet regime have made Chile the object of worldwide concern.

Although considered the bloodiest coup in the history of Latin America, Pinochet's control of power could not have occurred at a more opportune time. Under the then president, Salvador Allende, Chile was heading down the road of Marxism and socialism. Castro's Cuba was seen as the model of the way a country's economy should be run and Allende wanted to follow his example.

However, with Pinochet's arrival those plans were fortunately abandoned. Chile's economic policies began to follow Milton Friedman's orthodox monetarist theories and results followed.

The first stirrings of the economic "boom" were felt in 1977. The Chilean "economic miracle" took center stage not only economically, but politically and socially as well. The gross domestic product (GDP), having fallen 12.9% in 1975, recovered 3.5% in 1976. In 1977 Chile enjoyed a spectacular growth rate of 9.9%, the highest in several decades. This notable growth continued in 1978 and 1979, when production increased 8.2% and 8.3% respectively. In 1980, however, the growth rate declined moderately to 6.5%. It was also in 1980 that Pinochet pushed through a new constitution that would allow him to remain in power until 1989.

Political Analysis

Those tremendous growth rates were accomplished by privatizing many industries around the country and giving ownership back to the people — and far away from the government. Because Pinochet recognized that economic stability comes through free-market reforms, Chile is able to call itself a true market economy today; while Castro begins his fourth decade as a dictator of one of the poorest countries in the world.

Granted, Pinochet must not be condoned for his violent rise to power and many human rights violations that followed; however, he paved the way for a stable economic system that is present in Chile to this day and enables it to be one of the most economically successful countries in South America.

Grenada's long movement for autonomy

By DAVID RIVERA
Collegian Staff

With its white sanded beaches and hypnotizing palm trees, Grenada bares few of the scars left from the 1983 invasion. What it does bare is poverty and isolation that has sent Grenada back decades in social advances.

Located at the southern tip of the Windward Islands and just 90-miles off the coast of Venezuela lies this tiny Caribbean island. Nine-years after the Untied States invaded Grenada, both Grenadians and Americans are asking questions that probe into the events that lead up to and followed the 1983 invasion.

Sighted during Christopher Columbus's third voyage, Grenada's first inhabitants were the Chiboney and Arawak Indians originating from Venezuela.

After centuries of native autonomy, French businessmen payed for the extermination of Grenada's indigenous people,and claimed it for themselves. With the Indian population destroyed France looked to the slave-trade to supply labor. Few traces remain of Grenada's indigenous culture.

In 1763, under the treaty of Versailles, Grenada fell into English control. Slavery would reign throughout the British colonies until the Emancipation Act of 1833.

In 1974, after hundreds of years of foreign rule, Grenada received its independence from England and began to look towards a new nation. Rich with resources, many thought Grenada would be able to sustain its independence and even prosper.

Eric Gairy would become Grenada's first elected Prime Minister, he would also become the island first unelected dictator. Gairy would be corrupted by his power and newly attained wealth. He even created Grenada's own death squad called, "the Mongoose Gang".

Maurice Bishop and a group of well-educated young Grenadians formed the New Jewel Movement,(NJM). Based on Marxism, the NJM was determined to oust the Gairy Government.

With Gairy out of the country, on March 13 1979, Bishop and the NJM took control of government installations in what is now called the "Bloodless Revolution." Bishop and his new Peoples Revolutionary Government (PRG), had a huge task ahead of them. The country was in dire economic need due to the years of corruption of the Gairy regime.

In what Bishop and his government considered an insulting move, the United States ambassador, Frank Ortiz offered $5,000 to help in the rebuilding of Grenada's economy.

Lyden Ramdhanny, was a cabinet member during the time said the PRG was looking to both sides for help. "We said we'd like to have relations with everybody, left-leaning and right-leaning," Ramhdanny said. "His offer of $5,000 was a slap in the face."

Bishop and his followers looked to Cuba for assistance and they proved to be more than generous.

The United States, under the Reagan administration, immediately let the PRG know that closer relations with Cuba would, "not be tolerated," said a spokesperson for U.S. State department.

Historical Analysis

Throughout 1980 and 1981, Grenada and its population of 110,000 began to develop into a self-sufficient and autonomous nation. The PRG began an anti-illiteracy program and started an education program that proved to be far ahead of its Caribbean neighbors.

Grenadians were pleased with the social advances. Unlike before the revolution, education, health care and food programs were all free to the needy.

The Reagan administration became more and more aggressive towards Grenada. The republican administration worked to deny Grenada loans from the International Monetary Fund and from the World Bank. It was clear from the beginning that Grenada would have nothing but hostility from the superpower from the north.

DAVID RIVERA / COLLEGIAN

Prime Minister Bishop's office remains gutted and unchanged as a sad example of a stagnant economy nine years after U.S. forces bombed his Ministry Head Quarters.

This aggression created divisions within the PRG and this would lead to a power struggle that would cause what Grenadians call, "Bloody Wednesday".

On October 15, 1983 a power struggle within the PRG created chaos and deaths. Hundreds of civilians including Bishop and several cabinet members were killed in a gun fight which to this day has historians baffled.

On October 25, 1983 the Reagan administration found the chaos in Grenada ideal for implementing a full scale invasion of one of the Caribbean's tiniest islands. The official reasons for the invasion focused around the safety of American medical students and the death of Bishop.

These reasons were later discovered to be bogus. The government which had taken control following the death of Bishop assured the U.S. State Department that no American citizen was threatened or at risk. And Reagan's new-found affection for Bishop was seen as an act to muster support from neighboring islands.

Grenadians and nearby islands expected the United States to save them from their economic depression. That salvation never came.

Robert Coard, a Grenadian who lives in Boston and is President of Action in Boston for Community Development(ABCD), says since the invasion Grenada has suffered more than any time in its history.

"No new development has taken place," Coard said. "Most Grenadians are worse off after the invasion."

Coard also said that the island suffers from 50 percent unemployment. "What happened in 1982 was the cowboy foreign policy of Ronald Reagan," Coard said.

Coard also added that he saw the invasion of his homeland as, "international child abuse," because of the islands size.

Coard sees little hope for Grenada's near-future but he added that with a democrat in the White House a more human attitude may be expressed towards the Caribbean as a whole.

"People from all over should get together and demand more aid for Grenada," Coard said. "After what that tiny island and its people have been through, they deserve more."

Arts & Living

Boston-bound Bongos funking up the Valley

By BROOKE C. WHEELER
Collegian Staff

Bongos To Circus
Flubber
The Hatch
Nov. 5, 1992

Bongos to Circus is not the usual college-life cover-band experiment with limited notions of Success in the Valley.

They are a full-fledged original band with their own sound. These people have talent, not attitudes. And last Thursday night a lucky Hatch crowd was reminded why they're going to be hitting Boston within the next year and leaving the Valley in the dust.

The jeans-and-T-shirt Worcester band Flubber opened for Bongos to Circus, setting the mood with their funky rhythmic ska/hard rock/reggae/blues sound. ("We call it rock," said Matt Robert, lead vocals and guitar.)

Despite being harassed by some police on the way and being an hour late, they managed to relax and pump out some hearty rhythms like "Tequila War Stories," "Soap Opera Life" and "Look Again."

Drummer Paul Plourde whipped himself into a frenzy, bassist Bill Butkus provided the thumping heartbeat of the songs, and guitarist Mark Debennedictis ended up playing spastic riffs on his back on the Hatch "stage." They finished their set with a brooding Eagles-esque harmony.

Then Bongos took the stage and dove in with the danceable ska-ish "Where's Home." Husky-voiced lead singer Ames Friedman then kicked into some psychadelic twirling and groovin' during the catchy, engaging, yet dark "Partners in Crime," their "spy movie theme song."

Guitarist Steve Chumsae, sporting Elmer's Glue dreadlocks, hypnotized the crowd with his echoing guitar, and then Ames whipped out her tambourine and added a new dimension. Meanwhile, back in the "percussion corner," Albert Sadia was working himself into a sweat with some maniac bongo playing.

They mesmerized the crowd with their trademark: songs that change tempo several times during their duration, moving sometimes from a languid reggae beat into an almost thrashy frenzy or into a swingy ska.

Drummer Sean Cassidy pumped out the leading beats with sweaty fervor. The rhythm got so worked up and Tom Hansen attacked his bass so ferociously that I thought his right hand was going to fly off his wrist and land in the crowd.

Ames then introduced their token Jane's Addiction cover with a request to "bang your head, please." They ended the first set with "Missing Missiles," Ames' ethereal vocals and Steve's dreamy guitar flooding over the percussion.

In the second set, they played the favorite "Wake Up Screaming," a heady, menacing, sometimes funkadelic guitar, throaty vocals and a psycho bass that slams into your head.

In "Part II," the guitar became ethereal and Albert worked furiously over his bongos. Some woozy, funky, psychadelic Charlatans-on-caffeine stuff started happening, and Ames really got down and did some funky moves of her own.

Then they blew me away with a cover of Jefferson Airplane's "White Rabbit." Ames gave Grace Slick some fierce competition.

Turn to BONGOS, page 8

Al Di Meola revolves around World Sinfonia

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

COURTESY MUSIC WORKS, LTD

Al Di Meola, playing tonight at Bowker.

World Sinfonia, the latest project and release by guitar great Al Di Meola, couldn't have been more aptly titled. His first release in over three years, the album's name reflects both its style and the band members' origins.

In Di Meola's own words, the group World Sinfonia is "a very South American/European mix of classical jazz-tango improvisation and Middle Eastern overtones. It's like a small symphonic ensemble."

Tonight at Bowker Auditorium, UMass will be treated to Al Di Meola World Sinfonia's eclectic sound, showcasing the perfomer's award-winning talent on both acoustic and synclavier guitar.

The self-titled album is an exciting, heavily Latin influenced work. One of the pieces for World Sinfonia is a homage to Di Meola's friend Astor, titled "Last Tango for Astor."

Some of the other tracks include a new arrangement of "No Mystery," a piece Di Meola cut with Chick Corea at age 19, and "Saluzzi," a work written for the poor shoeshine boys of Buenos Aires.

Di Meola's obvious favorite, however, is a track titled "Tango Suite," written by the father of classical tango, Astor Piazzolla.

Driven by Di Meola's talented guitar abilities, the group also features percussionist Arto Tuncboyaci from Turkey, playing all homemade instruments, Puerto Rican/Cuban percussionist Gumbi Ortiz on congas and Venezuelan guitarist Chris Carrington.

World Sinfonia's newest member is Argentinian Dino Saluzzi — who performs on bandoneon — an instrument primarily used for tango music in Latin America.

Starting his career in 1974, Di Meola has recorded 13 solo albums and has collaborated with Paco DeLucia and John McLaughlin on two others.

Di Meola's accomplishments include a Grammy award for his album, No Mystery (1975) and two Gold albums.

Turn to DI MEOLA, page 8

Collegian ▪ 545-3500

The University of Massachusetts Department of Theater presents

Women of Trachis
by Sophocles
a new translation
by Robert Bagg
November 12-14 and 18-21
8:00 p.m.
Rand Theater
Tickets: 545-2511
Fine Arts Center Box Office

TRAVEL SMART THIS WINTER!
FROM NEW YORK
Roundtrip One Way
London $305 $165
Paris $398 $219
Rome $525 $320
Oslo/Stockholm $458 $229
Tel Aviv/Istanbul $639 $329
Guatemala City $390 $205
Costa Rica $430 $225
Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Customs, immigration and departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*In NYC

SARAH LAWRENCE COLLEGE IN
PARIS
A semester or year of academic study for juniors and seniors. Students study in small seminars and tutorials with French faculty, and in such Parisian institutions as the Sorbonne, the Ecole du Louvre, and the Institut d'Etudes Politiques.
For information and an application, contact Sarah Lawrence College in Paris, Box UMAP, Bronxville, New York 10708

AL Di MeoLa
with the WORLD Sinfonia TRIO
& special guest Andrea Ryoboz Trio (From Russia)
WhEN: Nov. 10th 1992
WHeRe: Bowker Auditorium UMASS 8pm
FRoM: UPC Productions
PRICE: $13 UMASS $15 OTHERS
DaY of SHoW: $14 UMASS $16 OTHERS
fix avail at the Fine Arts Center Box Office, UMASS

Collegian • 545-3500

QUIET!
If you're tired of yelling this, come and see us
The Brook
253-3834

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days
8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9)
Amherst • 253-5072

haircuts always $10!
BUCCI
a hair space
25 N. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST | 256 0733

AIR FORCE ROTC UNITS
FILLED TO CAPACITY
NOT!

Don't believe everything you hear. The Air Force continues to seek outstanding students to fill future officer requirements. See yourself becoming a leader, graduating from college as an Air Force officer with fully developed qualities of character and managerial ability. Notice, too, the opportunities. Like eligibility for scholarship programs that can pay tuition, textbooks, fees...even $100 in tax-free income each academic month.

Visualize a crisp uniform that reflects pride in yourself and your ability to accept challenge. Get the picture? Now make a call!

545-2451/2437
AIM HIGH--AIR FORCE

■ Di Meola

continued from page 7

Elegant Gypsy (1977) and Friday Night in San Francisco-Live.

Di Meola has also been lauded numerous times by music magazines, appearing on the cover of such titles as Guitar, Guitar Magazine, Downbeat and Player.

Al Di Meola World Sinfonia with special guest The Andrea Ryaboz Trio will perform at Bowker Auditorium tonight at 8 p.m. Tickets $14 / UMass students. Available at FAC box office.

Correction

In "House of Love: for sale," (November 5), the Collegian implied that guitarist Johnny Marr, previously of The Smiths, was deceased. He is indeed alive and well. Also, the name of the group and the disc's title were accidentaly reversed. The band is Babe Rainbow, and the album title is House of Love. The Collegian regrets the error.

■ Bongos

continued from page 7

kicking raspy power out of her throat. They ended the evening with "Another Day," during which Tom let his hair down and the crowd jumped into some last-ditch moshing.

Despite the Hatch's deplorable acoustics and annoying feedback, Bongos to Circus rose high above the problems and delivered their own orginal, unbrandable kind of music to a very thankful crowd.

Ames has a husky, bluesy voice ("Smoking — I was a soprano in high school") that belts unflinchingly through Steve's inspired and chameleon guitar. Albert deftly beats the crap out of no less than 15 instruments, including various bongos, drums, chimes and something like a cowbell.

Sean swings the songs loudly and heartily along their tempo and tempo changes, and Tom brings the whole thing around with a driving, throbbing funk bass.

Don't miss them before they skip off to Boston — they're too good to stay unknown for long.

Bongos To Circus will be playing at the Hadley Pub Nov. 20 to a 21+ crowd.

PRESENTATION!
Thursday, November 12, 7pm
Campus Center, Room 805/09
Information Table
Campus Center Lobby, 8:30am-4pm
Speakers from London & Dublin
For more information on Working Abroad, call (212) 661-1414 ext. 1150
BUNAC

TONIGHT
Pre-Holiday
DANCE PARTY
with
D.J. PETE FREE

ANY MENU NACHOS
$2.00
9:30-10:30

THE 24 HOURS PUB
CELEBRATES 1968 • 1992 IN AMHERST
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

La Cucina di
Pinocchio
PIZZA, SUBS, & CALZONES
FREE DELIVERY ~ 256-4110

LASAGNA SALADS

30 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
Hours:
Mon-Thurs. 11:30am to 2:00am
Fri.-Sat. 11:30am to 3:00am
Sun. 11:30am to 1:00am
Coupons valid for delivery or pick-up only.

$1.50 OFF
any Large Pizza with 2 toppings
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993

$1.00 OFF
any Large Pizza
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993

Any 2 Calzones
for $7.00
Pick-up or delivery only
Expires May 31, 1993
Valid at Amherst location only

3 Calzones
for $9.95
Pick-up or delivery only
Expires May 31, 1993
Valid at Amherst location only

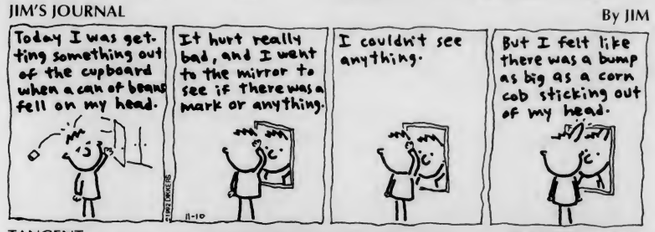
TWIN SPECIAL
2 Large Cheese Pizzas
$12.50
Any Topping $1.25 more
Pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993

$1.00 OFF
any Medium Pizza
Limit of one coupon per pizza
Coupons for pick-up or delivery only
Valid at Amherst location only
Expires May 31, 1993

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

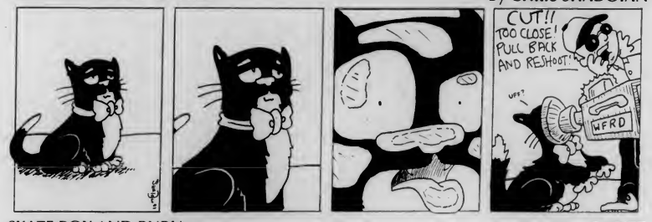
CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM



TANGENT By KURT MATTILA

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN



SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Mutants on the Bounty

Quote of the Day

"Freedom to differ is not limited to things that do not matter much."
— Justice Robert Jackson

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Discord still lingers. Overreacting will only make a difficult situation worse. Be calm and courteous. Joining a club or self-help group puts you in touch with new friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Capitalize on an exuberant mood! You can be a real dynamo at work and force that brings people together for business or pleasure. Be more aggressive on the financial front.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Amorous feelings are worth a closer look today. At work, things could be in disarray; double-check all details and contracts. You could be taken in by someone with designs on your resources.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good will abounds! Open up the lines of communication and create new rapport with potential allies. With children, use words of praise and support.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): This is no time to let whim influence your love and financial affairs. Avoid taking foolish chances. Redesign your diet along more healthful lines.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Reach out to your co-workers, creating an atmosphere of friendship and trust. You can get other people to agree with you, and also learn a thing or two. Trust your hunches.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emotions run high. We forget that we are friends or loved ones and lose our cool. A special gift to your sweetheart or loving touch may strike the right note.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Watch your money today. Extravagance, whimsy may tempt you to splurge. Don't skip through your fingers. You will be much better off immersed in duties than in flights of fancy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Superior reasoning gives you an edge today. Apply your high energy to a special project. You should be able to attain satisfying results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasize shared resources today — they could be the key to new employment and financial success. Change is healthy; welcome it! Get out and socialize this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You could be on shaky ground today. Strong desires are one thing, impatience is another. Do not put love, property or money at risk. Hunt for antiques or collect memorabilia.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There may be certain complications regarding a piece of property. Do not remain on the sidelines. Making your views known may prevent someone from causing further difficulties.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

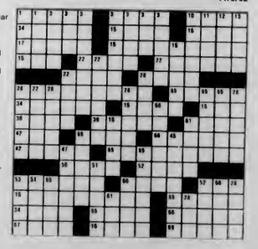
ACROSS
1 Indian chief
6 Grouch
10 Went under
14 Hilo hello
15 Abominable snowman
16 Woodwind
17 Asian peninsula
18 Crash-landing, of a sort
20 Family friend
21 — back relaxed
23 Potential
24 Car fare
25 Correspondent Ernie
26 British Open champ
30 Figs and firs
34 Apportions
35 Andean native
37 Fragment
38 Turkish titles
39 Poker pot
41 "I cannot tell —"
42 Unusual
43 Capital of Chile: Abbr.
44 Neophyte
46 Nut-bearing tree
48 Preaching friar
50 Vallee from Maine
52 Chilled
53 Make current
56 Talk back
57 Hockey great
60 Tracks or trends
62 Asian capital
64 Grendel, e.g.
65 Chinese from Holland
66 Dale or Linda
67 Fly high
68 Columnist Barrett
69 Check cashier

DOWN
1 Incline
2 Wings
3 Shock
4 Sol
5 Storage area for feed
6 Actress Shepherd
7 Critic Rex
8 Ocean: Abbr.
9 Rocker Joel
10 More gentle
11 Competent
12 Palindromic time
13 Retained
19 Crimean city
22 "Seward's Folly"
24 Ring decisions: Abbr.
25 Scene span
26 Big wheel
27 — France
28 "Bonnie and —"
29 The same
31 Wind-eroded
32 Novelist Jong
33 Painter Jan
36 Doubters
40 Auto racing's "— 500"
41 Enthusiastic
43 Closes
45 Ballroom dance
47 Lunar feature
49 Foreboding atmosphere
51 Hinder
53 Flying saucers?: Abbr.
54 Famed 'possum
55 David Copperfield's first wife
56 Bridge
57 Consent, of a sort
58 Cubs' Sandberg
59 Kennedy matriarch
61 62 Across once
63 Eggs

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

S	C	A	M			A	G	E	D		P	E	T	E
A	P	E	R			D	A	L	E		E	V	E	R
E	R	O	S	E		A	M	E	N		A	P	S	E
P	E	D	A	L		D	U	E	S		E	D	I	T
			B	E	T		E	A	S	E	D
S	T	A	R	E		G	R	I	T
A	R	E		L	O	U	D		R	A	P	E
A	B	I	D	E		L	O	U	I	S	A	I	R	E
J	U	D	I	C	I	A	L		A	G	N	E	S	E
			N	E	U	R	O	S	E	S
	F	E	E	S		L	E	D
P	E	A	T		P	E	D	I	A	T	R	I	C	S
A	R	N	E		I	R	E		S	A	G	E
T	I	E	S		S	I	S	T	S		E	N	D
F	E	E	L	S							D	A	I	S

11/9/92



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Tami Monahan
Copy Editor ..... Michelle Robbins
PhotoTechnician ..... Chris Evans
Production Supervisor ..... Mike Carvalho
Production ..... Dana Dorman, Kelly D'Amato, Lisa Jezowski

Menu

LUNCH
Chicken Burrito
Tri-County Fairwich
BASICS LUNCH
Bean Burrito
Veggie Sandwich

DINNER
Pan Shish Kebab
Oh, please save us...
BASICS DINNER
...from the Scrod!
Hearty Latin Stew

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

■ rookies

continued from page 12

what Nellie has in Latrell Sprewell. Due to an injury to Sarunas Marciulionis, Sprewell has opened the season as the starting off guard. What Sprewell does well is play defense and streak shoot. Nellie will put up with the latter if the former continues to be as strong.

Hubert Davis electrified Madison Square Garden when he helped rally the Knicks past the 76ers Saturday night. Davis is widely known for his zip-code shooting range, but it was his defense which won him accolades against Philly.

Another Nuggets rookie, LaPhonso Ellis, is the starting at power forward for Denver. If Ellis, with a build and athletic ability remarkably similar to Ed Pinckney, is able to establish himself inside and develop himself outside, should have a stronger career than Easy Ed who has been a role player, period.

Other rookies who have impressed in the opening days: the Spurs' Lloyd Daniels and the Bucks' Todd Day, and Clarence Weatherspoon of the 76ers.

Jeff Crofts can be read in the Collegian every Tuesday

■ secretary

continued from page 12

she never stopped putting in the full effort, and it has paid off for her."

For Mickelson, overcoming the injuries has proven to be quite rewarding.

"It's been a real character builder for me," she said. "I'm proud to make it through the physical and mental strain of being injured. I never, ever, ever thought about quitting but you can't know what its like unless you go through it."

Mickelson, who chose to attend Massachusetts over Wisconsin-Madison, New Hampshire and Central Florida, has enjoyed playing under the often difficult pressure to succeed at UMass.

"The tradition here has helped motivate me," she said. "The expectations are very high, every year. It's not just the press but everyone on campus. They expect us to win. The goals are lofty but we also put them upon ourselves. We think we can attain those goals."

And what are the goals for this year's team?

"This year we take it one game at a time," Mickelson said. "Every year we say that but this year we finally did it. It's hard when everyone is gunning at you, but we've done it so far."

■ swimmers

continued from page 12

yard breaststroke (1:11.25), 200-yard breaststroke (2:33.8) and 200-yard individual medley (2:19.47).

Diving with her usual finesse, junior diver Allison White lifted herself to 1st place in both one-meter springboard diving events. In the second one-meter event, White came back from a low scoring reverse one and one half somersaults in pike position to squeeze out UVM diver Lisa Ciavaglia by one-tenth of a point, (179.8 to 179.7).

Near lifetime bests were executed by junior Carolyn Curran in the 1000-yard freestyle (11:16.1) and the 500-yard freestyle (5:31.8) and freshmen Sarah Baker and Kristen Chapelle who led off the 2nd and 3rd place 400-yard freestyle relay teams.

"The events that UVM did win, we mostly came in 2nd, 3rd and 4th in," said Newcomb. "We've got a good solid base."

Team captain Teresa Konieczny said, "To go this fast in the first real meet we've had is a great starting point."

This week the Minutewomen will be gearing up to do battle with Boston University at BU this Sunday Nov. 15, at 1:00 p.m.

Switch To BayBank For Cash With No Fees.

Get Unlimited Free Withdrawals And More With The BayBank Student Value Package.™

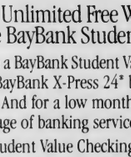
Open a BayBank Student Value Package and get cash at more than 750 BayBank X-Press 24® banking machines free of transaction fees! And for a low monthly fee of $5 you'll also get a complete package of banking services including:

❑ Student Value Checking™ Account which includes 8 checks per month and a companion Savings Account!

❑ The BayBank Card with X-Press Check.™[2]

❑ Reserve Credit overdraft protection and free CheckView™ plus a BayBank Visa® or MasterCard® with an annual fee of just $21[2]

To open a BayBank Student Value Package, visit your nearest BayBank office or call 1-800-BAY-FAST® 24 hours a day.



$5 Bonus Offer

When you open a Student Value Package and ask for a BayBank Card, we'll deposit five dollars in your Student Value Checking Account. Just present this coupon at any BayBank office or call 1-800-BAY-FAST before December 31, 1992

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____ Zip_____

School_____

Limit one five dollar deposit per account.

BayBank®

[1]Charges for transactions at BayBank X-Press 24 Cash® machines and ATMs owned by other banks are additional. A $.75 fee applies to each check after the eighth. To open a BayBank Student Value Package, you need a valid school I.D. or other proof of current student status.
[2]To qualify for X-Press Check, Reserve Credit overdraft protection, and a BayBank MasterCard or Visa, you must be 18 or older and have no adverse credit history. BayBank Credit Card annual fee and APR of 14.90% subject to change.

Member FDIC. Equal Opportunity Lender

Field hockey wins awards at banquet

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — In addition to winning the Atlantic 10 field hockey Championship over the weekend, the University of Massachusetts field hockey team won two of the top three awards and placed four players on both the All-Conference and All-Tournament teams.

Last Friday night's banquet proved to be a good omen for UMass as two Minutewomen shared the A-10 Player of the Year award. Midfielder Ainslee Press and forward Jenn Salisbury were given the prestigious honor, making this the second year in a row the award has gone to a UMass player. Sherlan Cabralis won the award last year.

Salisbury, a three-year starter for UMass, led the A-10 in points with 28, notching 11 goals and 17 assists. Salisbury is the most ferocious forward on the team, as she uses her dribbling and penetrating abilities in the open field. The junior has also filled a key role as a setter in the potent UMass penalty corner.

"I don't think I would have won the award if it wasn't for the team's performance," Salisbury said. "It really means a lot sharing the award (with Press)."

Press, a senior transfer from Missisuaga, Ontario, has been a godsend for the team since the moment she first set foot on Totman Field. Press leads the team and conference in goals with 25, and her point total was good for second in the conference. Press is the key cog in the UMass penalty corner, scoring most of her goals on corners or penalty strokes. She had 10 game-winning goals, including 3 in conference play.

After Sunday's exciting 2-1 victory over Temple University in the championship game, goaltender Philippa Scott was named A-10 Tournament Most Valuable Player. Scott won A-10 Defensive Player of the Week three times this season. The senior from Corsham, England has a 0.47 goals-against average and 12 shutouts to her credit.

UMass coach Pam Hixon was the Coach of the Year for the third year in a row and fourth in the last five years. Hixon has 236 career wins and has led the Minutewomen to 12 straight NCAA tournaments.

Middle back Joy Blenis, Scott, Press and Salisbury were all named to the All-Tournament and All-Conference teams.

■ water polo

continued from page 12

for a 8-8 score, but Navy's Jim Mills scored a minute later for a 9-8 lead. With just under a minute left Harlan scored his second man-up bullet to knot the score at 9-9 and set up the ending drama.

"I hate losing," said UMass senior Scott Reed. "Everyone else does. I can't be upset with the way things are going right now. We're having the best season ever. It's a tough loss, but somebody had to lose, and it happened to be us. But I don't want to go into tomorrow [Sunday] and take fourth. I want to take third."

The game Reed was referring to was a game the Minutemen had to win big to have the most remote chance at recieving the at-large bid. The opponent was Slippery Rock, the team that had given UMass its first and only loss before this past weekend.

Only eighteen seconds into the game 'The Rock's' Frank Mulcrone was awarded a penalty shot by referee Lewis, who had missed the clock call against Navy. Yarworth protested the call mildly, but Lewis gave him a warning. When Yarworth questioned that Lewis gave him a seat with the fans by ejecting him. Yarworth said Lewis' actions in giving him the heave-ho in an obviously over-reactionary manner were more upsetting than the call he missed the night before.

After watching 'The Rock' score the first four goals of the game, the Minutemen countered with three of their own, only to have S.R. score seven of the next eight en route to a 14-9 win.

The referees lost total control of the game around the middle of the third period, and everyone could tell the game was a time bomb waiting to explode. It did.

SPORTS NOTICE

Walk-on tryouts for the University of Massachusetts men's basketball team will be held Thursday November 12 at Curry Hicks Cage. The tryouts will start at 4 p.m. All interested should show up ready to practice.

WEDNESDAY
KARAOKE
ANY MENU NACHOS
$2.00
9:30-10:30

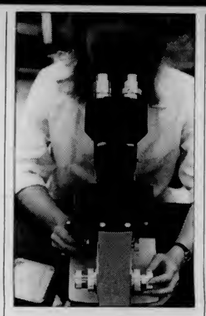
THE 24 CELEBRATES LIFE-ITIS 1968•1992 PUB IN AMHERST
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

We have health careers down to a science.

The Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences at Northeastern University offers graduate studies for those who want to excel in a health-related profession.

You'll be taught by faculty who have distinguished themselves in both teaching and research. Your studies will be enriched through Bouvé's affiliations with some of Boston's world-class medical and research facilities. Study may lead to a master's degree, certificate of advanced graduate study (CAGS), or doctoral degree. Most programs are offered on a part-time as well as a full-time basis. For your convenience, courses meet in the late afternoon and early evening.

For more information, call (617) 437-2708 or write Graduate School, Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences, 203 Mugar Life Science Building, Northeastern University, Boston, MA 02115.



Bouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences
Northeastern University

Graduate programs are offered in the following areas:
- Applied Behavior Analysis
- Audiology
- Clinical Exercise Physiology
- College Student Development and Counseling
- Counseling Psychology
- Doctor of Pharmacy
- General Biomedical Sciences
- Health Professions
  - General Option
  - Health Policy
  - Physician Assistant
  - Regulatory Toxicology
- Hospital Pharmacy
- Human Resource Counseling
- Human Services Specialist
- Medical Laboratory Science
- Medicinal Chemistry
- Pharmaceutics
- Pharmacology
- Recreation, Sport & Fitness Mgt.
- Rehabilitation Counseling
- School Counseling
- School Adjustment Counseling
- School Psychology
- Speech-Language Pathology
- Special Education
- Toxicology

Northeastern University is accredited by the New England Association of School and Colleges, Inc.
An equal opportunity/affirmative action educational institution.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students – Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30 Fri. 8:30-2:30 113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Hillel -- Pizza Bagel Night at the Hill'el House Nov. 14 $3 Free for ACH Cell 549-1710 For more information

ANNOUNCEMENTS

AASA General Meeting
7:00 p.m., Campus Ctr rm903
November 10
Asian Night Meeting

Bed and Breakfast, downtown Amherst 549-0733

UMASS RACQUETBALL CLUB MEETING All club members requested to attend all new interested students welcome Thursday Nov. 12 7:30 p.m. Dukes Room Student Union 310

AUTO FOR SALE

Buick Regal Ltd. 1982 Excellent cond. Must see $1850 neg. Call 586-5276.

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

COLLEGE PIZZA

College Pizza
Fall Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 Toppings $6.99
Free Soda with lg. sub salad or spaghetti
549-6098 549-6073
Must mention this ad

EXTREMELY IMPORTANT

Tarot Reading by appointment, Anytime
Call Mitch 548-9781

FOR HIRE

In 1972 a crack commando unit was sent to prison by a military court for a crime they didn't commit. These men promptly escaped from a maximum security prison to the Los Angles underground. Still wanted by the government, they survive as soldiers of fortune. If you have a problem, if no one else will help, and if you can find them, maybe you can hire . . . The A-TEAM

FOR RENT

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom homes on bus route call 586-4270

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

1 rm in downtown Amherst house Take over my lease 250 all utilities included Great Location! 253-4250

Room available in beautiful renovated church. We are 2 males and 2 females with one cat. Rent $250 Call evenings 253-7357

FOR SALE

DACHSTEIN SKIBOOTS 10 1/2 -- $130.00 Where there's a will there's an A-Video -- $30.00 549-5115

Over 30 Sega & Nintendo games Starting at $15 Call Rob 6-5486

RollerBlades size 8 Almost new $30 253-4242

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

Telemark skis 200 Jarvinen, excellent condition $85 Raichele FlexonPro Ladies 7, Super Boots! $ 85 Call Dab evenings 549-8743.

FOUND

Found -- Watch in parking lot behind Whitmore. Call Lisa 6-3282. Description Needed.

Walkman, near Goessmen, claim 6-6970

HELP WANTED

Alaska Summer Employment fisheries earn $600 + a week in canneries $4000 month on fishing boats. Free transportation! Room and Board! Male or Female. Get a head start on this summer. For employment program call 1-206-545-4155 ext. A5001

Be on T.V. Many needed for commercials. Now hiring all ages. For casting info call (615) 779-7111 Ext. t-458

CAN YOU MANAGE ON AN EXTRA $2500 Practical experience for business/marketing majors: Manage credit card promotions on campus for a National Marketing firm. Hours flexible. Earn up to $2500/term. Call 1-800-950-8472, ext 17

Earn $1000/Week at home stuffing envelopes! For Information, send long SASE to C.J Enterprises, Box 67068K, Cuyahoga Falls, OH 44222

"If you like Pina Coledas," Free Spring break trips & cash, you can have it all! We are looking for serious students to market our programs. Serious & prestigious travel company. Call Carmine! 800-999-6186 203-978-1564 (t)

$200-$500 WEEKLY Assemble products at home. Easy! No selling. You're direct. Fully guaranteed FREE INFORMATION -- 24 HOUR HOTLINE. 801-379-2900 Copyright #MA15KDH

Wanted. Travel Reps for spring break Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SIESTA ask for Bonnie

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons -- first lesson half price 665-1178

LEGAL INTERNSHIPS

Friday November 13 is the last day to contact the Legal Services Center about a Spring 1993 internship! Get hands-on experience in the legal field. Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 credits! No experience required -- training is provided. Contact Legal Services TODAY! 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

LOST

"Gremlin" -- Ten Cat last seen in N. Amherst area. If found please call 549-7770

Lost red wallet on CC or Marcus Hall TH at noon if found call 6-3312 Reward

Mt. bike from Boyden Thurs. between 1 & 2 Make Giant Iguana color purple & black any info please call 549-8588

MUSICIANS

Lead guiterist seeking working band or all original, years of experience 549-2865

PERSONALS

Hamlin House Council wishes a Heppy Birthday to: Edwin Tan

Jered
Happy 1 year
I love you
Love Mushy

Jorden,
You are my 1 & only
Happy Belated
I luve u
Rach

My sweetheart, dearest hero TM, Happy Birthday! I love you very much! I hope your day is filled with sunshine and smiles!! With all my love,
Always and forever,
Elizabeth Anne

The countdown is over!
Tracey Cahill is finally 21!
Now we can all go uptown together!
Happy 21st Tra!
Love
Those how have been waiting for you

Yeal,
Heppy birthday! Have a great 20th!
Love,
Your roomates

ROOMATES WANTED

Female sublease single in Mill Va. Spring Sem. Call 253-3406

Female to share large room 167.50 call 665-7604

Looking for two women to share our N. Amharst Apt. $200 prmth & utilities Jan 1st Call 549-0916

3 Responsible women Need housing for Spring semester Desire place near UMass Call Young Ni 549-0580 or Jen 4978

Two femeles needed to share a Brandywine Apt. Call 549-8382

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Resumes
Need help? I have experience with resumes Quick Service, FREE Advice, Excellent quality, and Low Prices. IBM Laser printing service available. Call Andy at 549-8463.

Tarot Readings
Call Chris 256-0821

SPORTS CARDS

SportStop Cards
Coming Dec. 1st
Mountain Farms Mall

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed -- free cover page, spell check, laser printout. $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795.

Typing - Word Processing Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations. Laser Printing Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268.

WANTED

We want your 2 bdrm Puffton lease!! Starting January 1. Call us first! Reward if we sign it! Call 549-7319

Sports

Water polo loses, NCAA hopes dashed

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Among the words that could be used to describe the University of Massachusetts' trip to the Eastern League Championships at the Naval Academy this past weekend: encouraging, gut-wrenching, controversial, and unfortunate.

After first round losses in each of the past two years, the Minutemen made it to the semifinals Saturday, only to fall victim to a disputed last second goal in a 10-9 loss to Navy.

The loss cost UMass, which ended its finest season in the program's history at 25-3, its first-ever trip to the NCAA Championships. Princeton claimed first place and Navy received the at-large bid, and both will represent the East in California.

With 13 seconds left in the game against Navy, UMass freshman goalie Alex Mujica, who had kept UMass in the game by blocking two penalty shots, had a freethrow from the goal. He lofted a pass to mid-pool, where two Navy players beat UMass' Scott Reed to the ball. Mid-Shipman Josh Bell raced in with the ball ahead of Reed and let go a shot that hit the post, then Mujica, and rolled over the goal line as time expired.

Referee Jack Horton made the goal call, as was his job, saying the ball was totally over the goal line. That was one matter of debate. Another problem was referee Jim Lewis, who was supposed to be watching the scoreboard for the time expiration. The horn on the scoreboard, which was the only one in use and at the end opposite from where the goal was scored, was manually operated and wasn't loud enough to be heard by anybody save Navy coach Mike Schofield, who says he heard it. Lewis admitted to not watching the clock, so the call went to those seated at the scorer's table. There were four Navy students at the table, and they agreed that the ball was released before the clock expired.

After a brief discussion with referees and coaches around the pool deck, the goal stood. UMass coach Russ Yarworth protested the call on the grounds of the shot clock expiring, and also about the horn not being connected to the game clock.

Nearly 45 minutes later, with the teams and crowds gone and the lights being shut off in the pool, the committee considering the protest gave Yarworth the word, saying the goal would stand.

"I think it's a questionable call," Yarworth said. "I wish the game hadn't ended that way. We lost a great game. If we played again the results would be different."

It was an unbelievable game featuring seven ties. UMass' Tsan Engin and Javier Gonzalez both scored in the opening two minutes, but Navy scored the next four goals to take a two goal lead near the end of the half. UMass' Adolpho Oliete scored in the final 30 seconds of the second period to make the score 4-3.

Engin scored on a backhand curl just over two minutes into the second half, and Mujica blocked the first penalty shot a minute later. UMass' Pat Lau scored with 3:04 left in the third to give the Minutemen a 5-4 lead, but Navy scored two man-up goals during the next minute and a half to regain the lead. Gonzalez scored with only five seconds left in the third, to tie the game at 6-6.

Only twenty-five seconds into the final frame Navy's Brian Wienke scored a goal that like the last, trickled over the goal line after hitting the post. A minute later UMass' Luke Harlan scored on a blazing man-up shot to tie the score again. Moments later Wienke scored to give Navy the lead, and soon after that Mujica stopped his second penalty shot.

Gonzalez scored with three-and-a-half minutes left

Turn to WATER POLO, page 11

NBA rookies start strong first weekend

The NBA season has started and the only thing more exciting than a season of NBA hoops, is a season of NCAA hoops. Here are some opening weekend impressions on NBA:

I know that there have only been a couple nights of basketball, but it already looks as though this year's rookies class is going to be a solid one. Here's why:

Shaquille O'Neal is going to be as good as advertised, end of story. On the defensive end O'Neal is going to dominate. The boards? O'Neal will dominate the glass much like he did in college where he was a member of Dick Vitale's All-Windex Team.

Jeff
CROFTS

On the offensive end, Shaquille is raw, but his opening day performance, in which he scored only 12 points, featured a couple of drives down the length of the court in which Shaq finished one with a signature dunk and one with a Magical no-look dish. It is plays like that which has everyone involved with the Orlando franchise salivating like a bunch of sailors coming into port at a bordello. The Shaq will be a force, a big-time force.

Christian Laettner had a rough opening against the Celtics (eight points, seven rebounds), but rebounded in his second game with twenty six points and fourteen rebounds. Laettner, as much as I don't like him, is not the second coming of Danny Ferry as he has been unfairly accused of being.

Laettner, unlike Ferry, is a tireless worker with his back to the basket who can also score outside. Ferry is a jump shooter to weak to battle it out inside. Laettner is more athletic, stronger and skilled then Ferry and will be alot more successful as well.

Bryant Stith is this draft's Rick Fox. Stith, like Fox, is from an ACC school (Virginia), can play physical defense and is offensively skilled, albeit inconsistent at times.

Walt Williams won't be a point guard in the NBA, but Sacremento still has a versatile jewel in Williams. Although his quarterbacking skills were overblown in college, Williams still can do many things well, the best being score.

Tom Gugliotta scored 20 in his debut but the jury is still out on whether he can do that (which is his primary attribute since he is as quick as a snail and as thin as a pencil) night in and night out.

In Houston, the Rockets have started Robert Horry in their frontcourt and his overall game has impressed. Horry will not overwhelm any one with any particular skill but his athleticism should allow him to be a solid 12-15 points a-game, 5-8 rebounds a-game, and 1-2 block shots a-game player. If Horry can do that than Houston will have found their small forward to go along with Hakeem Olajuwon and Otis Thorpe up front.

Dallas has started Arizona rookie Sean Rooks up front and in his first games Rooks scored twenty points. Well schooled in post play, Rooks should be able to provide some points for the Mavs. The question is whether he will be able to defend the post and rebound well enough to get sustained playing time.

Don Nelson loves his athletes and that is exactly

Turn to ROOKIES, page 10

Women to host game in NCAAs

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

All year, the University of Massachusetts field hockey team have worked extremely hard for an invisible goal. They have played one game at a time, and they have said time and again that they do not have tangible goals, except to play as well as they can.

The NCAA tournament seedings were announced today, and the Minutewomen are one game, a home game, away from the Final Four.

They last time the University of Massachusetts field hockey team hosted a second-round NCAA Tournament game, back in 1988, they lost to Northeastern. This year, the Minutewomen (20-1) are the number three team in the country, and they will host the winner of Thursday's NCAA first-round game between Penn State University and Temple University at Penn State.

The second-round game will be played on Sunday, November 15 at noon at Totman Field, and a win will propel head coach Pam Hixon's squad into the Final Four for the first time since they were runners up to Old Dominion in 1988.

"I'm happy, happy, happy," said Hixon. "I'm not disappointed that we won't face an easier team. The biggest thing for us is not who we play, but where we play, and to have a home game one game away from the Final Four is great."

As this is a NCAA function, admission will be charged to get into Totman Field. Tickets are $2.00 for students, $4.00 for adults. Hixon said she hopes to see a huge crowd.

"We want the fans there in droves," she said. "The more people that come, and the louder they are, the better our home field advantage is."

Twelve teams make the NCAA field hockey tournament, with the top four teams receiving first-round byes. These teams are No. 1 Old Dominion (22-0), No. 2 Iowa (18-0), No. 3 UMass (20-1) and No. 4 North Carolina (13-6-1). The other eight teams are paired off against each other in the four regions, with the winner travelling to face one of the top four teams. All of the first round games will take place on Thursday.

Women swimmers win second in a row

By ROBERT FERREIRA
Collegian Correspondent

They have triumphed again. The University of Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team captured their second straight victory Saturday at Boyden pool, when they successfully out-swam The University of Vermont by a score of 191-105.

The Minutewomen prevailed over UVM with a more than solid performance. Defeated by UVM last season, the team was determined to prove their new found season strength.

"I was more than pleased with the way we swam," said head coach Bob Newcomb. "We still have a long way to go but I saw some swims out there that I wasn't expecting to see for another month or so."

The Minutewomen's 200-yard medley relay opened up the meet fast and furious by stealing a handsome 1st place from UVM in a time of 1:55.98.

The 200-yard medley relay consisted of senior team captain Kari Edwardsen swimming backstroke, freshman Jessica Griffith swimming breaststroke, freshman Laura Gunn swimming butterfly and senior Beth Wadick pulling the finish leg with freestyle.

The Minutewomen swept 1st, 2nd and 3rd place finishes in the 200-yard freestyle and 500-yard freestyle and landed 1st and 2nd place in the 1000-yard freestyle, 100 and 200-yard breaststroke and 200-yard individual medley.

Stellar performances were swam by senior Beth Wadick, juniors Kim Broad and Julie Veremey and freshman Jessica Griffith.

Wadick swam two lifetime bests, one in the 50-yard freestyle (0:25.99) and the other in the 100-yard freestyle (0:56.05).

Broad was a double event winner, placing 1st in the 1000-yard freestyle (11:05.54) and 500-yard freestyle (5:26.10).

Veremey also pulled off two 1st place finishes in the 200-yard freestyle (2:00.93) and 200-yard butterfly (2:12.29), swimming the two events less than 5 minutes apart.

Griffith was a big winner capturing 1st in the 100-

Turn to SWIMMERS, page 10

Lisa Mickelson, Secretary of Defense

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

When Lisa Mickelson arrived at the University of Massachusetts she was expected to provide women's soccer coach Jim Rudy with some scoring punch.

Four years later, Mickelson, who has not scored in over two seasons, is considered an unlikely offensive threat for the Minutewomen.

What the senior sweeper back has become is a defensive anchor and a quiet leader for a Massachusetts team preparing for an NCAA quarterfinal match-up at the University of Hartford (Sunday, 1 p.m.).

"Coming out of high school I was an offensive player," said Mickelson, who averaged 15 goals and 15 assists a season in high school. "I was both a playmaker and a goal scorer. I had a long range shot and I created the offense from a mid-field position."

Rudy said, "Out of high school she was quite good on offense. She created some nice things and could score with either foot from 30 yards out."

Due to a rash of leg and hip injuries, which severely cut down Mickelson's mobility, the high school All-American never realized her offensive potential at Massachusetts. However, by her junior year, Mickelson became the starting sweeper for the Minutewomen and the focus of her game shifted to defense.

"The injuries were difficult to deal with," Mickelson said. "I had surgery on my hip as a freshman and a stress fracture in my leg as a sophomore and my knee scoped last season. My mobility and speed was gone so I moved back to defense."

Mickelson admits she misses the offensive side of the game but she is content in her role as a stopper and not a scorer.

"I enjoy scoring the most, it is the biggest thrill for me," Mickelson said. "It's tough because no one has seen what I'm capable of, I have something to prove."

What Mickelson has proven to be the last two seasons is the anchor on a very good Massachusetts defense. This season she was an All-New England second team selection.

"Mick stays at home well, she doesn't get herself out of position," Rudy said. "She sees the field very well and physically strong enough to challenge anyone."

Mickelson said, "My strengths are being able to read the play and anticipate what is going to happen."

Rudy also mentioned a little thing called heart, which he says in Mickelson's case, is far from little.

"She will give you all she has for 90 minutes, every game," Rudy said. "Through all the injuries and setbacks

Turn to SECRETARY, page 10

Thursday November 12, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 45

Cloudy. Highs 48-53. Chance of showers.

This Weekend:
Almost a century after Bram Stoker wrote his novel, Frances Ford Coppola brings Dracula to the silver screen. Opening this Friday at a theater near us. Page W1.

Sports:
Senior co-captains Kathy Phelan and Joy Blenis have led the women's field hockey team to a 20-1 record this season. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Yeltsin says U.S. prisoners executed in Russian camps

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Russian President Boris Yeltsin told U.S. senators Wednesday in a letter that Americans were held in prison camps after World War II and some were "summarily executed" while others still live in his country voluntarily.

Yeltsin's letter said some Americans were forced to renounce their citizenship.

Russian leaders are almost certain no U.S. citizens are still being detained. Yelstin said in his letter, read to a Senate committee by the general who serves as Russian head of a U.S.-Russian commission searching for American POWs and MIAs.

Gen. Dmitri Vokogonov told the Senate Committee on POW-MIA Affairs that he has pored through Russian archives but has so far found no evidence that any Americans captured in the Korean or Vietnam wars were taken to the former Soviet Union. He said he was aware of only nine American servicemen who deserted in the Vietnam War and went to the former Soviet Union.

He added, however, "hypothetically we cannot dismiss the possibility that Americans were taken from Vietnam to the Soviet Union, but we have no precise information" about any specific cases. It is "a possibility and I believe not a very strong possibility," he said.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., chairman of the committee, characterized as revelations the Russians' acknowledgements that Americans held after World War II were forced to renounce their citizenship, that some were killed and some still lived in the former Soviet Union voluntarily.

"They will be talked to. . . and asked whether they want to come home," Kerry said, adding that the list of names and addresses that Volkogonov delivered to the committee would be made public.

Last August, Volkogonov signed a statement printed in a Soviet newspaper which said several dozen Americans were jailed by Soviet secret police during and after World War II and that one of them was executed on orders of Soviet dictator Josef Stalin. The Americans trapped in the Soviet Union for years were interviewed by an Associated Press reporter shortly thereafter.

In answer to a reporter's question Wednesday, Voklogonov said through a translator that 119 American were held in Soviet camps after World War II. But he did not say how many were executed or how many were still living in the former Soviet Union.

Committee aides did not immediately make available any of the information that Volkogonov turned over to the panel.

Kerry also said that it was too early to say definitively whether any Americans captured in Korea or Vietnam were later taken to the former Soviet Union.

"I think you have to go through this process considerably further before you start making judgements," he told reporters.

The committee is finishing its work and plans to issue a report in mid-December before it goes out of existence at the end of this year. Some committee members planned to visit Southeast Asia this month.

Clinton sets arms goals

Pledges to maintain 'strongest' defenses

By RON FOURNIER
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — President-elect Clinton delivered a Veterans Day pledge to keep America's defenses the "strongest in the world" while continuing deep cutbacks in the post-Cold War military he will soon command.

"I dedicate myself to fulfilling those responsibilities as commander-in-chief," the president-elect said Wednesday. He promised, as well, assistance for military personnel who lose their jobs, better health care for veterans, and a full accounting for missing POWs and MIAs.

Clinton also spoke by telephone with President Bush, who called to invite the president-elect to visit the White House. Clinton, pushing ahead with transition planning, said he would plan to meet with congressional leaders in Washington next week and might visit with Bush then, too.

Turn to CLINTON, page 10

Jeffries' UM speech area of contention

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Dr. Leonard Jeffries

Dr. Leonard Jeffries, a professor of Black studies at City College of New York, has sparked debate between members of the Black and Jewish communities at the University of Massachusetts ever since a fraternity invited him to speak here last week.

Jeffries, the former chair of the Black studies department at City College, will be speaking tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

Jeffries made a widely-quoted speech several years ago blaming "rich Jews" for financing the slave trade and Jews and the Mafia for negative protrayals of Blacks in movies.

Members of the Black community say they believe some of his quotes have been taken out of context, while members of the Jewish community say they believe some of his remarks are anti-Semitic.

While Jeffries has been accused of making anti-Semitic and homophobic remarks, Black students say they feel he represents a positive role model.

Doug Greer, president of Phi Beta Sigma, the fraternity which invited Jeffries to come to UMass, said, "Jeffries is an expert on Black history and he is coming to UMass to enlighten students on issues and facts about Blacks that have been cut out through time."

Rabbi Saul Perlmutter, director of Hillel, said he understands that Jeffries represents a powerful voice to some people and that helps focus attention on their needs and frustrations which have been long ignored at UMass.

"Jeffries is a divisive person whose prejudiced and bigoted remarks towards other communities detract from the positive message he does bring to some people," Perlmutter said.

Many Black students say they don't understand why there is so much controversy surrounding Jeffries' visit when many students have never heard him speak.

Pete Ribeiro, general manager of the Black Mass Communications Project, said, "People should stop judging him before he has even come to speak. They don't know the detailed story about Jeffries. They are feeding off what they have heard."

Steve Sparling, chairperson of the Black/Jewish Relations Committee, said Jewish students are upset by Jeffries' anti-Semitic remarks.

"Jewish students have a knowledge and understanding of anti-Semitism and view Jeffries as an intimidating force. They feel vulnerable on campus right now," Sparling said.

Members of both communities say their goal is to improve relations between them and ease racial tension on campus. However, some students say they don't believe Jeffries represents the best interests of everyone here.

Josh Slomich, president of Hillel, said, "Anyone who has endorsed Jeffries to come and speak at this campus, is not serious about fighting racism, including the Undergraduate Student Senate."

Slomich said the SGA shouldn't have helped fund Jeffries' lecture for the sake of free speech. "The SGA should have thought about the responsibility issue of bringing a controversial figure to this campus," he said.

The SGA voted to loan the Phi Beta

Turn to JEFFRIES, page 8

Cadets honor POW/MIAs with Veteran's Day vigil

ROBERT O'CONNELL / COLLEGIAN
ROTC students stand vigil over a symbolic bamboo cage for POW/MIA's.

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

In an effort to focus Veteran's Day on the men and women who have served in the nation's armed forces, the Air Force and Army ROTC cadets held a 24-hour vigil outside of Memorial Hall yesterday.

The vigil started at 5 p.m. on Tuesday with an invocation ceremony led by Father Charles Quigley, a Catholic priest from the Newman Center. The names of all Massachusetts prisoners of war and soldiers missing in action were read out loud, and a candle was lit after every four names. A symbolic bamboo torture cage was placed outside Memorial Hall as a solemn reminder of the missing soldiers.

On Wednesday morning, Colonel James P. Czekanski from Westover Air Force Base in Chicopee, said the fate of MIA's should not be forgotten. Czekanski is the 439th Airlift Commander at Westover and a UMass alumni.

"We must never forget the POW's and MIA's and we must pledge to find out about their whereabouts," he said. "Our actions and deeds, not just our words, are the most fitting tribute to veterans."

After this speech, one of the Army cadets played "Taps" on the trumpet, and "God Bless America" by Lee Greenwood was also played. At 11:15 a.m., four A-10 Thunderbolt II attack planes from Barnes Airforce National Guard in Westfield roared overhead in a symbolic fly-by.

The vigil continued until 5 p.m. on Wednesday, when

Turn to VIGIL, page 8

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Ines Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003

phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day
Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

• A fire in a dryer in the Morrill Science Building caused approximately $400 in damages on Monday evening, police said. The Amherst Fire Department and Environmental Health & Services responded to the alarm, which sounded at approximately 10 p.m.

• A woman reported the theft of her bicycle from Cashin Residence Hall on Monday evening, according to police. The bike is valued at $150.

• An unknown vehicle struck a man's car and left the scene on Monday morning, according to University police. The man's car was parked in Lot 25 at 10:40 a.m. when it was struck, sustaining a large dent and various scratches. Police estimate the damage to be $500.

• A woman received an annoying telephone call from a man on Tuesday morning, according to police. The man reportedly offered the woman money, and then the conversation became sexual in nature. Police are investigating the call, which was reported at 4 a.m.

Church of England opens door for women to become priests

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press

LONDON — The Church of England voted Wednesday to ordain women as priests, risking a schism with a stubborn minority that feels the move contradicts Scripture and tradition.

The vote allows the Church of England to join 12 of the 28 self-governing provinces in the Anglican Communion that already ordain women priests — most of them in the 2.5 million-member Episcopal Church in the United States.

In Rome, Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said the vote was a "grave obstacle" to repairing the 16th century split between Roman Catholics and Anglicans.

"The church has been emotionally exhausted over this. Now we can get on with preaching the Gospel," said Cave Bergquist, a chaplain at Trinity College, Cambridge, who was in the crowd awaiting news of the vote outside Church House in central London.

With a two-thirds majority required in each of the three houses of the church's General Synod, the legislation was approved 39-13 by the bishops, 176-74 by the clergy and 169-82 among the laity after a day-long debate.

A switch of just two votes among lay delegates would have blocked the path to priesthood for the church's 1,350 women deacons.

If Parliament and Queen Elizabeth II endorse the decision, as expected, the first woman priest could be ordained in 1994.

"The ordination of women to the priesthood alters not a word in the creeds, the Scriptures, or the faith of our church," said Archbishop of Canterbury George Carey, the spiritual head of the Church of England.

The legislation does not permit women bishops. Also, parishes may refuse to accept a woman as priest, and bishops cannot be compelled to ordain women or accept them as priests in their dioceses.

Following its historic vote, the synod approved severance pay arrangements for any full-time priest who decided to resign rather than accept women.

Some opponents threatened to leave the church. Michael Silver, who was in the crowd outside Church House, said those who did not want the change "have no choice but to rebuild the Church of Enlgand from outside."

"I now have to reflect carefully on the decision and the sort of options that lie open before me," said Hope, who opposed the legislation. "And I hope that I will do that in a generous and Christian kind of way."

At the Vatican, spokesman Joaquin Navarro said Pope John Paul II told Carey in an audience in May that the issue "touched on the very nature of the sacrament of holy ordination."

The two churches have sought closer ties since 1966. Anglicans who now number about 70 million worldwide, broke with Rome in the 16th century over papal refusal to grant Henry VIII an annulment.

correction

Regarding the Nov. 5 Collegian article "UM faculty laud Clinton victory," Matthew P. Chametzky believes the Reagan/Bush appointees to the entire federal judiciary had been mostly wealthy men. In addition, Chametzky said he hopes Clinton will appoint women and people of color as judges at all levels of the federal judiciary, not just the Supreme Court.

The Collegian regrets the error.

Understanding Eating Disorders:

Strategies for Friends and Family

Wednesday - November 18
6:30 p.m. - 8:30 p.m.
University Health Center - Room 304

I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?

I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest...Where should she go?

I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid...What can I do to help?

If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.

Dickies®
Flannel Shirts $16.99
Heavyweight and Large Sizes Available
RICH'S ARMY & NAVY & CASUAL CLOTHES
24 CENTER ST., NORTHAMPTON, 586-0275
(Next to the Iron Horse)
RICH'S

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West Street
South Amherst

DOMINO'S PIZZA
NOBODY KNOWS LIKE DOMINO'S
How You Like Pizza At Home.
Amherst 256-8911
South Hadley 535-1111
HOURS: SUN-THURS 11AM to 2AM
FRI-SAT 11AM to 3AM
AVAILABLE FOR CARRY-OUT OR DELIVERY
FREE DELIVERY
NOW ACCEPTING ON DELIVERY IN SELECTED AREAS

LUNCH SPECIAL
GOOD 11AM to 3PM
MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA+
ONE TOPPING+ 2 FREE COKES $5.99
ADDITIONAL TOPPINGS EXTRA ONLY
LARGE CHEESE PIZZA
ONE TOPPING PLUS 4 FREE COKES $7.99
ADDITIONAL TOPPINGS EXTRA ONLY

BUY A LARGE CHEESE PIZZA FOR THE PRICE OF A SMALL

MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA for $4.99 or 2 for $8.99

BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA & GET SECOND OF EQUAL OR LESSER VALUE FOR ONLY $1.99

LARGE CHEESE PIZZA $5.99

Local News

And the winner is . . .

Congratulations to the staff of The State News, the student newspaper of Michigan State University, which was recently awarded the prestigious Peacemaker Award, which is given to the most outstanding college newspaper in the nation.

The Peacemaker Award, often called "the Pulitzer Prize of college journalism," is sponsored by the Newspaper Association of America and judged by the Chicago Tribune.

The State News, the largest collegiate publication in the country, won the award for the 10th time in the last 30 years. Michigan State has a total student enrollment of over 43,000.

As a reader of scores of college newspapers each week, I agree with the selection. The State News continually publishes at a higher level than any other college paper I've seen.

Size and quality-wise, few college papers can compare. For example, the first edition of the year for The State News was a seven-section, 128-page broadsheet publication. It would rival any local professional Sunday paper in quality.

If I were to select a runner-up it would be The Daily Texan, the student newspaper of the University of Texas at Austin (total student enrollment of nearly 50,000). Its size is comparable to The State News and it even costs 25 cents to buy.

The Collegian has recently ranked in the top 30 in most national competitions and in the top five of comparably-sized Universities.

Praying for an "A"

Syracuse University is planning to offer Catholic Studies as a new accredited undergraduate minor as early as Spring of 1994, according to The Daily Orange, the student newspaper of Syracuse.

Rev. Ed Ondrako has been the driving force behind the creation of the minor.

"This is a program that's been long in the making, mostly from the students who wanted to mix Catholic intellect with SU courses," Ondrako said.

Holly Lauwers, a senior, said she agreed Syracuse should offer the program.

"It's an important aspect of education and something that the Catholics in the community need to have," Lauwers said. "It's a great idea — students will have a broad range of choices."

Many Syracuse students argued that if the University was going to offer a Jewish Studies Program, then it should also offer Catholic Studies. The Director of the Jewish Program, Alan Berger, agreed, saying the programs are more educational then religious.

"The CSP will also have to point out that it is an academic program, with religious aspects," he said.

I wish I were an Oscar Mayer Wiener

If you ever had the urge to make that song come true, here is your opportunity.

According to The Pitt News, the student newspaper of The University of Pittsburgh, Oscar Mayer is currently looking for college graduates with good driving records to drive the 23-foot (in hot dog terms, 52 hot dogs long) Oscar Mayer weinermobile for a year's internship.

The interns travel over 50,000 miles a year and create a sensation wherever they go.

Drivers earn a little over $20,000 a year and their hotel and food expenses while on the road are paid. When the internship is over, the drivers have an opportunity to become sales representatives for Oscar Mayer.

Over 1,500 applications were received last year and the company is looking for communications, marketing and journalism majors to fill the position. All interested weinermobile drivers are encouraged to call Oscar Mayer at (608)-241-3311 for more information.

Speaker puts nationalism under the gun

By GEORGE ZHU
Collegian Staff

Nationalism will remain an extremely important political force in international politics for the next several decades, according to a scholar who studies military conflicts throughout the world.

Dan Smith, director of the Amsterdam-based Transnational Institute, said since many of today's wars are fought over nationalist issues, it is important to understand nationalism in order to stop or prevent wars.

The talk, titled "Nationalism: The Underside of World Politics," was held Tuesday night at Hampshire College. The talk was jointly sponsored by the Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies, the Hampshire College Peace Studies Program and the Hampshire College School of Social Science.

A scholar and activist on issues of militarism and disarmament, Smith was the chairperson of the European Nuclear Disarmament Program in the early 1980s, and will assume the directorship of the International Peace Research Institute in Oslo, Norway next year.

"Nationalism is the ideology of the challenged national identity, and national identification itself is the result of the breakdown of old group identities," Smith said.

According to Smith, nationalism has three virtues:

• Nationalism protects cultural diversity against the homogenous trend of world culture.

• Nationalism protects against the piracy and looting that can occur as a result of operations of world market and transnational cooperations.

• Nationalism today is quite often concerned with reducing the political arena to a more or less manageable size.

"In that sense, I think nationalism retains the democratic theme which was clearly presented in the 19th century," Smith added.

Nevertheless, Smith said he would rather have the positive effects of nationalism without its negative side effects, calling nationalism "the underside of world politics."

"Nationalism is understood more than superficially only in a very narrow circles," Smith said. "And there seems to be no connection between those circles and policy makers in the government."

Smith cited the policy of the Western European states in response to the war in Yugoslavia which he said "has gone wrong."

"Every policy initiative which the West European states have launched has had almost exactly the opposite result to the one which was intended," Smith said. "The good intentions of the Foreign Ministries of Europe are, for one, not in doubt. The problem is their understanding."

Smith said the "areas of powerful shocks" are the feeding grounds of nationalism — the areas of possible nationalist conflicts.

The process of uneven development throughout the 19th century and in the Third World today, the end of the Cold War and the way in which the world economy acts to destroy or threatens to destroy local community identities are examples of those "powerful shocks," according to Smith.

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

IN MEMORIAM—Senior Rachel Simon sits outside of the Student Union Tuesday at a display commemerating the 54th anniversary of Kristallnacht, the "Night of Broken Glass." Kristallnacht took place on November 9-10, 1938, and represented the largest government organized anti-Jewish mob riots in Germany and Austria, just preceding the Holocaust.

Guatemalans face struggle against govt.

By TOM McALPINE
Collegian Correspondent

The native Indians of Guatemala face a continued struggle to regain land which their government forcefully took away from them, according to members of a Guatemalan group which performed Tuesday night in Bartlett Hall.

"Me Tiendo el Caite," a performance group from Guatemala, was the main performer for the event. The event was sponsored by a number of organizations, including the UMass Arts Council, the Five College Lecture Program, AHORA and the Latin American Studies Department.

Jorge Ramirez, a member of "Me Tiendo el Caite," said the purpose of the performance was to demonstrate the widespread corruption within the Guatemalan government.

"There are thieves in Guatemala, some with knives, some with guns, but the chief of the thieves is the president of Guatemala," Ramirez said.

Ramirez said the Guatemalan Indians, almost all of whom are poor, will continue their fight against the government with or without the support of other nations.

"The United States and other governments of the world should enact sanctions to put pressure on the Guatemalan

Turn to STRUGGLE, page 10

New world order, new Marxism

Conference dispels notion that 'Marxism is dead'

By ZACK EXLEY
Collegian Correspondent

Although the fall of communist governments in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe has given rise to the popular view that Marxism is dead, the presence of over 300 Marxist scholars, artists and filmmakers at UMass this week may help put a damper on that notion.

A major international conference on "Marxism and the New World Order," which is open to the campus community, starts today. With over 120 panels and numerous artistic and cultural events, the conference is probably the largest gathering of its kind in American history.

Conference organizers say they believe the fall of communism has not meant the fall of Marxism, but has allowed it to move in new directions.

"The size of the conference and the diverse positions to be presented there belie the popular view that Marxism is dead after the fall of communist countries in 1989," said Stephen Cullenberg, an economics professor at the University of California at Riverside.

"Instead, an active and lively debate is clearly emerging as Marxism is being rethought and developed in new directions," Cullenberg said.

The conference is sponsored by the journal Rethinking Marxism, one of the nation's leading journals on Marxist and radical theory which started at UMass. The journal's quick growth over the last five years has surprised even its editors.

Richard Wolff, a UMass economics professor and an editor of the journal, said, "The number of people doing Marxist intellectual work in the U.S. is probably greater now than it's ever been in the history of this country.

"There are many Marxisms that were hated in the Soviet Union," Wolff said. "Now they are coming back into their own and taking off in new directions. The USSR was just one chapter in a much larger story."

Three large panel discussions will be held in the Campus Center Auditorium tonight at 8, Friday at 8, and Saturday at 4 p.m. The panels will include well-known academics from various fields.

The conference also includes a multimedia art exhibit, numerous film and video showings and a giant art installation at the Mountain Farms Mall.

The multimedia exhibit, "This is My Body, This is My Blood," is on display at Herter Gallery.

"All the artists involved are interested in looking at the body in relation to this New World Order, and in the ways in which the individual and the collective body have been represented," said Susan Jahoda, one of the curators of the exhibit. "This is something that current Marxist debate is also concerned with."

Most of the panels and events will take place in the Campus Center. For further information or a conference schedule, call 545-3285.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Look beyond the symbols

Warning: do not underestimate the power of symbols.

The symbolic is the theme of the semester here in the Unhappy Valley. Racist graffiti and building takeovers, flags and federally-funded reports and a man whose words and views have made headlines — all of importance and substance on their own merit, but larger than life as symbols.

When you only see the surface meanings and miss out on the underlying themes, importance and impact of events, objects, actions and words, you cheat yourself. You miss out on what's really important. You allow people to think for you.

Greg
SUKIENNIK

Let's look at the situation upon the S.S. Butterfield. For a year now, Butterfield has flown the Jolly Roger as a symbol of defiance against the rules of Housing, and of the "expected norms" society demands of us. Independence, societal and intellectual, was the Butterfield rallying cry.

Now it seems that another group, one far less deserving, has adopted the Jolly Roger. Some bunch of ignorant White supremacist, racist morons decided to make the skull 'n' crossbones their own. In light of this development, some have asked that the Jolly Roger be taken down, as it has now joined the ranks of the Confederate battle flag and the infamous swastika.

Who's right and who's wrong? There are no easy answers. Like the stars and bars, the Jolly Roger carries a double meaning which inspires some and hurts others. It's doubtful that Butterfield, widely reputed as one of the most tolerant, progressive places on campus, meant to offend minorities on campus. Still, one can play devil's advocate and say "easy for them to say," especially in a campus racial climate that went spiraling down the sewer this fall.

The only alternative is dialogue and cooperation. Anything else is counter-productive.

We are mammals, and therefore stupid. When we see or hear something that upsets us, we react in predictable, violent ways that reflect our limited intellectual development. Do right whales and humpbacks swim around spreading stereotypes and hurting one another? By comparison, we're locked into this cyclical pattern of hate that we can't solve. It's driving this campus crazy.

When Leonard Jeffries takes the stage at Mahar Auditorium tonight, we will be forced to challenge ourselves. We must challenge ourselves to look past the New York Post headlines and take this man's words on their own merit.

Some have said Jeffries is anti-Semitic. I won't say that: first, I haven't heard the man for myself. Second, I'm not Jewish and have no place telling you what anti-Semitism is when it's impossible for me to experience it. I know what it looks like, but that's like saying I know what a baseball game at Wrigley Field is like because I've seen one on TV. It's not the same thing.

It may be too late for us already. Jeffries hasn't spoken a word yet and people are already making claims and counter-claims about what he's said, about the legitimacy of his scholarship, what he stands for.

We are presumably here at UMass because we seek higher knowledge. Please, if your mind is already made up about what Leonard Jeffries is going to say, don't show up. If you're going to react to what he says violently, without seeing both sides of the arguments he makes and without regard for each other, don't show up. Stay home and watch some brainless sitcom if you can't be open-minded and decent and respectful.

But if you're up to the challenge, I'll see you there tonight.

Greg Sukiennik is a Collegian columnist.

Who decides the truth?

"If you don't have anything nice to say, don't say anything at all." I wish mom had studied the notion of free speech more carefully.

The First Amendment doesn't work well with "nice" limits. Sometimes, the truth hurts. Of course, a lot of the time, ridiculous nonsense also hurts. Funny how all of this would send me headlong down that dangerous path into the debate surrounding tonight's lecture by Dr. Leonard Jeffries.

Marc
ELLIOTT

Is Jeffries a raving anti-Semite who hates all White people? Maybe. Should he be speaking here tonight? Sure, if he wants to. Should people call into question his past remarks and reputation? Well, yeah.

The free speech debate (isn't it wonderful that free speech is so free that it allows debate about its own virtues?) often comes down to separating "truth" and "ridiculous nonsense." The usual argument for preventing people from speaking is that what they have to say is racist, sexist, homophobic, anti-Semitic, bad for society, irresponsible or basically, "ridiculous nonsense." But who gets to decide what is "truth" and what is "ridiculous nonsense?" I don't know anyone short of God qualified to make those kinds of decisions.

The concept behind the First Amendment is that all arguments can be voiced so individuals can decide for themselves which are valid and which are false. It doesn't say anything about limiting the right to "good" arguments.

I love hearing people in the Undergraduate Student Senate say things like "I believe in free speech, but. . ." Whoa. Hold on there. The word "but" just doesn't work. Once people get into "but" they're making judgements on what a speaker is saying. They're deciding that what they have to say is "ridiculous nonsense" and doesn't deserve to be heard. Last I knew, God was not a member of the student senate.

I remember last spring I was at a rally where I had something to say. I asked the person running the rally if I could say a few words. But before she'd give me the bullhorn, she asked, "Well, what are you going to say?" Hmmmm. Could it be that I had some information she didn't want the crowd to hear? It's just possible.

By now the reader has probably guessed I support the student government's decision to loan Phi Beta Sigma the money to bring Jeffries to campus. But I have to say that I don't support the fraternity's decision to arrange tonight's experiment in fear. I'll stand up for their ability to bring whoever they want to come and speak, but I reserve the right not to applaud their choice of a lecturer.

I'd hope that those attending Jeffries' speech will listen with a critical ear and not accept everything he says to be the gospel truth. There is good reason with any lecture to remember that the speaker is human and subject to human failings and "ridiculous nonsense." Tonight, perhaps we have an even better reason to pay close attention.

We've seen a lot of hate these days here at the University of Massachusetts. There's been a lot of hate-inspired graffiti. People of color, Jews and homosexuals have been the primary target groups for these acts. Jeffries has a reputation for being anti-Semitic, anti-homosexual and anti-White. All the groups concerned are going to have to learn how to live with each other if we're going to continue to live at all. The human race doesn't have the time for division. I would be shocked and dismayed if he were to come and go from this campus without someone protesting the sentiments he's liable to spout. But I would be just as disappointed to see an effort to silence him.

Marc Elliott is a Collegian columnist.

Students shouldn't fund hatred

The controversy over the arrival of Dr. Leonard Jeffries to our campus has caused emotional outcry from many groups. The debate all along was whether students should shoulder the burden of paying Dr. Jeffries' fees out of our student fund. We should not.

The issue was never one of free speech. I advocate wholeheartedly Dr. Jeffries' right to come here and deliver his message. That is his right and privilege. Rather the question was one of endorsement. By sponsoring his speech, we are paying to hear his message. We are inviting him as a guest into our home; we are feeding him and putting clothes on his back. But more than that, we are sending him and all those like him that theirs is a welcome message on this campus.

Dr. Jeffries is an anti-Semite and is anti-gay. To dispute this fact is sheer stupidity and not worthy of any academic. He has been denounced by major African-American leaders, including Alex Haley, who was one of the founders of Afrocentrism. His is a message of hate, not of harmony.

Our challenge as students and future leaders of this planet is to look ahead to what unites us, instead of cowering behind those who would divide us. There is much pain on this campus and in this world. I ask none to ignore that pain. But what we must seek out are those things which would heal us, not those which would seek to wound us more. We must have the courage to let down our guard and lead each other into a new beginning.

But we waste valuable time and money when we bring Dr. Jeffries to campus. Let us send a message to all those who would divide us in an hour or trouble that their words are not welcome here and they will not receive payment from us for their message of bigotry. Only after we have sent such a message can we begin to walk forward. Until we do, we only defeat ourselves.

Harry Horowitz
Sylvan

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

Monday, Nov. 9, was a Wednesday class schedule in order to make up for the Monday schedule we went by on Wednesday, Oct. 14, two days after the holiday tentatively referred to as Columbus Day. Apparently Whitmore doesn't have enough paperwork to shuffle. It's not clear what purpose the day-swapping scheme serves, but I feel comfortable saying that whoever made the decision is overpaid.

I slept in on Veteran's Day, caught up on some overdue reading, and aside from the 15 minutes I spent trying to convince my shell-shocked housemate to stop cowering in the cellar after the A-10 fly-over, I had an enjoyable day. But I had the nagging suspicion that by observing Veteran's Day I was passively condoning the wars they had fought in.

I didn't agree with the Gulf War, Bush's covert altercation with the Iranian navy during the Iran-Iraq war, the invasions of Grenada, Panama or any other "police action" or CIA operation this country has embarked on in Central America, Asia or the Middle east in the past century. I don't even think it was a good idea to invade Canada in 1781.

Wars are horrible things, and they're still happening today. Clearly, the way to change people's attitudes about war is to rename October 11 "Pacifist's Day" or "Draft Dodger's Day" in memory of Abbie Hoffman, Phil Ochs, Eugene V. Debbs, Corporal Max Klinger and all those who were courageous enough to stand up against their respective wars.

Josh
REYNOLDS

We should also round up all the ROTC troopers, (are naval officers-to-be called NOTC's?) as well as anyone who's ever taken the AS-FAB and send them through a day-long re-education.

There just aren't too many national holidays you'd really want to "celebrate." Most are linked to nasty events or arbitrarily assigned dates of Christian significance. Labor Day almost makes the cut, but I'm sure some would consider it a symbol of the unfair burden of women (especially mothers) in today's society.

While we're renaming things, Amherst is a good place to start. British General Jeffery Amherst achieved notoriety as the father of biological warfare, by making a gift of smallpox-infected blankets to the previous inhabitants of land he secured for the empire. I say we call it St. Petersburg.

A few weeks ago I was admiring the cover of the new student directory (photographers get off on stuff like that) and noticed that the picture is reversed (Munson hall should be on the right, Whitmore on the left).

When our news editor called auxiliary services to investigate, the bureaucrat on the other end of the line said that although he hadn't noticed, the photographer had quit, and he was sure it was the printer's fault. Although there are plenty of more deserving topics, the guy's response merits comment. Any official who can spontaneously re-assign blame as quickly as he had will certainly do well on this campus.

Josh Reynolds is a Collegian columnist.

Speech renews racial damage

Professor Leonard Jeffries will be here to speak tonight regardless of the ramifications he will bring. For many students this is an event to look forward to. Yet for many it is an event to dread.

I can't help but be one of the latter. I don't doubt Professor Jeffries' right to speak, yet simultaneously I can't seem to understand the reason for the hypocrisy that bringing him to UMass represents.

Mimi
FELLNER

Dr. Jeffries' past record of blatant prejudice against Whites, homosexuals, Jews and any Blacks involved with Whites represents exactly the kind of speaker our campus does not need. There has been and still is a tremendous amount of hurt and tension from the racism at this University that most students are very worried about and cannot forget. Because this is true, what we want to do is repair the damage and heal the wounds, not cut deeper into them with more hate.

I understand that to many Jeffries is an important speaker. His negative side should outweigh this fact, especially when dealing with the tense and dire situation of the present racial pandemonium on this campus.

The fact that he can only bring problems to an already touchy situation should be reason enough not to bring Dr. Jeffries here in the first place, especially since the Black student community, the hosts, have been a prime target of the racial tension themselves.

This event only seems to say that all the workshops, meetings, talks and vigils to try to repair racial damage have been a huge waste of time.

I can't see how allowing Dr. Jeffries' bigotry here can bring any form of the peace that our campus so desperately needs. I can only see how this event will adversely demolish and tear away at the little shreds of well-being some have fought so hard to construct.

I encourage those who have not heard Jeffries speak before to go and listen tonight in order to see and understand what this campus does not need, or even to form a personal opinion, because afterward we must all pick up the pieces and move on.

Mimi Fellner is a Collegian staff member.

Coming out in a hostile job market

When I was a sophomore at UMass, I wrote my parents a letter to tell them I was bisexual. Their initial reaction was less than stellar, but after several months they began to read about gay, lesbian and bisexual people and joined a group called Parents and Friends of Lesbians and Gays. They still attend P-FLAG meetings once a month.

As harrowing as it was to come out to my parents, I knew that their love for me was deeper than their fears and prejudices. I knew they would accept me.

Tami
MONAHAN

But now, as I get ready to graduate, the problem I have is much worse. Do I come out on my resume? Obviously I am not going to put "Tami Monahan, bisexual" at the top of the page above my address. Really, it's not anyone's business. But what do I do about positions I've held, such as gay, lesbian and bisexual issues editor?

Right now, I have two resumes. One lists my position as it is and the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance as one of my activities. The other lists my position as "associate issues editor" and omits my involvement with the LBGA. I'm torn.

On the one hand, I'm not ashamed of who I am and while I don't see any reason to make a grand announcement, I also don't see any reason to hide my identity.

One the other hand, why put myself in a position to be discriminated against? Massachusetts' gay rights law prohibits employers from, among other things, discriminating against gay, lesbian, bisexual or heterosexual people (I swear, its true, the gay rights law protects heterosexual people), but let's be realistic. In the current economy, there are more applicants than jobs and employers are looking for reasons not to hire you.

Besides, I don't want it to be distracting. So you're gay? Bisexual, you say? Who do you like better, women or men? When I'm doing a speaker's bureau to educate people, I don't mind answering the most outrageous questions. But in a job interview I want to talk about my exceptional editing skills, not what I do in bed.

If I put on my resume that I was GLB editor, I might have to talk about being gay, and that doesn't qualify me for the kind of employment I'm looking for. If I write some alternative title I can be assured that I'll be asked about what I did, but then am I being dishonest, to both my potential employer and myself?

The discrimination that exists in society makes me fearful to come out and possibly not get a job. On the other hand, by not coming out I perpetuate the discrimination by allowing people to see gay people as weird and perverted and not as a young woman with a sparkling resume.

I don't know what I'm going to do. I get angry when gay people don't come out. I makes it so much harder for the rest of us. I get angry at the teachers in my high school who I know were gay, for not helping me to come out and accept myself. But most of all I get angry at a society were I feel obligated to talk about what is ultimately very private and personal, and really none of anyone's damn business, in order to end the discrimination we all suffer.

I don't want this to be an issue, but it is. I'd like to just walk in with my resume completely honest and real and have the interviewer say, "So what kinds of things did you do as an editor?" and not be thinking, or asking, about who I've slept with. And I'd like to feel confident that if I don't get the job, it's because of what I have or haven't done, not because of who or what I am.

Tami Monahan is a Collegian staff member.

Fraternity defends Dr. Jeffries' campus visit

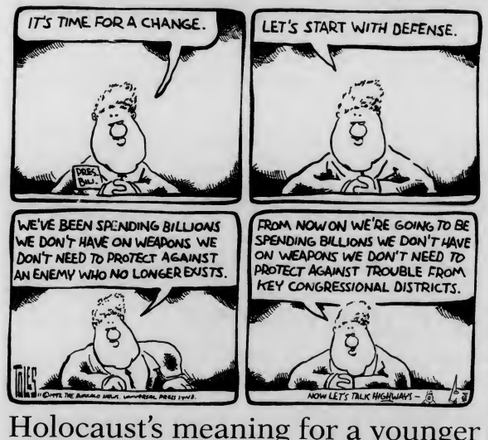
Enough! Ever since we decided to bring Dr. Leonard Jeffries to campus we've heard the Jewish community crying about anti-Semitism. How could you intelligently debate what the man has to say when you have never heard fully what the man has ever said? Your knowledge comes from the most racist newspapers in the world.

We decided to bring Dr. Jeffries to educate all students and faculty about the history of the African people, a history that's been left out by everyone, including the Jews. People of the Jewish religion: don't flatter yourselves by thinking that we brought him here to attack your religion. This is not our intention and has never been. Being a Black man, I truly understand oppression; I can't slip in and out of my oppression when convenient.

It must be remembered that he has come to this area before. Additionally, it must be remembered that a person of color on this campus has never attacked you on the basis of your religion. I think your anger is misdirected and it should be directed toward the people who really attack you on the basis of your religion.

In conclusion, he is coming and there's nothing you can do about it. So why don't you just shut up and listen to what he has to say and then judge the man.

Douglas Greer, President
Lambda Nu Chapter,
Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Inc.



Protest of flag anything but petty

I am writing in response to Mr. Randazza and the 38 people who signed his editorial [Collegian, Nov. 5]. Can they understand what it might be like to see a symbol that, among other things, represents an ideology that calls for their extermination on the grounds of something so perverse as the color of their skin?

I respect freedom of expression, and the meaning invested in the flag in question. It is unfortunate that the White Aryan Resistance movement has invested "your" symbol with a meaning that is anything but respectable. The point, however, is that they have. Who used it first and for what purposes is irrelevant to the fact that the Jolly Roger currently holds an offensive, racist meaning.

I am familiar with the "insinuation" to which they refer. Nowhere was the right to fly the flag brought into question. The issue was the racist meaning it held for T.G. Henderson and others. The letter to the residents was informative, rather than accusatory. It did not assume that accusations of racism in Butterfield were valid or necessary. To reduce Henderson's observations to tired discourse on the rights of the "individual" to express him or herself and to imply this expression exists in a racial vacuum is frustrating at best, and sickening at worst.

It is presumptuous to say that this is the dirty work of the housing staff of the University. It is ignorant to assume that the objection to the flag lies at the level of personal problems, of decontextualized people infringing upon the decontextualized right to freedom of expression.

There is a context: race. It is not a comfortable context, for it insists that there is inequality in society that needs to be addressed. Henderson's letter suggests that what is at stake is anything but petty. One could easily argue that the symbolic protest of housing policy is petty when compared to larger issues of racism in U.S. society. No one is questioning the right to freedom of expression and dissent Mr. Randazza and others claim to hold so dear. But I implore them to imagine what might be at stake for Henderson and others with similar objections, and what implications these objections might have for society in general.

Edward Hannon
Southwest

Holocaust's meaning for a younger generation

My parents are survivors of the Holocaust. This summer I traveled Europe and saw sites of both incredible beauty and unspeakable tragedy. I also spoke with my relatives about the horrors they went through in Hungary. I've seen Dachau, Auschwitz and Birkenau with my own eyes. I know the Holocaust happened, but what does this mean to me?

What it means to me is partly based on what it means to my parents, that is, what happened to them and how those experiences are manifested in my parents today. An acquaintance of my parents would never know what they lived through, but they always know what happened. My mother remembers how, as a six-year-old girl, already fatherless, she saw the Nazis march her mother away and lost her parents and her childhood. And my father always knows the fear he felt, at age 12, as his father was taken away to forced labor camp again. He remembers the fear he felt as someone looking for Jews came snooping around the bombed-out house he was hiding in. These were my parents' experiences growing up.

It was during these youthful years that my parents formed their opinions of the world around them. Because they were so young, these opinions were formed in powerful ways that do not necessarily change, deep down inside, with time.

What this means to me is that I am a child of Holocaust survivors, a part of the generation that was never supposed to be. When I was younger my mother told me very quietly, "You know I don't tell people I'm Jewish. My Judaism is a very personal thing." She showed me the little tick mark she makes that becomes a tiny chai (Hebrew for "life") in her signature. My father is still hoarding worthless goods. While cordial at times, he can waver between profound cynicism and brooding depression. My parents went into hiding from the Nazis as children and are still hiding today.

I was instilled with powerful messages, verbal and nonverbal. They said that being Jewish is not okay, don't trust people, the world is an unsafe place. Only recently have I begun to be proud of my Judaism, to assert my Judaic identity. I live in a house with many other Jews. I regularly organize Sabbath dinners for the UMass community and am part of the group building better ties between Black and Jewish students on campus.

This summer I visited relatives in Hungary who could tell me more about my family and the Holocaust. Today I know that I am a child of Holocaust survivors. I am proud that my family was able to survive and I am proud that I no longer feel the need to hide my Judaism. It's sad that so many survivors still live in the shadows of the Holocaust. Myself, I have stepped out into the sunshine, and today I hide from no one.

Tom Bales
Amherst

Support soccer

This Sunday at 1 p.m., the UMass women's soccer team will play the University of Hartford for the right to go to the Final 4/NCAA Championships. Although Hartford is 18-1 and ranked #2 nationally, we feel we have a good shot at winning. Hartford regularly attracts a large, vocal and supportive crowd. They haven't lost at home this year. We need your presence, cheers and support.

Admission at the gate is $4 for adults, $2 for UMass students with I.D. and $1 for children 12 and under. U.S. Express and UMass Athletics have arranged for a bus to the game. Seats are available for only $5 on a first-come, first-served basis. Contact Margaret Driscoll at 545-3190 for details. With your help we can do it. I hope you will come. Wear maroon!

Jim Rudy
Head women's soccer coach

The Five College Program In Peace & World Security Studies & The Five Colleges European Club

PAWSS

Present:

"U.S. RELATIONS WITH EUROPE IN A NEW ERA"

A Lecture By:

RICHARD KAUZLARICH
Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for European and Canadian Affairs

Thursday, November 12th
7:30 PM
Hasbrouck 20
the University of Massachusetts

This event is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible.
For more information call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519.

Monday, Nov. 16 Exhibition Viewing 3-6pm
7pm "Irish Ways" video, a retrospective of developments in Northern Ireland over the past 20 years.
Tuesday, Nov. 17 Exhibition Viewing 11:30am-6:30pm
7pm "Inside Belfast", slides and guest speaker DANNY BURKE, "Belfast Exposed" photojournalist.
Wednesday, Nov. 18 Exhibition Viewing 11:30am-6:30pm
"Belfast Exposed" is a presentation of the "Northern Ireland Report", and is sponsored by Residential Arts, UMass Arts Council, SACEF, UMass Solidarity, STPEC and PAWSS.

MERCER
Management Consulting

Will be interviewing on campus on Thursday, December 3

Interested students should submit cover letter, resume, transcripts, and GMAT/SAT scores (if available) to the Mather Career Center by November 19, 3 p.m.

Cover letters should be addressed to:
Mary J. Taggart
Recruiting Coordinator
Mercer Management Consulting, Inc.
33 Hayden Avenue
Lexington, MA 02173

BOSTON
CHICAGO
LONDON
NEW YORK
PARIS
SAN DIEGO
SAN FRANCISCO
TORONTO
WASHINGTON, DC

ROOM CHOOSING PROCESS
For Spring 1993

PLEASE READ CAREFULLY: IMPORTANT INFORMATION

RESERVING YOUR CURRENT ROOM ASSIGNMENT

If you intend to keep your present residence hall room assignment, you must call the Voice Response Room Choosing System at 6-9000 (from on-campus) or 546-9000 (from off-campus) to reserve your room. FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE THE SYSTEM IS AVAILABLE FROM 9AM TO 9PM ON MONDAY, TUESDAY & WEDNESDAY NOVEMBER 2, 3, 4.

CHANGING YOUR ROOM OR YOUR HALL

If you wish to move to another room in the same residence hall, you must sign up with staff on duty during the room choosing process on Wednesday evening, November 18. All room changes will be determined by your seniority and rank. THE ONLY EVENING TO SIGN UP FOR A NEW ROOM IN YOUR CURRENT HALL IS WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 18.

If you wish to move to another residence hall, you must complete a Housing Preference Form. DEADLINE FOR RETURNING HOUSING PREFERENCE FORMS TO THE HOUSING ASSIGNMENT OFFICE IS WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25.

IF YOU WANT TO KEEP YOUR CURRENT RESIDENCE HALL ASSIGNMENT WHILE ALSO REQUESTING A HALL CHANGE YOU MUST DO THE FOLLOWING:

1. Use the Voice Response System to reserve your current room on either November 2, 3, or 4 or a new room on Wednesday evening, November 18.
2. Fill out a Housing Preference Form. On the Preference Form in the lower right hand corner is a box you must "check" if you wish to be returned to your current hall if your choices cannot be met. YOUR OLD RESIDENCE HALL ASSIGNMENT IS GUARANTEED ONLY IF YOU DO BOTH STEPS.

ROOMMATE REQUESTS

If you wish to move to another residence hall to room with a student already assigned to that residence hall, you must together complete a green ROOMMATE REQUEST FORM. DEADLINE FOR RETURNING ROOMMATE REQUEST FORMS TO THE HOUSING ASSIGNMENT OFFICE IS THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19.

If you wish to become roommates with a student in a residence hall to which neither of you is currently assigned, you must each complete a Housing Preference Form. These forms should be identical, (with the exception of the "check" box) and stapled together. DEADLINE FOR RETURNING HOUSING PREFERENCE FORMS IS WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25.

DIDN'T GET THE ROOM YOU WANTED?

If, during the regular Room Choosing period, you were unable to secure a particular room or type of room (single or particular double), please contact the Housing Assignment Office to fill out a blue In-House Room Request Form. Rooms that become available during Intersession will be assigned, according to seniority, to those residents who filled out these forms and returned them to the Housing Assignment Office.

PAY BILL BY DUE DATE

Your Spring 1993 fee bill will be mailed to your home in early December. If complete payment of this bill is not received by the Bursar's Initial Due Date (usually in early January), your assignment will be subject to cancellation. IF YOU ANTICIPATE HAVING A PROBLEM PAYING YOUR BILL PLEASE CONTACT THE HOUSING ASSIGNMENT OFFICE. WE WILL MAKE ARRANGEMENTS TO HOLD YOUR HOUSING UNTIL YOU ARE ABLE TO MAKE FULL PAYMENT.

OTHER THINGS TO REMEMBER

In addition to properly completing room choosing all students are required to remain in good standing with the University at all times. Being withdrawn for any reason after the end of the semester may automatically subject your assignment to cancellation. Check to make sure you do not owe any fees to the Bursar BEFORE you leave for intersession.

QUESTIONS?

If you still have questions about the Room Choosing process, please contact the Housing Assignment Office (545-2100), 235 Whitmore. Thank you.

■ vigil

continued from page 1

cadets lowered the flag. Air Force and Army cadets participated in the vigil, with three soldiers standing guard in two hour shifts.

The tribute was organized by Greg Tolmoff, a sophomore mechanical engineering major and squadron commander for the Arnold Air Society. The Society is a community service project involved in POW/MIA awareness issues.

"A lot of time and preparation went into the vigil, but the cause was worthy," Tolmoff said. He said he believes that it's important to remember the POWs and MIAs still unaccounted for in Vietnam.

Glen Roberts, a senior political science and journalism major and spokesperson for the Air Force, said "the vigil gives Air Force and Army cadets an opportunity to show respect for POWs and MIAs. Our purpose is to remind people of the sacrifice veterans made for freedom, and also to focus on POW/MIA awareness."

"People need to realize that Veteran's Day is more than just another day off," Roberts said. "The reason behind the holiday, honoring veterans, is something we need to turn back to."

To learn more about POW/MIA awareness, contact the National League of Families of American Prisoners Missing in Southeast Asia, at (203)-659-0133, or get in touch with the Air Force ROTC cadets in Dickinson Police building.

■ Jeffries

continued from page 1

Sigma fraternity $1,000 to fund Jeffries' visit during their last meeting on Nov 4. The SGA vote was strongly in favor of Jeffries coming to campus, with 46 senators voting for him to come and 9 senators voting against his coming.

Greer said he thought the SGA's decision to loan the fraternity money was a wise decision. "The issue the SGA had to decide on was about loaning money to the fraternity, not Jeffries' moral character."

Al Lizana, vice-president of the Black Student Union, said he sees Jeffries' visit as an opportunity to better racial tensions on campus, if people don't ignore the things he says. "There won't be any problems if students use his lecture to everyone's advantage," he said.

Jay Berkovitz, chairperson of the Judaic and Near Eastern studies department, said "there is an opportunity to transform Jeffries' visit into an educational event."

Berkovitz said faculty have a responsibility to discuss in class issues brought up in Jeffries' lecture. "The faculty needs to lay bare some of Jeffries' absurd claims with factual record," he said.

Sparling said students in both communities have been working together for months to build positive communication with each other. He said BMCP, the Alana Honor Society and Hillel have sponsored events such as the Multicultural Sedar and Kwanzaa-Hanukkah.

Sparling said he feels when the national media gets involved, they promote an image of the Black and Jewish communities being pitted against each other.

"In reality this is not the case. We are not at each others throats. We are trying to promote positive and educational communication with each other," said Sparling.

CAFE DICARLO

5-College Student Dinner Special

Choice of:

- Lasagna al Forno
- Chicken Parmigiana
- Shrimp all' Arrabbiata
- Pasta Primavera

Complete Italian Dinner, including choice of entreé, salad, bread, soda or coffee for $6.95, with college I.D.

Sunday thru Thursday 11:30 to 10:00.

Offer expires Nov. 30, 1992

71 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA
253-9300

INTERESTED IN FILM STUDIES?

To sign up for the Certificate Program during pre-registration (and afterwards), come to the Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies, 101 South College, UMass. Tel.: 545-3659

Pick up spring course descriptions and newsletters!

Open to all undergraduates!

Advising hours:
Mon/Wed 10:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.
Tu 8:00-11:00 am; 2:30-5:00 pm., Th 2:30-5:00pm

Make the most of your retirement years.

To make the most of your retirement in the future you need to make the most of your retirement plan today.

At our free seminar, we'll show you an extraordinary new investment opportunity for your 403(b) plan. Through the Merrill Lynch Retirement Selector℠ Account you can invest in an extensive selection of Merrill Lynch mutual funds. You also have the flexibility to move in and out of the funds as your financial objectives or the economy changes.

And to help you make your investment decisions, a Merrill Lynch Financial Consultant will work with you to determine your individual financial situation and expectations.

Learn more about how the Retirement Selector Account can help you make the most of your 403(b) plan by attending our free seminar. To reserve your place, call one of the numbers below or return the coupon.

DATE: Thursday, November 19th
TIME: 7:30 a.m. - 9:00 a.m.
PLACE: Lord Jeffery Inn, Amherst
(Continental breakfast will be served.)
SPEAKERS: Michael P. Sarsynski, Jr. and Kate Rutherford, Merrill Lynch Financial Consultants
RSVP: 413-785-4100 or 1-800-288-0445

Mail to: Merrill Lynch
1331 Main Street, Springfield, MA 01103, Attn: #9664/9454

☐ Yes. I plan to attend your free seminar. Please reserve _____ seat(s).
☐ No, I cannot attend, but would like to receive more information about the Merrill Lynch Retirement Selector℠ Account.

Name _____ Address _____
Business Phone (___) _____ City _____
Home Phone (___) _____ State _____ Zip _____
Merrill Lynch clients, please give the name and office address of your Financial Consultant:

Merrill Lynch
A tradition of trust.

©Copyright 1988 Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. Member SPC

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD--
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton / Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

Main St RECORDS
One of the area's largest selections of Imported, Independant & Domestic Records, Cassettes and Compact Discs
586 5726
213 MAIN ST

SON OF Main St RECORDS
Tens of Thousands of Used, Cut outs & Collectible Records and Cassettes
586 1707
21 STATE ST
NORTHAMPTON

Grand Opening
November 1, 1992
THE MUG SHOT

Create your own Customized mug with your favorite picture or sayings, or let us take your picture at our Hampshire Mall Location.
A great gift idea for friends, family or anyone.

Create a mugful of memories for a lifetime.

Coupon
Grand Opening
The Mug Shot
Coupon Value is $3.00 toward Purchase of a mug with Student ID.
Coupon Expires December 15, 1992

THINKING ABOUT LAW SCHOOL?
Prospective Student Open House

WESTERN NEW ENGLAND COLLEGE SCHOOL OF LAW

Saturday
November 14, 1992 & January 23, 1993
1:00 p.m. – 4:00 p.m.
S. Prestley Blake Law Center

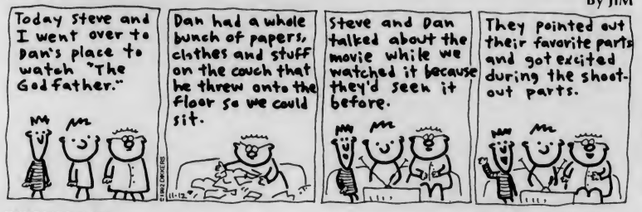
- Mock Law Class and Group Discussion
- How to Apply to Law School
- Reception Following Open House: 4:00 p.m – 4:30 p.m. Meet with Law School Faculty, Staff, and Students

CALL 413-782-1406 TO REGISTER

WESTERN NEW ENGLAND COLLEGE SCHOOL OF LAW
1215 WILBRAHAM ROAD • SPRINGFIELD, MA 01119

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM



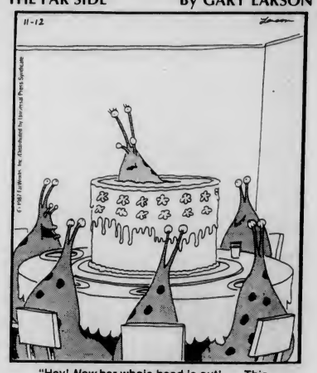
DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

TANGENT By KURT MATTILA

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON



"Hey! Now her whole head is out! . . . This is getting better every minute."

Quote of the Day

"But the count! Never did I imagine such wrath and fury, even in the demons of the pit. His eyes were positively blazing."
– Dracula
Bram Stoker

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A friend offers a helping hand to a family member who is having difficulties. Be appreciative. Travel requires careful planning. Eat lightly tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Devote part of your work day to an artistic project. Its success could lead to a second income. Avoid playing guessing games with your health; schedule a visit to the doctor or dentist.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Research will help you verify important success. Show more self-control when around your loved ones. Conditions are favorable for dealing with middlemen. Your rapport with a member of the opposite sex is at an all-time high.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Use a new method to put across your original ideas. A public relations program will be stepped up. Romantic ties are strengthened. Diplomacy will help you clear up any domestic problems.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Sharing your thoughts with someone you want to be close to helps create dreamy rapport. Resist confiding much too soon. Be sensitive to the needs of those who share your home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It may be time to share with others the reasons for underlying tensions. You have a discerning financial eye but are sometimes too trusting.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will find contentment in solitude now, far from the spotlight. Higher-ups may be touchy; watch for signs of irritation or fatigue. A friendship deepens.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take advantage of an open-door policy at work to win new friends and boost your popularity. The coast is clear for romance tonight. Sincerity works best.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your bargaining instincts will be sharp today. Home in on a purchase or investment. You may be in for a sweet surprise. A good evening for attracting notice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some good news makes you want to celebrate with your loved ones. Resist the temptation to overindulge. Self-discipline helps you stay fit. Be more loving.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Watch your step when dealing with people in authority. Keep track of important responsibilities. It is up to you to show what you can do.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

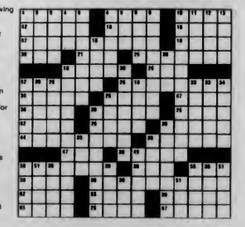
ACROSS
1 Room on a liner
6 Queen and honey
10 Trial run
14 Bolshoi event
15 Pearl Mosque site
16 Canola product
17 Final option
19 Consumer
20 Pairing, for one
21 Deli bread
22 SHAEF word
24 Simon of music
26 5.5 yards
27 It's sometimes fourth
30 Professor
35 Ons at —
36 Bunny tail
37 Broad bean
38 Commeal
39 Snicker
40 — averags
41 At all
42 Downs
43 Brew for getting pickled?
44 Belittle
46 Crowd-drawing spots
47 Chancs It
48 Boring buzz
50 Slay ona's hsnd
54 List. ending sbbr.
55 Skater Babilonis
58 Shawm's kin
59 Footholds
62 Pinocchio, for one
63 Least likely
64 Sign on
65 Burrows
66 Town near Winnemucca
67 Slow on the uptsks

DOWN
1 Soft drink
2 On — equal
3 Better than better
4 NYC transit line
5 Recount
6 Swiss rail center
7 Psycho part
8 Puts a diamond boot
9 Waterlog
10 Master stroke
11 Besides that
12 Look to be
13 Went like a house afire
16 Mr. Rochester's Jane
23 NASA structura
24 Gray jays
25 Emulated Dennis Conner
27 Alleviated
28 Type of old wooden church in Norway
29 Olympics officisl
31 Pool poles
32 Med
33 A Trump
34 Stalks
36 Do an usher's job
39 Where the cha is poured
43 Sidelined
45 My stars!
46 Io or luna
49 Right-hand page
50 Pleat
51 Show biz honor
52 Horse of a certain color
53 Sure enough
55 Glacial pool
56 Dust-ups for Dogberry?
57 Key
60 Question
61 LA to Vegas

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

A	L	D	A		H	A	R	P	O		A	L	I	T
L	A	I	N		A	S	E	E	R		O	I	R	E
L	A	N	D		S	A	R	E		M	O	A	N
S	T	U	T	T	E	R	S		D	E	M	I	S
			A	R	E	S		O	V	E	R	S
D	A	L	I			R	E	A	D		H	I	L	T
A	W	L	E	D		E	A	S	E		H	I	L	T
T	N	T		P	E	A	L		F	A	D	E
A	M	A		A	R	E		F	I	E	R	S
		S	H	I	T	E	E		S	H	O	W
I	N	S	O	L	E		S	P	O	O	L		M	A
A	R	E		E	L		S	E	W		A	M	A	N
A	R	A	T		S	T	O	R	E	S		A	R	E
L	I	A	R		S	O	F	A	S		P	R	N
U	S	E			S	O	R	E			S	I	T

11/12/92



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jason George
Copy Editor ..... Lisa Donadio
PhotoTechnician ..... Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor ..... Seth Kaye
Production ..... David Marykahin
Michele Bakis, Janet Riley

Menu

LUNCH
Chicken Puckige
Broccoli Casserolige
BASICS LUNCH
Chicken Puckige
Garden Sandwichige

DINNER
Fisherman's Platige
Tacoige
BASICS DINNER
Fisherman's Platige
Veggie Tagoige

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Clinton

continued from page 1

Clinton said Bush's call was "very statesmanlike." The president-elect said he had "several international questions I'd like to ask" Bush but declined to be more specific.

The Veterans Day address in the rotunda of the Arkansas Capitol was Clinton's first speech since his election eight days ago, except for a brief statement on the day following his election.

Clinton, wearing a conservative blue tie and talking in measured tones, appeared humbled by the task before him.

"This is a Veterans Day unlike any other for me," said Clinton, who has attended eight of the last nine Veterans Day ceremonies in Little Rock. "I always try to be here. . . but today I come here with special responsibilities."

Clinton, who advocates defense cuts $60 billion deeper than those advocated by the outgoing Bush administration over the next five years, said the nation needs a well-trained and mobile military backed by high-tech weapons, even as it continues to pare defense spending.

"I dedicate myself to fulfilling those responsibilities as commander-in-chief," he said. The president-elect made no reference in his speech to the campaign controversy over his avoidance of military service during the Vietnam era.

While Clinton prepared for his speech and Vice President-elect Al Gore attended a veterans ceremony in Washington, aides held a series of private meeting as the pace of their transition work quickened.

Clinton planned a news conference today to announce the structure of his transition operation, and some senior campaign aides were informed yesterday of their new roles.

Campaign manager David Wilhelm and communications director George Stephanopoulos will become top deputies to transition director Warren Christopher, according to sources. Rahm Emanuel, Clinton's chief fundraiser, headed from Little Rock to Washington to begin organizing inaugural celebrations.

struggle

continued from page 3

government," Ramirez said. "Unfortunately, Latin America has always been the United States' backyard and the U.S. would never vote for sanctions against Guatemala in the United Nations because their governments share the same interests."

Delidia de Fuentes, a representative of the state union workers in Western Guatemala, said, "We hope to see with a new U.S. administration a change in policy and pressure put on the Guatemalan government, because of human rights violations. Clinton can help by pushing the peace process in Guatemala for results."

The performance was conducted in Spanish and was translated into English by the facilitators, Cara Siano of Greenfield and Marcela Velasco.

The presentation began with a video, titled "Adios Pampa Mia," which means "Goodbye, my land" in English. The video presented the government police force's violence against the indigenous people whom the performers said peacefully protested the illegal seizure of their land by the government.

The video was followed by a mime performance that showed the corruption of the Guatemalan government and the people's struggle to regain their land. The mimes used about half of the 40 members in the audience to participate in a mock struggle between the Guatemalan people and their government.

The presentation then moved into a discussion where Rene Chacon, another actor, said the group works to support labor unions and grass-roots organizations in Guatemala and their performances serve to denounce human rights violations against the Guatemalan people.

The members of the group stressed during the discussion the need to solve the struggle over land settlement in a humane way after three years of war and an estimated 150,000 casualties.

THE COLLEGIAN NEEDS YOUR HELP

The Collegian is a daily struggle for a bunch of hard-working students.

But it's not any easier when our decrepit computers are working against us.

Sometimes we wonder if they'll last us another week.

Please, if you are buying a new computer or if your office is upgrading its system, and you don't know what to do with the old ones,
consider donating them to the Collegian.

We need your help to keep printing.

Thank you,
Brooke C. Wheeler
Managing Editor

The Collegian.

One of the finer things in life.

TAKE AN EXCITING COURSE OF ACTION!

REGISTER FOR A CFNR GEN-ED COURSE!

- Fundamentals of Applied Ecology (BS Gen-Ed/ FOREST 190A)
- Plant Diseases: Feast or Famine (BS Gen-Ed/ PLPATH 100)
- Plants, Soils and the Environment (I Gen-Ed/ PLSOIL 115)
- Organic Farming and Gardening (BS Gen-Ed/ PLSOIL 120)
- Insects and Human Society (BS Gen-Ed/ ENT 226)
- Environmental Economics (SB Gen-Ed/ RES EC 262)
- Introductory Statistics For Life Sciences (R2 Gen-Ed/ RES EC 211)
- Introductory Resource Economics (SB Gen-Ed/ RES EC 102)
- International Agricultural Development (SBD Gen-Ed/ RES EC 432)
- Soils (IS Gen-Ed/ PLSOIL 106)
- Intro. To Biotechnology (BS Gen-Ed/ AN SCI 200)
- Science of Food (BS Gen-Ed/ FD SCI 150)
- Nutrition and People (BS Gen-Ed/ NUTR 130)

OTHER INTERESTING SPRING '93 COURSES!

- Wildlife and the Environment (W&FBIO 197A)
- Herbs, Spices and Medicinal Plants (PLSOIL 290B)
- Intro. to Marriage, Family and Intimate Relationships (CS 176)
- Community Organizations & Services (CS 374)
- Contemporary Fashion Analysis (CS 357)
- Food and Health (FD SCI 101)
- World Food Habits (FD SCI 102)
- Intro. To Hotel, Restaurant & Travel Admin. (HRTA 100)

Check the Spring Pre-Registration Guide for course descriptions!

Register for a College of Food and Natural Resources General Education course and begin exploring one of the exciting majors available in CFNR. You're also welcome to call or come by 110 Stockbridge Hall to set up a time to meet with our Undergraduate Advisor, Yvonne Morand (545-1969).

CFNR
College of Food and Natural Resources
110 Stockbridge Hall

Want to earn BIG money?

On a small investment?

It's staring you right in the face.

Collegian Advertising 545-3500

We reach students. 19,000 copies, every day!

ramblings

continued from page 12

The biggest disappointment in the NFL is the Detroit Lions, and it won't get any better for Barry Sanders and his club. The Pittsburgh Steelers return home after a valient effort to no avail against Buffalo, but expect different results this week. Barry Foster will prove that there is more than one Barry who deserves to be at running back in the Pro Bowl. Pittsburgh 24, Detroit 10.

Jim McMahon wins, and now Richie Kotite names Randall Cunningham the starter for this Sunday's game against the Packers. What is going on with the Eagles? If you replace Cunningham with McMahon to get a win, and he accomplishes the task, how can you justify pulling him the next week and returning Randall to his rightful job? Sound confusing? It is, but the Eagles should have no problem with Green Bay. Philadelphia 13, Green Bay 6.

Take a break from football: Last weekend, the UMass men's soccer team ended its stellar season, losing in the A-10 championship to West Virginia. It was the closest the Minutemen have ever come to making the NCAA's. With all of the credit given to other fall sports, men's soccer has enjoyed the biggest turn- around, and possesses the most promising future. Next year, Sam Koch's team returns every starter, and this space would like to make the Minutemen early favorites to win the A-10's.

Arthur Stapleton is a Collegian columnist.

Scott's

continued from page 12

- Early rumors about the Mullins Arena have professional wrestling coming to Amherst. Wouldn't it be something to see Chief Jay Strongbow in the Uptown bars? How about George Steele — he'd bite a barstool for sure. Ah, the Golden Days of wrasslin'.
- Be prepared for an Uptown pizza war in the coming months, the likes of which we haven't seen since the old Celtics/Sixers glory days.
- Keep your feet in bounds and your eyes on Philadelphia.

David Scott is a Collegian columnist.

Golden Key National Honor Society

All Members:

A meeting will be held to discuss the organization of the 1993 Northeast Regional Conference which will be hosted, for the first time ever, by the U-Mass chapter. There will also be an election of new officers.

Involve yourself!
Attend the meeting on:

Tuesday, November 17th
7:00 pm
Campus Center Room 165-69

For more information call:
Gladys Rodriguez
Dean of Students Office
545-2684

Scott's Shots
IN EVERY THURSDAY'S COLLEGIAN

UMass FIELD HOCKEY

ATTENTION UMASS F.H. FANS

NCAA CHAMPIONSHIP TOURNAMENT!

Here on the UMass campus. Come cheer on the UMASS field hockey team as they battle the winner of the Penn State/Temple Game in the Second Round of the NCAA Division I Field Hockey Championship. 12:00 noon on Sunday, November 15 at Totman Field. Tickets are $6.00 for adults, $4.00 for students.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Hillel – Pizza Bagel Night at the Hillel House Nov. 14 $3/Free for ACH
Call 549-1710 For more information

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Greek and Clubs raise a cool $1,000 in just one week!
Plus $1000 for the member who calls!
And a free HEADPHONE RADIO just for calling 1-800-932-0528 ext. 65

Need a locker? We have them at OCHO! 428 Student Union

PVOC oil coop. Purchase home heating oil at reduced cost. Register at OCHO, 428 Student Union or call 545-0865. Save money and stay warm. Come join now!

Student Renters and landlords should stop by the off-campus housing office to pick up the latest landlord/tenant guide, it's free and an absolute must. For all your housing questions call 5-0865 or stop by.

"Subletting over Wintersession?" The off-campus housing office at 428 Student Union offers a great way to find subletting or sublet a property over intersession. All leasing questions answered with a smile. Call 5-0865 or stop by.

UMASS RACQUETBALL CLUB MEETING All club members requested to attend all new interested students welcome Thursday Nov. 12 7:30 p.m. Dukes Room Student Union 310

AUTO FOR SALE

Buick Regal Ltd. 1982 Excellent cond. Must see $1850 neg. Call 586-5216.

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

COLLEGE PIZZA

College Pizza
Fall Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $5.99
1 or 2 Toppings $6.99
Free Soda with lg. sub salad or spaghetti
549-8098 549-8073
Must mention this ad

ENTERTAINMENT

Free Concert
Monghanl and Bop Harvey performing at Pearl St.
Friday the thirteenth
Doors open at 6:00
Come and fall in love

EXTREMELY IMPORTANT

Tarot Reading by appointment. Anytime
Call Mitch 548-9761

FOR RENT

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom homes on bus route call 586-4270

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

Amherst 3 bedroom condo avail. Feb. 1st. A room and 1 bedroom apartment avail. Jan. 1st.
Lincoln Real Estate
25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7679

1 rm in downtown Amherst house Take over my lease
260 all utilities included
Great Location!
253-4250

Room available in beautiful renovated church. We are 2 males and 2 females with one cat. Rent $250 Call evenings 253-7357

FOR SALE

MAC SE/30 w/lots of additional software 2MG/80 asking 1800 or BO call 774-2567

Over 30 Sega & Nintendo games Starting at $15 Call Rob 6-5466

Passport Radar Detector works perfect $75.00 or B/O Alex 253-7896

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals
Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

Telemark skis 200 Jarvinen, excellent condition 585
Raichele Fiesons Pro Ladies 7, Super Boots! S 65 Call Deb avenings 549-6743.

FOUND

Walkmen, near Goesman, claim 6-5970

HELP WANTED

Alaska Summer Employment
fisheries earn $600 + a week in canneries $4000 month on fishing boats. Free transportation! Room and Board! Male or Female. Get a head start on this summer. For employment program call 1-206 545-4155 ext. A5001

Earn $1000/Weak at home stuffing envelopes! For information, send long SASE to CJ Enterprises, Box 67068K, Cuyahoga Falls, OH 44222

EARN EASY MONEY!
Post our brochures around campus and receive commission for each completed application. Work few hours on your own time. Call 1-800-758-9816 EST

$200-$500 WEEKLY
Assemble products at home. Easy! No selling. You're direct. Fully guaranteed FREE INFORMATION – 24 HOUR HOTLINE. 801-379-2900 Copyright #MA15KDH

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun.
Call 1-800-3SIESTA ask for Bonnie

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons – first lesson half price 665-1176

LEGAL INTERNSHIPS

Friday November 13 is the last day to contact the Legal Services Center about a Spring 1993 internship! Get hands-on experience in the legal field. Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 16 credits! No experience required – training is provided. Contact Legal Services TODAY: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

LOST

At last LBGA Dance I lost my black coat and found someone else's! Is might be yours. Please call if you think you have mine. Reward available upon return 549-4364

Lost keys on a volleyball keychain near F.A.C. if found please call 6-1640

Mt. bike from Boydan Thurs. between 1 & 2 Make Giant Iguana color purple & black any info please call 549-6586

PERSONALS

Charrity,
I've been looking for you in the gym. I apologize for disturbing your aerobics class, but I think that you're really hot! Lets get togashar.
-Mike

Jessica Broomfield
Happy 22nd Birthday
It's November 12th!
Wishing you love and happiness in the year to come
Peace - from Beth at Brown University

MS
You're 2 cute
PC

Tarmus
Happy Birthday
You're the best
Love,
Daver

Womyns X-Country
No Pain No Plane
Let's Do It

ROOMATES WANTED

Female needed to take over Brandywine lease ASAP or by January 1 $185 /month + utilities. First months rent Free call 549-0853

Female sublease single in Mill Va. Spring Sem.
Call 253-3406

Female to share large room 167.50 call 665-7604

Looking for two women to share our N. Amherst Apt. $200 prmnt & utilities Jan 1st Call 549-0916

Need 3 Housemates M/F Jan 1st 5 mn to Campus 549-7619

Roomate wanted to share 2 BR Brandywine Apt. starting Jan. 1. Call Tom 549-2653

3 Responsible women
Need housing for Spring semester Desire place near UMass
Call Young Ni 546-0580 or Jen 4976

Two females needed to share a Brandywine Apt. Call 549-6362

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Resumes
Need help? I have experience with resumes. Quick service, free advice, excellent quality, and LOW prices. IBM Laser printing service available. Call Andy at 549-8463

Tarot Readings
Call Chris 256-0621

SPORTS CARDS

SportStop Cards
Coming Dec. 1st
Mountain Farms Mall

TRAVEL

Save on spring break '93
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida from $119! Book early, save $$$!! Group discounts!! 1-800-426-7710

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed – free cover page, spell check, laser printout. $1.50/page. Brian 546-1795.

Typing - Word Processing
Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations. Lasar Printing
Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268

WANTED

[redacted] our 2 bdrm Puffton lease!! [redacted]ruary 1. Call us first! Reward if [redacted] Call 549-7319

Sports

Phelan and Blenis spark Minutewomen

Senior co-captains provide newfound leadership, cohesion for 20-1 field hockey

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts field hockey co-captains Kathy Phelan and Joy Blenis have affected the team in different ways, but their leadership has been a big reason why the Minutewomen are 20-1.

What a difference a year makes. In 1991, thanks to a total second half collapse, the Minutewomen were one of the last teams to enter the NCAA Tournament, and they had to travel to face Northeastern. That team, one that lacked a true leader, was defeated.

This season, with Blenis and Phelan leading the team on and off the field, the Minutewomen have prospered.

"The biggest thing they've brought as captains is their stability," said defenseman Tracy Barclay. "Last year, when we hit that low in the middle of the season, there was no leader that kept us going, and we completely fell apart."

Both players had different beginnings in the sport, with Blenis wanting to play and Phelan at first resisting the sport.

"There are four girls in our family, and three of them played soccer. One of my sisters was an All-American," Blenis said. "I began playing field hockey in fifth grade. I chose a different route and I don't know if it was because I wanted to be an individual or what."

Phelan said she played soccer when she was younger and only tried field hockey after the persuasion of a number of people.

"I was playing ice hockey in Gary Dineen's hockey camp up in Enfield, NH, and he recommended to my dad that I play field hockey," she said.

"I told him I'm not going to play field hockey when I can play ice hockey, but my mom talked me into it, and I was decent from the start."

Despite both being from out of state, both Blenis and Phelan fell in love with the Amherst campus and enrolled the same year.

"I was born in Springfield, and my grandmother lives in Holyoke, so even though I grew up in Pennsylvania, we were always up here for all of the holidays," said Phelan. "I love the area — I've always loved being here."

Blenis said she had not really considered UMass until head coach Pam Hixon called her.

"I was considering four or five other schools, but I knew Pam from her hockey camps growing up, and she called me down in April, which is real late, to visit the campus," she said.

"My final decision came down to the visit, and I saw the school and fell in love with it. I signed a letter of intent immediately and within three days I was accepted."

On the field, both players lead in their own way. Blenis, because of both size and skill, usually marks, or shadows, the biggest or most threatening forward on the opposition. Phelan's game is more geared towards quick steals and passes.

"Kathy is really aggressive," said Barclay. "Her game is to come out of nowhere and surprise the other team. Her style is definitely one of aggression."

"Joy is more personable," Phelan said. "She's very vocal on the field whereas I'll be more calm and serious, and make sure the team is serious when we have to be."

Their two styles mesh well, as both players will be quick to tell you.

"There is a bond between us, because we started out together and we're ending together," Blenis said. "Last year, we played each other's positions. It's great to be a captain with her. There's some special feelings for us going into this game."

"I think we complement each other as captains," said Phelan. "I was psyched when I found out we would be captains, because it's a real honor to be looked at by other players like that."

As the two seniors prepare to play their final home game at noon this Sunday at Totman Field against the winner of the NCAA first round game between Penn State and Temple, they are not looking back at their careers here in Amherst, but looking ahead to the Final Four.

"We were making a pizza run Monday waiting for the NCAA seedings, and we were saying it's not ready for it to end, it just doesn't feel like it's going to end," said Phelan.

"Actually I don't care who we play, because I know we can beat both of them. I haven't even thought about losing. The only thing that seems to matter is going to the Final Four," said Blenis.

Weeks commits to Minutemen

Philly power forward plans to travel east to UMass

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts basketball team is expected to receive letters of intent from four highly touted high school seniors during the early signing period which opened yesterday.

Tyrone Weeks, a 6-foot-6, 250-pound power forward from Philadelphia, verbally committed to Massachusetts earlier this week and becoming the fourth and final recruit of the year for Coach John Calipari.

Weeks will join 6-foot-10 center Marcus Camby of Hartford, 6-foot-2 point guard Edgar Padilla, formerly a Springfield Central standout and 6-foot-2 shooting guard Carmelo Travieso of Thayer (Braintree, Mass.) Academy in Amherst next season.

Weeks, who averaged 18 points and 19 rebounds a game last season for Philadelphia City Champion Franklin Learning Center, chose Massachusetts over Villanova.

"I like UMass best," Weeks said. "I like their style of play better than Villanova, it's more up-tempo."

Weeks also cited his relationship with UMass Assistant Coach James "Bruiser" Flint, also a native of Philadelphia, as a major reason for choosing UMass.

"Me and Bruiser have a good relationship," Weeks said. "It helps he grew up in the same town. He's been recruiting me for a while and we're close."

Flint is unable to comment on Weeks because of NCAA rules prohibiting coaches from discussing recruits.

Weeks is a wide-body who is considered a rebounding menace, by scouts.

"I can bang and grab the boards," Weeks said. "Scoring and defense are also strengths."

Letters of intent should be arriving from the other verbal commitments in the next couple of days, giving Calipari one of the better recruiting classes in basketball.

Massachusetts has now filled all four of its scholarship slots but one more top prep may still arrive.

Jamal Jackson, a 6-foot-5 slasher from East Boston High School, is expected to apply on his own (no scholarship) to UMass and if accepted could possibly join the team as a walk-on.

Jackson is considered an athletic talent but an academic risk by many, which has forced most coaches to shy away from recruiting him despite his being labeled one of the top 15 preps in the country.

Art's ramblings for NFL Week 11

Arthur
STAPLETON

Undefeated. Last weekend was a banner one for Stapleton's pigskin picks: 4-0 while living it up at the Embassy Suites hotel at the Atlantic 10 men's soccer/field hockey championships. However, one great weekend does not mean the work is over, so off to the games.

It is now crunch-time in the NFL, and many fans can cut the tension with a knife. The players, however, may not appreciate the pressure of the playoffs yet according to Charles Barkley: "Pressure? Pressure is something that fills up tires."

The New York Giants are having the worst luck out of any team in the league this season. Ray Handley could possibly be the worst coach in the NFL, and with this man calling the plays, the offense is in trouble. Their only weapon is Rodney Hampton, and if the opposing defense keys on stopping this elusive back, Handley's team is done. On the other side of the ball, the best linebacker of all-time, Lawrence Taylor, may have played the last game in his stellar career.

Questions of heart and determination will surround this squad for the remainder of the season, and these will start to surface on Sunday against Denver. The Broncos have won eight straight games at Mile High, and come in fresh off a defeat of the other disappointing New York (Jersey) team, the Jets. The Giants must realize that you have to reach rock bottom before you make progress in the upwards direction. Denver 22, NY Giants 17.

Next we'll look at the best two teams in the AFC, Buffalo and Miami, and their contest on Monday night. The Dolphins destroyed the Bills the last time out, receiving the recognition for being the best team in football. Jim Kelly had a nightmare last time out against the Fish, but don't expect another.

Kelly and counterpart Dan Marino have all the tools for an offensive explosion, but can the Dolphins sweep the Bills? No, despite the home crowd and the motivation, my heart tells me that Marino and friends lose their grasp on first place. Buffalo 35, Miami 20.

Houston was my pre-season pick to run away with the AFC Central, but, as usual, the Oilers are a disappointment. Despite having the most explosive wide receiver in the AFC, Ernest Givens, and the potent passing attack of Warren Moon, Jack Pardee's team was held to under 100 yards passing against Cleveland.

The task for Moon gets no easier as Houston travels to surprising Minnesota for an interconference clash. Chris Doleman is having an excellent season so far, and should, along with the rest of the D, keep the pressure on the Oilers all day. Minnesota 20, Houston 17.

Kansas City, the best 5-4 team in the NFL, hosts Washington this weekend in what could be the battle of defenses. Derrick Thomas had four sacks in the first half against the Chargers, but the offense led by Dave Krieg is pitiful. Mark Rypien finally threw a touchdown last week, and he'll have Thomas, Neil Smith and company in his face all day. The Chiefs have split with NFC East powers Dallas and Philly, so a win in this game could put them over the top. Kansas City 12, Washington 10.

New Orleans tattoed the Patriots last week, and the best sign at that game was this one: John 3:16, Pats 0:16. This basically explains New England's season, and they needed some help going into the game with the Colts. Coach Mac is out, but so is Steve Emtman, a force on Indy's defensive line. Hey, Matt and Saint, I know you are wondering when the Pats will win. Mark it down: November 15. New England 6, Indianapolis 0.

Speaking of Saints, Pat Swilling and his wrecking crew travel to San Francisco in a battle for the top spot in the NFC West. If the Niners' defense can force turnovers, like in last week's shellacking of Atlanta, they are tough to beat. The last time these two met, New Orleans gave up the ball as much as the Pats, but still had a chance to win. What does that mean? If the Saints' offense plays like they did at home, I predict Young and company in a victory. San Francisco 16, New Orleans 10.

Turn to RAMBLINGS, page 11

Scott's shots

David
SCOTT

'Tis the season for turkey raffles and we're off to a 1-0 start. The 23-pound juicy bird came courtesy of the Turner's Falls VFW and it's primed for stuffin'.

Turkey raffles can't really be explained, just experienced.

• In a year filled with Title IX controversy, it's refreshing to see the UMass field hockey and women's soccer teams in their respective NCAA Tournaments.

Jim Rudy's Lady Kickers had sweet revenge on Len Tsantiris and his UConn Huskies last Saturday in Storrs. An overtime victory is one thing, but when the game winner is scored by a local product like Rachel LeDuc it's all the more exciting.

By the way, it might be time for Rudy to stop taking those headers in practice. Saturday's postgame included a very Rudy-like tangent on "Sa-Lad" (no idea what it was about) and then a moving sermon on the effectiveness of his fabulous freshman, the "Kiddie Korps." Sa-Lad, coach, Sa-Lad.

• Boston College's match-up with Syracuse this weekend pits two teams that serve as their area's professional football entry, albeit on the collegiate level.

• It now looks fairly dismal for Foxboro's Fumblers to make the playoffs, although a quick seven-game winning streak will offer a nice glimpse of things to come. Whatever It Takes.

• Dante Scarnecchia is already starting to look like Ray Berry, Rod Rust and Joe Morgan rolled into one.

• Hakeem Olajuwon isn't happy, but I'd bet Red Aurebach could change that.

• Goodbye Jon Barry, we hardly knew ye... and hardly cared.

• Time once again for this space's infinite wisdom on the NHL. The Bruins are exciting to watch even if I can't pronounce Kvart- or spell Special K's name. Adam Oates has more touchdowns than anyone on Foxboro's Follies.

• Not a pleasant way for Lawrence Taylor to leave the game, but it's more important to remember the good times.

• There's a bus heading to Hartford on Sunday to help counter the partial Hawks crowd during the UMass' women's soccer game. Cheap seats and great entertainment — contact Margaret Driscoll in Boyden. (The preceding was a public service announcement meant to fill space.)

• If you see this page's "Artie Guy, The Party Guy" give him a pat on the back for last week's Pigskin Picks. Then hit him for the Kirby Puckett goatee.

• Rick Fox is a man on a mission — the guy had a slam on Friday night that rattled North Station's train tracks.

• Tommy "Butch" Hodson could be out this week for the pivotal game against the Colts and the quarterback situation is dismal at best. We offer the ultimate solution — Steve Grogan. If Grogs can't do it, no one can.

Turn to SCOTT'S, page 11

BRAM STOKER'S

Dracula

BEHIND THE SCENES

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Blood. A seductive, gothic romance. The most horrific and brooding vampire. A superb cast and a renown director. All these elements brew together to make Bram Stoker's Dracula one of the most eagerly awaited films of the year.

Starting tomorrow, this terrifying and faithful version of Stoker's classic 1897 novel, comes bracingly to life. Think you've seen all there is on Dracula? Think again.

Director Francis Ford Coppola (the Godfather trilogy) is set to offer a highly stylized journey into the oft-told tale of an alluring, deadly vampire and his bloodthirsty obsession.

British actor Gary Oldman (Oswald in JFK) portrays the powerful vampire; a shape shifter whose love of Mina (Winona Ryder) proves his ghastly undoing. Keanu Reeves plays Jonathan, Mina's husband. Oscar-winner Anthony Hopkins (Howards End) appears as Van Helsing, the doctor who is obsessed with destroying Dracula.

The supporting cast includes Sadie Frost as Lucy Westenra, Mina's friend as Dracula's victim with Cary Elwes (Hot Shots!) as Lucy's fiance. Richard E. Grant (Hudson Hawk) plays Dr. Seward, administrator of his own insane asylum, disciple of Van Helsing and failed suitor of Lucy. Bill Campbell (The Rocketeer) portrays Quincey Morris, a Texas aristocrat who tries to defend Mina and Lucy from Dracula's web and singer Tom Waits as Reinfeld, a lunatic locked up in Seward's asylum.

Screenwriter James V. Hart (Hook) spent 13 years trying to get "the real Dracula" to the screen. "I think Hollywood has truly diluted the story through the years. People don't realize was a beautifully written piece of work [Bram Stoker's Dracula] is."

Hart grew up with the English Hammer film versions of Dracula with Christopher Lee. "To me Dracula was just a sort of exploitation, blood-sucking monster who wasn't very attractive."

After reading Leonard Wolf's Annotated Dracula in 1977, Hart was completely spellbound by the writing. "I couldn't believe what a dramatic, powerful, erotic story was on the page, and that this narrative that I was reading with its wonderful high adventure climax had not ever been done on the screen."

But it was the offhand assistance of actress Winona Ryder — who received Hart's version of Dracula, at that point subtitled The Untold Story in a pile of scripts from her agent — that started the project rolling.

Ryder, who dropped out of Coppola's 1990 Godfather III due to exhaustion, was meeting with the director on another project and gave the script to him. "I never thought he would even read it," she recalls.

Coppola, it turns out, was immediately interested. Says Ryder, "I think Francis and I liked the same things about the script, which was very romantic and sensual and epic, a real love story that was very passionate...It's not really a vampire movie. To me, it's more about the man Dracula, the warrior, the prince. He is unlike any other man — he's mysterious and very sexual — attractive in a dangerous way."

Coppola's first vision of Dracula was of John Carradine in the 1945 House of Dracula, but it was F.W. Murnau's classic 1921 silent film, Nosferatu, an "unofficial" film version of Stoker's novel, which to Coppola has been the greatest film made on the Dracula story.

Turn to BEHIND THE SCENES, page 7

THIS WEEKEND

PAGE DESIGN BY LISA JEZOWSKI / COLLEGIAN

From the Lives of Dolls brings back memories

By EMILY MARINO
Collegian Staff

A trip to the University Gallery at the UMass Fine Arts Center may turn into a nostalgic trip back into your childhood, to a time of favorite games, pastimes and toys. You will experience such a time warp when you trek to view Ellen Phelan's From The Lives Of Dolls, a body of work presenting themes of self-identification, cultural roles and memory through doll imagery.

The artist's work recreates the images of her own childhood dolls primarily with oil on linen, watercolor or guoache. The dolls range from bare-breasted, female pin cushions to a wire and mesh tubing baby figure.

With seemingly simple messengers (dolls), Phelan's art conveys adult themes to which many of us can relate.

A two-painting series titled "The Kiss: Betrayal," (part one) and "Revenge" (part two) utilizes figure scale to illustrate how being left out often makes one feel small. In addition to being physically smaller than the two dolls engaging in the kiss, the female onlooker is bare-breasted and obviously vulnerable.

Part two of the series, "Revenge" presents the death of the lip-locked lovers and a "if looks could kill" expression on the face of the ostracized doll.

Likewise, "Baby and Old Man," a guoache work, utilizes the same kind of technique to enhance a distinct presentation of life, death, being young and growing old.

Phelan's baby figure, possessing skinny, unstable legs and stiff, outstretched arms, appears to grow before the viewers eyes. Next to him the tiny old man is virtually shrinking as death encroaches.

Present in many of her pieces, Phelan's baby doll image represents the "moment of pre-pubescent sexuality, before sex rears its ugly head" explained the artist.

It is in these "glimmerings of interest with no physical conscience" that our childhood slowly escapes us and is eventually replaced by adult sexuality.

Other works focus on street scenes, characters such as Budman, and specific moments in time that we all share at one time or another.

"A word of Advice," "Rejecting Mother" and "Self as Elf" project common yet sacred experiences that we either share with those close to us, or utilize by ourselves for self-exploration.

Whether through the fleeting look of joy amongst the faces of companions (as in "War: Sailor and Barmaid") or

TURN TO DOLLS, PAGE 4

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8 A.M.-11 P.M.
Tel: 549-2692

SHOP SCOTT'S BEFORE & AFTER THE GAME!
GO UMASS!!

Permit NOT Required to Purchase Keg!

COORS
Regular, Light, Extra Gold
12 pack bottles
$6.99 + DEP.

Labatt's
Blue and 50 ALE
12 pack bottles
$7.99 + DEP.

Jose Cuervo
Max Pack
750ml Tequila & 1.0Ltr. Margarita Mix
$11.49

Passport Scotch
1.75Ltr.
$15.99

Columbia Crest Chardonnay
750ml.
$5.49

Gallo Reserve Cellars
(White Zinfandel, White Grenache, Classic Burgundy)
$3.99 750ml.

Quanity Discounts Available

WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!

FULL SELECTION OF NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE & BEERS

Play all Lottery games here!

Tele-check for your personal check

6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst

TRAVEL SMART THIS WINTER!
FROM NEW YORK
Roundtrip / One Way
London $305 $165
Paris $398 $219
Rome $525 $320
Oslo/Stockholm $458 $229
Tel Aviv/Istanbul $639 $329
Guatemala City $390 $205
Costa Rica $430 $225
Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Customs/immigration and departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*in NYC

Breakfast Special (8am-10am)
Scrambled Eggs - Home Fries - Toast
$1.49
SUNDAY-FRIDAY SPECIALS
(4:00pm - 9:00pm)
Meatball Grinder $2.65
Italian Dinner Specials
(4:00pm - 11:00pm)
Pizza Slice (Large Cut) 99¢
Large Plain or Pepperoni Pizza with your choice of a pitcher of soda or a pitcher of beer $8.75
Now Through November 24th at
the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

Mongo Santamaria and Charlie Sepulveda
Nov 23rd 1992
Student Union Ballroom UMASS
8pm
Tix: $12 UMASS
$14 Other
Day Of Show
$13 UMASS
$15 Other
Tix Available at:
UPC Productions
AND AHORA

WEEKEND HAPPENINGS

Calendar of events in the 5 College Area

COURTESY CORDELIA'S DAD

Check out Cordelia's Dad at the Iron Horse tonight as they promote their latest album, How Can I Sleep?

THURSDAY

THEATRE— Sandra Radosh and the Department of Landscape Architecture and Regional Planning Board present The Apple Orchard, a new play by Barry Greenbie. The story centers around a New England university town in which a local planner runs into conflict with stop-growth activists. Throw a little romance into the works and you have this show running in the Hampden Theatre tonight through Saturday, 8 p.m. with a 2 p.m. matinee Sunday. $5 general/$3 with ID.

IN CONCERT— Rippopotamus will perform live at the Hatch, UMass' super-cool, on-campus hangout. If you are 18+ you, too can enjoy this rockin' good time. Drop by the Hatch for details.

THEATRE— German novelist, playwright and poet Michael Ende, author of The Never Ending Story will be honored by Smith College natives Andrea Hairston and John Hellweg. They will present his latest play, Fool's Harvest. The show will run tonight through Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Hallie Flanagan Studio Theatre, Mendenhall Center for the Performing Arts. Shows also to run next weekend, 11/18 - 11/21 at the same time and place. $4 general/$2 students & seniors.

IN CONCERT— Shockra, unique five-piece band from Boston will play jazz, funk, rock and blues tonight at Pearl Street in Northampton. Don't miss this politically, socially charged 18+ show. 8:30 p.m. $5 in adv./$6 at the door.

RELEASE/CONCERT— Celtic thrash masters Cordelia's Dad will present their latest album, how can I sleep? tonight at the Iron Horse in Northampton. Their second full-legnth album will be featured in two sets, one acoustic and one electric. 8:30 p.m. $6.50 in adv./$8 at door.

LECTURE— "Stereotypes of African Women in Latin Literature" will be presented by Shelley Haley of the Classics dept. at Hamilton College. SC Wright Hall Common Room, 4:15. Free.

THEATRE— The Women of Trachis will be presented by the UMass Department of Theatre and directed by Keith Oliver. This translation of Sophocles' tragedy by Robert Bagg, English Dept. features themes of jealousy, pride, devotion and love as Heracles reaches his destiny. Tonight through Saturday, 8 p.m. at the FAC Rand Theatre. Next weekend as well, same time and place. $5/$3 students and elders.

LECTURE— "U.S. Relations with Europe: Special Focus on Germany" will be discussed by Richard Kauzlarich, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for European and Canadian Affairs. Hasbrouck 20. 8 p.m. Free.

THEATRE— The Castle by Howard Barker focuses on a feudal lord and his attempt to undermine the radical values his people are adopting. Tonight through Sunday and next weekend, 11/19 - 11/21 8 p.m. HC Emily Dickinson Building, Mainstage. Reservations recommended. $3/$2.50 students.

LECTURE— "Infant's Perception of Auditory Space" will be discussed by Rachel Clifton at SC Bass Hall 210. 4:10 p.m. Free.

THEATRE— Laughing, Losing and Loving: Three Modes of Expression will feature work in progress by Shades of Expression. MHC Chapin Auditorium, 7 p.m. $2/$1 with ID.

FRIDAY

THEATRE— The Valley Light Opera's continuation of Gilbert & Sullivan's The Gondoliers to run tonight and tomorrow night at 8 p.m. at Amherst High School. $10 adults/$7 students & seniors.

IN CONCERT— UMass band Afterimage to perform classic and progressive cover tunes by greats such as Rush, The Police, Queen, Pink Floyd and others. All ages welcome to this 9 p.m. show, and those of you 21+ can enjoy a nice pitcher-o-brew at the Hatch (Campus Center) for only $3.50. Neil O'Brien, Colin Hanley and Jordan Weeks look forward to seeing you there.

OPENING RECEPTION— A reception will be held at R. Michelson Galleries in Amherst today for Pioneer Valley artists featured in the latest exhibit, "Images of the Goddess." Come meet artists Judy Chicago, Imogen Cunningham, Carol Grigg, Mark Weiss and Judy Dater from 6-8 p.m at 25 S. Pleasant St. Free. Exhibit runs through 11/30.

IN CONCERT— The Iron Horse sponsors Mary Chapin Carpenter as she plays at the FAC tonight at 8 p.m. Tix range in price, $16-$21.

IN CONCERT — The Bay State Cabaret, starring musical acts The Lyres, The Cheetahs, Flower Thief and Raymond & the Circles hosted by Tom "Lenny" Hotz, will be presented at the Bay State Hotel in Northampton, next to the Pearl Street Nightclub at 10 p.m. Tickets $5 at the door. Call 584-8513 for more info.

FILM— The Second Sight Film Collective presents Repulsion, the story of the mental deterioration of a sexually repressed girl left alone in an apartment for a few days. Nominal fee required. 7 & 9 p.m. at HC's Franklin Patterson Hall.

DANCE— Baile Latino/Latin Dance will be held to raise funds to benefit the victims of the tidal wave on the Pacific Coast of Nicaragua. Dance, fun and refreshments will be offered tonight at AC Spanish House/Newport House. 9 p.m.-1 a.m. $3.

IN CONCERT— Bop Harvey will play a live, free show tonight at Pearl Street in NoHo at 8:30 p.m. Be there or be square.

DANCE— Trek on over to Hampshire College to dance the bad luck of this Friday the 13th away to tunes of the 70's, 80's, and 90's. 10 p.m.-1 a.m. $1.

SATURDAY

IN CONCERT— Nashville singer/songwriter Hunter Moore will appear in concert with folk favorite Greg Brown at the Iron Horse tonight 7 p.m. Moore's "ro-co-fo" mixture of rock, coutry and folk will be performed solo and defy acoustic gravity. $11 in adv.

LECTURE— "Vanishing Homelands: A Chronicle of Change Across the Americas" will be presented by the producers of a documentary series of National Public Radio. This slide-lecture presentation on the struggle for political rights of indigenous groups in Latin America is free. SC Neilson Library Browsing Room. 10:30 p.m.

FILM— The MHC Film Society presents Mo' Better Blues, a Spike Lee classic revealing the self-involved world of an extremely talented jazz trumpeter. $2.50 only at Gamble Auditorium 7 and 9:30 p.m.

IN CONCERT— The University's premiere string ensemble, Opus One, returns to Bezanson Recital Hall tonight at 8 p.m. to play virtusoic works by Vivaldi, Mozart and Grieg. Professor Charles Treger will be featured, as well as Chua Lik Wuk, formerly of the Singapore Symphony and Joanna Kurkowicz, who placed in the semi-finalist category in the 1991 Wieniawski and 1990 International Jean Sibelius Competitions. Tickets $5/$2.50 students and elders.

COMMUNITY— Pizza-bagel/Movie night to be held at Hillel House, 388 N. Pleasant St. The fun kicks off at 7 p.m. Don't be left in the dark, get into the light at the Pizza-bagel/Movie night! $3 for non-activity card holders, Free for activity card holders. New students welcome.

IN CONCERT— Local jazz/rock band Stone Soup will do their thing tonight at the Hadley Pub. Don't miss this UMass musical ensemble extraordinare, heralded by the Collegian's own Dan Wetzel as a group that "really jams. They're really good..." Show kicks off at 7:30.

SUNDAY

BENEFIT CONCERT— The Radical Student Union of UMass to host a benefit concert for the AIDS Foundation of Western Massachusetts and the Pioneer Valley GLB Youth Project. Bands The Queers (of N.H.), Psycho (Boston), Affirmative Action and Intent (both of Albany) will play from 4:30 to 10:30 in the Southside Room. $5.

IN CONCERT— The Smith College Choirs Alpha and Omega include the presentation of the Valley Woodwind Quintet with Clifton J. Noble, Jr. and Sharon Schoffman, piano. Conductor Jessel Murray premieres And Hannah Prayed and Said by Elissa Brill. Spirituals and works by Perischette, Kowalski and others will also be performed. Sweeney Concert Hall, 3 p.m.

IN CONCERT— Charles Brown, piano master praised by Bonnie Raitt as "the greatest living piano player" will perform tonight at the Iron Horse in Northampton at 7 p.m. Don't miss the legendary bluesman recently released from the studio with Raitt. $10.50 in advance.

FACULTY RECITAL— Sharon Hayes, soprano and Jeffrey Goldberg, pianist, perform at AC Buckley Recital Hall today at 3 p.m. Free.

COURTESY AFTERIMAGE

UMass band Afterimage will jam with classic and progressive cover tunes Friday at 9pm in the Hatch.

Patty Larkin: Doin' the folk thing

By BILL ROGERS
Collegian Correspondent

Folk fans around the valley open your eyes, clean out your ears and take notice because Patty Larkin, folk musician extraordinaire will be captivating the Iron Horse crowd tomorrow night.

Larkin has been a favorite for the past decade on the nationwide folk circuit, as well as an outright star on her home turf of New England. In this short but meaningful time, Larkin has truly earned the loyalty shown by her fans. Her dedication to her craft has earned her space up there at the top with Tracy Chapman and Suzanne Vega.

It all started back during her seventh grade year in Milwaukee. Larkin, after four years of classical piano study, decided that she wanted to give the guitar a try.

"I started making up chords and writing my own lyrics," says Larkin. "After I hit the wall with the number of folk songs I could learn."

After attending the University Of Oregon, Larkin moved to Boston, where she advanced her studies at the Berklee College Of Music and played Irish music on the streets around Harvard Square. Later on, during the late seventies, Larkin played electric guitar in several contexts, ranging from a jazz trio to r&b and rock n' roll.

It was in 1981 when Larkin decided to devote her life to acoustic guitar. By the middle of the decade, she became a familiar voice amidst the growing chorus of new singer/songwriters. "The success of Vega, Chapman and Nancy Griffith are evidence that there's much more interest in this type of music," says Larkin.

Since she started out, Larkin has won the respect and admiration of everyone attending her some hundred and fifty concerts a year. She has also been the winner of seven Boston Music Awards, including "Outstanding Folk Act," "Outstanding Folk Album" and "Outstanding Singer/Songwriter" for her 1990 released live album, In The Square. Larkin's latest album, Tango, showcases her diverse musical influences and a degree of accoustic guitar virtuosity very uncommon on the Neo-Folk scene. It's a national culmination of Larkin's development as one of the most original artists in the burgeoning "new acoustic" movement.

For the past three years, Larkin has been using her 1946 Martin D-18 to concentrate on her instrumental technique, incorporating elements from jazz, blues and rock. Doing this, she has drawn praise for her crackling, articulate and colorfully dramatic guitar lines.

Larkin as a performer often juxtaposes her intimate, heart felt love longs and her frank expressions of social conscience with the kind of ironic and comical material represented, for instance, by "Dave's Holiday," a song on Tango with a reggae feel describing the daily life of Larkin's buddy John Gorka...(Gorks is Dave).

Larkin's satirical side shines its brightest during her live shows, especially her collaborative tours, such as On A Winter's Night with Christine Lavin, John Gorka, David Wilcox and Cliff Eberhardt in 1990 and 1991, in addition to the nationally known "Buy Me, Bring Me, Take Me: Don't Mess My Hair" Review: Life According To Four Bitchin' Babes (documented on a Rounder album of the same with the essence of awe in discovering oneself in a mirror for the first time ("Baby, Horse and Mirror), Phelan captures and returns to us those tiny yet significant instances of revelation during childhood that so easily escape our memories.

TURN TO LARKIN, PAGE W6.

■ Dolls

CONTINUED FROM PAGE W2

In many of her pieces dark colors seem to wash over and blur distinct physical characteristics of the subjects. Faint colors and glimpses of light outline faces and create sometimes ambiguous expressions.

Phelan devoted much attention to determining where her subjects "cross the line between dollness and humanness." Because of their still-life nature, the dolls served the artist as "mysterious vehicles for the projection of imagination and emotion."

While Phelan claims that she was a "huge Louisa May Alcott fan" as a child, she was never emphatic about dolls. It was in recollecting her own dolls for her stepdaughter, Ivy that she was inspired to create this exhibit.

From The Lives Of Dolls takes an adverse look at something simple and to which most of us can relate. Phelan also affords us the chance to realize that there are distinct cycles in our lives that occur and effect us constantly. Her exhibit is one example of how, often our childhoods re-enter our lives as reminders of where we come from, and sometimes even help us to determine where exactly we are going.

From The Lives Of Dolls will be on exhibit through December 18th at the University Gallery. Call the F.A.C. for gallery hours.

The Area's BEST CHINESE FOOD & SUSHI BAR

Enjoy the finest, freshest sushi, sashimi, tempura teriyaki and more at Panda East's new Sushi Bar. Also enjoy the finest Chinese Cuisine — Fresh, local specialties, low-priced luncheon specials and banquet facilties for your group or large party.

PANDA EAST
103 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
256-8923 • 256-8924

AFFORDABLE CONDOMINIUMS AVAILABLE FOR RENT

ONE TWO & THREE BEDROOMS

THE BROOK AT AMHERST GREEN

QUIET CONVENIENT & FLEXIBLE

253-3834

ATTENTION: UMASS COLLEGE STUDENTS!
ALPINE COMMONS
133 Belchertown Road (ROUTE 9)
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002 (413) 256-0741

FOUR (4) Bedroom Apartments!
$899 (utilities included! wow!)

RENT FREE !

Move in now- no rent until January 1,1993 !
Move in January 93' and receive it FREE!

*Promotion & prices subject to change without notice

TOP TEN REASONS YOU SHOULD LIVE HERE:
1. Your PARENTS don't!
2. YOU pick your roommates!
3. PRIVACY- Spacious Four (4) Bedrooms!
4. TWO (2) Bathrooms- no waiting in the shower line!
5. UTILITIES included $$$!
6. Directly on BUSLINE- minutes from campus & downtown Amherst!
7. It's FREE public transportation!
8. INCLUDES major appliances & w/w carpeting!
9. QUIET forest setting - for your peace of mind.

Great location, convenience & a price you and your roommates can afford!

Don't wait another day, call today!

CUT THIS AD & USE IT TO LIVE "RENT FREE!" AT ALPINE COMMONS!

256-0741

Spirit Haus
LIQUOR STORE

Bud, Bud Light, Bud Dry 12 pk btls ....$6.99 (+dep)
Rolling Rock 12 pk btls .....$6.99 (+dep)
New Amsterdam Ale 6 pk .....$4.69 (+dep)
NEW! PIKE PLACE Ale 6 pak .....$8.69 (+dep)
Arctic Bay 12 pak btls .....$6.39 (+dep)
Smirnoff Vodka 90 proof Reserve litre ...$11.69
Captain Morgan Spiced Rum 750 ml $8.49
Glenfiddich w/2 Crystal Glasses 750 ml $21.99
NEW! Winter Beers From Sam Adams, Sam Smith, AASS, Coors, Harpoon, Catamount and Gearys ALL AVAILABLE NOW!

LOTTERY Headquarters
Beers from around the World!
Imports • Gourmet • Microbreweries
Kegs starting at $33.00
(checks/Mastercard/Visa accepted for Keg Deposits)
Malt Scotches • Cognacs • Brandies • Champagnes

Open 9 am - 11 pm
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED
338 College Street/253-5384
One mile East of Amherst Ctr. on Rte. 9

Women of Trachis premieres

By SHAWN McDONNEL
Collegian staff

Director Richard Trousdell described last semester's production of Tales of the Lost Formicans, by UMass graduate Constance Congdon, as a "celebration of one of our own." If the Theatre Department's decision to revive a popular play by a university alum was admirable, then its decision to premiere a play by a university professor is downright praise worthy.

Women of Trachis is a translation, by UMass English professor Robert Bagg, of one of Sophocles' most rarely-produced works. Because the play is generally unavailable in English translation, the upcoming Rand Theatre production holds all the excitement and uncertainty of a true gala premeire. According to Keith Oliver, Women's director, working on a translation-in-progress also presented many unique challenges.

"It's like working with a playwright," explains Oliver, "if something doesn't hit right with the actor, or doesn't sound right, Bob [Bagg] and I will go back and say 'What is the original Greek?' and then we'll work back from there to try and solve the problem."

There has been much revision of Bagg's translation, since he began working with Oliver this summer, but nothing has been cut from the play. Even many of the stage directions of the original have been kept intact.

"I don't mean to be mystical," smiles Oliver, "but when a character says 'give me your hand' or 'come here' you think about it — over 2,000 years ago it probably happened that way in Greece, in a different language. That's fascinating."

Another peculiar challenge of this play was working with a Greek Chorus. Unlike most modern drama, portions of the play were meant to be sung and danced—and that meant working with a choreographer and a composer.

"The rehearsal process for this show is 360 degrees different from what I'm used to," says Oliver.

Some of the theatrical styles of the original have been updated (the score, by Geoffrey Hudson, is brand new) but the cast and crew have been careful to preserve what Keith Oliver calls "an ancient feeling," so as not to destroy the atmosphere of the play.

Women of Trachis tells the story of Deianira (Brenda Lee Cahill) and her family, as they await the return of her husband Heracles (Edward M. Jewett). A prophecy has foretold that Heracles will either return unharmed in fifteen months, or will be dead. As the play unfolds, we watch Heracles' family hoping for his safe return, while racked with fears and doubt as the prophecied time runs out.

In addition to Cahill and Jewett, the 16-strong cast of student actors includes such notables as Jennifer Costello (Romeo and Juiet, Buried Child), Laurie Ciarametaro (In My Abyss), and Megan McEnulty (As You Like It). Performances begin tonight, so don't pass up this opportunity to celebrate one of our own.

Women of Trachis will be performed November 12-14 and 18-21 at 8:00 PM in the Rand Theatre. Tickets are available at the FAC Box Office.

COURTESY UMASS THEARER DEPARTMENT

Deiania (Brenda Lee Cahill) awaits the return of her husband Heracles in the UMass Department of Theater production of Sophocles' classic Greek drama Women of Trachis.

God and the blues in the age of AIDS

by KIP MANLEY
Collegian Correspondent

Diamanda Galas
Iron Horse
Nov 11, 1992

I should've been warned, that's all I can say.

Sure, I'd heard about "The Masque of the Red Death," her Plague Mass dedicated to persons who are HIV positive, PWArcs and PWAs "who fight to stay alive," which got her denounced for blasphemy against the Roman Catholic Church when she performed it in Italy. I've read about The Singer, her album of drastic re-interpretations of spiritual blues and gospel standards.

I even heard her sound check before the show. My friend from West Virginia wanted good seats, so there we were a half hour before the doors opened when the piano began to pound and a growling voice powered Roy Acuff's "Were You There When They Crucified my Lord?" through the glass to the crowd outside. Nervous jokes were made about whether or not the windows would survive the evening.

Still, none of this was enough to prepare me for that moment Tuesday night when the lights dimmed and Diamanda Galas climbed onto the stage and began to play.

She attacked the piano, pounding it with all the inarticulate anger of someone who has always wanted to play but never been able to. But there was a blues riff slouching towards Bethlehem to be born, and as it found itself, she found her voice. "There are no more cowards and voyeurs," she sang. "There are no more tickets to the funeral." And she launched into the Roy Acuff song in earnest now, nailing me and the rest of the audience to our seats.

Her voice would swoop from down and dirty growls through operatic arias to desperate screams, all in a single phrase. She could take on the wavering power of an imam calling to prayer from a mosque tower or the wounded dignity of a jilted lover asking for "one last favor 'fore I go."

The piano moaned and shrieked right along with

TURN TO GALAS, PAGE W6

Hey, College Students...
GET THIS $25 WITH THIS

Killington ExtraCredit
J.J. SKIER 1234 NOTRE DAME

Purchase the Killington ExtraCredit Card for a one time fee of $25 and use it to buy a one day ski pass any Sunday through Friday, for only $25 a day (holidays excluded). Full-time college students 18-24 years old only.

The ExtraCredit Card provides you with more miles of skiing than any other resort in the East, 77 miles as a matter of fact–and spread over 6 interconnected mountains. New this year, is the Canyon Quad chairlift which accesses some of Killington's steepest and most challenging terrain. Killington has also increased its snowmaking capacity by 30%. So before you spend more money for less skiing, check out Killington's ExtraCredit Card, available only to you, the full-time college student!

Killington VERMONT
America's 6 Mountain Ski Resort

For more information or to order your ExtraCredit Card today, call:
1•800•372•2007
802•773•0755

Winter Session 1993

Yes, you can!
Yes, you can!
So, do it!

Register for Winter Session classes.
Special enrollment restrictions do not apply for Winter Session.
So, if you're a UMass student, all you have to do is just sign up.

WINTER SESSION:
- a unique "mini-semester," just three weeks long
- earn 3 academic credits in only 3 weeks
- over 100 credit courses, including gen. ed. designated classes

Your chance to:
- take a class you couldn't get before
- make up credits
- meet graduation requirements
- lighten your spring course load

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.

Catalogs available on campus or at the Division of Continuing Education, 6th floor Goodell.

January 4-25

Love's Body Speaks of women

By EMILY MARINO
Collegian Staff

Art came to life last Sunday afternoon at the NACUL Center on Main street in Amherst. Seven local women presented live chanting, dancing, reading and storytelling to accompany an ongoing exhibit of paintings and sculpture titled Love's Body Speaks.

The exhibit and performance explore women's experience of spirituality, sexuality, creativity and connecting with the natural world. The seven artists presented themes centering around Mother Earth and all of her creatures, and how we, as women, coexist with nature and respect its beauty.

The performance, set in one of the most beautiful buildings in Amherst, explored life, nature and the story of creation. This three part stage work titled "I Am Woman: I am Earth" featured song, dance and storytelling.

Dorothy Osterman presented traditional dance similar to the styles of ceremonial Native American and Indian dancing. Coming to life and becoming aware of her natural surroundings, Osterman's butterfly-like interaction with the protective "Womb of the Goddess," in which she had previously stood frozen, reminded us of the coming of a flirtatious, carefree Spring.

Osterman presented vitality and sexuality in harmony with nature, until death overcame her.

Karen Caitlin emerged and slowly came to life from a pile of dead leaves symbolically. At first unrecognizable, her body seems to be part of nature and inevitably awakens to the sunlight of her world.

Caitlin, concerned with the rebirth of Divine Femaleness, then joined Osterman in the Womb of the Goddess to await the next part of the show.

Adapting an old Native American tale, Jewell Greco explained the creation of the earth as the mere belch of a spiritual force/goddess. Dressed symbolically in green, Greco presented chants praising Mother Nature and explaining how we, as women, are the daughters of the Earth, Sisters of the Moon and mothers of the child.

She later calls to all creatures of the world, with audience participation, to acknowledge and thank them. Greco ended the chant exclaiming, "We thank you for our lives."

Ruby Rice and readers Andree Klingener and Jane Bergenn presented "Moon Lodge," a combination of song and reading to further explore women's link to each other and to nature. Smearing her own (simulated) blood onto the foreheads of audience members (to which one little boy declared "Not me!") Rice portrayed our biological and spiritual connections as human beings through motherhood and womanhood.

The show ended with a chant of which the audience was given lyrics, and we all joined together to lift our voices and exalt the words of artist Morning Star. Praising women's inner power, love, respect and ability to "give birth to all she knows in her body," men, women and children participated.

Art such as this creates a place for women to express themselves and share their experiences with others in such a way as to foster understanding amongst each other and all humans. It is this separate place that women carry with them each day without always realizing it.

This place must be preserved and continually explored so as to allow for ongoing growth. The spiritual link to the biological realities and implications that bind us to womanhood is sometimes subtle and perhaps forgotten, but it is always there.

Expressions of that spiritual link, such as Love's Body Speaks serve as an opportunity to get in tune with our sexuality, spirituality, creativity and natural ties so as to remind us of and strengthen our identity. This strength does not necessarily produce drastic changes in who we are, but may act in subtle ways to enhance how we perceive ourselves and therefore interact with each other.

The exhibit of paintings and sculpture will be at the NACUL center until November 30. The still art presents the same issues as did the live performance, and serves as thought-provoking entertainment. All of the works are by the artists who performed Sunday.

■ Galas

CONTINUED FROM PAGE W5.

her, simple tunes bent all out of shape, notes exploding with sudden fury, chords dissolving into rumbling rolls of thunder.

When she played Blind Lemon Jefferson's "See that my Grave is Kept Clean" ("Done very, very badly by Bob Dylan, a famous liberal," she said by way of introduction, "and then done much much much better by me") she slapped the piano, hard, as she cried "Have you ever heard that coffin sound?"

We have now.

And when she did Willie Dixon's "Insane Aylum" she became a roomful, a world full of people crying out through her, the words just barely recognizable in the frightening torrent of sound. I love you. I love you. I need you. Save me. Save my life. Please.

She closed to a standing ovation with a haunting rendition of Billie Holiday's "Gloomy Sunday." She was called back for two encores, first "The Dark End of the Street," and then a terrifying version of Screamin Jay Hawkin's "I Put a Spell on You." "I forgot most of the words," she said as she began, "but who gives a f—k." Once more her voice escalated to that frightening torrent, an experience akin to hearing someone speak in tongues.

Diamanda Galas performs with a religious intensity, but this should come as no surprise. She has dedicated these songs to reinventing the blues for the age of AIDs, to speak for yet another cycle of death and despair, to scream "Why?" for a whole new generation. She brings a new immediacy to that plaintive hymn about the man in Galilee who can make the wounded whole.

Still. I can tell you all this and it doesn't do any good. Nothing can prepare you for her.

You have been warned.

■ Larkin

CONTINUED FROM PAGE W4.

name with Megan McDonough, Lavin and Sally Fingeretti).

"I think of myself as a songwriter/entertainer," said Larkin, "and I look forward to putting on a good show." Her growing legions of fans and accumulation of awards testify to Larkin's success as a live performer. This will be an awesome show. Get your tickets early, though, because they're hot and wanted.

Patty Larkin will be doing the folk thing at the Iron Horse in Northampton on Friday night. The show begins at 7 p.m. and the doors open at 5:30. Tickets are $10.50 in advance and can be ordered through the Northampton Box Office.

ARTS & LIVING

STUFF MEETING

SUNDAY
CC105, 2PM

"Thank you! for your patronage." The Krupnick Family

4 Seasons
ROUTE 9, HADLEY 584-8174
DISCOUNT LIQUORS • BEER • WINE
KEGS • AND ICE

UMASS FOOTBALL.... THE ONLY THING HOTTER THAN OUR SALES	Purple Passion 1.5 L $3.50
Becks 24/12 oz bott. $16.99 + dep.	Night Train Express 750 ml $2.50
Labatts 24/12 oz bott. $14.99 + dep.	Tango Screwdriver 750 ml $3.50
Busch and Lt. 24/12 oz cans $9.99 + dep.	ICE!! 10 lbs. $1.00 50 lbs. $4.50 1/2 bbl KEGS!! Natural Lt .....32.90 +dep Busch .....38.99 +dep Miller, MGD & Lt 38.99 +dep Plus Many More!! Nobody Beats Our Prices!
Busch Bar Bottles case $9.49 + dep.	Crown Royal 50 ml $13.99
American 24/12 oz cans $7.29 + dep.	Emmets Irish Cream 750 ml $9.99
Narragansett 24/12 oz cans $7.29 + dep.	Amaretto Di Saronno 750 ml $14.49
Fosters Lager 12 pk bott. $8.69 + dep.	Leroux Polish Blackberry 750 ml $7.69
Florida Gator Beer 6 pak bott. $4.69 + dep.	Canadian Club 1.0 L $12.69
Tired of stores with BAD ATTITUDES? At 4 Seasons you'll be treated with gratitude! And . . . WE DELIVER	4 Seasons Vodka 1.75 L $8.99

HOURS Mon-Sat 9-11 • 10% Senior Discount Everyday
Keg deposits Held Up to 30 Days on VISA, MASTERCARD, CHECK, CASH

PIONEER BOWLING CENTER, INC.
2 West Street, West Hatfield
Massachusetts 01088
247-9506
STUDENT SPECIAL
Every night
Call ahead for availability
99¢ per string with 5-College I.D.
Easy To Get To!
A Perfect Night Out For Friends & Dates
300 Club Lounge For Patrons • 21 yrs. w/I.D.

ALLEY OOPS & Miller Lite Live Concert Series present: Syren
Alley Oops
525 PLEASANT STREET NORTHAMPTON
584-2491
Get Your Fraternity & Sorority Party Reservations

Aerobic Instructor Training Program with Vicki Dailey
▪ 8 week program ▪
▪ Choreography ▪
▪ Motivation techniques ▪
▪ Cueing techniques ▪
▪ Safety ▪
▪ Elders ▪ Pregnancy ▪
▪ Nutrition ▪ Anatomy ▪
▪ Instructor training material ▪
▪ Cassette tape ▪
▪ CPR certificate ▪
Employment opportunities upon successful completion of course
Sunderland
Amherst • Deerfield
Call 549-3638 or 773-5851 for interview and audition
Program to be held Saturday, 12-3 pm at ATHLETIC CLUBS of AMERICA
659 Amherst Street
SUNDERLAND: (413) 549-3638
(Formerly Winners Athletic Club)

Smith Hadley's TOWER THEATRES
THE VILLAGE COMMONS • SOUTH HADLEY 538-2663
"A MUST-SEE MOVIE EVENT... stirring, passionate and romantic. It's a knockout!" "THE MOST STUNNING MOVIE OF THE YEAR. ...an instant adventure classic!"
THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS
Fri at 4:10, 6:30, 8:45 / Mon - Thurs at 6:30 and 8:45
Sat and Sun at 2, 4:10, 6:30, 8:45 p.m.
BRAM STOKER'S Dracula A FRANCIS FORD COPPOLA FILM
STARTS FRIDAY 11/13
Fri at 4:25, 6:50, 9:20 / Mon - Thurs at 6:30 and 8:55
Sat and Sun at 2, 4:25, 6:50, 9:20 p.m.

■ Behind the Scenes: The Making of Dracula

CONTINUED FROM FRONT COVER

But still, why another Dracula? Coppola's reply, "No one ever did the book." The fact remains that many of the Dracula stories were based on a Hamilton Deane British stage play and an ensuing American version. The latter starred Bela Lugosi, who would go on to star in the most famous film version.

But the "true" story of Dracula is not purely the popular versions. There is more to Dracula than a horrifyingly grisly Gothic romance, there are elements that speak to the primal nature of myth and of the conflicting attitudes generated by the sexual liberation of repressed women.

In fact, it is not Dracula's effect on women that seems to be a major issue in the story, but the "effect on men of Dracula's effect on women." As George Stade has written, "The prevailing emotion of the novel is a screaming horror of female sexuality."

The image of Dracula has also been challenged over the years. Leonard Wolf, in The Annotated Dracula, writes that the character has become "an overpowering symbol of the crimes of the twentieth century." Dracula is the ultimate sociopath.

Oldman says he saw the character as "a fallen angel, a tortured soul. I don't play him out and out as an evil kind of character. It's a delicious cocktail because you know he is like the devil."

By keeping true to the bloody spirit of the novel, Coppola knew he had an enormous task ahead of him. According to associate Susie Landau, "Francis's ever-present drive to be authentic was very prevalent in this film."

"The biggest problem facing us was producing the film for a reasonable figure," says producer Fred Fuchs. "It's a very, very large movie. There were all of the problems that a movie could ever have: special effects that could have been astronomically expensive; complicated locations; period set dressing; make-up, hair, wardrobe problems."

Early on, according to producers, the idea of shooting on location was abandoned.

Fuchs recalls, "It was both a budgetary and a stylistic decision to shoot the entire picture on sound stages. One, we could control the costs better . . . and two, it would create stylistically a need for an imaginative design to recreate the exteriors and all the different environments for the movie."

This decision, as Coppola says, "opened up the possibility that the approach could be a little adventurous. We could control the settings in an artistic and unusual and beautiful ways that would also give it some freshness."

The freshness expressed itself in another decision to return to effects methods so old, that they are entirely new to today's movie-goers. In a world with sophisticated computer, animated and Terminator 2-style morphing effects, this Dracula is coming from the time of smoke and mirrors; of the first years of cinema trickery exploration.

"We didn't have the budget to compete with the big movies that use electronic and computer effects," says Coppola. "So we decided to do our own, naive effects, and that would give the film an almost mythical soul."

His collaborator was is 27-year-old son Roman, who served as second unit and visual effects director on the film. He studied old silent films and noted the primitive effects that relied on the controlling use of the camera and old magician tricks.

Says Roman Coppola, "Our inspiration was the fact that it would be very unique to use techniques that are inexpensive and fresh and that no one has really seen in a long time. Things as simple as reversing the camera, having things run backward, manipulating the frame of gravity, multiple exposures."

In addition to double exposures and other effects performed in-camera (meaning without post-production special effects work), this Dracula made ample use of 50/50 mirrors, once called "ghost mirrors," devices which allow for effects now usually done in post-production do be done through opticals, and of forced perspective miniatures.

Visual effect supervisor Alison Savitch and special mechanical effects supervisor Michael Lantieri took it from the idea stage to acutal implementation. Savitch took care of all the special or "trick" photography while Lantieri looked after the floor effects, "things done right on the spot, photographed and basically kept the way they are, the sleight of hand and magic."

This stage also held the famous "Esther Williams" tank, where the art department made full use of the space. They created an entire sunken English garden, a maze, a pond, a cemetery, and the entrance to the Westenra family crypt in the huge place.

Stage 21 housed an insane asylum; an ingenious set constructed in an arc, with huge mirrors at either end, creating the optical illusion of a circular room.

But the most overwhelming illusion was created on the huge Stage 15, a football-field-size set that would be used for a thrilling chase, known as Borgo Pass.

The chase had to be accomplished on an essentially oval track built up and around the perimeter of the stage. Illuminated by lighting, pelted by falling "snow" and pushed on by blowing wind, actors, horses and wagons tore around the dirt track as fast as they could manage in a grueling sequence that was gaffed by stunt coordinator Billy Burton, using over 35 horses and 16 stuntmen before it was completed.

Using both cutting edge technology and old-fashioned parlor tricks, this Dracula utilizes not only a thrilling cast but a truly epic story, promising a film of grand scope and terrifying chills.

Enormous and elaborate sets, the likes of which haven't been seen since Batman, and laborious attention to every detail come together in a "symphony of horror." Bram Stoker's Dracula is indeed a lot more than a guy in an bad tux and accent saying "I vant to bite your neck."

WELCOME BACK!
Round Trips from New York Starting at:
CANCUN $ 310
LONDON 330
SAN JOSE C.R. 470
BERLIN 498
WARSAW 625
BANGKOK 949
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change & availability. Call about one ways. We issue EURAIL passes on the SPOT!
STA TRAVEL
79 South Pleasant Street Amherst, MA 01002
256-1261

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE
FRIDAY, OCT. 23
Single Project/Event Grants for music, theater, visual art and design, performance art, literature, film and video, and other arts related events.
PROPOSALS ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
APPLICATIONS GUIDANCE/INFORMATION STOP AT STUDENT ACTIVITIES OFFICE OR UMASS ARTS COUNCIL 209 HASBROUCK OR CALL 545-0202

CHINA GARDEN
"The Collegian's choice in delightful dining"
$2.00 OFF with purchase of $15 or more with this coupon
MSG
Enjoy A Taste of Real Chinese Food
Sunday - Thursday, 11:30-10:00 pm
Friday - Saturday, 11:30am-11:00pm
Lunch Hour: 11:30am-3:30pm 7 days a week
FREE Delivery Service • BYOB
The Valley's only Dim Sum Brunch
• Dim Sum (Chinese Brunch-Mandarin & Cantonese Styles)
Every Day 11:30-3:30
Sample our New Vegetarian Menu
13 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, MA • 253-4280/4281

IT'S NOT LUCK! OUR PRICES ARE LOW EVERYDAY!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
BEER WINE LIQUORS

MILLER GENUINE DRAFT & DRAFT LIGHT CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES $12.49 + DEP.	FRANZIA WINES CHABLIS, BURGUNDY, BLUSH, RHINE, WHITE GRENACHE 5.0 LITER BAG-IN-A-BOX $6.99 AFTER REBATE SALE 8.49 MAIL IN REBATE 1.50
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS $9.99 + DEP.	GALLO WINES WHITE ZINFANDEL, SAUVIGNON BLANC, WHITE GRENACHE $5.49 1.5 L
OLD MILWAUKEE & MILWAUKEE LIGHT $7.49 + DEP. SUITCASE CANS SALE 9.49 MAIL IN REBATE 2.00 AFTER REBATE	FETZER SUNDIAL CHARDONNAY & VALLEY OAKS CABERNET $5.99 750 ML
MEISTERBRAU BEER $7.29 + DEP. CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS	RENE JUNOT RED & WHITE $4.99 1.5 L
COORS WINTERFEST BEER 6 PACK BOTTLES $4.49 + DEP.	MARTINI & ROSSI ASTI SPUMANTE $6.49 750 ML SALE 8.49 MAIL IN REBATE 2.00 AFTER REBATE
BASS ALE 6 PACK BOTTLES $5.49 + DEP.

BLACK VELVET $12.49 1.75L
GORDON'S GIN SALE 13.49 MAIL IN REBATE 3.00 $10.49 1.75L AFTER REBATE
KENNEDY'S BLENDED WHISKEY SALE 10.49 MAIL IN REBATE 1.50 $8.99 1.75L AFTER REBATE
MARTELL VS COGNAC $15.99 750 ML
POLAND SPRING VODKA SALE 8.99 MAIL IN REBATE 2.00 $6.99 1.75L AFTER REBATE

not responsible for typographical errors
OPEN: 9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
• TWO CONVENIENT LOCATIONS •
HADLEY, Campus Plaza/Route 9, 253-9344
HOLYOKE, 30 Lincoln St., 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS 11/12/92 THRU WEDS. 11/18/92
Full Redemption Center

Pow Wow Street

DANCE CLUB
Wednesday - DANCING WITH DJ JOB
Thursday - WHMP EIGHTEEN & OVER DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS R. WHMP broadcasting live.
Friday - DISCO 2000 with DJ JOB and WTIC's Lear Jet
♦ Free Admission Before 10:00pm ♦
♦ Free All Night w/College I.D. ♦
♦ Free pizza courtesy of Foodies ♦
Saturday - THE AREAS BIGGEST & BEST SATURDAY NIGHT DANCE PARTY WITH DJ JOB

LIVE MUSIC...
Thurs., Nov. 12-8:30pm/18+/
SHOCKRA
Borderland
Fri., Nov. 13-8:30pm
Free Rock Friday
BOP HARVEY
Monghani
♦ Free Before 10:00 pm, Free All night with College ID ♦
Sat., Nov. 14-8:30pm
ROOMFUL OF BLUES
Tues., Nov. 17-8:00pm
WRSI Holiday Party I
LOS LOBOS
The Barnstormers
Thurs., Nov. 19-8:30pm/18+/
Record Release Party
BIM SKALA BIM
Chuck
Fri., Nov. 20-8:30pm
Free Rock Friday,
TEXAS FLOOD
(Stevie Ray Vaughn Tribute)
Sat., Nov. 21-7:00pm
WRSI Holiday Party II,
LUCINDA WILLIAMS
Downstairs - 8:30 pm
UMass Night
Bark Like A Dog
One Eyed Jake
Tues., Nov. 24-8:00pm/18+/
"Jump Around"
HOUSE OF PAIN
Fri., Nov. 27-8:30pm
EIGHT TO THE BAR
Mon., Nov. 30-8:00pm/18+/
• Free Show! •
YOTHU YINDI
Thur., Dec. 3-8:30pm/18+/
CHUCKLEHEAD
Sat., Dec. 12-8:30pm
JOHN CAFFERTY & THE BEAVER BROWN BAND
Sun., Dec. 13-8:00pm/Rock, 18+
ARC ANGELS
Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Dynamite Records, For The Record in Amherst, Ticket Pro (800) 828-7080.
10 Pearl Street Northampton • 584-7771

ACRONYMBLE WINNERS

This week's winners have been chosen. The First Prize of an Acronymble board game goes to Alicia Henry, whose noodle was Billy Boy Beat Bush Bad. Second prize of an Acronymble t-shirt goes to Victoria Griffin, whose noodle was Betty Baboon's Bulbous Breasts Bounce. Third prize of an Acronymble poster goes to Amy Redder, whose noodle was Bodacious Boys' Buttocks Beg Biting. All winners should come down to the Collegian newsroom and claim their prizes.

Next week's letters are C, U, T, E and R. Drop them off at the Collegian classifieds desk or send them c/o the Arts Desk, Collegian via campus mail by Wednesday.

Carlos has UMass appeal

BY MICHELE BAKIS
Collegian Staff

Santana
Paramount Theater
Nov.7,1992

Santana's Saturday night performance at the Paramount in Springfield attracted a multitude of people from different generations and backgrounds. Santana was received enthusiastically by the crowd as he arrived on stage. Santana's music had mass appeal and easily excited the crowd. Santana's years of experience were obvious throughout the performance. Carlos Santana, his guitar and the percussion left the audience feeling satisfied.

Latecomers to the concert unfortunately missed the opening band, Third World. A reggae band of exceptional merit, Third World created a comfortable atmosphere. Santana played with Third World for an expressive and truly pleasing jam.

Carlos dedicated "Somewhere in Heaven" to Stevie Ray Vaughn near the beginning of the show. His introduction was followed by gentle guitar solos. There were nice combinations of tempos and smooth transitions throughout the show. In particular, the build up from "Black Magic Woman\Gypsy Queen" made an easy transition to "Oye Como Va" (If you'd like to hear this, get your hands on Abraxas. It's on the first side.) It slowed down slightly before the faster paced encore.

The highlight of the show was the energetic "Exodus" jam. Few could remain in their seats during this Bob Marley classic. Third World joined Santana for this reggae piece. Other Santana classics were a favorite part of the show. I was personally impressed with the authenticity of the band's vigor during this part of the show.

The extensive percussion section for this concert included Walfredo Reyes on drums, Raul Rekow on congas, and relative newcomer Carl Perazzo on timbales. The drum solos were not only astounding to listen to but also to watch. Their speed and incredible output of energy seemed exhausting but they never slowed down. Endurance must be a prerequisite for joining the band. Santana was also accompanied briefly by some children playing a variety of hand held percussion instruments. Always a crowd pleaser.

The people exiting the theater, at least the ones near me, were extremely pleased with the show. One man exclaimed that he was so happy with the performance that he was willing to give them more money. It was an overall outstanding performance, to be expected from veteran classic rockers. If you had the misfortune of missing this performance, be certain to catch a later show. Santana won't let you down.

SONY • JVC • TECHNICS • AIWA • PANASONIC • SHARP • TDK • MAXELL
STEREO BLUES?
UNDERGROUND SOUND CAN HELP
UNDERGROUND SOUND has been an expert, cost effective repair service for home audio, car audio, video components and musical instrument amplifiers since 1981. We also sell new and used components and install car audio systems at competitive rates. Stop Procrastinating—Get It Fixed—Listen To Music—Be Happy.
UNDERGROUND SOUND • 103 NORTH PLEASANT STREET, AMHERST, MA • 253-9507
WE ARE LOCATED BENEATH PANDA EAST RESTAURANT

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful Newly remodeled Facility • Sunny Greenhouse • Sushi Bar • Beautiful Lounge with Big Screen TV.
Serving Lunch & Dinner 7 days a week • Lunch Specials served daily
"Largest Chinese Restaurant in Hampshire County"
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30AM-10PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS TILL 11PM
WITH COUPON 10% OFF DINING ROOM OR CARRY OUT • DINNER • ONLY
EVERY MONDAY THROUGH THURSDAY IN OUR LOUNGE 4PM-7PM, ENJOY
Happy Hour
$2.00 Appetizers from our special menu • $1.00 Draft Beer
Delivery Now Available through Delivery Express at 549-0077
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte. 9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte. 9 & University Dr. • 256-8800

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
MIKE'S
WEEKLY SPECIAL
$3.00 Pitchers • 50¢ Drafts
$1.50 Gin & Tonic
Thursday--FREE APPETIZERS 9:00-10:30
Wings, potato skins, chicken fingers, etc.
Friday--All You Can Eat Buffet $2.00
Try our Sunday Brunch 11:30-1:30 • ALL-YOU-CAN-EAT $3.99
sausage, bacon, ham, roast beef, eggs, hash browns, quiche, french toast, assorted muffins, danish and desserts
Pitchers of Mimosas $5.50 • Bloody Marys $2.00

ATTENTION, STUDENTS!
1993 OUTSTANDING ACADEMIC ADVISOR AWARD NOMINATIONS
Do you know an academic advisor whom you consider to be outstanding?
Would you like to see that individual recognized?
If so,why not nominate them for the 1993 Outstanding Academic Advisor Award?!
Your written nomination may include, but is not limited to, the following effective advising qualities and practices:
✔ demonstration of a caring attitude toward advisees;
✔ effective interpersonal skills;
✔ availability to and frequency of contact with advisees;
✔ proactive behavior designed to build strong relationships with students;
✔ monitoring of student progress toward academic and career goals;
✔ mastery of institutional regulations, policies and procedures;
✔ use of appropriate information sources;
✔ appropriate referral activity;
✔ ability to engage in developmental advising (career and life planning) in addition to advising on degree progress; and ✔ colleagues' perception of the nominee's advising skills.
Submit nominations by Monday, December 14, 1992 to:
Yvonne Morand, Chair
Outstanding Academic Advisor Selection Committee
College of Food and Natural Resources Advising Office
110 Stockbridge Hall
Supporting letters must be received at the same address by January 15, 1993.

It REALLY works!
COLLEGIAN ADVERTISING
545-3500

The University of Massachusetts
Department of Theater
presents

Women of Trachis
by Sophocles
a new translation
by Robert Bagg
November 12-14
and 18-21
8:00 p.m.
Rand Theater
Tickets: 545-2511
Fine Arts Center
Box Office

Friday November 12, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 46

Very windy and cold, wind gusts up to 40 mph.

Arts:
Mr. Lupo looks at Jennifer Eight, the new thriller starring Andy Garcia and Uma Thurman, and Passenger 57, starring Wesley Snipes. Page 7.

Sports:
The UMass field hockey and women's soccer teams are one victory away from the NCAA Final Four. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Marxist ideas discussed at UM conference

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press

Marxist scholars at an international conference Thursday said their ranks are swelling as researchers pursue socialist ideas that languished for decades in the shadow of the Soviet model.

"It's now a bloom time for Marxism, as it was before 1917," declared Richard Wolff, an economist for the University of Massachusetts. "It's time to make up for. . . lost time."

He was speaking outside the three-day conference that opened Thursday at the state campus. More than 500 scholars, artists and activists from around the country and other lands, including Brazil and Germany, signed up for 130 discussion panels on "Rethinking Marxism," sponsored by a quarterly academic journal of that name.

The participation more than doubled that of the last such conference at the campus in 1989, before the collapse of the Soviet Union. Organizers said other recent U.S. conferences on socialism have also grown.

Free from the taint of what President Reagan called "the Evil Empire," researchers say they are pursuing several socialist strains different from totalitarian state set up by the Soviets after the 1917 Revolution.

They include local worker control of means of production, heavier national regulation of competitive markets, and Marxism as a tool for critiquing capitalism and reshaping understanding of the social processes.

"I think it's fair to say that the central planning model of communism has collapsed," said Steve Cullenberg, an economist at the University of California at Riverside. "Now I think people are interested in putting forward other ideas ... like economic democracy in cooperatively managed firms."

He also said many Marxists favor the strictly regulated competition of the socialist democracies of Northern Europe as a step in the right direction.

"The idea that socialism, communism and Marxism was associated for years with the Soviet Union, for many people here, was a joke," said Jack Amariglio, editor of the New York City-published "Rethinking Marxism."

Turn to MARX, page 6

Jeffries addresses UMass, cites 'paralysis of analysis'

By YVETTE BAEZ
Collegian Staff

The long awaited, controversial Dr. Leonard Jeffries spoke last night at Mahar Auditorium. After much publicity and protest, Dr. Jeffries spoke over three hours last night, with the main focus being "The Challenge of Africa..."

Protestors outside Mahar chanted, "Unite, Not Divide!" Student members of Hillel organized to boycott the allocation of student funds to bring Jeffries to UMass.

"We are against the things Jeffries stands for. Anyone who promotes bigotry does not deserve to speak on student funds", said Rachel Grose, a senior interior design major at UMass.

Five hundred students and faculty of all colors and nationalities filled the auditorium last night to hear his alleged "anti-semetic" and "gay-bashing" statements. Many left two and a half hours later disappointed that he did not focus on these controversial issues.

Dr. Jeffries, in a brief press conference before the lecture, clarified the allegations against him being an anti-semite. He began by stating that, "There is a major controversy nationally on the curriculum in education. We are victorious and making changes."

Jeffries said the struggle has never been focused on Anti-Semitism, that his being an Anti-semite is a

Turn to JEFFRIES, page 2

Students' reaction positive, prof. quells controversy

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

Despite the large amount of media attention preceding Dr. Leonard Jeffries' lecture last night, many students who attended said they felt his speech wasn't as controversial as they expected.

Mike Poster, speaker of the Undergraduate Student Senate, said, "I admit I was reluctant to have Jeffries come to the [University of Massachusetts], but I'm glad

Turn to REACTION, page 4

SETH KAYE / COLLEGIAN
Dr. Leonard Jeffries, a professor of Black studies at City College of New York, addresses the media at an impromptu press conference before his speech Thursday in Mahar Auditorium. For security reasons, Jeffries would not allow camera equipment or tape recoders inside the auditorium during his speech.

People behind the 'tintinnabulation of the bells'

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

When Ken Samonds, a professor of nutrition, first came to the University of Massachusetts, he would walk by the Chapel and think of when he played the bells at the Mission Hill Church. He wanted to bring the campus community together with the sound of chimes, just as he did in Boston.

About five years ago, Samonds, and University students and staff got together to clean the nine nearly 60-year-old bells that had not been used in at least 15 years. The chimes were given to the University in 1934 in memory of Warren Elmer Hinds by the class of 1899. There is also a huge swinging bell that is pulled on the hour.

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
Ken Sammonds, left, Professor of Nutrition and Jim Olsen, right, a senior HRTA major pose with the bells they ring daily in the top of the Old Chapel

"We found out that we missed the [swinging bell's] 100 year anniversary [June 22, 1892]," Samonds said. "We found out it is as old as the Campus pond."

Jim MacRostie, who is head of University production services, was directly involved in the restoration of the bells. Samond said MacRostie was the one who got him involved in playing the campus bells.

In addition to refurbishing the chimes, the group moved the 23 electronic bells that were played with a keyboard from the chapel to the top of the Main Library. The electronic bells were blocking the movement of the pull bells. In the middle of the Winter when the bell tower is extremely cold, the electronic bells are used.

"Most bell players prefer the real thing," said Dick Natorst, who works at the Physical Plant.

And so Samonds and others decided they would voluntarily endure the heat, the freezing temperatures, the leaking chapel roof, the pigeon feathers, the pigeon doo-doo, and the loneliness to serenade the University; the Quasimodo Qlub was formed.

"Most people think the bells are played mechanically and not by a human in the tower, Samonds said. "So we make a mistake every so often, to let people know there is someone playing the bells."

Jim Olson, who is a senior hotel restaurant and travel administration major, has been playing the bells for two years on a daily basis. He said he has to be careful when he plays the bells, so he does not disturb the classes in the surrounding buildings.

"I try to ring the bells every day," Olson said. "I vary it between noon and 4 p.m."

In addition to being careful when to play, the Qlub said they want a wide selection of music reflecting different cultures and time periods. Olson said he plays Handel Trumpets, Prince of Denmark, and music taken from Westminister Chimes to be played before the hour, in addition to music from the Phantom of the Opera and the Sound of Music.

"When Archbishop Desmond Tutu was here we played Nkosi Sikelel Iafrica [the South African national anthem]," Olson said. "I always end with When Twilight Shadows Deepen [the school song]. I have to be careful not to play too many religious songs. I try to play things that are not going to offend anyone."

"If you think you have a tune you want

Turn to BELLS, page 4

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

■ Jeffries

continued from page 1

"trumped-up" charge. His main focus is to integrate Africa into education.

When asked about promoting racism, he replied, "You cannot inflame racism anymore in this country. Racism is as apple pie as anything in America."

The lecture itself was preceeded by poetry readings by Nikki Blair and Michael Ladd.

Dr. Jeffries, in his introduction, began, "We faked Anti-Jewishness just to make sure we got a good crowd." Jeffries, who has been here in the past, attributed the larger turnout to the controversy that has surrounded him.

He focused on institutionalized racism and how communities of color can rise above it, if not combat it. He urged African-Americans, Native- Americans, Latinos and Asians to acquire a "systems analysis", to gather, process and understand information, and to then synthesize it.

Jeffries added that too many people suffer from "paralysis of analysis", that prevents them from understanding "the truth that will set you free".

His lecture centered around challenging mainstream historical perspectives. Jeffries stated that "Greece was not the beginning of culture and civilization of humankind."

He said it would have been impossible since the Great Pyramids had been built thousands of years before in Egypt, prior to the "Golden Age of Greece". He also criticized the Catholic Church for initiating and sustaining the enslavement of Africans for hundreds of years.

Jeffries closed by urging students to challenge their faculty and the curriculum. He suggested students form study groups and forums to re-educate themselves.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Friday, November 13

Sabbath Dinner — A Sabbath Dinner will be held at the Hillel House at 5:30. This is an informal dinner preceded by the traditional prayers. Come as you are. Three dollar donation requested.

Meeting — Muslim Students Association is holding Jumaa Salat at 12:30 pm in Campus Center Room 803.

Clothing Collection — A clothing collection will take place at the First Congretional Church of Amherst at 165 Main St. from 8 am to 8 pm. On that day, children's winter clothing will be collected. Items that are in great demand include winter coats, jackets, boots, and mittens.

Oxfam Campaign — Students at UMass can join Oxfam's national campaign to combat hunger and poverty by donating their dinner at the Dining Commons between Nov. 13-17. Forms will be given at the D.C. by the cashiers. Sponsored by Masspirg.

Saturday, November 14

Fools Cafe — The Unitarian Society of Northampton will feature Jay Ducharme. The event will be held from 8 pm to 11 pm with open mike sign up by 7:30 pm. All donations will go to the Unitarian Homeless Fund.

Special Event — The Cape Verdean night will take place from 6pm to 2 am in the Bluewall. The event is free.

Meeting — The Muslim Students Association (undergraduate chapter) is holding its first organizational meeting and elections. Magrib Salat at 4:30 pm with a meeting to follow. Refreshments will be served and the event will take place in Campus Center room 904-908.

Clothing Pick Up — For those in need of winter clothing, the First Congretional Church of Amherst is making clothing available at the Main St. location near the Police Station from 9am to 1pm. Those interested in additional information or wishing to volunteer can contact 549-7433

Sunday, November 15

Learning Group — The Chabad House will host a weekly Jewish women's learning group every Sunday at 8pm. All women are welcome to join as they explore the Jewish prayer book.

Induction Ceremony — A Golden Key National Honor Society induction ceremony will be held from 1pm to 4:30 pm in the Campus Center Auditorium. The event is free.

RECYCLE THIS COLLEGIAN IN THE BLUE BARREL
YOU WILL MUCH FEEL BETTER AFTER

NBA at the TOP
Don't miss the action!
76ers v. Celtics
Tonight at 7:30 pm
TOP of the CAMPUS LOUNGE
11th Floor • Campus Center
UMass at Amherst
Mon.-Fri.: 2:00 pm-12:30 am
Sat. & Sun.: 5:00-12:30 am

"I got mine at Zanna!"

ZANNA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563

DOMINO'S PIZZA
NOBODY KNOWS LIKE DOMINO'S
How You Like Pizza At Home.
Amherst 256-8911
South Hadley 535-1111
HOURS: SUN-THURS 11AM to 2AM
FRI-SAT 11AM to 3AM
AVAILABLE FOR CARRY-OUT OR DELIVERY
FREE DELIVERY
NOW ACCEPTING ON DELIVERY IN SELECTED AREAS
LUNCH SPECIAL
GOOD 11AM to 3PM
MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA+
ONE TOPPING+
2 FREE COKES
ONLY $5.99
LARGE CHEESE PIZZA
ONE TOPPING PLUS
4 FREE COKES
ONLY $7.99
BUY A LARGE CHEESE PIZZA FOR THE PRICE OF A SMALL
MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA for $4.99 or 2 for $8.99
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA & GET SECOND OF EQUAL OR LESSER VALUE FOR ONLY $1.99
LARGE CHEESE PIZZA $5.99

Local News

African-American and Jewish ties explored

By EMILY GOLD
Collegian Correspondent

In order to provide a positive outlook on a campus with severe tensions between students of different races two organizations sponsored speakers panels last night, where the history of the oppression and the relationship between African-Americans and Jews was discussed.

"To talk only one aspect is to falsify history. It's dishonest."
– Professor John Bracey

In the panel, sponsored by the Black Mass Communication Project and Hillel's Black/Jewish Relations committee, English Professor James Young discussed the importance of Kristalnacht and the Holocaust today, while African American studies professor John Bracey spoke about the history of African American and Jewish relations.

"It offers people a positive and educational forum where they can get the perspective of different cultures," said senior African-American studies major Steve Sparling, chairperson of the Black/Jewish Relations committee.

Young began the panel by discussing the importance of remembering past events of oppression.

"Right now, some 50 years later, it's not what happened on Kristalnacht [an event in the Holocaust] that matters, but how it's looked at now," said Young. "The only reason I spend so much time thinking about it is so I know how to respond to present crises."

According to Young, Jews learn from the Holocaust because the events were recorded, while Blacks lost a large amount of their history because they were not permitted do this.

"We have a giant amount of Jewish literature about the Holocaust," said Young. "Africans were forbidden by law to read or write, [which led to] 300 years of history that went completely unrecorded."

In the relationship between Blacks and Jews, Bracey stressed that only a small portion of the history is commonly discussed.

"To talk only about one aspect is to falsify the history. It's dishonest," said Bracey.

According to Bracy, during the slave trade, civil rights movement, and other historical periods, Jews, like all other groups, took differing stands, making it impossible to generalize their role.

"There were Jewish slave holders. They were not the majority of slave holders. If anyone says that Jews dominated the slave trade, that's foolishness. Jews in the South supported slavery, Jews in the North were abolitionists. You can't make a conclusion one way or another."

Questions followed the lectures; most concerning Leonard Jeffries' predicted effect on campus.

"I can't take seriously anyone speaking who doesn't have any power," said Bracey, referring to Jeffries.

"It's important to distinguish between the controversy someone stirs up and the credibility," added Young. "The best way to arm ourselves is to educate ourselves."

Rethinking Columbus

Course offers alternative 1492 theory

By KIRSTEN ANDELMAN
Collegian Correspondent

For Americans who have been "educated" since kindergarten on the heroic feats and accomplishments of Christopher Columbus, this decade is making history as the one in which more and more people are beginning to seperate the myths of the Spanish explorer from the reality.

At the forefront of this crusade against what many believe is the inhumanity of "celebrating genocide" are the protests, dialogue and recent building occupations that are so often the vital disruptions required to change the system.

In fact, student protests spurred the UMass administration into renaming Columbus Day for campus use at negotiations last weekend between students and top campus officials.

On the curriculum level, some recognition is being reached as well. This fall, anthropology professor Bob Paynter is teaching a course entitled Worlds of 1492 to "provide the intellectual framework necessary to refute all of this misinformation."

Professor Paynter's theory is based on the premise that what happened in 1492 marks the beginning of a new way of living in the world and he hopes that his course will help his students gain an understanding of the resultant "global consequences."

When they arrived in the New World, Paynter believes, the Europeans spurred the exploitation of the natives in order to reap economic benefits. What is now the West Indies and southern United States was replete with sugarcane and other crops whose possible value necessitated the use of fast, cheap labor.

The Europeans were quick to utilize the "uncivilized" natives as slaves, Paynter says. While there were initially over 100 million of these natives, the disease and murder imposed by the Europeans quickly reduced that number by approximately 90 percent.

It was this sudden demand for profit-maintaining slave labor that led the Europeans to go to Africa and begin the African slave trade. "The repercussions of the African Slave trade give us what is now institutionalized racism," said Paynter.

In addition to the exploitation of indigenous peoples, Paynter argues that this was coupled with their theft of massive amounts of gold from the Aztecs, placing Europeans a great distance ahead in their battle for world domination.

Paynter believes the reexamination of Columbus should be the precursor of something much larger and crucially necessary.

"Our society of intense racial tensions is not just a normal manifestation of human-nature laws dictating that different races will want to compete," Paynter said.

ANGIE POPOVICH / COLLEGIAN
Robert Paynter, UMass Anthropology professor

Driver cited in accident

Charged on two misdemeanor counts

The driver in a vehicle who struck two University of Massachusetts undergraduates, leaving them hospitalized, has been cited on two counts by University police.

Noreen Murray, 20, a UMass undergraduate, was cited on two misdemeanor counts: failing to stop for pedestrians in a crosswalk and operating to endanger. A car driven by Murray struck Carrie Crossland and Jennifer Coughlin on University Drive Nov. 2.

The citations were issued as a result of a joint investigation of the UMass police and a State police accident reconstruction team, according to Danny Chung, a University spokesman.

Crossland, 18, of Cance Residence Hall, is still in critical condition at Baystate Medical Center in Springfield. She is in the hospital's Intensive Care Unit. Coughlin, 18, of Mackimmie Residence Hall, is currently listed in fair condition.

The two were crossing University Drive at 6:40 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 2 when they were struck in the northbound lane. Both suffered serious injuries and were taken directly to the Trauma Unit at Baystate. Witnesses noted visibility was limited and that a light rain was falling at the time of the accident. One witness noted the car driven by Murray "skidded into them."

University officials would not comment on the nature of the investigation or on its findings because the details are to be used in court proceedings.

– GREG SUKIENNIK

Federal panel will discuss GLB youth

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

A federal panel will be on campus today to discuss the perils facing gay, lesbian, and bisexual youth. Testimony will be given by educators, youth and clergy.

The Northwest Massachusetts Regional Public Hearings will be in the campus center to find solutions to the multitude of problems gays, lesbians and bisexuals face.

The Governor's Commission on Gay and Lesbian Youth and the Governor's Advisory Committee on Women's Issues are combining to host the first in a series of five conferences to be held in Massachusetts.

Panelists will be discussing the disproportionate number of suicides among GLB youth. Luann Conaty, a member of the Governor's Commission on Gay and Lesbian Youth, said, "We plan to hear the testimony and make recommendations to Governor Weld about programs in schools, and other ways to reduce discrimination."

The commission is also looking for testimony from GLB youths about troubles they've had in their schools. They'd like to hear about any prob-

Turn to PANEL, page 4

Lecture probes U.S.-European relations

By SAMUEL KENNEDY
Collegian Correspondent

"The United States and Europe are at a stage of great tension to say the least," Richard Kauzlarich, Minister-Counselor in the Senior Foriegn Service, said last night during a lecture at the University of Massachusetts.

Kauzlarich, who started with the Foreign Service in 1967, said that U.S. relations with Europe are facing the most radical shift since World War Two because of the economic recession on both continents, the political volatility in Central and Eastern Europe, the breakup of the Soviet Union, the upcoming Danish vote on a common European market and the social disruption in Western Europe.

Kauzlarich explained to an audience of about 50 that European farm subsidies keep prices unfairly low in world markets, and a trade war may ensue if the European Community does not change policies by December 5, President Bush's deadline.

Although the U.S. currently has a 20 billion dollar trade surplus with Europe, a world trade policy needs to be developed to prevent trade barriers which stunt economic growth, according to Kauzlarich.

"Europeans perceive a U.S. military presence as a positive force," Kauzlarich said, and the question now is how many troops are needed.

He said the military presence is required to ensure human rights and democracy, to prevent general instability and to ensure access to developing Central and Eastern European markets.

The U.S. is increasingly concerned with the threat of instability especially since Boris Yeltsin announced that he would not be removing troops from the Baltics, according to Kauzlarich.

There is also a threat of Yougoslavian war spreading into surrounding countries, he said.

While Americans debate over the need for military presence in Europe, the U.S. government will lobby the European Community for increased cooperation in a peace keeping force, Kauzlarich said, and the real challenge will be selling Americans on continued spending on troops in Europe, even if that spending is reduced.

The U.S. is willing to support Russia as demonstrated with the Freedom Support Act which Bush signed last June, Kauzlarich siad, but the question remaining is what does Russia want.

Russian politicians fear that the U.S. wants to weaken their military strength and that a close relationship with the U.S. would be a subordinate one, Kauzlarich said.

Russia's economic depression stems from their inability to quickly privatize businesses, he said, and also from the U.S. and other Western nations' failure to end trade barriers against Russia's agricultural, textile and steal industries.

"Economic reform without democratic change will not work in any of these newly formed states," Kauzlarich said.

Of the thirteen independent states formed from the former Soviet Union, the U.S. must not overlook the smaller for they also offer markets for American products, Kauzlarich said.

reaction

continued from page 1

Turn the SGA decided to help fund his visit."

The SGA voted to loan the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity $1,000 on Nov. 4.

Doug Greer, president of the Phi Beta Sigma said he felt Jeffries' speech cleared up many of the rumors which stated he was an anti-Semite.

Greer said he wished the Jewish student demonstrators outside Mahar would have come in to listen to Jeffries' lecture. "I think the [Jewish] students could have gotten a clearer understanding of Jeffries if they had given him the chance to explain himself," he said.

Josh Slomich, president of Hillel, said the Jewish students were protesting Jeffries because they believe he is an anti-Semite. "Since Phi Beta Sigma invited Jeffries to speak on campus, they are not serious about fighting racism," he said.

Jeffries made a widely-quoted speech two years ago which blamed "rich Jews" for financing the slave trade and the Mafia for negative portrayals of Blacks in movies.

Celeste Wright, a junior history major, said she was disappointed that most of the White students who attended the lecture left before it was over. "Most of the White students were more interested in creating an argument with Jeffries than they were about learning new things," she said.

Daniel Jokelson, a Jewish resident of Amherst, said he doesn't believe Jeffries is an anti-Semite. "I believe he expresses anger towards some people such as the Jews, but that's because they, along with many other people, were involved in oppressing people of color," he said.

Nelson Acosta, director of the Third World Affairs, said he felt Jeffries did an eloquent job clarifying the negative image the media had projected of him.

"He is painted as an evil man, but I got the feeling that he is an educator with a deep commitment to resolving the history of the people of color," Acosta said.

bells

continued from page 1

us to play, just give us the music and we will play it," Natorst said.

Through pulling down the pedals which are attached to belts that pull the bells' rope, tunes can be played. Because there are only nine bells, it is difficult to play a wide variety of songs. Yet Olson said they sometimes rewrite the music to a different key, so they can play it on the chimes.

After the UMass basketball team would win a game last semester, Samonds said he would be waiting in the bell tower to play the chimes.

"I am always in the tower listening to a portable radio, so I can start clanging away [right after a game]," Samonds said.

"We do it because we enjoy it. We feel it holds a feeling of unity on campus. This gives people a thing to identify the campus with," Olson said.

And Samonds said he would like to see more people become interested in the old bells in the bell tower.

"We could use a few more student bell ringers. It is not very hard," Samonds said. "I would like someone to give a carolyne [set of 40 bells]. We hope people will come in and take would a look around."

panel

continued from page 3

lems with state or private agencies.

Other perils facing these youth are those of substance abuse, HIV/AIDS risk, harassment and violence. These stories will be reviewed at the testimony and steps will be made to address the needs of lesbian, bisexual and gay youth.

Leslie Tarr Laurie is the co-chair of the Governor's Advisory Committee on Women's Issues. This is the only hearing that the Committee on Women's Issues will be attending.

"The suicide of gay and lesbian youth is a national epidemic. These teens are faced with depression and a host of other issues," she said. They will also be making suggestions to Governor Weld on ways to improve school education and to support GLB youth.

The hearings will run today from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. in room 917 of the Campus Center.

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湘園南湖

The Best Chinese Buffet

MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE

WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY

Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15

NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH

Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.

Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm

ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50

Children under 10 - $3.50

Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25

All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup

TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU

10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

SILVER EARRINGS • INCENSE • TAPESTRIES • JOURNALS • DRESSES • RINGS • BELTS

STONE CARVINGS • TOYS

THE MERCANTILE HAS COLORFUL SWEATERS IN WOOL AND COTTON!

THE MERCANTILE

AMHERST • CARRIAGE SHOPS • 549-1596

NORTHAMPTON • 16 CENTER ST • 584-1205

MON-SAT 10-6 SUN 12-5 HAMP. THURS TO 9

• CANDLES • T-SHIRTS • JEWELRY • BAGS • POUCHES • BASKETS

Winter Session 1993

Yes, you can!
Yes, you can!
So, do it!

Register for Winter Session classes.

Special enrollment restrictions do not apply for Winter Session.

So, if you're a UMass student, all you have to do is just sign up.

WINTER SESSION:

- a unique "mini-semester," just three weeks long
- earn 3 academic credits in only 3 weeks
- over 100 credit courses, including gen. ed. designated classes

Your chance to:

- take a class you couldn't get before
- make up credits
- meet graduation requirements
- lighten your spring course load

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.

Catalogs available on campus or at the Division of Continuing Education, 6th floor Goodell.

January 4-25

BELFAST EXPOSED

NOVEMBER 16-18

Hampden Theater • UMass Amherst

Monday, Nov. 16 Exhibition Viewing 3-6pm
7pm "Irish Ways" video, a retrospective of developments in Northern Ireland over the past 20 years.

Tuesday, Nov. 17 Exhibtion Viewing 11:30am-6:30pm
7pm "Inside Belfast", slides and guest speaker DANNY BURKE, "Belfast Exposed" photojournalist.

Wednesday, Nov. 18 Exhibition Viewing 11:30am-6:30pm

"Belfast Exposed" is a presentation of the "Northern Ireland Report", and is sponsored by Residential Arts, UMass Arts Council, SACEF, UMass Solidarity, STPEC and PAWSS.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Pornography: a how-to guide

I'll bet the last time you picked up a Playboy or Penthouse magazine you didn't realize that you were supporting an industry bent on the destruction of women.

Pornography is a multi-million dollar business that uses the supreme humiliation and degradation of women to turn a profit. It includes the forementioned magazines and extends to videos, triple-X theaters and song lyrics.

Stephanie
EISENBERG

Pornography is the malicious destruction of women by a male dominated society. It is one of the most profitable industries in this country, and due to its wide profit margin the health and welfare of women is ignored. Women are viewed as men's objects, as it is an industry that buys and sells women.

Pornography depicts and encourages the exploitation of women, while furthering the chauvinistic view that females are mere sex toys. It is perhaps the biggest challenge that women face in this country, therefore the hardest to overcome.

Pornography teaches that when women say "no" they mean "yes." It further says that "yes" not only applies to sex but is a "yes" to violence, pain and defamation. It sends the message that submission and violence are acceptable as long as they are sexualized.

Pornography sets the standards for female sexuality and presents images that "real" women are supposed to live up to. It portrays these types of sexual activities as ones that should be included in the realm of "normal sexual activities." It is also perhaps the first view many boys have into the world of sex, and it shows them that this type of oppression is not only acceptable but is normal, and thereby expected.

Most forms of pornography include racist or anti-Semitic scenes used to further the image of the woman's fear and the man's supreme power. It also shows that hatred, violence and subordination are okay, if they are sexualized.

Many feel that by censoring pornography, First Amendment rights are being violated. The basic fundamental rights of women are being violated. Pornography has been proven to inadvertently promote rape, sexual assault and other sex-related hate crimes. As all of these directly endanger a woman's health and well being, they should come before those backwards First Amendment laws.

Pornography is basically a how-to manual. It details the torture and degradation of women so graphically that it can easily be replicated. It promotes so much violence that it has come to endanger women's health while threatening their sexuality.

So, the next time you decide to "support the industry," imagine how your girlfriend would feel if she knew you were systematically learning how to humiliate, torture and destroy a woman — bet she wouldn't be too happy.

Stephanie Eisenberg is a UMass student.

'Not with a bang, but a whimper'

When I grow up I want to persecute large masses of people.

No, I don't really. But how else am I going to make history?

So instead I'll be a Black man and walk down the street so I can be harassed and arrested for committing a first-time violent (or is it non-violent?) offense. Then Bill can stick me in a boot camp and tell me how to be a Good Black Man, and maybe then I'll learn more useful things, like how to kill foreigners without a conscience.

Nathan
CRICK

Or I could be White and try real hard to understand just what the hell is going on because someone forgot to tell me. People could yell at me for contributing to violence and I'd keep walking, wondering if they're right and silently wishing everyone would just take a couple pills and relax. Then I'd feel guilty.

Or maybe I'll be some invisible voice over the media promoting a cultural revolution against those who brainwash us while I condemn those who don't agree with everything I say. Then I'd could be on the moral high ground because I'm promoting tolerance.

So I used to go to high school dances and feel even more stupid pretending I knew how to dance. It was a community thing, trying to look the least stupid jumping around on the cafeteria floor while an annoying deejay yelled "Do you guys know how to party?" over the microphone. He might as well be asking us do we know why life exists.

I used to be best friends with a kid when I was six. In seventh grade, Mr. Gibbons asked him a question and he proceeded to tear off his shirt and rip it up into several pieces and then walk out of class for no apparent reason. It's the last time I remember seeing him. He's probably dead now. Oh, but he used to play a mean game of trucks.

"We have just made the world safe for democracy! Good has defeated evil!" We certainly are a funny race. Just can't stop kidding around. A New World Order? Stop it guys, you're killing me.

I want to be an Air Force Ranger. I want to fly through the sky and drop things on people. Like Santa Claus.

Do you ever wonder what people would really rather be doing besides driving down a highway and forcing others to read the lies on the back of their car?

Going to Boston really makes you realize how small we all are in the mass of human civilization. "Got a spare dime on a cold night? Thank you man, thank you for caring." While I was there a friend of mine was walking home and saw a guy bounce off the hood of a car while crossing the street. He got up and kept walking. Can your turtle do that too, Mr. Steinbeck?

I think of "Jacob's Ladder" every time I walk into a T station. It bothers me to realize that my life could be resting on the unstable sanity of the man who just sat across from me. I hate being mortal. Hell, I might as well be Jesus. What does he care?

I wonder what it's like to play God? Maybe too many of us know the answer to that already. You'd think by now they'd have made a board game out of it. I wonder how many players would have been naive enough to give us another shot at the apple?

"I'd Rather be Persecuting Large Masses of People."

We have lingered in the chambers of the sea, by sea-girls wreathed in seaweed red and brown, till human voices wake us. . .

So the day has grown long, and I am left to scribble hopeless thoughts on the walls of the subway. Does that make me a prophet now? My grandmother never scribbled anything on a subway wall, and I think she's one of the wisest people I know. She makes a killer pasta too. I think if she was going to write anything, it would be that she would die happy if her grandchildren enjoyed her cooking. What more is there? False dreams and deceptions?

She never owned a bumper sticker.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

Butterfield residents are unjustly accused

We here at Butterfield love. We are a harmonious community; we are a friendly, accepting group of true individuals. If one were to make any generalization about Butterfield, the only honest one is that we are sensitively individualistic. And believe us as we claim this individuality not to be arrogant or chauvinistic. To prove, we would like you — the reader — to witness us, the ones who have signed this letter, momentarily laying down our individuality, for the sake of truth, reason and honesty. We even beg you to make a generalization about us through this letter, if such an act were only to shatter one, recent, monstrous generalization about us: that we are somehow intolerant.

Perhaps Housing Services does not realize that we people at Butterfield are people; that is, we have feelings.

We hurt when accused of something we have not done. We fly our flag for personal reasons. . . personal reasons which we should not be forced into revealing, any more than a man must publicly admit his size. But we are forced. Kicked down, flat on our stomachs, limbs splayed, we are subjected to a hateful interrogation which rapes our integrity, our dignity and even our humanity.

This is not to say that our flag is wrapped around some dark mystery cult. Nay, we should have explained the flag in our own individual ways — that the flag is flying with the winds of compassion — if only a compassionate person had approached us, with the respectful inquiry. Tana G. Henderson did not approach us with compassion or respect. She attacked us with a closed, hateful mind. Ditto for Housing Services. Those "services," parading hypocritically under compassion and respect, are jam-pakced with bigoted dynamite. Bigotry and hatred. Ms. Henderson's letter blatantly insinuated that Butterfield was nothing short of in league with the White Aryan Resistance movement. As if such a powerfully horrible topic could rightly be thrown around for one's own manipulative purposes! Therefore, we were of course hurt, and are still hurting. Those housing services pounced on us with Nazi-like, cruel tactics, without warning — like a blitzkrieg — and stole our precious emblem. Stole it.

We are the family who has gone on vacation and, upon returning to our house, our home, have found it violated by thieves. Yes, we have found, to our shock, our family treasure gone.

If we were a traditional, societally-sanctioned family living in a traditional home, we could go to the police, demanding justice when our home has been violated. But where can we untraditionals go? To whom can Nazi-branded, hippy-branded, criminal-branded people turn? My friends, to whom can we turn?

T. Renn Trader
Francis M. Tokarski III
Central

This letter was signed by 43 Butterfield residents.

Leasing the University Store?

Our school is now investigating leasing our University store to Barnes & Nobles, an off campus private company. This makes you wonder what's going on in the administrators' heads. It comes down to money.

If the University Store is sold, the buyer will purchase all the inventory on hand. This is a one time pump of cash into the system.

In my three years at UMass I have never had any problem at the University Store, except for long lines to buy books. If an outside company runs the store, they look for dollars. If the University runs the store, service is the goal. Will prices and quality go up or down? The campus community needs to be involved in this decision. One way to get info is to go to a Campus Center Board of Governors meeting on Thursday nights at 6 p.m. Another might be to speak with the Campus Center Director. However, if we don't do anything, who knows what will happen.

Dan Gordon
At-large governor of the Campus Center

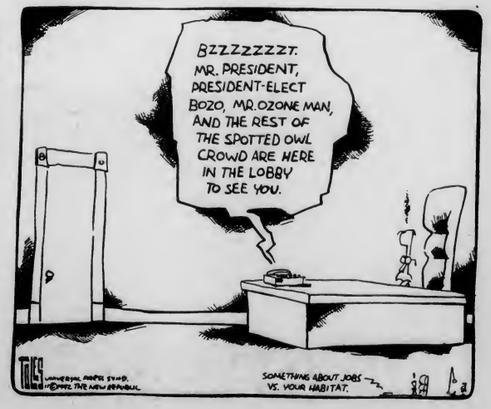
Cheap shots don't open minds

Once again, the mostly liberal editorial page has tried to "open our minds." In his column, "Church must adopt change [Collegian, Nov. 3]," David Rivera attacks the Catholic Church and throws in a few lies and bigotry for good measure. As an Irish-Catholic, I was offended by your ignorance and hypocrisy.

As a regular church goer I can tell you the church does not encourage or condone violence toward homosexuals. It is simply the lifestyle they consider immoral. Also it is not only the Catholic Church that feels this way. I'm sorry my grandmother isn't alive today to read your comment about Irish women being regarded simply as "instruments of reproduction" in the eyes of the church; she would gladly tell you otherwise.

It continues to amaze me that you liberal "minds," who are so open and agreeable to different beliefs, are always getting in your cheap shots on views opposite to your own. How hypocritical!

Steve McCarthy
Southwest



NEW STUDENTS:
Just look what we've got cooking for you!

The Collegian has opportunities in news, sports, arts, photos and graphics – NOW!
Join the group that has the scoop
COLLEGIAN – 113 Campus Center

■ Marx

continued from page 1

Karl Marx, the 19th century German philosopher who gave birth to Marxism, envisioned a society where workers controlled their own livelihoods. But many scholars at the conference believe the dictatorship that developed under Stalin in the late 1920s would have repulsed Marx, who died in 1883.

UMass unveils new recycling storage plant

By ANGIE POPOVICH
Collegian Correspondent

Since the UMass campus is spread over 1,400 acres, a central facility was needed where recyclable materials could be collected from different buildings and stored in bulk containers before being shipped to market.

The Physical Plant staff, with assistance from an outside structural engineer, designed a state of the art facility to meet this need at the former Lawerence Riding Arena at Tillson Farm. Last Friday, the public was able to see the new UMass Intermediate Processing Facility (IPF) at a grand opening ceremony.

The IPF will be used by the Office of Solid Waste Management to collect, sort, process and store the university's recyclable materials. "It is the largest facility of its kind on a university campus in the country. It will be a national model," announced R. Marc Fournier, solid waste manager at UMass.

"The key to operating a facility is the ability to transfer materials easily and efficiently," said Fournier.

The IPF contains many features which will make this possible, according to Fournier. The facility includes a hydraulic dock lever, plastics processing equipment, a digital load cell truck scale, 13,000 square feet of storage space and indoor and outdoor roll-off container bays.

"The IPF will generate revenue to support the operations and to offset maintenance costs of the building," said Fournier. They are negotiating with other local colleges and the town of Amherst to allow them to transfer their recyclables through the UMass IPF for a fee.

With the growing need to sort materials, Fournier said that new local jobs will be created as well.

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
New! American Beer Exciting!
$7.29 case cans
(Quantity Discounts Available)
S.S. Pierce Vodka $8.99 1.75 L
BUD, BUD LIGHT, DRY $12.49 case cans
Michelob reg. $6.99 (12pk/Botts.)
SAM ADAMS Lager, Ale, Light Ship $9.99 12pk/botts.
Molson Golden, Light $7.99 12pk/botts.
Fosters Lager $7.99 12pk/botts.
GALLO WINES $3.99 1.5 L
Bacardi Silver Amber $7.99 750 ml
Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits
Many More In-Store Specials
All Beers plus Deposit (especially on wines) Delivery Available

GE • SPALDING • DEL MONTE • FRENCH'S • DP • SONY • MAKITA
This Offer is Limited – But Our Selection is Not!
Join During Our Special Preview this Saturday and Sunday & Receive 3 Months Free!
WHOLESALE DEPOT
Wholesale Depot is a no-frills, Self Service, Members Only, warehouse offering over 3,500 items at unbelievably low everyday wholesale prices.
Here's Just A Few Examples:
• Televisions • VCR's • Microwaves • Small Appliances • Computers • Soft Drinks • Tools • Health & Beauty Aids • Household Cleaners
• Canned Goods • Toys • Jewelry • Institutional Supplies • Hardware • Bakery Products • Office Supplies • Domestics • Clothing
• Frozen Foods • Automotive • Refrigerated Foods • Books • Snacks • Stereos • Tires • Cigarettes • Furniture • Gourmet Foods
SPECIAL PREVIEW HOURS:
Saturday, November 14th: 11am-10pm
Sunday, November 15th: 12pm-6pm
See Product Demos
Sample Food!!!
Enter To Win Great Prizes!
Grand Opening is Mon., Nov. 16th at the Mountain Farms Mall!
Join Now and Receive 3 Extra Months Free!
At Wholesale Depot you'll always find only name-brand, first quality merchandise. We don't sell seconds or close-outs or cheap imitations of the name brand products you've grown to trust.
Joining is Easy!
You may qualify for a BUSINESS or INDIVIDUAL MEMBERSHIP which allows you to shop wholesale prices for only $25.00 per year.
WHOLESALE DEPOT RT. 9 HADLEY, MA
HAMPSHIRE MALL
MT. FARMS MALL
Bring This Coupon to Wholesale Depot on November 14th or 15th and Take Advantage of this Special Offer!
Yes, I want to become a member of the Wholesale Depot and get 3 Extra Months Free!
Name:
Address:
City: State: Zip:
Daytime Phone #:
Nights:
3 Month Free Membership Offer Expires 11/15/92
GE • SPALDING • DEL MONTE • FRENCH'S • DP • SONY • MAKITA
SONY • MAKITA • PANASONIC • EVEREADY • SHARP • COLEMAN • KODAK • COLGATE • GLAD • M&M/MARS • KRAFT
HERSHEY'S • KRAFT • SPALDING • RUBBERMAID • DEL MONTE • M&M/MARS • HEINZ • GLAD • COLGATE • COLEMAN • SHARP • EVEREADY

AIDS
AIDS is everyone's problem and everyone must educate themselves now! Donate $5 or more and receive our publications. Send name, address, and enclosed donation: $
MAIL TO:
THE RUBBERS BROS.™
AIDS Education Publications
P.O. Box 431 - UMC, Wilbraham, MA 01095-0431
AIDS Information - Tel. (413) 734-1057

WOW

STUDENT FITNESS MEMBERSHIPS!!!!!
One Easy Payment! No Gimmicks!
$139.00 *SPECIAL RATE! September to May
MEMBERSHIP INCLUDES*:
• Tennis • Racquetball • Massage Therapy
• Nautilis • Aerobics(includes step)
• Free Weights • Fitness testing • Sauna
• Basketball • Cardiovascular (Stairmaster®, LifeCycles®)
*Not all clubs feature all amenities Nominal Fee
Comparable Value $400 if paid monthly! You save nearly 50% by paying for your membership on the day you join! Hurry! Act right now & Save!
ATHLETIC CLUBS of AMERICA
659 Amherst Street
SUNDERLAND: (413) 549-3638
(Formerly Winners Athletic Club)

Arts & Living

Jennifer Eight gets a 10 for confusion

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Somewhere in the cloudy and disorienting muddle of Jennifer Eight, there's the makings of a very clever, stylish thriller. Unfortunately for all concerned, it comes in fits and starts. A pair of deft performances and some dizzying cat-and-mouse sequences clash head-on with a terrible performance by Andy Garcia and a near reprehensible state of confusion.

Garcia, who is not having a good year so far (he underacted in Hero and overacts wildly here) plays Detective John Berlin, whose first days in a sleepy northern California town are interrupted by a hand found in the town dump (all similarities to David Lynch's Blue Velvet end here). This sets off an inexplicable obsession with apprehending a serial killer who is murdering beautiful, blind women from a not so nearby institution.

Garcia is entranced (more from plot inclinations than anything else it seems) by Helena (Final Analysis' Uma Thurman), a pretty blind woman who Garcia fears may be the next target. And what do you know, they fall in love!

Lance Henriksen (Aliens) plays Garcia's partner, yet he doesn't do much except fulfill his partner-of-the-hero duties (basically, he's dead meat). This investigation brings John Malkovich (Of Mice and Men) — in a delectable, over-the-top performance — as an FBI agent looking to nail Garcia for his partner's death. Memo to Garcia: if you're going to overact, follow Malkovich's lead.

Cinematographer Conrad L. Hall and Editor Conrad Buff create a moody atmosphere, drenched in overcast skies and dimly lit (get it?) interiors. Writer-director Bruce Robinson (Withnail and I) concocts a few stellar chase sequences in the empty institution, with either a flashlight or a flash bulb for illumination.

These dizzying exercises in style show visual promise, yet the mishmash of a plot that makes up Jennifer Eight drowns the film in utter disarray.

While the identity of the killer in Jennifer Eight just might surprise you, it's mainly because the motive is so completely out of left field; it's not even fair. The investigation is based on one elusive hunch after another, and dandy coincidences reign. A nifty red herring is never resolved and the one-two-three conclusion makes one wish for the nail-biting tension of Wait Until Dark, a superior variation on this theme with much better results.

Ultimately, Andy Garcia unwinds the film. His horrible performance consists of yelling lines like "Dares a bad man out dare . . .and I don't know if he's in the next room or the next county!" Yeah, whatever Andy. He'll burst out yelling for no apparent reason time and time again. It becomes hard to remember how good this guy was in the underrated pair, Internal Affairs and Godfather III.

Uma Thurman does a little better. She fills the role with some genuine pathos. Yet — is that necessarlily good? Her role is just a spin on the helpless woman in jeopardy. Now, it's the helpless blind woman in jeopardy.

Also, one can't help compare her to Audrey Hepburn's marvelous turn in the previously mentioned Wait Until Dark. In that film, Hepburn used her blindness to outsmart her pursuers by undoing all the lights in her apartment, placing the killers in her world and switching the advantage. It's one of the best suspense yarns there is and makes Jennifer Eight pale in comparison.

Jennifer Eight doesn't work as a mystery; lacking any sort of focus. It fails as a character piece; the lead is outlandish and the film is stolen by a supporting performance. Jennifer Eight's arty pretentiousness just may win you over, it looks like they're doing something kind of deep, but its weighty flaws pull a smart failure out of a promising thriller.

Grade: C+

Passenger 57 — Passenger 57 takes a Hollywood staple — "suspension of disbelief" — and amplifies it tenfold. Yet another variation on the classic Die Hard formula, Passenger 57 is indeed entertaining; it just becomes a test to see how much blatant implausability (a.k.a. the yeah, right factor) before you throw your four dollar small popcorn at the screen.

Bruce Payne, doing an almost offensive rip-off of Die Hard's Alan Rickman, plays the world's most dangerous airline terrorist. After he's captured, the brilliant F.B.I. take him cross-country for trial — on a commercial airline flight. Someone in the F.B.I. is gonna lose their job over this stroke of genius.

But never fear! Also on the plane is the world's best airline anti-terrorist expert, John Cutter (Wesley Snipes). He's got the proper amount of emotional baggage (his wife was killed in a robbery he tried to foil), a designated tough-as-nails flight attendent/love interest and enough dumb luck to survive the hopefully uninevitable sequels.

Snipes looks as though he's having a great time, whether it is reciting the goofy tag line: "Always bet on black!" or doing outrageous stunts without getting his shirt untucked. He also makes a fool out of himself with his clumsy ninja-whatever fights. I don't know what he's doing with his hands, but it looks very goofy.

Passenger 57 makes Under Seige, the Steven Seagal-Die Hard-on a-boat-thriller, look much better than it actually is. The latter is a much tighter and less implausible. But both movies are just a reminder of how good the original Die Hard was, and even its fairly clever sequel. If you must see Passenger 57, check your brain with your luggage — you won't be needing it.

Grade: D+

Extraneous pounding rocks FAC's Macbeth

By SHAWN MCDONNELL
Collegian staff

When I left the new production of MacBeth by the Committed Artists of Great Britain (Tuesday night at the FAC Concert Hall) I had a splitting headache. For nearly three hours, director Stephen Rayne had subjected his audience to a constant excess of noise: pounding, wailing, shrieking, a thunderous musical score, and enough gunfire to fill a Schwarzenegger movie. His attempt to transplant Shakespeare's classic "Scottish play" into present-day Africa was an absurd, almost laughable, folly of wrong-note direction.

But that's the bad news.

The good news is, that just as Lady MacBeth covers for her insane husband, some ace performers help to cover for their insane director.

Playing the difficult title role, Hakeem Kae Kazim gives a carefully shaded performance, balancing the murderous excesses of his character with a mood of constant remorse and fear. He does not overact the rages and passions of MacBeth, but portrays, instead, a man with a great deal of restraint and self-assurance. His selective political murders are decided with the strategic cunning of a chess master, but he is unable to handle the oppressive guilt which grows with each new murder, eventually overwhelming him.

As Kazim's wife and co-conspirator, Jaye Griffiths is no less impressive. It is Lady MacBeth who is the driving force behind her husband's triumphs, and Griffiths plays her iron-willed Lady for everything she's worth. The facade of her unflinching strength and will-power seems strained almost from the outset, and it is a joy to watch her chip away at her character's all-important self control.

But these great performances are just occasional oasis in a desert of bad theatre. What can one say about a production of MacBeth in which the tragic hero opens fire on the three witches, and the director writes in a rape scene? Stephen Rayne is not a good director, and this production reflects his lack of intelligent control.

Perhaps the most interesting idea in Rayne's MacBeth was the anachronistic staging. Yet, while he has no reservations about changing the time or place of the show, or adding a violent, pantomimed prologue with no detectable purpose, his unflinching devotion to the Shakespeare's language makes for some truly inexplicable lapses. Why, if everyone in the show has a gun, does MacBeth prepare for battle by excitedly calling for a sword? Either he is a very stupid man, or he has forgotten that most of the invading force is armed with submachine guns.

These inconsistencies aside, Rayne's direction is still rather unsatisfying, to say nothing of loud, slow, and redundant. Nearly every scene seems to begin with some sort of extraneous pounding or shrieking, and end with a surge of abominable melodramatic music. These pennyrate dramatic tricks are ridiculous and irritating, but Rayne sticks to them with such devotion that one is almost forced to admire him for a sort of skewed artistic integrity. But not quite.

The performances of Hakeem Kae Kazim and Jaye Griffiths were exceptional enough to make the evening worthwhile, and it was great to see the First Couple of Tragedy brought to life with such artistry. I just wish that they had stayed in their own century, and left the automatic weapons — and the director — behind.

Committed Artists of Great Britain in Macbeth COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

ALLEY OOPS & Miller Lite Live Concert Series present: Syren
Alley Oops
525 PLEASANT STREET NORTHAMPTON
584-2491
Get Your Fraternity & Sorority Party Reservations

PARAMOUNT PERFORMING ARTS CENTER

JOAN BAEZ
FRIDAY NOVEMBER 20TH
LAZER ZEPPELIN
LAZER LIGHT ROCK CONCERT
10,000 WATT DOLBY SOUND, FULL COLOR 3-D LAZER BEAMS
FEATURING THE MUSIC OF LED ZEPPELIN
THURSDAY NOVEMBER 27TH
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT BOX OFFICE (413) 734-5874; STRAWBERRY RECORDS; NORTHAMPTON TICKET OFFICE (413) 586-8686 OR TICKETPRO PHONE CHARGE AT 1-800-828-7080

The University of Massachusetts Department of Theater presents

Women of Trachis
by Sophocles
a new translation
by Robert Bagg
November 12-14 and 18-21
8:00 p.m.
Rand Theater
Tickets: 545-2511
Fine Arts Center Box Office

2 1/4 LB Burgs For 2 Bucks
EVERYDAY IN NOVEMBER
BURGERS • HOT DOGS
FRIES • ONION RINGS
PHILLY CHEESE STKS
SHAKES • FLOATS
PETE'S DRIVE-IN
ROUTE 9 HADLEY 585-0241
ONE MILE WEST OF THE HAMPSHIRE MALL

Roberts wraps up Winona, Part III

By ADAM SCOTT ROBERTS
Collegian Staff

This is the final piece of the three-part series highlighting actress Winona Ryder's best films.

A month after Edward Scissorhands was released, the twenty year-old Winona Ryder became a "fish out of water," circa 1963, in Mermaids. Ryder's role in Mermaids wasn't like any other character she's played before, thus allowing viewers to see yet another side of this well-rounded actress.

Filmed in Rockport, Massachusetts, Mermaids is the story about a single, Jewish, Peg Bundy-type mother, Rachel Flax, played by Cher. Mrs. Flax moves to the fictional Boston suburb of Eastport with her two daughters Charlotte (Ryder) and Katie (Christina Ricci, The Addams Family). Immediately, Cher becomes romantically involved with Lou (Bob Hoskins, Who Framed Roger Rabbit?), the town shoe salesman.

The story revolves around Ryder's Charlotte, who dresses like the All-American Catholic School Girl (a far cry from her role in Heathers). Charlotte rebels against her Jewishness by desiring to be a nun and by wearing a gold crucifix on her necklace.

In a humorous contrast, her mother (in a flaunting performance by Cher) dresses like a cheap floozy, so it's funny when she asks Charlotte, "How do I look?" before going out on a date. Charlotte responds, "Like a woman about to go forth in sin." Her mother gets the last word by retorting, "Oh good, just exactly the look I was hoping for!"

Charlotte's object of desire is Joe, the handy man, played by Michael Schoefling (Sixteen Candles). After their first kiss, Charlotte goes to the doctor to see if she's pregnant. After giving the name Joan Arc, she is humiliated (and relieved) when the doctor tells her she's still a virgin.

Charlotte keeps all her thoughts bottled up inside as not to allow anyone, especially her mother, to know how she feels.

Mrs. Flax taunts her daughter about Joe when she says, "I know your planning a celebate life, but with half my chromosomes I realize that must be tough."

In one scene, Charlotte is talking with Joe and her

Turn to WINONA, page 10

PIZZERIA
Paradiso
TRADITIONAL WOOD-FIRED BRICK OVEN PIZZA
12 CRAFTS AVENUE
NORTHAMPTON, MASSACHUSETTS
586-1468

ATKINS FRUIT BOWL
Corner of Bay Road & Rte. 116, South Amherst
Open Daily 8 A.M. to 6 P.M. - 253-9528
ORDER YOUR THANKSGIVING PIES FROM ATKINS
253-9528
Old Fashioned, Country Style Pies that are ALL MADE FROM SCRATCH with no artificial ingredients or preservatives! With delicious, flakey crust, they are baked fresh the day you pick them up.
Apple, Mince, Apple Crumb, Raspberry, Cream Pies
Pumpkin, Cherry, Pecan, Blackberry, Custard Pies
Blueberry, Rhubarb, Strawberry Rhubard, Meringue
Also taking orders for rolls, coffee cake, breads, donuts, etc.
Again this year at Atkins... Fully Dressed
NATURALLY GROWN on FREE RANGE
NATIVE HOLIDAY TURKEYS
Order from Atkins and pick up your turkey along with your pies.

SPOLETO
Fine Italian Cuisine
Treat your sweetheart to a delicious evening
50 Main Street
Northampton, MA (413) 586-6313

UMass

Dear Students, Faculty, Staff and Friends,

I would like to Thank You for your extended support of UMASS FOOTBALL. The Maine game promises to be an exciting event as we will battle the "Black Bears" in an attempt to host a Division I-AA playoff game. Come down and cheer-on the Minutemen at McGuirk Alumni Stadium this Saturday at 12:30 PM.

I also encourage you to bring your vehicle, set up a table and enjoy tailgating before the game. Tailgating is an integral part of the UMASS Football experience and we are happy to have it back. As you know, tailgating was reinstated this year on a trial basis. In order to insure that we keep tailgating around for next year, we need your help and cooperation. Please help us with the following:

1. ATTEND THE GAME !
   Remember, if you submit your "Touchdowns for Tailgating" entry form (available in the tailgate lots and at the ticket gates) prior to the end of the first quarter, you have a chance to win $1500.

2. M/ KE PROPER USE OF THE TRASH AND RECYCLING CONTAINERS !

3. DON'T USE GLASS CONTAINERS !

4. NO THROWING OF FRISBEES OR FOOTBALLS IN THE TAILGATE LOTS !
   (Use the grass lots adjacent to the lots)

5. HAVE FUN AND LET'S BRING HOME A VICTORY !

Thank You for your cooperation and support !

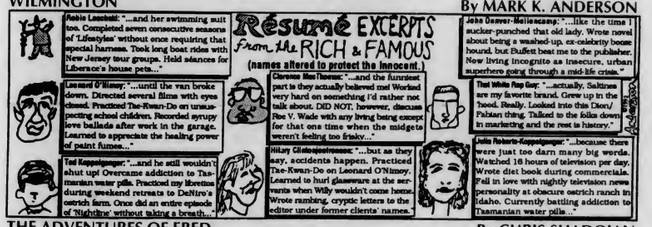
Mike Hodges,
Head Football Coach

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONSEBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

WILMINGTON By MARK K. ANDERSON



THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Chris Cuddy
Copy Editor ..... Jon Lupo
PhotoTechnician ..... Jacob Adelman
Production Supervisor ..... Nicole Dumas
Production ..... Brad Hutchison, Todd Elliott

Menu

LUNCH
American Chop Suey
Grilled Cheese

BASICS LUNCH
Scalloped Macaroni
Grilled Cheese

DINNER
Glazed Harvest Ham
Chicken Stew

BASICS DINNER
Roman Rice and Beans
Chicken Stew

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Inexplicably, Bob's porcupine goes flat.

Quote of the Day

"Try everything once, except incest and folkdancing."

—Sir Thomas Beecham

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Continue your efforts to meet new people. Romance provides the brightest moments of your day. Keep a low profile when around someone aggressive.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be more discriminating about who your do business with. Steer clear of secretive activities. A solo flight goes just right.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your prestige gets a boost when your business, social and family interests all combine favorably. When making a presentation, double-check all facts and figures.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will be unable to avoid the spotlight today. Put your best foot forward and dress for success. A relationship should have smooth sailing now.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be creative, not extravagant, when decorating your home. Striking colors and accents can add sparkle to a dull room.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Up and at 'em! You need to get an early start to tackle all the activities you have planned for the day. Travel could head your list. Take a friend along. Postpone romance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Overconfidence could be your downfall. Try not to assume any new financial obligations until you get current expenses under control. Joining an exercise class improves your outlook.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stick to conventional methods at work. A new approach is out of line with what is now acceptable. Turn a friend on to volunteer work. Be cautious with romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You could have too many options to choose from today. It would pay to be particular in your choice of companions and activities. Make certain you get the right kind of information.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Private activities with influential people may men money in the bank for you. Your career star is rising. Protect creative ideas.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your financial future should be golden if you follow up on a lucky hunch. Look for impressive gains in finance or romance. Use your soothing ways to calm a family member's nerves.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Early-morning confusion gives way to positive actions. Cement a relationship by apologizing. Be careful no to get mired down in details.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

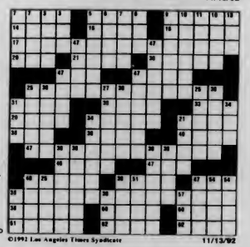
ACROSS
1 Subject of msny a song
5 Pretense
9 Greek island
14 Police trng. site
15 Beneficiary
16 Ovide's comments
17 Irving Berlin "I" song: 1937
20 Sweetie
21 Presidential nickname
22 Fashion designer Hardy
23 Mamma has three
24 Summer of "A Different World"
25 Irving Berlin revue: 1942
31 Chess champion Nimzovitch
32 Youngster
33 NASA approval
35 Give a hoot
36 Windsock's kin
37 Water, in Barcelona
38 "My country —"
39 "Like — not!"
40 Found's partner
41 Irving Berlin song: 1936
46 Adjectival suffixes
47 Red, White or blue
48 Lawyer Melvin
50 Cereal ingredients
52 — man: all
55 Irving Berlin song: 1929
58 Street show
59 "Hook" role
60 Words to Brutus
61 Pung and luge
62 Word with over or sight
63 Entrance

DOWN
1 Strip of wood
2 Eight, in Oviedo
3 Egotistical
4 MSS scanners
5 Province of China
6 Take command
7 Lighthearted
8 "— Minver"
9 Yalta's peninsula
10 More optimistic
11 Ill at —; uncomfortable
12 Very, to Pierre
13 Before tee
18 Sweet potatoes
19 Actress Valentine and others
23 "— kleine Nachtmusik"
24 Woody Harrelson's series
25 Santa Fe or Oregon
26 Word with laugh or opera
27 Kind of seeker
28 Pavarotti, for one
29 Gog and — 30 "I told —!"
31 Go on stage
34 "Karate —": TV cartoon
36 Cremona instrument
37 — Romeo
42 inclined
43 "Boola Boola" singers
44 Actress Rolle
45 — -majesté
48 Golden-colored wine
49 Raison d'—
50 "Have mercy —"
51 Suit to —
52 Puerta of Latin music
53 Palindromic name
54 Côte d'—
55 Couples: abbr.
56 CIA's predecessor
57 Partner of white and blue

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

C	A	P	U	N		B	E	E	S		T	E	S	Y
O	P	E	R	A		A	G	R	A		O	L	E	O
L	A	S	T	R	E	S	O	R	T		U	S	E	R
A	R	T		A	T	E		S	U	P	R	E	M	E
			C	A	R	L	Y		R	O	O
E	S	T	A	T	E		A	C	A	D	E	M	I	C
A	T	T	I	M	E		S	C	U	F	F		F	A	V	A
S	A	M	P	H	I	E		E	N	E	R	G	O	N
E	V	E	R		E	A	T	S		P	A	I	N	S
D	E	R	O	G	A	T	E		M	E	C	C	A	S
			F	O	R	E		B	E	T	O	R	O	T
F	O	R	E	A	R	E	T	I	C		T	A	I	L
O	B	O	E		B	E	A	C	H	E	A	D	S
L	I	A	R		L	A	S	T		E	N	R	O	L
D	E	N	I	E	S		E	L	A	D		D	E	N	S	E

11/13/92



©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/13/92

■ Winona

continued from page 8

subconscious tells her, "I'm gonna burn in hell for sure. Here he is talking about his poor dead mother while I can't stop wishing his hands were unbuttoning my dress."

While losing her virginity to Joe, Charlotte's younger sister nearly drowns when she falls into a river. Mrs Flax sees that her daughter Charlotte is mocking her by dressing trampy in her mother's clothes.

It isn't until this accident that Cher and Ryder's characters really get to duke it out at their home. Ryder releases all her energy by yelling, "I am not invisible. Talk to me..." Cher storms into the kitchen and yells "I am sick and tired of being judged by you. You're a kid, okay, when you become an adult you can live your life any way you want to, but where gonna live my life my way.. Start packing!"

Ryder yells "I want to stay." Cher says "And do what?" Ryder yells back "Finish high school!" Cher says "Great start, what's your major — town tramp?"

Ryder's Charlotte is a combination of her sweet innocent Kim Boggs from Edward Scissorhands and that elitist cheerleader Veronica Sawyer from Heathers. In this exciting cat fight against Cher, Ryder is forced to let that snappy Veronica Sawyer take over her body when she yells "No mom the town already has one!"

Cher gets to react by slapping Ryder across the face. Cher gets to show audiences that being a single mother with two daughters isn't easy.(Thanks Dan Quayle, have a a nice vacation!)

Real life footage of Barbara Walters and Hugh Downs hosting the Today Show and the first radio broadcast that told America that JFK was shot, works to make the viewers believe that the story took place in the 60's.

Mermaids is a great story about not knowing if you'll ever fit in. Basically, the title Mermaids explains that we're all fish out of water and it just takes a little time before we find a place to swim.

■ A-10

continued from page 12

10 Player of the Year, was named to the preseason All-Conference First Team. Teammates Tony Barbee and Lou Roe made the second team.

"I don't care too much about those awards," Williams said. "The awards are for my mom. It makes her happy when I get them."

All eight head coaches agreed the league is more competitive this year than ever before.

"There is no clear cut favorite this year," Rhode Island Coach Al Skinner said. "There's a lot of parity, you could pick any number of teams. Everyone is good."

Mike Jarvis, coach of George Washington said, "This league is wide open. The recruiting is better and the recruiting is better. Anyone could walk away with it."

Temple Coach John Chaney said, "Last year we were ranked the fifth best conference in the country. This year we look even better. There are no sure wins, it will come down to who performs at the end."

RECYCLE THIS COLLEGIAN

Switch To BayBank For Cash With No Fees.

Get Unlimited Free Withdrawals And More With The BayBank Student Value Package.™

Open a BayBank Student Value Package and get cash at more than 750 BayBank X-Press 24® banking machines free of transaction fees! And for a low monthly fee of $5 you'll also get a complete package of banking services including:

- Student Value Checking™ Account which includes 8 checks per month and a companion Savings Account!
- The BayBank Card with X-Press Check.™[2]
- Reserve Credit overdraft protection and free CheckView™ plus a BayBank Visa® or MasterCard® with an annual fee of just $21[2]

To open a BayBank Student Value Package, visit your nearest BayBank office or call 1-800-BAY-FAST® 24 hours a day.

$5 Bonus Offer

When you open a Student Value Package and ask for a BayBank Card, we'll deposit five dollars in your Student Value Checking Account. Just present this coupon at any BayBank office or call 1-800-BAY-FAST before December 31, 1992.

Name_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____ Zip_____

School_____

Limit one five dollar deposit per account.

[1]Charges for transactions at BayBank X-Press 24 Cash® machines and ATMs owned by other banks are additional. A $.75 fee applies to each check after the eighth. To open a BayBank Student Value Package, you need a valid school I.D. or other proof of current student status.
[2]To qualify for X-Press Check, Reserve Credit overdraft protection, and a BayBank MasterCard or Visa, you must be 18 or older and have no adverse credit history. BayBank Credit Card annual fee and APR of 14.90% subject to change.

BayBank® Member FDIC. Equal Opportunity Lender

■ soccer

continued from page 12

Hartford is dangerous offensively as Rose Daley (14 goals), Kim LeMere (14), Reifer (10) and Thornsbury (7) lead the attack.

Rudy will counter with Heidi Kocher and Holly Hellmuth defensively marking Daley and LeMere.

"Those front four are the absolute key to beating Hartford," Rudy said. "These people need to be shut down in order to win. They have 80 percent of all their goals.

"Can we shut them down and can we do it without Wilkins? That's the key to the game."

Game Notes Those interested in attending the game in Hartford are encouraged to take the UMass Fan Bus to the game. The bus will leave the Curry Hicks Cage Sunday at 11:15 a.m. and the cost of the trip is $5. Contact Margaret Driscoll (5-3190) in the Athletic Department for more information.

■ field hockey

continued from page 12

tween a loss to defending national champion Old Dominion, and have at times appeared unbeatable. The game will be won on penalty corners, because both UMass and Penn State have outstanding corners. Hixon said her squad is ready.

"The kids have looked great in practice this week," said Hixon. "They're focused, they're really serious about what they have to do. Even with the rain [on Thursday], there were 10-12 kids out on the practice field early."

As Penn State typically has a large following, Hixon and Blenis hoped fans would be out in force on Sunday.

"I'd love to see a thousand people there cheering," Hixon said. "That may be shooting too high, but I think as long as it's not wet or cold we'll have a good turnout."

"I think it's really important to have a big crowd there," Blenis said. "If we win, we're going to the Final Four, and we're really hoping for a big student turnout."

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN
The University of Massachusetts field hockey team is 20-1 as they enter the NCAA tournament.

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days 6am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9) Amherst • 253-5072

QUIET!
If you're tired of yelling this, come and see us
The Brook
253-3834

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (FIRST 6 SHOWS DAILY; ANY SHOW SUNDAYS (ES & OVER); CHILDREN SPECIAL ENGAGEMENTS)
MT. FARMS 4 584-9153
Call Theatre for Showtimes
Jeanne B
Of Mice and Men (PG13)
The Last of the Mohicans
Dracula
The Mighty Ducks (PG)
HAMPSHIRE 8 584-7550
Call Theatre for Showtimes
Consenting Adults
Aladdin
Passenger 57
School Ties (PG13)
Hero (PG13)
Under Seige
Candyman

ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READER'S POLL 1992 1st Place
PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Mon. - Thurs. ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET $5.99
SUNDAY BRUNCH - ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.99 11:30 - 3 p.m.
20% OFF DINNERS FOR COMEDY PATRONS Fri. & Sat.
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
586-1202 Free Parking 北京園 on Route 9, Hadley
VISA

Tuesday, November 17, 1992
John Sacco
Master Hypnotist
Performing at
The Hatch
9:00 p.m.
$2.00 Cover Charge

UMass FIELD HOCKEY
NCAA Field Hockey 1992
ATTENTION UMASS F.H. FANS
NCAA CHAMPIONSHIP TOURNAMENT!
Here on the UMass campus. Come cheer on the UMASS field hockey team as they battle the winner of the Penn State/Temple Game in the Second Round of the NCAA Division I Field Hockey Championship. 12:00 noon on Sunday, November 15 at Totman Field. Tickets are $6.00 for adults, $4.00 for students.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students – Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30 Fri. 8:30-2:30 113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Hillel – Pizza Bagel Night at the Hillel House Nov. 14 $3/Free for ACH Call 549-1710 For more information

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Student Renters and landlords should stop by the off-campus housing office to pick up the latest landlord/tenant guide, it's free and an absolute must. For all your housing questions call 5-0885 or stop by.

"Subletting over Wintersession?" The off-campus housing office at 426 Student Union offers a great way to find subletting or sublet a property over intersession. All leasing questions answered with a smile. Call 5-0865 or stop by.

AUTO FOR SALE

Buick Regal Ltd. 1982 Excellent cond. Must see $1850 neg. Call 586-5276.

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 548-3662.

ENTERTAINMENT

Free Concert
Monghani and Bop Harvey performing at Pearl St.
Friday the thirteenth
Doors open at 6:00
Come and fall in love

EXTREMELY IMPORTANT

Tarot Reading by appointment. Anytime Call Mitch 548-9781

FOR RENT

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom homes on bus route call 588-4270

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $880/mo 256-0741

Amherst 3 bedroom condo avail. Feb. 1st. A room and 1 bedroom apartment avail. Jan. 1st.
Lincoln Real Estate
25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7619

Furnished bedroom house, south of Amherst. Washer/dryer. $700 + 253-7178

One room in 3 bedroom Pufton Apartment Rent 226/mo Plus
Available January 1 1993 to June 30 1993 Call Anne 549-7718 in evening before 11pm

Room available in beautiful renovated church. We are 2 males and 2 females with one cat. Rent $250 Call evenings 253-7357

Take over our lease at Brandywine, 2 bedroom heat and hot water included, inlcudes free gift! Call 549-0061 avail Jan. 1

FOR SALE

For Sale–Bruce Springsteen tickets Nov. 15 – Hartford, best offer 527-5726

For sale pair of 71/2 women's ski boots brand new Laber $100 549-8094

1979 Toyota Corolla Runs Great 91000M $700 or B/O Amos 546-4029

MAC SE/30 w/lots of additional software 2MG/80 asking $600 or BO call 774-2567

Over 30 Sega & Nintendo games Starting at $15 Call Rob 6-5486

Passport Rader Detector works perfect $75.00 or B/O Alex 253-7896

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pack + case and manuals Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

HELP WANTED

Alaska Summer Employment
fisheries earn $600 + a week in canneries $4000 month on fishing boats. Free transportation! Room and Board! Male or Female. Get a head start on this summer. For employment program call 1-206-545-4155 ext. A5001

JOBS! Are you looking for a resume builder? UMass Telefund is hiring! Flexible hours, good pay, and great experience. Come down to the basement of Memorial Hall for an application or call 545-3509.

Earn $1000/Week at home stuffing envelopes! For information, send long SASE to CJ Enterprises, Box 67068K, Cuyahoga Falls, OH 44222

EARN EASY MONEY!
Post our brochures around campus and receive commission for each completed application. Work few hours on your own time. Call 1-800-758-9916 EST

Prof seeks personal care assistence in SOM 12-2:30 most days M-F
Salary negotiable
Call 549-0117 after 5pm

$252.50 Sell 50 funny college t-shirts and make $252.50. No financial obligation. A risk free program. Avg. sales time= 4-6 hours. Choose from 16 designs. Smaller/larger quantities avail. Call 1-800-733-3265

$200-$500 WEEKLY
Assemble products at home. Easy! No selling. You're direct. Fully guaranteed FREE INFORMATION – 24 HOUR HOTLINE. 801-379-2900 Copyright #MA15KDH

Wantad: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun.
Call 1-800-3SEESTA ask for Bonnie

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons – first lesson half price 665-1178

PERSONALS

Allison–
Even though we don't speak the same same language, we will always understand each other.
LML
Your Big Sis

Emeralda R green
Snowflakes R White
Guess again Jenna
You may not be right
LML
6ig Sis

Happy 21st Birthday, Michela
Uptown is welcoming its newest member on Friday! Have Fun Love, Joanne

Jen S.
From the Start I knew...
It had to be you!
Phi Love you
Your Big Sister

Jason
Thanks for the best year of my life
I hope its only the beginning
I love you – TM

Julie Lichtenstein
You brighten my eye. I'm so excited you are a Phi. I do not have a Lil' sis, but now I do, its you.
Guess Who
Phi Love,
Your Big Sis

Jody King
I'm so psyched to have you as my lil' sis. Amazing times to come!
Phi love,
Your Big Sis

Kari
Who will smile first?
Phi love,
Your Big Sis

Laurie – my lil' sis
I couldn't be happier!!
Get ready for a great week
LML,
Your Big Sis

Lost: 5'9", brown hair
Very pale, drinks lots of coffee
Last seen with small human attached to leg
Answers to: Neal
Please return ASAP

Michela
Happy 21!
Only 365 days to 22!
Love your 4 roomates (LMKD)

My Love
My Heart
My Life
Happy 6irthday!
Your Lover
P.S. Looking forward to marry you next summer

Randi,
I am so psyched you are my lil sis!!! We are going to have the best week ever!
LML Your Big Sis

To My Lil Sis Karen C.
Get psyched for the fun to begin
You're the best ever!
Phi love
Your Big Sis

To Karen Weiner, my little sis I am so excited my heart's filled with glisst It's soon that you will be With my Phi Family – Phi Love, Your Big Sis

ROOMATES WANTED

Female needed to take over Brandywine lease ASAP or by January 1 $185 month + utilities. First months rent Free call 549-0953

Female sublease single in Mill Va. Spring Sem. Call 253-3406

Female to share large room 167.50 call 665-7604

Looking for two women to share our N. Amherst Apt. $200 p/mth & utilities Jan 1st Call 549 0916

Need 3 Housemates M/F Jan 1st 5 min to Campus 549-7619

Roomate wanted to share 2 BR Brandywine Apt. starting Jan. 1. Call Tom 549-2663

3 Responsible women
Need housing for Spring semester Desire place near UMass
Call Young-Ni 546-0580 or Jen 4978

Two famales needed to share a Brandywine Apt. Call 549-6382

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Tarot Readings
Call Chris 256-0821

SPORTS CARDS

SportStop Cards
Coming Dec. 1st
Mountain Farms Mall

TRAVEL

Save on spring break '93
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida from $119! Book early, save $$$! Group discounts!! 1-800-426-7710

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed – free cover page, spell check, laser printout. $1.50/page. Brian 548-1795.

Typing - Word Processing
Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations. Laser Printing
Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268

Sports

One victory away from the Final Four

•Field hockey (20-1) hosts Penn State

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

The official slogan of the University of Massachusetts field hockey team is "Roll UMass." You can see it on their banner at Totman Field, or hear the team chant it before and after every game. If you look real hard, you may see traces of the words in paint on the hill across from the field that remain from last year.

It has become more than a slogan, it is a description of their season, because UMass has basically rolled over every team which has faced them.

With their last home game of the year at 12 p.m. on Sunday in the second round of the NCAA tournament (tickets $2.00 students, $4.00 adults), the only thing keeping the Minutewomen from rolling into Richmond, Virginia for next weekend's NCAA Final Four is the Penn State Nittany Lions.

Ironically, the last hurdle for the number three seeded Minutewomen (20-1) is Penn State, a team which refused to play head coach Pam Hixon's squad at Totman Field this year.

"We played Penn State at State College last year, and lost to them by one goal," said Hixon. "I tried to get them on the schedule this year, but they wouldn't come to Amherst to play us. We wanted to play them."

UMass realizes that the Nittany Lions are not a pushover. Penn State was in the Final Four last season and were fifth in the country in the last NCAA poll of the regular season. On Thursday, they fought back from a 2-1 deficit to defeat Temple 4-2 in the first round game.

The Minutewomen and Penn State play similar games, relying on passing and penalty corners. Chris McGinley leads the team in points and is the Penn State version of Ainslee Press, acting as the hitter on the penalty corner.

"They don't really have any weak links," said UMass co-captain Joy Blenis. "They're strong throughout except they have a freshman goalie [Shelly Meister]."

The focus is on the Minutewomen, however, because their destiny clearly lies in their own hands. The team has sandwiched two 10-game winning streaks be-

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 11

•Soccer looks to shut down Hartford

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

Every college team dreams of playing in the Final Four and this weekend the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team has a chance to make its dreams come true.

Massachusetts (16-3) will travel Sunday to the University of Hartford (18-1) to face the Hawks at 1 p.m. in the NCAA quarterfinals.

"Hartford is a very good team," Massachusetts Coach Jim Rudy said. "We are going to have to come to play and play hard in order to win."

On Oct. 10 Hartford, ranked No. 2 nationally, defeated Massachusetts 2-0 in Amherst on the strength of second half goals only one minute apart by Jessica Reifer and Michele Thornsbury. Massachusetts hit the crossbar three times in the contest and controlled play for stretches of the game.

"The first game was 2-0 but it could have gone either way," Hartford coach Austin Daniels. "UMass could have easily taken it 2-0. We put away our chances and that's why we won. There isn't much between these two teams. We're even. The team which capitalizes on its opportunities will win."

Hartford, which has never made the Final Four, received a first round bye and has had two weeks to rest and prepare for this game.

"The layoff has helped a lot," Daniels said. "We had a lot of nagging injuries and now we are healthy and ready to play."

Massachusetts, which last reached the Final Four in 1987, is not as fortunate. Last weeks physical 2-1 victory over Connecticut has taken its toll. Midfielder Paula Wilkins, who pulled her hamstring against the Huskies, is questionable for Sunday.

"We won't know about Paula until game time," Rudy said. "We have a lot of little injuries, we were missing six players from practice the last two days."

Turn to SOCCER, page 11

Minutemen to tackle Black Bears tomorrow

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

Lately, the University of Massachusetts football squad has been making a habit of playing high-powered offensive teams.

Tomorrows game will be no different as the University of Maine (5-4, 3-3 conference) travels to McGuirk Alumni Stadium to take on the Minutemen in a 12:30 p.m. showdown.

The Black Bears boast one of the most potent one-two combinations in the Yankee Conference in sophomore quarterback Emilio Colon and senior tailback Ben Sirmans. Colon is second in the league in passing as he averages 158 yds passing/game and has thrown for 12 TD's. Colon may be behind Richmond's Greg Lilly in yds passing/game but he more than makes up for that with his 61.7 completion percentage, first in the YanCon.

"He's [Colon] just an outstanding athlete," said UMass assistant coach Bill McGovern. "He's got a whip arm and is very fast - even when a play breaks down, he can pull the ball in and run.

"(His ability) will be a great challenge for our defense." The other offensive cog that makes Maine's engine go is Sirmans, who has been a force on the ground all season long averaging 109.4 yds rushing/game, second only to Richmond's Uly Scott (124.2/game). Sirmans, who was the YanCon offensive player of the week, has racked up 10 TD's and needs only 15 yards to surpass the 1,000 yd mark for the season.

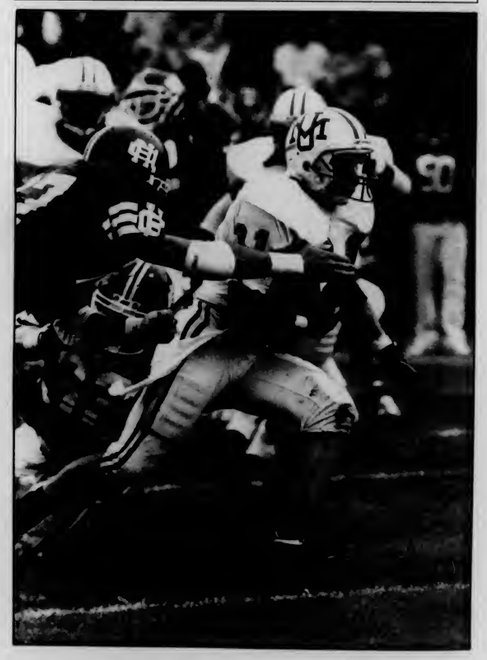
"Maine's got just an excellent tailback in Sirmans," said McGovern. "I was watching films the other day [of Sirmans] and people just bounce off him when he runs.

Defensively, the Bears are led by defensive end Corey Parker, who has 38 tackles and seven sacks, and middle linebacker Dan Girard, who's third in the YanCon in tackles with 119 (13.2/game). Girard was named to the YanCon honor roll last week for his 14 tackle performance last week. Strong safety Lance Boston has been impressive this season with 64 tackles and four interceptions.

UMass' running game this week will suffer a little tomorrow with the absence of freshman tailback Rene Ingoglia, who twisted his ankle seriously enough two weeks ago that he hasn't donned a uniform since. Fullback Mike George has also been hobbled by an ankle injury of late and was slowed last week, but he should be ready to play tomorrow. Redshirt freshman QB Andrew McNeilly (12-25, 158 yds/passing last week) will look to tight end Steve Dembowski (first TD grab of career last week) and split end Matt Read in the air, and rely on tailbacks John Johnson and Jason Mumford on the ground.

On defense, the usuals will be out in full force to lead the number one rated (in YanCon) UMass D. Cornerbacks Don Caparotti and Matt Rajotte will anchor the defense along with inside linebackers Bobby Burke and Phil Lartigue. And who can forget outside linebacker Mario Perry? With 15 sacks and 50 tackles on the season, Perry is a force each and every week.

Minutemen Notes: Sophomore defensive tackle Brian Corcoran had a great game last week against Richmond (nine tackles, one sack and a TD return on a fumble recovery) and was rewarded with the Yankee Conference and ECAC defensive player of the week awards and the Coca Cola Golden Helmet award as the top Division 1 player in New England. Said McGovern on Corcoran, "He's just a great kid who practices hard every week - the awards are well deserved." . . . UMass is ranked 16th in this weeks Div. 1-AA poll.



CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN

Don Caparotti and the 7-1 UMass Minutemen host the University of Maine on Saturday.

Mountaineers picked to win tight A-10 race

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA — West Virginia Men's Basketball Coach Gale Catlett, downplayed his teams selection as the preseason favorite to win the Atlantic 10 in a poll of media and league coaches, saying any one of six teams could realistically capture the title.

"This is an improved and balanced league and it will be very difficult to win it this year," Catlett said. "There are too many good teams this season, no one will run away with it."

Massachusetts, picked to finish second in the poll, should be the favorite in the tight race, according to Catlett.

"You've got to pick Massachusetts," Catlett said. "They won last year, they've got good players back, John [Calipari] is a great coach and they've got great fans. They're one of the best teams in the East. They should be in the top 10 this year."

Calipari said the league has no clear cut favorite to take the title.

"I picked five teams to tie for first on my ballot," Calipari said. "I picked us sixth. I don't think anyone will dominate the league. If a team gets hot at the end it can run through the tournament."

Calipari, who lost three starters form last years conference championship team, is uncertain about his team in the upcoming year.

"How good are we, I don't know?" Calipari said. "We are not as deep as last year and our guard play is not as good. We have some question marks.

"After four games we could be 1-3 or 2-2. Our non-conference schedule is difficult and there are no easy wins in our conference. We can't just show up and win."

West Virginia, which named first on 10 of the 30 ballots submitted, was named as the team to beat. Massachusetts (8 first place votes) was second, followed by George Washington (6), Temple (6), Rhode Island, St. Joseph's, Rutgers and St. Bonaventure.

In the women's poll, Massachusetts was picked to finish eighth in the conference, St. Joseph's was tabbed as the top team.

"We are not concerned with the preseason polls," Massachusetts coach Joanie O'Brien said. "We care about where we are at the end of the season."

Massachusetts center Harper williams, returning A-

Turn to A-10, PAGE 10

Monday November 16, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 47

Partly sunny Monday, 37–41; light snow on Tuesday

Arts & Living:
Movie reviewer Jon Lupo says Bram Stoker's Dracula needs braces. What did director Francis Ford Coppolla do wrong? Read and see. Page 9.

Sports:
The University of Hartford's Hawks tear into UMass women's soccer, knocking them out of the NCAA tournament. Page 16.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Field hockey makes Final 4

Minutewomen defeat Penn State 1-0 in overtime

MATT KAHN/ COLLEGIAN

Holly Hockenbrock of the UMass field hockey team puts her hands up in victory as the Minutewomen beat Penn State 1-0 Sunday at home to advance to the NCAA Final Four.

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

It may be a cold, cold, cold day before anyone defeats defending national field hockey champion Old Dominion, but it was a cold enough day Sunday at Totman Field for the University of Massachusetts to advance to the NCAA Final Four leaving only one more game between them and the Norfolk, Va. team.

The Minutewomen battled through less than optimal conditions yesterday to defeat Pennsylvania State University 1-0 in sudden death overtime sending them to Richmond, Va. next weekend for the Final Four for the first time since 1987.

Forward Tara Jelley broke the 0-0 deadlock with 6:49 left in overtime when she took the ball from Jenn Salisbury inside the crowded goal area and, while falling down, meekly pushed the ball in the left hand corner past sprawling Penn State goaltender Shelly Meister. Jelley's shot was definitely not the hardest hit of her life, but it was the biggest.

"It was a chaotic play with everyone in the circle," Jelley said. "I was falling on my knees and I pushed it in with one hand on the stick. I watched it out of the corner of my eye and it seemed like it was in slow motion."

The win breaks a NCAA tourney drought for UMass, who had not won even a first round game since 1990. Massachusetts' last win in the second round came in 1987. Massachusetts entered the tournament as the No. 3 team in the country this year, and received a first round bye and the second round home game as a reward for their season-long success.

The Minutewomen, along with Iowa, North Carolina

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 16

UMass accepts Upward Bound substitute plan

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts administrators announced Friday they accepted a replacement for Upward Bound, an outreach program for economically disadvantaged high school students which was eliminated during the summer after the federal government refused to renew a grant which had provided most of its funding.

"We took the best parts of what Upper Bound offered and other programs and merged them into one," Acting Dean of Academic Support Services Ken Burnham said.

The new program, outlined by Associate Journalism Professor Nicholas C. McBride and Dean of Students Jo-Anne Thomas Vaninin in After Upward Bound: Recommendations to the Chancellor on Pre-College and First Year Educational Support Programming, emphasizes the outreach and retention of economically disadvantaged students. The program targets African American, Hispanic, Asian and Native American students.

The proposal recommends the University:

- appoint a director for the new program's implementation and development and establish an advisatory group for the director.
- institute pre-college support focusing on African American, Hispanic, Asian and Native American high school students and present academic contracts guarunteeing acceptance to UMass should they complete high school.
- set up weekend seminars by the Spring of 1993 to teach study and cognitive skills while including workshops exploring issues such as relationships, decision-making, AIDS, drug and alcohol awareness.
- hold a four week summer program for students not invovled in the weekend seminars. The report said this program should be made available for 50 students summer 1993.
- expand the Collegiate Committee for Education of Black and other Minority Students, Bilingual Collegiate Program, and other academic support programs to develop a five-year liberal arts bachelor program focusing on basic study skills.

"We would rely on professors volunteering to teach a single course in this program above and beyond their normal course load," read the propoal.

Students participating in the weekend seminars and summer program would attend these classes and be guaranteed tutoring during their five years at the University.

Turn to UPWARD BOUND, page 4

Reds regain power in Lithuania

By ALAN COOPERMAN
Associated Press

VILNIUS, Lithuania — The first republic to break away from the Soviet Union appeared Sunday to be on the verge of returning former Communists to power in a bitterly contested parliamentary election.

Lithuanian voters angered by factory shutdowns, soaring prices and a lack of hot water said as they left the polls that they were ready to give the former Communists a chance to restore economic order.

Leaders of the former Lithuanian Communist Party, now called the Democratic Labor Party, promised that if they won, they would safeguard Lithuania's independence and continue to build a Western-style market economy.

But they also said they would improve trade relations with Russia and demand better terms from the International Monetary fund, which has forced Lithuania to freeze government wages and hold down public spending in return for Western loans.

Sajudis, the anti-Communist party that led Lithuania to independence in 1990, has "done very little in the past two years," Andrei Kobzar, 30, said as he cast his ballot at a high school in downtown Vilnius.

"Actually, they've done a lot — to make our life impossible," said his wife, Valentina, an unemployed waitress. "Everything is bad now. We live in such a hole, with two kids. I have no job, no welfare payments."

More economic bad enws appeared on the eve of the election when the daily newspaper Tiesa reported that industrial production has tumbled 48.5 percent this year.

According to other reports, one-third of all factories have closed or sharply cut back employment. Consumer prices have jumped 2,200 percent since 1990, and fuel is in such short supply that central heating plants shut off hot water to most homes just as winter set in.

Many Lithuanians blame Sajudis and its leader, Vytautas Landsbergis, for the failing economy.

In the first round of voting on Oct. 25, the backlash led

Turn to LITHUANIA, page 2

UMass Profs' Atlas approved for school libraries

By JOHN WINCHELL
Collegian Correspondent

Massachusetts schoolchildren can soon benefit from a state historical reference book recently published by the University of Massachusetts Press.

The "Historical Atlas of Massachusetts" received overwhelming approval from Governor Weld to be distributed in all Massachusetts public and private secondary school libraries, said Jack Tager, one of the coeditors of the work.

According to Tager, a history professor at the University of Massachusetts, the book received a $100,000 appropriation from the state to cover printing and publishing costs for an estimated 2,000 copies.

"We hope it will become a standard reference in all state educational institutions," Tager said.

The "Atlas" is the first comprehensive statewide reference book ever produced in Massachusetts. One other atlas was published in 1894, but it contained strictly road maps of the state's 351 cities and towns.

Published in 1991, it is a multi-dimensional reference covering the state's historical, political and economic growth from 1620 through the 1980s.

"I'm personally pleased to know that students in the Commonwealth will now have access to the atlas through their own school libraries," said Bruce Wilcox, director of the University of Massachusetts Press. In addition, Wilcox says the book has been selling well, with orders coming in from as far as England.

The 160-page book is divided into two sections. The first is a chronological history, discussing everything from Native American settlements and the creation of the Puritan commonwealth to the formation of the 20th-century postindustrial state.

The second part of the atlas explores the political and social aspects of the state, including political organization, ethnicity, race, health care, communications, transportation, energy and the Quabbin Reservoir.

The idea for the book came from James A. Hafner and Richard W. Wilkie, two professors from the department of Geology and Geography at UMass in early 1979. The project began in the early eighties with a small grant from two faculty deans.

The funds ran out quickly, though, and progress halted for another three years. Then, in 1985, more money became available, and Wilkie, who eventually became a coeditor, decided to resurrect the project, as well as integrate a historical

Turn to ATLAS, page 4

A view of Springfield, Massachusetts by Thomas Chambers graces the book jacket to the new Historical Atlas of Massachusetts edited by UMass professors Richard W. Wilke and Jack Tager.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inês Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff

Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Monday, November 16, 1992

Lecture — August Savage Gallery presents Eshu Bumpus, storyteller at 7 p.m. in the August Savage Gallery in the New Africa House.

Lecture — There will be a lecture on "North American Free Trade Agreement: Free for Who?" at 4 p.m. in room 903 of the Campus Center. The lecture is sponsored by the AFSC and the STPEC program.

Lecture — As part of the Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Studies Brown Bag Series, Margaret Hunt will address "The Uneasy union of Gay Studies and Lesbian Studies" from noon - 1:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, 9th floor.

Sale — Cape Verdean Students are sponsoring and Army/Navy sale in the Student Union Ballroom from 9 a.m.- 7 p.m. Admission is free.

Tuesday, November 17, 1992

Lecture — BMCP is sponsoring a lecture "Pride and Self Esteem" in the Campus Center room 101, from 8 p.m.-10 p.m. Admission is free.

Meeting — There will be an informational meeting for the UMass Boston-Paris program at 1 p.m. in room 804 of the Campus Center for anyone interested in studying for a year in Paris.

Lecture — Professor Harry Pardue will speak on "Expanded and Improved Role of Kinetics in Analytical Chemistry" at 11:15 a.m. in the LGRT room 103.

Meeting — There will be a meeting of the Institute for the Healing of Racism at 7 p.m. in 803 Campus Center.

Information Session — There will be a Peace Corps information session in 162 Campus Center at 7 p.m.

Mob ties incite Japan's Right

By YURI KAGEYAMA
Associated Press

TOKYO — It is eerily reminiscent of another era, and another Japan.

Politicians bow abjectly to right-wing extremists who burst into their offices shouting insults. Guards at the prime minister's residence nervously try to protect themselves against possible attack.

Litte more than a half-century ago, militarist terror and political assassinations helped destroy Japanese democracy, leading to the Pacific War.

Today, the right wing's anger has been incited by a trial exposing its links with Japan's underworld gangs, or yakuza, and its usually hushed ties with the ruling Liberal Democratic Party.

Some of the extreme right's 120,000 members — many also in the yakuza — have stepped up demonstrations, shouting protests blared from loudspeakers mounted on convoys of trucks.

No one suggests that the current threat from the right is equal to that of the 1930s. On Feb. 26, 1936 — a day of infamy in Japan — rightists stormed the prime minister's residence and assassinated three government officials.

Today's rightists have no apparent backing from a now-docile military, the Self Defense Forces, though one officer recently caused a stir with a magazine essay suggesting a coup.

But the right does seem to retain the power of terror and the threat of violence. At a rally last March a rightist fired three shots at then-party kingpin Shin Kanemaru, but missed.

Two months ago, an armed rightist set fire to a truck in front of the official residence of Prime Minister Miyazawa.

■ Lithuania

continued from page 1

to a surprise victory for the Democratic Labor Party. Of 141 parliament seats, the former Communists won 44, while Sajudis got just 18 — a stunning drop from the 97 seats it had won two years ago.

Three smaller parties also made gains at the Sajudis' expense. The conservative Christian Democrats won 10 seats, liberal Social Democratics took five and the Polish Union got three.

Sajudis has since fought back with an emotional campaign implying that the former Communists might surrender the country's hard-won independence.

"A tear in God's eye: Lithuana, where are you going?" Sajudis asked voters in black-and-white posters splashed across the capital.

The former Communists needed only about half the 61 seats in the runoff to gain a majority in parliament.

Clintons retreat to Calif.

By JEFF WILSON
Associated PRess

SUMMERLAND, Calif. — Doug Taylor bought a saxophone and dusted off a photo of Air Force One in the 12-year-old "Presidential booth" at his Nugget Restaurant. Bill and Hillary Clinton are coming to town.

"If there's a chance Clinton might come in here, I want to be ready," said Taylor, 51, whose cafe serves as an unoffical meeting spot for this seaside community of 2,000 just south of Santa Barbara. Dozens of journalists invaded Summerland on Friday when word came that Hollywood friends of President-elect Clinton had acquired a beachfront estate that he could use as a Western retreat.

"I hope we won't have to dress up," said 35-year resident Doris McCloskey, 63, as she drove along the town's main thoroughfare that was jammed with news vans and reporters.

A quarter-mile away, media helicopters hovered over the $4 million-plus estate and Santa Barbara County sherriff's deputies chased photographers away from bushes and the compound's imposing wooden gate.

Harry Thomason and Linda Bloodworth-Thomason, producers of TV's "Designing Women" and "Evening Shade," a comedy about life in an Arkansas community, acquired the two-story home for use by the Clintons.

"This is not going to be a Western White House, . . . The Clintons may use it from time to time, but it is not exclusively for thier use, by any means," said Steve Roth, assistant to Ms. Bloodworth-Thomason.

Some people took the announcement in stride.

"We have tons of celebrities here. It's just another famous person to take care of," said Deputy Darrin Stern.

RECYCLE THIS COLLEGIAN

INSTITUTE for the HEALING
of
RACISM

An honest and frank dialogue involving all races so that individuals may help heal each other

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 17
7:00 p.m.
Room 803 Campus Center
Meetings every first and third Tuesday of the month.

Sponsored by the Baha'i Club

MORE ♪ LESS $
Special savings this week!

Sony CD Player

1993 Model, CDP-297 latest 1-bit processor, fully programmable, 5-way repeat, random play, headphone volume control
List $175 $128.95

Paradigm Titan Speakers

"A giant-sized value!" Stereo Review
Small 2-way speakers, 6.5" woofer, smooth clear sound and amazing bass
List $220 pair $187.95

Maxell XL-II 90 Tape Special

$1.89 each

tripod audio
Next to the City Hall
Downtown Northampton
(413) 584-6498

The Oldest Audio Store in the Valley! 20 YEARS

Sale ends November 21st!

Local News

Weld GLB committee holds UMass hearing

JOSH REYNOLDS / COLLEGIAN
Amy Jacobson of the Holyoke Teen Center testifies for the the Governor's Commission on Gay and Lesbian Youth.

By TRACY MONAHAN
Collegian Staff

A commission created by Governor William Weld to deal with a disproportionately high level of suicides among gay, lesbian and bisexual youth heard testimony on how to deal with the problem at the Univerisity of Massachusetts' Amherst campus Friday.

The Governor's Commission on Gay and Lesbian Youth joined the Governor's Advisory Committee on Women's Issues in the Campus Center to interview witnesses including GLB youth, adults and other professionals in the field in the Campus Center.

Nearly 30 percent of all teenage suicides result from the struggle with sexual identity and 25 percent of gay youths are forced to leave home because of sexual orientation, commission officials said. These statistics, officials said, is why Weld created the commission to advise him on what services the state might provide.

According to a statement by Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci, "Gov. Weld and I are committed to abolishing acts of hatred and prejudice directed against all young people in the Commonwealth. We want all youth to have the same opportunity to learn and grow into healthy, productive citizens.

Armed with these promises, the eight-member panel sat through almost four hours of testimony in order to hear possible suggestions to make to the Governor. The speakers included clergy, clinical workers and students.

Leslie Tarr Laurie, one of the panelists and co-chair of the Governor's Advisory Committee on Women's Issues, said "the most exciting part of today's hearings was the diversity. It

Turn to COMMISSION, page 7

UM captures headlines

Recent unrest exposes 'veiled' racism

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press

It is sometimes hard to imagine this quiet state university campus as a flash point of racial strife.

During the Veterans' Day break, young people were sipping coffee, playing pool or video games and chatting at the student union of the University of Massachusetts. Asked about racism, a Black student looked at his watch and said he had to study.

Yet an outbreak of racial unrest — alleged assaults, racist graffiti and a rampage through a dormitory by minority protesters — captured national headlines for weeks.

Many students say that the explosion sprang from a veiled, endemic racism that outlasts most news stories. They said it takes the form of largely unspoken mistrust and misunderstanding among students from different worlds, lower expectations for minorities among professors, a spotty commitment from adminstrators and a double standard often applied by the police.

"I really haven't experienced racism out in the open," said Mussa Ali, a Black senior majoring in biochemistry. But he offered a story about a a professor he went to see the day before in a class when he has a B average:

"He told me right out that, over the years, he had one or two people in his classes that were Black, and they'd gotten a D or an F, and he was sort of surprised" with Ali's good grades, he said.

Administrators say it's no surprise that some racial tensions would exist on this 1,200-acre campus of 22,000 students.

The school in rural western Massachusetts is home to an especially volatile mix of students. Many of the 10.5 percent of its enrollment that is made up of minorities comes from other countries and cities like New York and Philadelphia, where people of diverse cultures often live in close proximity. Many White students grew up in the suburbs of Boston and other cities where they came in less frequent contact with minorities.

Tensions have periodically burst into the open on campus over the years. More than a dozen students were injured in a racial brawl after a 1986 World series game, for instance.

More recent turmoil grew out of the verdict in the Rodney King case in May, when white policemen in Los Angeles were acquitted of the beating of a Black man. Protesters overran the undergraduate newspaper and accused its editors of racism.

The latest unrest in past weeks centered on the Sept. 25 beating of a Black student, which later prompted dozens of sympathizers to rage through a dormitory, leaving anti-White graffiti.

The problems and threats of more violence has prompted the administration to open formal talks with minority representatives. Administrators pledged earlier this month that they would boost minority enrollment to 20 percent by 1995 and add 40 annual minority scholarships. They also promised to beef up campus security and add to the police force.

But students tell tales daily, more mundane discrimination.

A White students said she seems to get quicker service than Blacks at a local copy center. A Black student said he feels he can't break through the "old boy network" to make administrators understand the problems of Blacks on campus.

Some students say the battery of organizations for Blacks, Hispanics, Asians, gays and lesbians — and even separate pages for minorities in the undergraduate newspaper — give extra comfort and a coveted identity to outnumbered campus minorities. Blacks, for example, make up just 2.7 eprcent of the undergraduate population.

Many White students agree that campus minorities need extra attention to correct inequities.

But other Whites, angry about the special groups and the administration's consent to past demands are resentful.

"Just because they're a minority group doesn't mean they're right," said Melissa Steinbeiser, a junior.

Health scare closes food co-op

The People's Market voluntarily closed Friday after it was discovered one of its food handlers had hepititis A, said a University of Massachusetts health official Sunday. The market may not open again until after Thanksgiving break, a People's Market statement said.

A prepared statement from the People's Market released over the weekend said the food cooperative closed "as a precautionary measure to prevent the possible spread of hepatitis A."

"People who have been potentially exposed have been notified by public health," University Public Health Nurse Anne Lardner said. "If students have not been notified, they do not need to worry. [Students] can call the triage nurse at Health Services for further information about symptoms."

Lardner said the People's Market's Steering Committee came forward Friday, and said one of their food handlèrs had hepatitis A. By giving the workers immune serum globulin (ISG) shots, they have been immunized from the disease, Lardner said. To be effective, the shots must be administered within two weeks after exposure to the virus.

"The employees at People's Market were very responsive and cooperated with Health Services immediately," Lardner said. "The People's Market staff were wonderful."

Hepatitis A (infectious hepatitis) is a virus that causes liver swelling. Since the virus is found mostly in stool, it is usually spread when contaminated hands, food or water are put in the mouth and the virus is digested. Its spread is called fecal-oral transmission. From the time of virus contact to symptoms showing is about one month. The "classic" signs of infection is fever, fatigue, loss of appetite, nausea and jaundice (yellow skin and whites of eyes along with dark brown urine). Symptoms usually last one to two weeks. According to Lardner, rest is the best method.

—CHRISTINA ROTHWELL

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN
THEY USED TO DO THIS TO DRAFT CARDS AND BRAS — Northeast residents John Mayoek, class of '95, Nicole Thompson, class of '96, Luke Tabor, class of '96, Kevin Paine, class of '95, and Brian Srebrnick, class of '95, toast marshmallows in the Leach Hall fireplace.

Library receives Taiwan gov't files

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Library received the former president of Taiwan's 28-volume compilation of his political career from the government of Taiwan last Friday.

Alvin Cohen, department chair of Asian languages and literatures, said he was very pleased the government of Taiwan, which is called the Republic of China, remembered UMass when they donated copies of this 18,000-page work to libraries across the country.

"Considering how small UMass's Oriental collection is compared to Harvard's collection, we could have easily been forgotten," Cohen said.

Richard Talbot, director of the University Library, said he was glad the library received this specialized work, which records the history of the Taiwan government from 1975-1988.

"Taiwan provided UMass with resource materials it probably couldn't have gotten in any other way," Talbot said.

Cohen said former President Chiang Ching-kuo, who is the son of another former Taiwan president, Chiang Kai-shek, played a prominent role in the development of Taiwan.

"It was under his power and direction that the Taiwan government changed from a Third World country into the small economic powerhouse it is today," Cohen said.

Cohen said the gift is in recognition of the 18-year scholarly relationship between the Asian languages department and the Tunghai University in Taiwan.

"Knowing how expensive books are in Taiwan, this collection is probably worth a bundle of money," Cohen said.

Cohen said the Coordination Council for North American Affairs, which serves as the embassy for Taiwan, has always been helpful to UMass.

Cohen said after he explained to Shu-Kun Chen, the Coordination Council's director of cultural af-

Turn to LIBRARY, page 7

■ Upward Bound

continued from page 1

• set aside funds for a University Tutor Training Program for this spring.

• provide for at least 150 to 200 of the outreach program students to live in one to three residence halls in the same residential area. ALANA resident assistants would assist in their transition to the college environment.

Chancellor O'Brien viewed the proposal positively.

"It's a two-step process, and we wouldn't be fulfilling our educational mission if we didn't bolster our retention programs," O'Brien said.

Earlier this month, four paid students positions to organize student volunteers of color were created in addition to two positions for recruiters of color in the Admissions Office.

You love the Collegian – your mom told me so

Understanding Eating Disorders:

Strategies for Friends and Family

Wednesday - November 18
6:30 p.m. - 8:30 p.m.
University Health Center - Room 304

I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?

I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest...Where should she go?

I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid...What can I do to help?

If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.

Buddhist Enlightenment

American Buddhists Discuss Their Experiences With An Enlightened Teacher.

Enjoy An Evening Where Powerful Meditation Techniques Will Be Taught.

Learn About Our Exciting Self-Paced & Bodacious Program Geared For The 90's:

- Gain Personal Power, Happiness, and Wisdom
- Study With An Enlightened Teacher
- Learn Meditation Using Awesome Electronic Music
- Attend Field Trips to Hawaii & The Desert

Monday Night, Nov. 16, 7:30 PM Room 811
Saturday Night, Nov. 21, 7:00 PM Room 803

Campus Center Building

FREE FREE FREE

Free Music Tape For All Who Attend
Sponsored By The Boston Meditation Society
(617) 499-7985

■ atlas

continued from page 1

viewpoint into its scope. As a result, Tager joined the staff as a history editor.

Tager shares the credit for the finished product with his colleague Wilkie, as well as numerous other scholars and students who contributed so much to the project.

During the next three years, the comprehensive atlas that exists today began to take shape. Intensive work continued through 1988 until financial limitations forced the book to be split into two volumes.

All work then concentrated on the first volume, which deals with the historical and socio-economic facets of the state. The second volume, the "Physical and Cultural Atlas of Massachusetts," was suspended until more money was available. At this point, Tager officially became coeditor of the first volume.

A major problem the book addresses is the "regional" attitude of Massachusetts citizens who belong to individual communities, Wilkie said.

"People in Massachusetts tend to think of themselves as being from one of its 351 cities and towns, not from the state as a whole," Wilkie said. The "Atlas" is designed to give the people of Massachusetts a sense of common history and purpose. "The book helps people put their own community in relationship with the rest of the state," Wilkie said.

Wilkie believes the "Atlas" could make individual citizens recognize Massachusetts as part of a larger political entity. He also pointed out the striking resemblance between Massachusetts' history and that of the whole country. "The history of this state mirrors the history of the United States," he said.

The volume was completed in 1990 and published the following year by the University Press. Approximately 5,000 copies were printed for retail sale. State-of-the-art cartography and map-making technology were utilized, according to both coeditors. Most data used in the maps and graphics came from original research by project staff members and contributors.

The most important function of the book, according to Wilkie and Tager, is to reestablish the interest of Massachusetts' children in their surroundings on all geographic levels. They hope to accomplish this by educating the young about the past and present world of Massachusetts.

"By getting the 'Atlas' into the school libraries, we would like it to help people understand Massachusetts. . . that it has its own identity and they are a part of it," Wilkie said.

Recycle this newspaper

The Collegian– it's not just for breakfast anymore. It makes a great midnight snack too.

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9)
Amherst • 253-5072

PERSONAL
Nice, Affordable two and three bedroom Apts., seeking quiet, responsible residents. Long and short term relationship possible.
Call 253-3834

Monday, Nov. 16 Exhibition Viewing 3-6pm
7pm "Irish Ways" video, a retrospective of developments in Northern Ireland over the past 20 years.
Tuesday, Nov. 17 Exhibition Viewing 11:30am-6:30pm
7pm "Inside Belfast", slides and guest speaker DANNY BURKE, "Belfast Exposed" photojournalist.
Wednesday, Nov. 18 Exhibition Viewing 11:30am-6:30pm
"Belfast Exposed" is a presentation of the "Northern Ireland Report", and is sponsored by Residential Arts, UMass Arts Council, SACEF, UMass Solidarity, STPEC and PAWSS.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the entire Five College community.

The Editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Submissions must bear your name, local address and phone number in order to be considered for publication. This information is subject to verification.

Anonymous letters will be printed at the editor's discretion.

Letters should be no longer than 50 typed, double-spaced lines. Columns should not exceed 70 typed, double-spaced lines. Untyped submissions will not be considered for publication.

Responses to, or criticism of, columns, cartoons, articles or letters are limited to letter form (under 50 lines). Columns responding to previously published material will not be printed. Responses to or criticism of letters that themselves have responded to a letter, column or article will not be printed. Collegian staff are restricted from writing letters, but may write columns. Any exceptions will be determined solely by the editors.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material. Submissions become the property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writer and do not represent the views of the Collegian.

The Editorial staff is committed to honoring the above-mentioned policies in order to provide a forum for community discussion of issues.

Of Spandex and sweat

Let me begin by saying that this column has nothing at all to do with politics, race or controversy. It concerns much more universal topics: sweat, humiliation, Spandex, and the Enigma of the Aerobics Instructor.

College, in its charming way, allows me to engage, if not revel, in a generally self-abusive lifestyle. This may be the last time in my life in which insomnia is trendy and the breakfast of choice is coffee you can chew, potato chips and a handful of vitamin C. However, last summer I slipped gently back into the Mainstream and did the unthinkable. . .

I joined a health club.

Brooke C.
WHEELER

The Place: The Women's Club. The Time: the second week of summer. The Woman: Becky, 5'4," blond, freckles, peppy, punctuates everything ". . . Brooke." The Hard Sell: mauve carpet, lockers, showers and walls; sauna; suspended wood floor (?); plenty of masochistic machinery; one free manicure. The Sacrifice: $190 to Becky, the Goddess of Physical Penance. I am issued my own mauve membership card.

Week One begins happily: I feel goal-oriented, inspired and smug as I pull on new sneakers and shorts, do some informal stretching, and trot out to meet Stacy, who will administer the Orientation Chat and introduce me to the Machines.

Stacy lays it on the line. "Well, Brooke, we like to see our members in here at least five times a week, preferably six. Sign in each time you come in." Suddenly I notice a video camera over the entrance. "We ask that you keep track of your workouts on this [mauve] card. We'll check up on you every four weeks to monitor your progress." Gulp. I've paid money to be "monitored" by the Big Brother of Spandex.

Then she pulls out the tape measure. I am measured and catalogued, then ushered out into the sweaty fray.

It's now Week Three. I am slightly disillusioned, but in it for the long haul, committed via my wallet. General Lesson No. 1 was learned quickly during Week Two: the StairMaster is the enemy of natural human locomotion.

The idea is to keep up with a paced program by stepping on automated foot pedals. Existentially, this machine is the ultimate waste of time. It simulates what is intended by Nature to move a human from point A to point B. Only now Points A and B are on a little computer screen in front of you, and the rest of the scenery never changes. This steel incarnation of Satan eventually reduced me to clinging for dear life to the handlebars or draped in exhaustion over the computer screen, my feet moving mindlessly up and down.

Meanwhile, during the past three weeks I've been watching crowds of women bouncing and shrieking in the mirrored room across the way, the one with the "suspended wood floor." They appear to be having a grand old time while I stare at a wall and my legs walk/step/cycle beneath me. Week Four I get up the gumption and enter. . .

The Aerobics Zone. Rule No. 1: Dress code is enforced. Black Spandex Leg Things come in short, medium and long. Choose one, and wear them always. You have the option to alternate black with neon floral prints or geometric blotches, but Spandex Leg Things are non-negotiable.

Before my first class, Lisa the Instructor (the tiny woman up front in the thong-back Spandex Thing) does some extortionist stretches and chats with the regulars. I settle into place, not knowing that I had inadvertently bumped a regular from her "spot." This I am made aware of as she tries throughout the class to muscle me over to one side with deftly placed side-kicks and power lunges.

General Lesson No. 2: When you don't understand what the Instructor is screeching over the booming of Technotronic and Paula Abdul, just do your own thing and pretend everyone else is messing up. If your nonchalance is convincing enough, some other people might start to follow you instead.

The summer plodded on, I acquired some modest coordination, and started going "Woo, woo!" at intervals along with the rest of the regulars who annoy everyone else.

All things considered, the Health Club experience is not the futile, mindless horror some of us (used to) think. If you start taking yourself too seriously, an aerobics class is the quickest remedy.

After all, people need a humbling experience every so often to keep them, well, humble.

Brooke C. Wheeler is a Collegian columnist.

Not being George Bush just isn't good enough

I went to discover the meaning of the election last week. Down in the bowels of the Campus Center a panel including professors of journalism, history, architecture and education sat with First Congressional District Representative John Olver and limply talked it over. For Olver it looked as though the meaning of the election was that now it was over, he could finally get to sleep. He looked tired and haggard, rubbing his eyes, as stilting in his speech as Bush.

Jesse
ARMSTRONG

The poor man has been campaigning almost continually since June 1991. But by the end of the evening he looked even more tired, tired of all the complaints and the hectoring. With his head in his hands he seemed to want to say, "Look, we've won. He's not perfect, but he's not Bush, now get off my back for one minute."

Of course he couldn't say that though. Instead he rattled on about the minutiae of the big dirty wheels of politics, about Massachusetts representation on Congressional committees and House seniority positions. His talk was all deathly prudent, safe stuff: getting the country moving, breaking the deadlock.

Hearing him talk I remembered the depression I felt on election night, a curious depression that deepened as those around me at the Democratic victory celebration in Northampton grew more elated. Of course as the early results came in I felt a relief that the mean-spirited years of Reagan-Bush were finally over. But it was the nature of the win that started to depress me.

What mandate is less than one half of the just over the half the voting population? Think of it: three-quarters of the nation against or indifferent to Clinton's presidency. Additionally, the nature of the campaign was depressing. The Clinton strategy was an appeal to that section of the American public politicians like to "rediscover" every four years. The "forgotten" America that nobody is likely to forget, the White people in the suburbs who ever since 1968 have been pandered to and courted by the right. This year they were courted three ways, and Clinton lost. Bush won the majority of the White vote and Clinton only took the presidency because of the votes of the Black and Hispanic populations. The irony is that he ignored the interests of people of color during the campaign so as to better pursue the White suburban and Reagan-Democrat vote, knowing that Black voters had nowhere else to turn.

As Professor John Bracey of the Afro-American studies department pointed out, Clinton's was an excellent strategy for winning the White House, but not an auspicious start for governing the nation. It left a bitter taste in the mouth. Trying to understand the meaning of the election without race is hopeless, and during the discussion with John Olver one saw again and again a racial gap in understanding. The White liberal reaction to the election of a right-leaning Democrat was summed up as "cynical optimism," an overwhelming sense that "at least he isn't Bush."

There is a sense in which Black people are playing in a different political arena, the crises in unemployment, homelessness and crime are literally double the proportions of the same problems in the White population. So while the moderator in the debate blithely attempted to reinvent pluralism with hopeful references to "the spectrum of debate" and inclusion, he willfully ignored the fact that large sections of the African-American public are explicitly distancing themselves from the very terms of debate. For such sections terms like "social and economic injustice" are not platitudes, cheaply scattered, they are realities which might easily be converted to rebellion.

Of course there are always those predicting the apocalypse and catastrophe, but this is not to say the apocalypse never comes. During the summer of 1993 we might see the real meaning of the election played out in terms of a radicalized and disenfranchised Black population violently showing that not being Bush is not enough.

Jesse Armstrong is a Collegian columnist.

Mismanaging the Tower Library

I want to congratulate the Collegian for their responsible journalism in providing the follow-up story concerning Ms. Svetlana Speyer and her struggle with the University Library [Collegian, Nov. 3].

I was an employee of the University Library for five and a half years and I know first-hand about the abuse and harassment that is being reported. In fact, when someone leaves the Library and finds another job, the reaction of friends who know the system is, "Congratulations for getting out of there."

The Library management, from the director to the department heads (with some exceptions), consistently undermines the value and efforts of their employees to be full-functioning, creative and productive resources. The director has surrounded himself with several levels of insular management positions so he does not have to personally interface with the staff or policies which govern the organization. At no time have I found a director so removed from the internal affairs of an organization.

Spying, favoritism and personnel mismanagement are things I experienced while I was an employee. The stories that come out of the Library about employees being harassed to the point of quitting are numerous. The violence (intimidation, verbal assaults, management harassment) toward Ms. Speyer is indicative of an organization seriously out of alignment with its mission.

The Library is a large and complex organization requiring effective leadership and management in order to responsible serve the needs of the community, including its employees. The present management team holds the philosophy prevalent during the industrial revolution that workers are inherently untrustworthy and natural saboteurs of policy, rules and productivity. Modern management theory has evolved dramatically from this position to realize that workers are a principal asset and their alienation is counterproductive to organizations effectiveness and efficiency.

The University administration has sanctioned the Library's management system, a system based on absolute control, fear and punishment. The administration also refuses to intercede on an employee's behalf, even when they have been made fully aware of abusive policies.

It is time the Library management is held accountable. The present system certainly supports those who wield power, but their vision for an integrative, productive and satisfying workplace does not exist. It is time to stop abusive management practices.

It is time for management to work as a guide and leader to (and with) its staff. It is time to stop demeaning the staff and telling them they are the ones with the problems. It is time for the UMass community to know that the Library is another tinderbox of abuse on campus.

The Library, due to a lack of skills among most of its managers, is a stressful and chaotic organization in desperate need of reorganization.

Will someone responsible for the effective utilization of state resources and management practices please review this matter and take the necessary action to make the Library a more productive and human organization.

Edward P. McCreanor
Northampton

Needs of the physically disabled aren't being addressed

Students on this campus, quick to move whenever a wrong is done, can change many things. This is true, provided they recognize a situation in need of change.

One particular issue of interest is the apathy shown by the UMass administration toward the needs of the physically disabled on this campus.

Whitmore has tried to meet the needs of disabled students and succeeded in many areas. An example is awareness programming. However, there are major concerns that must be addressed and dealt with immediately.

There is the question of the tour the University provides during freshman orientation. While most students are given the opportunity to explore the entire campus, the physically disabled are taken on a pathetic van ride around the lower Central and Franklin Dining Commons area — only able to observe what they see from the van.

This is ridiculous. By only showing students a certain section of campus you are telling them that, during their four-year stay at UMass, they will be confined to that particular part of the campus. Anyone with a semblance of a brain will tell you that is obviously not the case. Student life involves the campus as a whole — for all students.

Ramps. An excellent job has been done with the ramp at the main entrance of the Campus Center Concourse. Observation shows us that many use this ramp instead of the other three offered. Why? After all, the back entrance of the concourse is also accessible.

Diana
D'AVANZO

Not really. That ramp is so steep many people needing to use it only do so once. Would you use the same ramp twice if you tipped over on it the first time?

What about the hotel entrance? That ramp would be perfect except that the hotel doors that must be opened to get in and out of the concourse are heavy and difficult to open. It is often hard for students in need of the hotel ramp to get in and out of the building through this entrance.

I mentioned the administration has done a good job in programming. Another area is accessible buildings. For the most part, buildings that house classes and other facilities are decent, though the new engineering building does not seem to be accessible. Why is this?

What the administration accomplishes in building accessibility, it lacks in dorm accessibility. Of the 39 residential buildings on campus, only four are accessible. You must be a graduate or exchange student to live in one and a woman to live in the other. That leaves two options open to the majority of the students, both in lower Central.

Another accessibility issue has to do with the dining commons. Franklin is an accessible D.C. Why is the lift from the ground to the dining area positioned in back of the D.C, forcing students to run a course through the kitchen to get to the serving line? And excluding Southwest, why do the D.C.s that close on holiday weekends alternate between Franklin and Worcester? After all, because of the dorm situation most of the physically disabled students live in lower Central. Shouldn't Franklin be open at all times?

The roads that run through campus must either be paved or repaved — especially the diagonal road that runs from the bus stop on N. Pleasant St., in front of the Fine Arts Center, to the Campus Center. The shoddy roads make it hazardous for disabled students trying to make their way around campus. Oh, I forgot, the administration wants disabled students to remain in the lower Central area. So maybe this is not a legitimate concern.

The administration has not done all it can to meet the needs of physically disabled students and this problem should be taken care of immediately.

Diana D'Avanzo is a Collegian columnist.

Playing the singles game

I was sitting in Silly Sud's, the new establishment in downtown Amherst, enjoying a cold beverage with my good friend Slats Grobnik, Jr.

"You know, Luke, my social life is so bad — watermelons are starting to look good to me."

Slats is from Chicago, and grew up with a father who never taught him tact. Slats tries very hard, but says pretty much what he thinks — and that gets him into trouble sometimes.

"You're comparing produce to the love and companionship of a woman?" I asked. "Don't you think that's a bit offensive?"

Luke
ERICKSON

"Well, no, but. . . remember in high school sex education? When they taught us how to put on a condom?"

"Let me guess, Slats, you felt you had to live up to a banana so. . . " Call it the Stop & Shop theory of sexual equality in Grobnikian philosophy. It looked like the amenities of being single and unattached was the day's discourse with Professor Grobnik.

"The problem, Luke, is that a lot of women just aren't honest — especially when they use the 'f' word."

"The "f" word?' Slats, this is a respectable place! They don't want people spouting off obscenities." I asked the serviceperson for another beverage and sat back for another spiel from the Slatsmeister.

"Actually, it's a six-letter word: 'friend.'"

"So what's so bad about that?" I asked.

"Well, you know when you're first trying to get to know a woman you're interested in, you have to delicately find out their social situation, you know, Luke?"

"Yeah, so where does the 'f word fit in?"

"Well, I'll ask her, 'So what did you do last weekend?" and she'll say, 'I went out with a friend,' but she doesn't make it clear what the gender of that friend is."

"Maybe it's because she doesn't want to scare you off because she's seeing other guys, but no one exclusively?"

"No, Luke, I've noticed even my platonic, hopelessly taken, just-about-to-be-engaged female friends do the same thing. It must be something inherent to the sex."

"So what do you do next, Slats?"

"Well, there are some tactics I use to get her to clarify who this 'friend' is, like, 'Oh, so it was the girls' night out?'"

"Does it work?"

"Not always, but it's the best I've been able to come up with." Slats sighed and finished his particular beverage and asked for another.

"So Slats, what do you do when you've reached the point where you're reasonably sure they're not involved?"

"I like to try something simple, not too involved — like going for an ice cream, or coffee at the Bluewall — something to get them more relaxed and sociable."

"How does that work out, Slats?"

"Actually, it's not too bad — it's pretty rare for me to get shot down at this point."

"So when do you get shot down?"

"Well, sometimes I feel like that general in the movie 'Hot Shots' who said, 'I've flown over a hundred missions — got shot down every time. I don't think I could even land a plane.' I think I have learned when to give up."

"How's that, Slats?"

"Well, when she stops showing up to the class where you used to meet her, or when she's always 'busy.'"

"What about when you don't give up?"

"Then I get to hear some classic lines on the level of, 'The check's in the mail,' or, 'Thank you for your interest,' or, 'It's only a cold sore.' The women's lines are like, 'I'm not ready for any kind of relationship right now,' or, 'I want to concentrate on school,' or even more classic, 'I already have a boyfriend.'"

"Slats! Dude! Man, that's bitter! But what do you expect?"

"I don't know. Maybe if women were a little less deceptive, and a little more truthful. Coy is cute, but only to a point."

"Dude, I'm sure guys do some of the same things."

"Yeah, but I'll stick with women — getting rejected by one sex is bad enough; I don't need to get rejected by both."

Luke Erickson is a Collegian columnist who sends his apologies to Mike Royko.

Privatization raises questions

Monday, Nov. 9, a labor/management meeting was held to quell rumors and discuss options being explored by Auxillary Services. Some discussion focused on possibly contracting out, or privatizing, Auxillary Services operations in the Campus Center. No action has been taken, but to entertain such ideas is distrubing, considering the contracting out already practiced at the power plant and Mullins Center.

My first concern is more layoffs will occur because of these actions, or existing employees will be absorbed into an expendable work force. If this happens, I will personally boycott those services privatized, and I would welcome the University community to do the same.

Of equal concern is the effect these actions would have on the authority fee structure. Through the authority fee students pay Auxillary Services to manage operations in the Campus Center. Privatizing implies Auxillary Services has not done its job very well. After all, management sets standards of performance. If contracting out occurs, will the authority fee continue to pay for services no longer provided by Auxillary Services? Worse, would these actions reap a short term benefit at the cost of a long term increase in the cost of an already expensive education?

These questions should be answered before contracting out, or privatization, occurs. Whatever happens, I urge Auxillary Services include student representation in any further discussions concerning privatization.

Employees here have gone years without a pay raise and have suffered an increase in health insurance costs. It is not the cost of labor driving up the deficit. Labor suffers first. And I'm not convinced there is no other way.

Justin P. Cobb
Chief Steward
Local 1776/AFSCME

American vets deserve respect, not insults

I'd like to respond to that little journalistic gem by Josh Reynolds [Collegian, Nov. 12]. Apparently, Reynolds is a little confused and very much ignorant of the meaning of Veterans' Day.

What Reynolds has made the mistake of doing, as well as many fools before him, is confusing the soldiers of our country who fight in our wars with the politicians who put them there. By not observing Veterans' Day for fear that he may be "passively condoning the wars they fought in," he denies those Americans fought and dies for our country and its people (and yes, Josh, this means even you) something as small as a brief "thank you," much less the honor they deserve for paying the ultimate price while in our country's service.

I suggest that Mr. Reynolds take a quick trip to the Veterans Hospital in Northampton. It's right down the road, Josh, and there you will find those individuals who made it out of our wars with their lives and little else. People with no arms or legs, some without minds. Have you ever seen something like that? Do you think they asked to be there? And to these people you would say what, Josh? "Hey man, it sure sucks to be you but what the hell, you asked for it."

And suppose your life turned out a little differently, Josh, and instead of pounding beers in Amherst with your buds, you were a surviving Jew in Buchenwald when the American liberators came. And to these men perhaps you would say, "Damn, I liked it here. Why the hell did you guys have to come?" I don't think so.

As a veteran of Desert Storm, I strongly take offense to your suggestion of renaming Veterans' Day "Pacifists' Day." This is an outright insult to all American veterans, dead and living. And I know that when I say this, I speak for all veterans. That kind of suggestion can only come from someone who is plainly ignorant of the role of the American soldier, and the debt that Americans so clearly owe them.

In an age of people trying so desperately to be recognized and respected as they deserve — women, people of color — you would take away the respect given to the very people who made this country free. I am disgusted, and am confident that many on this campus feel the same way I do.

Michael Milazzo
Sylvan

Economy not above society's well-being

I was deeply disturbed by Christopher Rodgers' article on General Pinochet [Collegian, Nov. 10].

Although Mr. Rodgers acknowledges the atrocities committed by Pinochet, he seems to forgive him for this because, after all, he created a strong Chilean economy.

This is the problem I have with many discussions on economic policy.

The economy is considered to be this important structure which seems separate from the welfare of individual citizens. The economy is merely a construct of our society and as such, its well-being should never be considered above that of all members of this same society.

Jennifer Klenz
Amherst

■ commission

continued from page 3

really illustrates the widespread influence of the gay community."

She also said she was impressed that the gay community in Western Massachusetts was adamant about including bisexuals. Laurie said there was some question as to whether the name of the commission should be changed to include bisexuals.

Tim Blake, an Amherst resident, said GLB youth experience isolation and desperation early in life. He recommended that education begin in the early childhood years, and continue throughout a child's schooling.

"We have to stop putting children's responsibility on children — they have enough to do," Blake said.

Amy Aaron, one of the directors of Face to Face, a GLB speaker's bureau in Northampton, said "we must elevate gay issues to the level of racism and anti-Semitism."

Aaron said all adults who deal with children in a school setting should attend sensitivity workshops in order to fully understand the problems GLB children face.

Panelist Sharon Bergman said it is important to utilize the media to greatest advantage. Bergman co-founded the Gay/Straight Alliance in Concord and said if she went to a public high school that didn't have a support group for GLB teenagers, she might have committed suicide.

Panelist Al Ferreira is an openly gay teacher at Cambridge Rindge and Latin High School. His school is one of the few in Massachusetts that has a support group for GLB youth.

He said more teachers need to come out to provide positive role models for GLB youth. Ferreira said GLB students who realize their teachers are gay, lesbian or bisexual and have not come out may be traumatized by the experience.

■ library

continued from page 3

fairs, that the library wasn't receiving adequate funding, Chen offered to help.

"Within a few days, the library received $850 worth of national bibliography and periodical index volumes the government of Taiwan," Cohen said.

Cohen said the collection, which records the political history of Taiwan, adds more research potential to the library.

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT

Miller
MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL
abc

Pre-Game Buffet
Pasta - Salad - Bread
All You Can Eat
$3.00

Half-Time Appetizer Blitz
1/2 Price

Buffalo & Dolphins

MONDAY NIGHT IS MILLER TIME!

Total Score Pool • Prizes
- Monday Night Stumper -
Drawing for Pats Tickets and Limo Ride
Week 17

University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

CAFE DICARLO

5-College Student Dinner Special

Choice of:
- Lasagna al Forno
- Chicken Parmigiana
- Shrimp all' Arrabbiata
- Pasta Primavera

Complete Italian Dinner, including choice of entreé, salad, bread, soda or coffee for $6.95, with college I.D.

Sunday thru Thursday 11:30 to 10:00.
Offer expires Nov. 30, 1992

71 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA
253-9300

DOMESTIC EXCHANGE PROGRAMS

NSE

Information Sessions
For 1993-94 Exchanges
5-6 pm in the Campus Center

November
Wednesday	18th	rm 803
Monday	23rd	rm 803
December
Wednesday	2nd	rm 803
Thursday	3rd	rm 917
Wednesday	9th	rm 803
Thurday	10th	rm 803

Five College Interchange

Pre-register Today ! In The Five College Office Deadline is Wed. November 18

It's a BIG COUNTRY! Discover it
The National Student Exchange Program transports you to new and exciting places that will transform your educational experience forever!!! You can spend a semester or year at one of 100 colleges and universities across the country for no more than the cost of your current education. Come to one of our NSE Information sessions to find out all about it!!!!

Aplications for Fall 1993 and Spring 1994 due by: December 18, 1992 Priority Consideration March 5, 1993 Final Deadline

COME TO THE
NSE
FIVE COLLEGE INTERCHANGE OFFICES
E-26 MACHMER
5-5351 or 5-5352

Take classes at Amherst, Hampshire, Mount Holyoke and Smith Colleges. Included in UMass full-time tuition, most courses 4 credits!

Add/Drop available in February

TAKE AN EXCITING COURSE OF ACTION!

REGISTER FOR A CFNR GEN-ED COURSE!
- Fundamentals of Applied Ecology (BS Gen-Ed/ FOREST 190A)
- Plant Diseases: Feast or Famine (BS Gen-Ed/ PLPATH 100)
- Plants, Soils and the Environment (I Gen-Ed/ PLSOIL 115)
- Organic Farming and Gardening (BS Gen-Ed/ PLSOIL 120)
- Insects and Human Society (BS Gen-Ed/ ENT 226)
- Environmental Economics (SB Gen-Ed/ RES EC 262)
- Introductory Statistics For Life Sciences (R2 Gen-Ed/ RES EC 211)
- Introductory Resource Economics (SB Gen-Ed/ RES EC 102)
- International Agricultural Development (SBD Gen-Ed/ RES EC 432)
- Soils (BS Gen-Ed/ PLSOIL 106)
- Intro. To Biotechnology (BS Gen-Ed/ AN SCI 200)
- Science of Food (BS Gen-Ed/ FD SCI 150)
- Nutrition and People (BS Gen-Ed/ NUTR 130)

OTHER INTERESTING SPRING '93 COURSES!
- Wildlife and the Environment (W&FBIO 197A)
- Herbs, Spices and Medicinal Plants (PLSOIL 290B)
- Intro. to Marriage, Family and Intimate Relationships (CS 176)
- Community Organizations & Services (CS 374)
- Contemporary Fashion Analysis (CS 357)
- Food and Health (FD SCI 101)
- World Food Habits (FD SCI 102)
- Intro. To Hotel, Restaurant & Travel Admin. (HRTA 100)

Check the Spring Pre-Registration Guide for course descriptions!

Register for a College of Food and Natural Resources General Education course and begin exploring one of the exciting majors available in CFNR. You're also welcome to call or come by 110 Stockbridge Hall to set up a time to meet with our Undergraduate Advisor, Yvonne Morand (545-1969).

CFNR
College of Food and Natural Resources
110 Stockbridge Hall

Pundits debate future of military ban on gays

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders urged President-elect Clinton Sunday to go slow on overturning the military's ban on homosexuals, arguing that sudden action would create a furor in Congress and could endanger lives in the armed forces.

"He ought to put it on the back burner," Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

"I can't give him any advice except to go slow," Dole said. "There are other things you can do by executive order that wouldn't blow the lid off the Capitol. I think this one might come close."

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, appearing on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," said "I think we ought to proceed very cautiously."

"If you did it overnight, I'd fear for the lives of people in the military themselves," Nunn said. "I think there could be some very emotional feelings. So I would prefer that it be stretched over a period of time."

Nunn, Dole and Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine, who appeared with Dole on the NBC panel show, said congressional action would be required to amend the Uniform Code of Military Justice even if Clinton did issue an executive order changing the policy.

"I'd be surprised if he won that vote," said Dole. Mitchell said, however, "I think the governor will be supported in that because I think he will do it in a sensible and prudent way."

The Arkansas governor said Wednesday in Little Rock that he intends to consult with military leaders about "the mechanics" of a change in policy. He did not say when this would occur.

"I don't think (homosexual) status alone, in the absence of some destructive behavior, should disqualify people" from serving in the military, the president-elect said.

A federal judge in Los Angeles reaffirmed on Tuesday his order that the Navy reinstate a homesexual sailor, but did not rule on whether the military ban is constitutional.

The sailor, Petty Officer 1st Class Keith Meinhold, who has returned to duty, said the effect of a change in policy on the behavior of gays in the military would be a "big fat nothing."

"The only difference would be that we would no longer have to look over our shoulder," Meinhold said on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

Former Army Naitonal Guard Col. Margarethe Cammermeyer, who acknowledged being a lesbian when questioned during a security check to attend the War College, said, "I don't think it's like suddenly the military is going to disintegrate."

Adm. Thomas Moorer, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, dissented, saying, "Sooner or later you're going to have men kissing each other and hugging and whatever . . . and the other sailors or soldiers or Marines or airmen would see it, and they would begin to give them names. Then, the first thing you know, there would be a fight."

Somalian ship starves

3,000 on Yemen-bound ship await aid

By ERIC WATKINS
Associated Press

SAN'A, Yemen — A French vessel loaded with emergency supplies of food and water raced Sunday to aid about 3,000 starving Somalis aboard a ship in the Arabian Sea.

But the rescue ship was not expected to link up with the refugee-laden cargo vessel, headed to Yemen, until Monday.

Sources in Yemen who spoke on condition of anonymity said they feared as many as 100 children may already have died of starvation or thirst.

Meanwhile, in the Somali capital, Mogadishu, a clan leader continued to demand that U.N. troops withdraw from the international airport, which they began guarding on Tuesday to protect planes carrying relief food and medicine.

About 1,000 supporters of Gen. Mohammed Farah Aidid, the clan warlord whose forces control much of southern Mogadishu, marched through the city shouting slogans such as "We don't want foreign troops."

Unidentified gunmen from another clan opened fire on the demonstration near the airport but no injuries were reported.

Thousands of Somalis have fled clan fighting and a famine in their country that has killed at least 300,000 people since January. Two million more are said to be on the verge of starvation.

A steady flow of refugees in small boats has headed north to Yemen, where United Nations officials have fed and sheltered them.

In Geneva, a spokeswoman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said the captain of the ship carrying the latest group of Somalis made a desperate appeal for water in a radio conversation with a French plane.

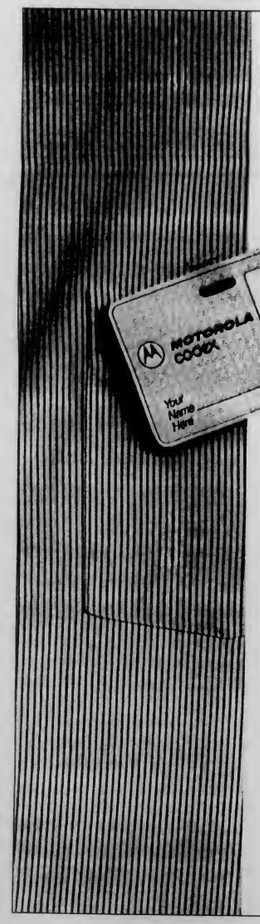
Spokesowman Sylvana Foa said the 1,6000-ton M.V. Sumaal was "crammed" with people and was running out of fuel.

"There is a serious sanitation problem," she said. "The ship is overloaded and it's going real slow."

Yemeni authorities have agreed to accept the thousands of refugees who have fled across the sea, provided the U.N. refugee agency takes care of them. There are now an estimated 62,000 Somali refugees in Yemen.

Yemen initially turned away the refugees, and in June a ship laden with 3,300 Somalis ran aground on Yemen's coast. At least 150 refugees died, either from starvation and dehydration or from jumping the ship to swim ashore.

Foa said she worried that when the French resuce boat, the Commandant Ducuing, reaches the Sumaal, refugees might leap overboard to reach it.



Proper Attire For The Well-Dressed Software Graduate.

Although fashions sometimes seem to change as quickly and with as much regularity as the weather, the simplest way to dress for success after graduation is still as easy as putting on a Motorola Codex employee identification tag.

As a wholly owned subsidiary of Motorola, Inc., Motorola Codex is the world's leading independent supplier of complete networking solutions. We provide all the elements for distributed data and voice networks, from a broad line of communication products to a full range of services including systems integration. And when it comes to starting a successful and rewarding career, few companies can offer you the unbounded opportunity you'll find at Motorola Codex.

In order to help us maintain and further strengthen our leadership standing, we seek to add open-minded, forward-thinking individuals to our staff in the following area:

Data Communications Software Opportunities
Canton, MA

Several immediate and future opportunities exist in a variety of challenging product development areas for recent graduate and undergraduate degreed students who have achieved GPA's of 3.0 or better, and possess solid backgrounds in the area of software engineering. These positions will involve performing design, development, test and sustaining engineering functions for our networking products.

To qualify for these opportunities, applicants must possess an MS or BS degree in Computer Science or Computer Engineering, be proficient in "C" programming language, and have experience in a UNIX® or PC environment.

Applicants must be presently authorized to work in the United States on a full-time basis as we are unable to sponsor individuals for the purpose of obtaining visas.

If you possess the intelligence and imagination it takes to be a leader, we invite you to join us – and finish off your wardrobe. To respond, please forward a copy of your resume to: Motorola Codex, College Relations Department-UMASSAM, 20 Cabot Boulevard/MH-70, Mansfield, MA 02048-1193.

We are an equal opportunity employer, M/F/D/V.

MOTOROLA codex

COLLEGIAN
Now, salt, fat, cholesterol free

AIM HIGH
PUT YOUR COLLEGE DEGREE TO WORK.

Air Force Officer Training School is an excellent start to a challenging career as an Air Force Officer. We offer great starting pay, medical care, 30 days of vacation with pay each year and management opportunities. Contact an Air Force recruiter. Find out what Officer Training School can mean for you. Call

TSgt Don Dawson
413-557-2866

AIR FORCE

ENVIRONMENTAL FIELD STUDIES ABROAD

- Center for Marine Resource Studies - Caribbean
- Center for Marine Mammal Studies - Baja, Mexico
- Center for Wildlife Management - Kenya
- Center for Rainforest Studies - Australia
- Center for Sustainable Development Studies - Costa Rica

For more information on Semester & Summer field research courses, come to our slide presentation on:

Tuesday, Nov. 17th at 4:15 PM
Wildlife Lab, Rm. 308 Holdsworth Hall

College Credit Financial Aid

THE SCHOOL FOR FIELD STUDIES
The World is Your Classroom

16 Broadway, Beverly, MA 01915, (508) 927-7777

Arts & Living

A dazzling, but disappointing Dracula vision

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES
Gary Oldman of "Bram Stoker's Dracula."

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

There's a moment in the spellbinding prologue that opens Bram Stoker's Dracula where Prince Vlad's (Gary Oldman) love, Elizabeth (Winona Ryder), kills herself because she feared her beloved Vlad had died in battle. As she lays "dead," her eyes start moving. It is a sad tip-off that the otherwise magnificent-looking Dracula will be unwound by the erratic performances of its well-intentioned cast and mercurial plot. But, admittedly, it will look damn fantastic while it's doing it.

Director Francis Ford Coppola lets his penchant for the image get the best of him here in this conflicting, almost cumbersome, "faithful" version of Stoker's classic 1897 novel.

Coppola has too many clashing themes in this Dracula; his attempt to make the vampire (Oldman, in a competent but ultimately disappointing performance) a somewhat romantic anti-hero mutes Dracula's horrific, dangerous side — it makes the conclusion a sort of bittersweet redemption that frankly doesn't connect with the rest of the film.

Add Anthony Hopkins' deadpan camp as Van Helsing, the vampire hunter (and the film's narrator) — who provides well-received if negating comic relief — and you've got a puzzling film where the pieces don't quite fit.

There are single and sets of characters that seem to be acting in different versions of Dracula; no one seems to know what direction the film is taking, so they all go in different ones.

After the magnificent prelude, the film sets down with the engagement of Jonathan Harker (Keanu Reeves) and Mina (Ryder). Harker is sent to Transylvania to close a real estate deal with Count Dracula, who wants to buy property in London.

With Lucy staying with a childhood friend, Lucy Westenra (newcomer Sadie Frost), Harker proceeds to Dracula's castle in a wonderfully macabre journey to the Carpathians. The skies have watchful eyes and an awkward dialogue conveys Harker's fear.

Once at the castle, Harker and the Count engage in an entertainingly bloodthirsty cat and mouse game. Oldman excels as the old Dracula; this is the wicked glee that ignited his portrayls of

Turn to DRACULA, page 11

The Sunday's go Blind with their melodic, rainy-day rock

By AUSTIN RUTLEDGE
Collegian Correspondent

Blind
The Sundays
DGC Records

There's a wooden ladder leaning against the side of my neighbor's house. The ladder sits between a stretching pine tree and a dying rhododendron.

Layers of paint flake from the ladder, and in the daylight it's easy to see how the chips have fallen on the leaves below. When it gets dark, the ladder merges with the shadows cast by my neighbor's gutters, and it gets really hard to see its outline clearly.

Late last night, as I stood in my neighbor's wet grass watching the street lamps cast strange shadows all over the ladder, I had my Walkman on, and the tape for the evening was Blind, the new offering from Bristol England's The Sundays. It was the time of evening when everyone was inside, asleep. The sky above me was nothing but a black pitch, and the only sound I could hear was my own breathing.

Some may think my chilly setting a little strange, but I felt that this was an appropriate backdrop for listening to Blind. But maybe I need to explain that The Sundays, who scored big in 1990 with their debut album Reading, Writing and Arithmetic, have always come across to me as a gloomy, post-gothic, 'put me in my grave now' type of band.

The majority of their songs are written in minor keys about sad topics, like death or ending relationships. You might remember the affecting song, "Here's where the story ends," off Reading, which received a lot of well-deserved airplay a few years back.

Indeed, The Sundays are becoming a well recognized group who take their rainy-day rock quite seriously. And so, my rationale last night was — wouldn't The Sundays appreciate my efforts to distance myself from the crowd? Isn't this just the type of escapist setting that their new tape's 12 melancholic songs call for?

Squatting in the grass, I become submitted to the first song off the tape: "I feel." It begins sharply, and immediately I am paying attention to it.

Harriet Wheeler, the vocalist of The Sundays, does a nice job in allowing her vibrato to careen between the well-textured guitar of David Gavurin and the melodic bass line of Paul Brindley. She seems to hit a peak at about two minutes into the tune, when she sings "I was dreaming and I'm tired of everyone." And as the song comes to its tightly wound conclusion, I dig inside my pockets for gloves.

The second song on Blind is titled "Goodbye" and its definitely 'right on' in terms of possessing a danceable, Manchester, England-style groove. Wheeler's voice intermittently tip-toes around, giving an unexpected twist to a simplistic pop song. I like the words "So this is what it comes to/am I cold or just a little bit warm?" And in a sulky way, the song does a nice job of suggesting the inevitable dooms of a relationship.

With the subsequent songs on the first side, "Life & Soul," "More," "On Earth" and "God Made Me," Blind quickly and deservedly earns the distinction of 'best Cocteau Twins album I never heard.' Each of these four songs offer an echoing guitar backdrop, well-seasoned by Harriet Wheeler's commanding voice in the forefront. There are memorable lyrics on "More," when Wheeler swoons "We all know/we can't be alive anymore and by now you could say/there's a problem." And I can also appreciate the condition Wheeler experiences during "God Made Me," as she sings "And the face that you had is becoming a blur."

With a stretch of the legs and a flip of the cassette, I find that the second side of Blind provides a nice balance to the first. Its standout track is the acoustic-guitar-driven cover of the Rolling Stones' "Wild Horses." I must admit, The Sundays deserve a lot of credit for a gutsy reinterpretation of the Jagger/Richards classic, doing it in a highly original way that retains all of its deep emotionalism. In the song, Wheeler's pleading voice reworks the melody, sounding as if it were bouncing off

Turn to SUNDAYS, page 10

3 Credit Recycling Class
Educ2-354
Intro To Future Studies
Learn about recycling and other waste mgmt issues from the people who deal with them every day!
WHEN: Tues 2:30 - 5:00
Spring '93 Semester
SCHEDULE #211663
CALL 545-1153 FOR MORE INFO.

COLLEGIAN
Don't just read it, eat it

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL

GRANT DEADLINE

FRIDAY, OCT. 23

Single Project/Event Grants for music, theater, visual art and design, performance art, literature, film and video, and other arts related events.

PROPOSALS ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS

APPLICATIONS GUIDANCE/INFORMATION STOP AT STUDENT ACTIVITIES OFFICE OR UMASS ARTS COUNCIL 209 HASBROUCK OR CALL 545-0202

Mongo Santamaria and Charlie Sepulveda
Nov 28rd
1992
Student Union Ballroom UMASS
8pm
Tix: $12 UMASS
$14 Other
Day Of Show
$13 UMASS
$15 Other
Tix Available at:
UPC Productions AND AHORA

COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN
COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN COLLEGIAN

GRAND OPENING TODAY!

MONDAY, NOV. 16, 1992
10AM – 10PM

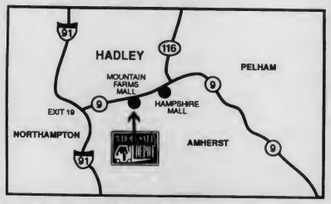
The newest and most exciting shopping concept is coming to your neighborhood!

Please join us Monday, November 16th for the GRAND OPENING celebration of the WHOLESALE DEPOT warehouse in Hadley, MA.

Join millions of wholesale club members who shop for everything for their homes and businesses, all at unbelievably low, everyday wholesale prices!

Joining is easy! Business and Individual members pay $25 annually to shop the lowest everyday wholesale prices. Flex members can join for free and pay 5% above our posted wholesale prices.

- Food Samples
- Product Demonstrations
- Drawings Every Hour!



WHOLESALE DEPOT

Special Holiday Warehouse Hours:
Monday-Friday 10AM–10PM
Saturday 9AM–10PM • Sunday 12PM–6PM

Special Extra Hours for Business Members:
Monday-Friday 9AM–10AM

Address:
Mountain Farms Mall
Route 9, Hadley, MA

Join as a Business Primary Member and get a Household Card for FREE!

FREE ONE-DAY SHOPPING PASS
Name:
Address:
City:
State: Zip:
Pass users pay 5% above wholesale prices
#0990000052

■ Sundays

continued from page 9

the walls and ceiling of a church.

Another track deserving of mention on this second side is "24 Hours," my personal fave off the tape. It features some nice chord changes and the immortal line "And I liked you for 24 hours in your house."

It is from lyrics like these, that it becomes easy to draw comparisons between The Sundays and the highly popular, although now defunct (since 1988), English band The Smiths. And if indeed there are any shoes left to fill by The Smiths' songwriting team of Morrissey and Johnny Marr, these Sundays are relentlessly trying them on.

By the time the tape comes to an end, I've decided to head inside. Leaving the ladder and its setting for a more comfortable environment, I take a seat in my kitchen. As I begin drinking my evening standard, a warm glass of milk, I come to some conclusions about The Sundays and their new tape Blind.

The Sundays' have an ace in the hole, and her name is Harriet Wheeler. With the release of Blind, Wheeler remains one of the most underrated singers on the planet. She uses he voice as a means of inviting us into the music of The Sundays, and she serves us tea too. Wheeler possesses the type of voice that can at times be hard and rigidly fixed, and at times it can become softer than a pair of wax lips.

With Blind, The Sundays have released a mellow offering, well worthy of a good listen. Their debut release, Reading, Writing and Arithmetic, agreed by many to be a "nice album to listen to when you're in the bathtub," was lacking of a bad song, and Blind continues the tradition.

Although there isn't much overwhelming musical virtuoso or high level of risk taking in the creation of any of these 12 songs, they are well-assembled and flow quite nicely. I guess 'nice' is a good word for this tape, for Blind is a tape you can listen to while falling asleep; it sweeps by us like a late evening's masturbation session. Without a hint of aggression, Blind reeks of an incredibly well-adjusted air.never heard.'

CTB CENTRAL TRAVEL
Clip & Save
Bring This Coupon to "CENTRAL TRAVEL" And Save
$25.00 or $50.00 Off* on Continental Airlines
549-4900
CENTRAL TRAVEL
25A Pray St., Amherst
(In the D.H. Jones Real Estate Building)

Make the most of your retirement years.

To make the most of your retirement in the future you need to make the most of your retirement plan today.

At our free seminar, we'll show you an extraordinary new investment opportunity for your 403(b) plan. Through the Merrill Lynch Retirement Selector℠ Account you can invest in an extensive selection of Merrill Lynch mutual funds. You also have the flexibility to move in and out of the funds as your financial objectives or the economy changes.

And to help you make your investment decisions, a Merrill Lynch Financial Consultant will work with you to determine your individual financial situation and expectations.

Learn more about how the Retirement Selector Account can help you make the most of your 403(b) plan by attending our free seminar. To reserve your place, call one of the numbers below or return the coupon.

DATE: Thursday, November 19th
TIME: 7:30 a.m. - 9:00 a.m.
PLACE: Lord Jeffery Inn, Amherst (Continental breakfast will be served.)
SPEAKERS: Michael P. Sarsynski, Jr. and Kate Rutherford, Merrill Lynch Financial Consultants
RSVP: 413-785-4100 or 1-800-288-0445

Mail to: Merrill Lynch, 1331 Main Street, Springfield, MA 01103. Attn: #9664/9454
☐ Yes, I plan to attend your free seminar. Please reserve ____ seat(s).
☐ No, I cannot attend, but would like to receive more information about the Merrill Lynch Retirement Selector℠ Account.
Name ____ Address ____
Business Phone (___) ____ City ____
Home Phone (___) ____ State ____ Zip ____
Merrill Lynch clients, please give the name and office address of your Financial Consultant:

Merrill Lynch
A tradition of trust.
© Copyright 1988 Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. Member SIPC

Sophocles' classic reborn

An outstanding cast shines in Women of Trachis

By SHAWN McDONNELL
Collegian Staff

Looking out at Fang Guo Wen's scenic design for Women of Trachis, one can detect an artful confusion of setting. Prehistoric cave drawings give way to imperial banners, rough-hewn stone pillars are offset by a web of iron scaffolding, and the looming image of a volcano stands in counterpoint to a spherical sun design, reminiscent of an Egyptian Aten.

The idea of setting Sophocles' classic play on the very continuum of history could not be more perfect for professor Robert Bagg's new translation. Just as Bagg's text escapes the trap of existing imagery by translating the familiar "Hercules" as the less loaded and less evocative "Heracles," so do Wen and director Keith Oliver chase away all the popular conceptions of Ancient Greece.

The images and mood of Trachis are sensational, and sensationally evoked, but part of their brilliance is contained in the feeling that you are experiencing something new. The tragic hero Heracles is far removed from his romantic origins. As depicted here, he is not the dashing man-god we generally picture, but a cold-hearted murderer and misanthrope.

This interpretation owes a great deal to 20th century sensibilities, yet it also helps to elevate the action of what might otherwise be a hero-worship play. Director Oliver has Heracles jumping easily from hero to anti-hero, and allows the audience to savor a potentially deadly act by his queen as a possible act of retribution, instead of just a mistake.

The new depth that this production gives to its characters does not serve to cheapen the work in any way. On the contrary, the added levels of meaning make a good thing better.

Women of Trachis is the story of Deianira, second wife of Heracles, who is informed by a prophet that within 15 months her warrior husband will return to her unharmed, or will be dead. Under Oliver's direction, Women is also the story of repressed emotions and hidden agendas, in which a marital break-up has repercussions on a national, if not mythical, level.

The new translation, by University of Massachusetts English Professor Robert Bagg, is so flawlessly conceived and executed that Bagg must almost be considered a true playwright. He has done more, here, than convert Greek words to English. He has created new poetry from the old.

Some of Bagg's most impressive work is contained the traditional Chorus songs, which accompany the unfolding action. Led on by composer Geoffrey Hudson and marvellous lead-singer Jennifer Costello, the nine-woman group creates a lyrical, almost ethereal, sound. Choral music has never sounded never better.

The dramatic cast proves equally exceptional, thanks to a trio of powerful lead actors who are not afraid to be unlikable. Certainly, any show which casts the excellent Laurie Ciarametaro (Pyrra in last semester's In My Abyss) in a supporting role better have one hell of a leading cast, and Women does not disappoint. Brenda Lee Cahill plays the troubled Queen Deianira with the perfect mix of sorrow and venom, and James M. McClure is outstanding as her distant, troubled son.

However, the finest performance of the evening belongs to Edward M. Jewett. One of the most consistently outstanding performers on this campus, Jewett pulls of his two lead roles with ease. He is staunchly perfect as the devoted warrior Lichas, and his depiction of Heracles is a masterwork of mixed signals.

Like the mythical figure himself, Jewett's Heracles is such a tightly bound bundle of contradictions that one can both admire and despise him. When his fate is finally decided, one feels both relief and sorrow.

Women of Trachis may not serve well as a historical documentation of Greece in the time of myth, but its focus on the power of words and human actions makes a powerful and moving piece of theatre. Sophocles, I believe, would have approved.

Women of Trachis is being performed at the Rand Theatre. Additional performances remain Nov. 18-21 at 8:00 p.m. Tickets are available at the FAC Box Office.

THE 'SPOTTED OWL CROWD' ENCOURAGES YOU TO RECYCLE THIS COLLEGIAN. BEST WISHES FROM PRESIDENT BOZO AND MR. OZONE MAN

THE COLLEGIAN WANTS YOU, SO COME JOIN THE FUN AT 113 CAMPUS CENTER.

SPEAKER: Ehud Ya'ari
Israeli Journalist & Author
"The Middle East Peace Process in Light of the Recent U.S. and Israeli Elections."
TUESDAY • NOVEMBER 17th
7:30pm
MAHAR AUDITORIUM
GEN. PUBLIC: $3
STUDENT: FREE
Sponsors: UMASS Hillel, UMASS Judaic Studies Dept, 5-College Hillel

WELCOME BACK!
Round Trips from New York Starting at:
CANCUN $ 310
LONDON 330
SAN JOSE C.R. 470
BERLIN 498
WARSAW 625
BANGKOK 949
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change & availability. Call about one ways. We issue EURAIL passes on the SPOT!
Council Travel
79 South Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
256-1261

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湖園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over: $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $6.50
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

■ Dracula

continued from page 9

Joe Orton and Sid Vicious can be seen through the layers of well-designed makeup.

When he catches a glimpse of Mina in a picture frame, catching the resemblance between his long-dead wife Elizabeth, he begins his obsession to bring him and Mina together, fulfilling his notions of eternal fate and love.

However, once Dracula turns young, attempting to woo Mina while sucking the blood out of Lucy (the condemnation of Lucy's feminine sexuality is nicely noted), Dracula spins unexcitedly out of control. Its exquisite shadow play and outstanding visuals become the centerpiece of the film, while the story and the actors fall into a inconstant vacuum, doing their own thing.

Lucy's suitors, played by Bill Campbell, Cary Elwes and Richard E. Grant don't do much except look alike. When they join Van Helsing on a quest to drive a stake through Lucy's vampire heart and cut off her head, their story becomes some kind of gothic "Scooby-Doo" episode, with Hopkins spouting well-timed one liners and negating the horror of Lucy's fate.

And finally, as the cast races against the setting sun to kill Dracula, their thin motivations are revealed; who exactly are these people and what the heck are they doing? The conclusion — and indeed the entire film — is less operatic than it thinks; it's anticlimactic and unsatisfying. What this Dracula winds down to, regretfully, is a mantle of brilliant images, but without a fire burning beneath it.

The meandering cast doesn't help, either. Rounded (indeed, any) characterizations become yet another casualty of Coppola's image-intensive Dracula. While Hopkins gives the most identifiably performance, Oldman's vampire is fairly commendable. Though it's not the tour de force one might and should expect from this resourceful actor, he and Hopkins stand out slightly simply because the rest of the cast is so bland.

I felt somewhat embarrassed for Winona Ryder here, her performance was shaky and unfocused at best. Her relationship to Dracula should release and empower her sexuality, instead it fizzles. And except for the fact Dracula is more exciting than Keanu Reeves' Jonathan, Ryder and Oldman don't exude the kind of chemistry you'd expect in a story with such a screaming horror and erotic core.

Keanu Reeves, quickly becoming the Melanie Griffith of his gender, looks like he's performing in a bad high-school production (complete with fake gray hair). Thank goodness he wasn't in more of the film; he's more of a non-character than any kind of force.

In fact, Dracula skimps on everyone. There's a subplot with Tom Waits as Reinfeld, a Dracula disciple who's locked up in an insane asylum. Adding no kind of point to the film, it was as if Coppola just wanted to film goofy insane asylum sequences. Like the three suitors, he seems more to exist for the sake of appearing faithful to Bram Stoker's original vision than to contribute to the story.

What Dracula did extremely well was concoct a wonderfully intricate use of old-fashioned cinema trickery. Emphasizing shadows, mirrors and other in-camera effects gave the look and feel of an old-fashioned film. Though it echoed the 1921 silent Nosferatu a bit too much, it seems that was precisely the point. But even this is ultimately frustrating because this is yet another unresolved and inconsistent theme in a sea of too many subtexts.

Bram Stoker's Dracula is a disapointing mish-mash of too many thesises that don't connect, never mind resolve. While lovers of the technical and purely visual aesthetic may relish Dracula's eye-candy merit (it works superbly on that one level), an erratic cast, weak characterizations and a sadly incoherent plot make this Dracula a false-epic; full of hot-air, bloody pretensions and lofty ambitions but severely lacking in bite.

Grade: C+

The Undergraduate Student Senate is sponsoring a General Meeting for
ALL GRADUATE STUDENTS
on campus racism and campus solutions
Thursday, November 19, 7 PM
Cape Cod Lounge
Some strategies already in progress:
- working with the Center for Teaching to develop training sessions on racial awareness for all TAs/TOs
- working with Deans and Grad School to develop new approaches to language barriers for graduate students and faculty
- petitioning administration to create civility class for all undergraduates

Urban educators to tell Clinton success stories

By JON MARCUS
Associated Press

WELLESLEY — Sensing an opening for change, representatives from urban schools worked through the weekend to devise a strategy for educational reform that they can offer to the president-elect.

But this group was selected to provide examples for Bill Clinton and other policymakers of success — not failure — in their inner-city schools.

"People want to hear from people who are dealing with the problems," said William Slotnick, director of the agency that organized the conference. "Advocacy hasn't worked before because educators have said, 'Give us the money and we'll show you results.' We'll show you results first."

School, business and political leaders who met at a campus conference center here to jockey for position in the looming educational reform debate said there was urgency about reform now after years of laggard progress. They were to launch the National Urban Reform Network Monday to spearhead their strategy — and to do it at the very start of Clinton's presidency.

"What we are doing this weekend is planting the seeds," Ben Canada, superintendent of schools in Jackson, Miss., said Sunday. "We have to prepare the soil before spring is over, get the seed in the ground and then nurture it through some of the dry spells and the rainy season until the harvest comes."

If schools can't make their case within the next few months, he said, "then it will be too late, and our children will suffer another year."

Clinton pledged in his campaign to rebuild the infrastructure — roads, bridges and public works — "and we're part of the infrastructure," said Jerry Kohn, superintendent of schools in Millburn, N.J.

"This is a very opportune moment," Kohn said. "This network is organizing at a time when there is an opportunity to invest in education."

School systems that comprise the network have examples of success to show. They are Arkron, Ohio; Albuquerque, N.M.; Des Moines,; Indianapolis; Jackson; Long Beach and Sacramento, Calif.; Salt Lake City; and Savannah, Ga.

The systems serve a total of 450,000 students, nearly 60 percent of them minority and more than half low-income.

CHRISTOPHER HUGHES / COLLEGIAN

WHAT'RE YOU LOOKING AT? — The Campus Pond swan goes head to head with a daring photographer.

Committee to approve state pay raise

BOSTON (AP) — A key legislative committee is expected to approve a pay raise for about 40,000 state workers at a cost of $50 million.

"This was bargained, this was agreed to, this is in recognition of the fact that many state workers have gone four or five years without any adjustment," House Ways and Means Chairman Thomas M. Finneran said.

Former Democratic Gov. Michael S. Dukakis approved a 13 percent raise for state workers in January 1991 as he left office. But Republican Gov. William F. Weld has blocked the raise, saying it was unaffordable.

The Ways and Means Committee, Finneran said, it likely to approve a raise on Monday — probably a 13 percent hike to be parceled out over the remaining months of this fiscal year, which ends June 30, 1993. He said the committee is unlikely to make the increase retroactive.

"This has to be subject to our ability to afford it," Finneran, D-Boston, told the Boston Sunday Herald.

There have been no across-the-board pay raises for state workers since before Weld took office.

House leaders said the raises would cost $50 million to $60 million this year.

But Weld has warned that awarding an immediate 13 percent raise and making it retroactive would cost $422 million in this year's budget, putting the state into the red.

Weld's fiscal advisers also say that declaring a non-retroactive 13 percent raise effective Jan. 1 would cost $130 million in the current accounting year.

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton /Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

★ ARMY BARRACKS ★
Genuine U.S. & European Military Clothing & Equipment
Largest Surplus selection in New England with the lowest prices

★ Dutch and West German Six-Pocket Cotton Field Shorts & Pants $10 - $20
★ Mexican Baja Pullover & Blankets (100% Cotton) $12 - $15
★ Large assortment of Guatemalan and Mexican goods
★ Down Feather Mummy Sleeping Bags & Cover $35 & $50
★ Genuine Issue Camo, Desert, Tiger, urban Black Six Pocket Pants $26 & $28
★ World Flags (3'x5') $10 each/2 for $18 Over 150 Countries
★ NATO Field Jacket $20
★ Grateful Dead Stickers and T-Shirts
★ Large Selection for Book Bags & Duffles
★ Levi Shorts, Pants, & Coveralls
★ Genuine MA-1 Flight Jackets & M-65 Field Jackets
★ New & Used Combat Boots $5 to $40
★ Raybans 40% off
★ Special Order Dr. Martins
★ Tapestries & Tie-Dye Sheets $15 to $20
★ Surplus Leather Bomber & Bike Jackets

LOCATION: Univ. of MASS Student Union Ballroom
DATE: November 16th thru 20th (Mon. - Fri.)
TIME: 9:00 - 7:00 PM
SPONSORED BY: Cape Verdean Student Alliance

M/C ★ VISA ★ AMEX ★ DISCOVER ACCEPTED

CALVIN AND HOBBES

By BILL WATTERSON

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

"Oh, wonderful! Look at this, Etta — another mouth to feed."

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

TANGENT By KURT MATTILA

Quote of the Day

"Be wild, I thought, be a gypsy: go for broke."

– Madeleine Blaise

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Group efforts could be the key to increasing your net worth. Secret information will unlock the door to your dreams. Spending money on fun and friends proves rewarding tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An in-depth confidential talk with someone who holds the reins can speed your rise to the top. Eliminate frivolous spending. Keep the evening hours free for romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good luck is with you in negotiations; play for high stakes. Although advice from an older person may be hard to swallow, you cannot afford to ignore it. Enjoy a favorite sport later today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Never mind making plans for the future; stick to what is going on today. A loved one could throw you a curve ball. Why get called out on strikes? Deal with practical matters.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The solution to a problem may be linked to other people's resources. Spruce up your appearance. An up-to-date image will help you make an excellent impression.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take a chance while luck is on your side. Bold thinking could lead to wonderful romantic or financial gains. A secret plan may be right on the money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): No matter what the weather, this should be a sunny day for you. A journey comes to a happy ending. Romance is in full bloom. Tonight, live it up!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Tempers are touchier than usual; this is no time to act aggressive or seeks favors. A go-it-alone approach will probably be most productive. An evening phone call brings welcome news.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Work is a challenge. Although you are sacrificing a lot, your friends and family give you a sense of well-being. Stay with tried-and-true allies.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are clear-headed about finances today and should back your thoughts with action. A chance encounter could be a blessing in disguise. Do not be too quick to accept your friends' advice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Comparison-shopping leads to bargain buys for holiday gifts. Do something that emphasizes your freedom-loving nature. Romance may have its ups and downs tonight; keep the conversation light.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lady Luck deals you a winning hand today! Trust your know-how to make everything work out well. Be on guard for sly moves by supposed allies.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

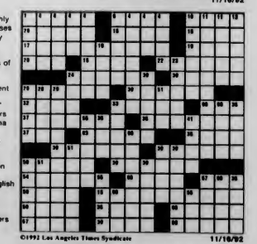
ACROSS
1 Shillong is its capital
6 Port in NW Israel
10 Historian's concern
14 Classic cater
15 Ball-and-stick game
16 Brilliantly colored fish
17 "Madam, I'm Adam", e.g.
19 Goad
20 Heggard title
21 Shadow
22 Fourth —
24 Fictitious
26 Martinique volcano
27 Loot
30 Desert in N. Africa
32 Mont Blanc's locale
33 — of roses
34 Guevara
37 Pointed beards
40 Range of vision
42 Cobbler's tool
43 Inquired
45 Lease
46 Regard highly
48 Vast expanses
50 Sew loosely
52 Couched
54 Mysterious
56 Namesakes of skater Babilonia
57 Entertainment org.
60 "— the line"
61 Headmasters
64 Atlanta arena
65 Cry of Bacchanals
66 Customary
67 Pro —
68 Anglo-Saxon slave
69 A A —: English author

DOWN
1 Horned vipers
2 — Johor: Builder of the Taj Mahal
3 Shopper's delight
4 Cuckoo
5 Of the mind
6 "— in Paris"
7 Calmest
8 Toronto museum, for short
9 Robert —
10 Type of art
11 Eastern mountain region
12 Pan-fry
13 "— Coins in the Fountain"
18 Pals
23 "— the rod .."
24 Iron —
25 Trite
27 "The Forsyte —"
28 Till the soil
29 Iridescent
31 Forage
33 Awry
35 Blow your —
36 Hot times, in Calais
38 Consumed
39 Japan or Siam add-on
41 Molt
44 Lova or hata
47 Sports aranas
48 Of a lyric poem
49 A metallic element
50 Ulan —
51 Fragrance
53 Saree wearer
55 Rapier
57 Large hammer
58 Campbell or Stewart
59 — of Capri
62 Campers' transports: Abbr.
63 Pressure letters

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

L	O	V	E		S	H	A	M		C	R	E	T	E
A	C	A	I		H	E	I	R		R	O	A	N	S
T	H	I	S	T	E	A	R	S		S	P	S	S
H	O	M	E		A	N	D		A	W	A	Y
		E	M	S				C	O	E	D
T	H	I	S		B	I	T	H	E	A	R	T	M	Y
A	A	R	O	N		S	T	E	R		A	D	A	K
C	A	R	L			M	O	R	E			C	O	S
F	I	S		M	O	R	A	L		C	O	S	T
		L	E	T	T	U	C	E		S	L	E	D
		D	E	L	I		O	A	T	S		T	O	A
P	U	T	T	I	N		O	R	D	E	R		I	N
S	L	E	I	G	H		S	N	E	E	R		D	U
S	L	E	I	D	S		B	E	E	R		D	O	R

11/16/92



©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/16/92

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Copy Editor ..... Sarah Levesque
PhotoTechnician ..... Tom Haller
Production Supervisor ..... Lisa Jezowski
Production ..... Jason George, Challis Meehan

Menu

LUNCH
Ravioli Alfredo
Chicken Cutlet
BASICS LUNCH
Ravioli Alfredo
Falafel Pocket

DINNER
Beef Strips w/ Peas
Cheese Strudel
BASICS DINNER
Veggies w/ Tofu
Cheese Strudel

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

field hockey

continued from page 16

offensively in overtime."

With UMass' penalty corner neutralized, the forwards had to work hard for opportunities. Jelley, Salisbury and Danielle Borges stretched the Penn State defense with their speed. But they did not create any one-on-one opportunities, the forwards fought and created most of the penalty corners.

The wet and soft grass field was not up to 100 percent, but it seemed to affect Penn State more than UMass. The Penn State players were more tentative because of the surface, and were unable to even get a shot off during their three penalty corners.

The Nittany Lions' home surface is artificial turf, and after playing Temple there on Thursday, Morett said she thought the transition was tough.

"I would've liked to have more than two days to prepare for the field," she said. "On Friday, when we got here, we practiced in a swamp. On Saturday, we practiced in a semi-swamp.

"The games on grass which we have played well in are those which we've had time to prepare," Morett said. "This is a tournament, though, and you have to deal with how the cards are dealt. You can't control the weather or the field conditions."

The Minutewomen's toughest foe in the game was neither the field, the weather, nor the Nittany Lions, although Penn State did wake up after regulation and made a few uneasy moments for UMass goalie Philippa Scott. Scott, who made only three saves for her 13th shutout of the year, had a strong defense in front of her and handled every Penn State threat with relative ease.

No, the toughest foe Sunday was UMass' case of bad luck. Player for player, UMass was great. Strong performances by Holly Hockenbrock, Colleen Duffy and Kathy Phelan helped UMass control the game, but the team couldn't break through.

women's soccer

continued from page 16

defenders.

Reifer evened the score in the 53rd minute when Thornsbury crossed a ball from the left flank. UMass' Holly Hellmuth dove and knocked the ball down. The ball banged around until Reifer one-timed it from 12 yards out to the right of Scurry.

Massachusetts battled back and had a number of chances to take the lead. Colleen Milliken, Smith and Rachel LeDuc each played well creating the attack.

"Massachusetts played very well today," Daniels said. "Give them credit, they play with heart and they never quit."

"I thought we had them right before [Thornsbury's] goal," Rudy said. "We had our shots. Our freshman played well and we created some chances. We just didn't finish them."

GROCERIES TO YOUR DOORSTEP
Amherst • Northampton

▪ No time or energy to get the grocery shopping done? ▪
▪ Entertaining guests and need groceries fast? ▪
▪ Limited access to transportation? ▪
▪ Weather conditions slowing you down? ▪

Call 586-4795
We Take Orders 24 Hours/Day

Unbelievably Low Shopping and Delivery Prices
Call Today!!!
Listen for our ads on WHMP!

GROCERIES TO YOUR DOORSTEP
The smart way to help get it all done!!!

Winter Session 1993

Yes, you can!
Yes, you can!
So, do it!

Register for Winter Session classes.
Special enrollment restrictions do not apply for Winter Session.
So, if you're a UMass student, all you have to do is just sign up.

WINTER SESSION:
- a unique "mini-semester," just three weeks long
- earn 3 academic credits in only 3 weeks
- over 100 credit courses, including gen. ed. designated classes

Your chance to:
- take a class you couldn't get before
- make up credits
- meet graduation requirements
- lighten your spring course load

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.

Catalogs available on campus or at the Division of Continuing Education, 6th floor Goodell.

January 4-25

INDIGO Girls

with Special Guest:
The Roaches

December 6th 8pm
UMASS Fine Arts Center

TIX: $18 UMASS students
$20 others
Available at the Box Office
Tickets go on Sale Nov 16th!

UPC PRODUCTIONS

TWO WINNERS WILL BE CHOSEN BY RANDOM DRAWING!

COLLEGIAN CONCERT SWEEPSTAKES!

WIN A PAIR OF FREE TICKETS
ACT NOW!!!

LOS LOBOS
At
Pearl Street Nightclub
Tuesday, November 17, 1992

TICKETS/ OFFICIAL ENTRY FORM

Name _____

Phone # _____

RULES
Must be at least 18 years old to enter. Tickets are non-refundable.
Drawing to be held on Monday, November 16, 1992 No entries will be recieved after 3:30 PM on 11/16/92.
Collegian staff are not eligible to enter. Winners will be contacted by telephone.
Drop off entries at Collegian business window, 113 Campus Center (basement), UMass, Amherst.
Winners are responsible for picking up tickets at the Collegian office before 3:30 pm on Tuesday, November 17.
Only one entry per person will be accepted. Only official entry form from newspaper will be accepted.

football

continued from page 16

In beating the Minutemen, Maine did what no team had done thus far, stop the ferocious UMass defense. The mammoth Black Bear offensive line (combined weight 1357 pounds) allowed only one sack of Colon, as the Maine offense racked up 367 yards in total offense.

"We didn't do anything special [to stop the UMass defense]," Colon said. "We just came out today and played smashmouth football."

It was this brand of smashmouth football that dropped the Minutemen to 7-2 (5-2 in the YanCon) while denying UMass' bid to tie the school record for most consecutive wins at eight.

UMass would fall behind 21-7 early in the first quarter, and when Minuteman quarterback Andrew McNeilly was intercepted with just under four minutes left, it appeared a valiant effort by UMass had gone for naught.

Nobody told UMass this though, as the Minutemen would make things very interesting in the game's final three minutes.

Four plays after Larry Jones picked off McNeilly, Minuteman tailback Jason Mumford atoned for an earlier fumble at the goal line, blocking a Jerrod Thebarge punt at the goal line and falling on the loose ball to cut the Black Bear lead to eight.

UMass had a chance to pull within a touchdown on the ensuing extra point, but sure-footed kicker Jim Maguire's extra point was wide right and the Minutemen had their backs to the wall.

Things got even hairier for Maine on the kickoff, as Maguire got off a picture-perfect on-sides kick that UMass' Timmy Lambright recovered at the UMass 49-yard line.

UMass would finally run out of gas four plays later, as a last-ditch McNeilly scramble fell short of the first down at the Maine 42-yard line, as the 6,001 fans at Alumni Stadium sat in stunned silence.

"We knew coming in that it was going to be a war," said UMass all-everything Don Caparotti, who had a fourth quarter punt return touchdown nullified by a penalty. "And Maine just came out on top."

Maine would get on the board first Saturday, as fullback Gordon Willey plowed through the heart of the UMass defense early in the second quarter, giving the Black Bears a 7-0 lead.

A McNeilly to Matt Stefanski scoring strike just before the half knotted the game up at seven, but that was as close as the Minutemen would get as Maine pulled away for good with two second half touchdowns.

"Before today we were on a seven-week high," said Hodges. "Now we just have to bounce back next week. . . that's part of athletics."

Game Notes: Maguire's missed extra point was the first of his UMass career, and snaps his consecutive streak at 35 in a row.

• Caparotti recorded his seventh interception of the season, leaving him one short of tying the UMass single season record of eight.

playoffs

continued from page 16

Some people, however, think UMass deserves more respect than it has received this season and that the Minutemen should be ranked higher than 16th.

"The division 1-AA rankings are ridiculous," said Maine head coach Kirk Ferentz. "UMass is a top-10 team and they deserve a playoff spot."

Maine middle linebacker Dan Girard agreed with Ferentz.

"They're a good, solid team," he said. "They have a great defense and should be ranked a little higher."

The Minutemen could have made great strides toward a playoff berth with a win against Maine on Saturday, because Delaware (first in YanCon at 7-1) lost to Richmond. However, the Minutemen will have to prove a lot next week against the University of New Hampshire to convince the division 1-AA selection committee to include them in this year's playoffs.

Game Notes: UMaine tailback Ben Sirmans and quarterback Emilio Colon certainly lived up to their billing as Maine's best players as Sirmans had a career best day with 170 yds rushing on 32 carries and Colon was 11 for 16 for 127 yds. Colon also rushed for 31 yds and demonstrated the scrambling ability that makes him the second best QB in the YanCon.

"Colon made some nice calls," said UMass defensive tackle John Creamer. "He recognized our gutsy style of defense and took advantage of it." Hodges on Sirmans: "We were concerned with his ability to run going into the game and he ended up doing a nice job."

The Collegian will love you like your parents never did.

Grand Opening
November 1, 1992
THE MUG SHOT

Create your own Customized mug with your favorite picture or sayings, or let us take your picture at our Hampshire Mall Location.
A great gift idea for friends, family or anyone.

Create a mugful of memories for a lifetime.

Coupon
Grand Opening
The Mug Shot
Coupon Value is $3.00 toward Purchase of a mug with Student ID.
Coupon Expires December 15, 1992

COFFEE SHOP

Free 12 oz. Soda
with the purchase of a
Sandwich, Burger Entree or Large Salad
and this coupon

Coupon valid Mon., 11/16 through Fri., 11/20

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE

CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center

PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Institute for the Healing of Reiam Tuesday 7pm CC RM 903 All Welcome

ANNOUNCEMENTS

3 Credit Recycling Class – Educ2 354 Intro to Future Studies. Learn about recycling and other waste mgmt. issues. Spring Semester Tues 2:30 - 5:00. Schedule #211663, 545-1153 For more info

Study in Peria w/UMass Boston Program director will meet with interested students in CC 804 Tuesday Nov. 17 1pm

AUTO FOR SALE

1983 Audi 4000 5 speed excellent condition $1200 Negotiable. Call 256-0171

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

FOR RENT

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom homes on bua route call 586 4270

Amherst remodeled frm 4 bedroom apt on bua route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

Furnished bedroom house, south of Amherst. Washer/dryer. $700 + 253-7178

Live in Northempton Looking for tenants to take over lease of a spacious 3 rm Haven located in lovely downtown Northampton. Rent includes heat only. 850 a month. Lease this house while you can it's hot

One room in 3 bedroom Pulton Apartment Rent 226/mo Plus Available Januery 1 1993 to June 30 1993 Call Anne 549-7718 in avening before 11pm

Teka over our lease at Brandywine, 2 bedroom heat and hot water included. Inlcudes free gift! Call 549-0081 avail Jan. 1

FOR SALE

Albinar telephoto lens 135mm Like new condition Bayonet mount $80 BO 545-1028 or 253-2018

Cheap Car stereo equiptment: Pioneer Supar-tuner, Pioneer 3-way speakara, Black Hawk 100w Amp. All for $250 or BO Call Don at 256-3018

Fly south 2 one way tickets Hart - Miami 1 male 1 famale $100 Each BO 549-4454

1979 Toyota Corolla Runs Great 91000M $700 or B/O Amos 546-4029

MAC SE/30 w/lots of additional software 2MG/80 asking 1800 or BO call 774-2567

Tendy 200 Portable computer 2 Powar Paca + case and manuala Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

HELP WANTED

JOBS! Are you looking for a resume builder? UMass Telefund is hiring! Flexible hours, good pay, and great experience. Come down to the basement of Memorial Hall for an application or call 545-3509

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT Make $2000+ per month teaching English abroad. Japan and Tanwan. Many provide room & board & other benefits! Financially & culturally rewarding! For program Call: (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

Prof seeks personel care assistance in SOM 12-2:30 most days M-F Salary negotiable Call 549-0117 after 5pm

Wait Persons – Apply in person after 4:00 p.m., except Mondays. Nini's Ristorante 124 Cottage St. East Hampton, MA

WANT TO TRAVEL FREE, EARN CASH AND RESUME EXPERIENCE? Students and orginations Call College Tours to join our team! We have 25 years experience, great prices, hotels and destinations. Call 1(800) 950-4SUN

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SIESTA ask for Bonnie

LOST

Lost A pair of red glasses in pink case Plesa call 6-3570 if found

PERSONALS

Audrey Would you like to talk again. Call me or meet you at the "bench" Tues or Thurs same time L.

BCG RA's WOW! You folks are very appreciated Love VG & MG

Heather I'm psyched to be your big sis! We are going to have the best time I Phi love you Jen

Koren You invede my soul. Happy 19th! Hope you hae an awesome day. Love JSS

This week Hemlin House Council wishes a Happy Birthday to: Michael Belanger Nicholas Bouillon Timothy Hillard Ibrahim Rafaz El Naahar Cedric Savineau David White Andrew Ziegler

To N.B. Deeply sorry for my actions on Wednesday 10/11/92. May those past events prove to strengthen our friendship in the future. Sincerely, C.I.C.

To: The Candle Woman I met at the Amerst College Library on 11/9 Whan can I light your candles again? Respond with another personal From: The Lighter Man

Tracy K. Happy Birthday! Have a super duper day! Love April & Carrie

Tracy, I'm so glad the! I'm your big sister. Get ready for a great time this week! Phi Love, Kim

ROOMATES WANTED

Female sublease single in Mill Va. Spring Sem. Cell 253-3406

Female to share large room 167.50 call 665-7604

Furnished bedroom available in Colonial Village. Looking for responsible and mature person. Not a party spot. Call Andy at 253-9880 evenings for interview

Need 3 Housemates M/F Jan 1st 5 min to Campus 549-7619

Roomate wented to share 2 BR Brandywina Apt. starting Jan. 1. Call Tom 549-2853

3 Responsible women Need housing for Spring semester Deaire place near UMass Call Young-Hi 546-0580 or Jen 4978

SERVICES

Pregnent? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Tarot Readings Call Chris 256 0821

SPORTS CARDS

SportStop Cards Coming Dec. 1st Mountain Farms Mall

TO SUBLET

Sublet wanted for winter session Must be within walking distance to campus room/apartment Call Maria 546-6630

TRAVEL

Save on spring break '93 Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida from $119! Book early, save $$$!! Group discounts!! 1-800-426-7710

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed – Free cover page, spell check. $1.25/page. Brian 546-1795.

Typing - Word Processing Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations. Laser Printing Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268

WANTED

Looking for 2-4 bedroom apt. For Spring 93 546-0749

Sports

Women's soccer stopped by Hartford

MATT KAHN/ COLLEGIAN

Colleen Milliken and the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team lost 2-1 to Hartford Sunday in the second round of the NCAA tourney.

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

HARTFORD, Conn. — University of Hartford midfielder Michele Thornsbury yesterday scored with 14:05 remaining in regulation to give the Hawks a 2-1 victory over the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team.

Massachusetts (16-4) jumped out to a 1-0 lead on a first half goal by Courtney Smith. Hartford (19-1) battled back and scored two in the second half to knock the Minutewomen out of the NCAA Tournament.

"It's a tough loss, but Hartford earned it," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said. "We played well enough to win today. We did some nice stuff out there but Hartford kept coming at us."

Thornsbury capped the comeback effort off an indirect kick five yards above the top of the box. Hartford's Kim LeMere tapped the ball to Thornsbury who blasted a bullet over the Massachusetts defensive wall and into the top right corner. UMass keeper Briana Scurry dove but had little chance on the shot.

"It was a real nice shot by a big performer," Hartford coach Austin Daniels said. "Thornsbury has a good shot and anytime we can set her up for a shot, there's a good chance it could go in."

The first half was 45 minutes of action-packed soccer. Massachusetts jumped on the board in the 40th minute when Lisa Mickelson sent a direct kick up to Kim Eynard at the top of the box. Eynard flicked it up to a driving Smith, who was in alone on Hartford keeper Karen Romano. Smith touched the ball once and from 10 yards out shot to the lower left corner for her first career goal.

"Kim was yelling for someone to go up so I went," Smith said. "Kim sent it in perfectly over the top. No one saw me. They didn't realize I was coming in. I just shot to the left and it went in."

The goal stood for the remainder of the half, marking the first time all season Hartford had trailed at halftime.

"When they scored, we panicked," Hartford's Jessica Reifer said. "I didn't know if we could come back because we didn't have much experience at that. UMass was playing so well. I got nervous but our seniors settled us down."

Daniels said, "The goal shocked us a bit. I told them not to panic and to just keep playing our game. I knew if we kept getting good chances we'd score because we have good finishers."

The good chances were plentiful in the second as Hartford barraged Scurry with 21 shots. Hartford utilized its front speed to create runs, and used its backs to extend the field and open up room for the front people. High-scoring forwards Kim LeMere and Rose Daley were kept out of the play most of the time by UMass

Turn to SOCCER, page 14

Minutemen lose home finale to Maine 21-13

Colon, Sirmans lead Maine win

By CHRIS CUDDY
Collegian Staff

All good things must come to an end as the University of Massachusetts football team learned the hard way Saturday, losing to the University of Maine 21-13 while watching their seven-game winning streak and quite possibly their NCAA Division I-AA playoff hopes go by the wayside.

The Black Bears (6-4, 3-3 in the Yankee Conference) rolled into McGuirk Alumni Stadium with nothing to lose and rode the big shoulders of tailback Ben Sirmans (32 rushes for 165 yards) and the right arm of quarterback Emilio Colon (16 attempts, 11 completions, 127 yards, and one touchdown) to upset the favored Minutemen.

"We just couldn't find a way to get it done today," said UMass head coach Mike Hodges. "Our guys never quit. We just got beat by a good football team."

Turn to FOOTBALL, Page 15

Playoff situation muddled for UMass

By JEFF HOJLO
Collegian Staff

A week ago, University of Massachusetts football head coach Mike Hodges said his team could control its own playoff destiny by winning its last three games.

UMass (7-2) succeeded in the first of these three games by beating the University of Richmond, but yesterday the Minutemen's playoff hopes were dimmed (but not gone), as they lost 21-13 to the University of Maine Black Bears at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

In order to make the Division 1-AA playoffs, UMass has to win next week against New Hampshire and hope a few of the other 1-AA "bubble teams" lose and, more importantly, that the playoff selection committee really wants UMass football to be a part of the 1-AA playoffs.

"We had it under control, but we lost that control today," said Hodges. "Now who knows what happens. . . we have to be very, very fortunate to make the playoffs.

"We just have to come back mentally strong next week against UNH."

Turn to PLAYOFFS, Page 15

JOSH REYNOLDS/ COLLEGIAN

Quarterback Andrew McNeilly couldn't run away from the University of Maine Black Bears Saturday. The Black Bears upset UMass 21-13.

Field hockey heads to Final Four with 1-0 win

MATT KAHN/ COLLEGIAN

Jenn Salisbury (far left) and Penn State goalie Shelly Meister watch as forward Tara Jelley (far right, on ground) scores to give the UMass field hockey team a 1-0 overtime win and a berth in the NCAA Final Four next weekend in Richmond, Virginia.

■ field hockey

continued from page 1

and defending national champion Old Dominion, will head to Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond to decide the national championship next Saturday and Sunday.

"This was the game of a lifetime," UMass head coach Pam Hixon said. "We were solid on defense all day, but I thought the kids were a little nervous in the first half. Once we felt that confidence, you could see things swing our way."

The Minutewomen (21-1) controlled the first 70 minutes but could not break through, despite many golden opportunities. At one point in the second half, UMass harassed Meister with five penalty corners in the span of one and a half minutes. The best of the bunch came from sweeper Natalie Hart, who launched two rockets that were stopped in front of the cage.

Jelley and Salisbury also had great chances earlier, but Salisbury's shot in the first half following a penalty corner trickled just left, and Jelley's point blank shot ten feet away in the first half was saved by the freshman phenom Meister.

Meister was the second hot goaltender the Minutewomen have faced in two weeks (they were up against Temple's Donna Porter last week), and she was the only person on the sluggish Penn State team who stopped UMass. Meister made 15 saves, with most of them coming at critical points. Penn State head coach Char Morett said she hoped Meister would keep her team in the game until the offense got going.

"Shelly played well and we held them for a long time," Morett said. "We were just hoping to get something going

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 14

Tuesday November 17, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 48

Continued cold today with the possibility of some light snow fall.

Sports:
The University of Massachusetts women's cross country team placed fifth at the ECAC Championships this past weekend. Page 16.

Arts & Living:
Cutter Garcia and Art Stapleton take a look at the cool happenings on the hit television show, Beverly Hills, 90210. Page 9.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

Clinton focuses on rebuilding economy

By KAREN BALL
Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — President-elect Clinton and Democratic congressional leaders promised a "new era" of action on Monday, and said creating jobs and restoring America's economic power would be their top priorities.

"I will be in a hurry," Clinton said at a joint news conference with Democratic lawmakers.

"Gridlock is over and cooperation and teamwork have begun," said House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt.

Clinton declared an end to "the Cold War between the Congress and the White House" and promised, "Pennsylvania Avenue will run both ways again."

"I can't say for sure which will and what won't pass within 100 days," he said. "I'll just work as hard as I can and get as much done as quickly as I can."

Clinton said that during his first meeting with congressional leaders all hands agreed that "creating jobs, raising incomes, getting our economy moving again, and the long-term competitive strength of the American economy" was the No. 1 objective.

Democratic leaders shared his commitment, Clinton said, to health care reform and bringing down the deficit.

Those attending Sunday's session included Gephardt, House Speaker Tom Foley and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, Vice President-elect Al Gore and Clinton's wife, Hillary.

"Our dinner last night marks a new era of cooperation and action in our nation's capital," Clinton said.

The President-elect has said in the past that a short-term jobs package might come first on his priority list to get through Congress.

On Monday, he sought to downplay expectations for what would emerge form Congress in his first 100 days, saying he expected to forward proposals on thorny issues such as health care to Capitol Hill promptly but not necessarily see them enacted immediately.

Clinton brushed off speculation that Republicans would try to tie his hands, and said the scope of America's problems would be his biggest hurdle. He cited the "mammoth complexity" of health care as one of the huge challenges ahead.

"I think the problems are likely to give us far more difficulty than the personalities," he said.

In a wide-ranging news conference, Clinton also:

• Said that despite the deficit, he'd make good on his campaign pledge of tax breaks for the middle class.

• Reiterated his intention to lift the ban on homosexuals in the military despite opposition from military leaders and Sen. Sam Nunn, a Georgia Democrat who chairs the Senate Armed Services Committee. Clinton said anew he would consult with opponents in working out the details.

Nunn is said to be under consideration for secretary of defense and Clinton said their disagreement on the issues wouldn't hurt the senator's Cabinet prospects.

"One of the things that has gotten presidents in trouble in the past, big time, is having people around them who were afraid to disagree with them, even in private," Clinton said.

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

BOWLED OVER — Guest artist Sherinatu Fafunwa demonstrates Nigerian pottery techniques in the University Craft Shop.

Fire smokes out TOC

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

Despite bellows of grey smoke rising from the Campus Center's roof, the fire that occurred last night at 8:35 p.m. in the ventilation ducts on the 11th and 12th floors did not cause serious damage, according to Amherst fire fighter Jim Johnson.

The "moderately-slow burning" fire started in a kitchen fan and spread from the ventilation ducts In the 11th floor to the 12th floor, fire officials said. Johnson said within the hour of the fire's detection, it was extinguished.

"It was contained in the duct work and in some pipe traces," Johnson said.

Donna McLaughlin, a Top of the Campus Lounge waitress, and Mike Spanknebel, TOC lounge bartender, said they were working in the lounge when the fire began. McLaughlin, a sophomore exercise science major, said there were about 20 patrons in the TOC at the time of the fire.

"It was mostly smoke," McLaughlin said.

"It has only happened once in the three years I have been here," Spanknebel said. "The smoke was the worst. That is why we decided to clear the floor."

Soon afterwards the Campus Center Hotel, the Campus Concourse, and offices throughout the building were evacuated.

Olivia C. Auss, a computer specialist from Grenoble, France, was staying for two days on the seventh floor of the Cam-

Turn to FIRE, page 4

UMass professor gains honor

Wideman says appointment is rare for minorities

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

A Black University of Massachusetts English professor said his recent appointment to one of the nation's most prestigious academic societies is undermined by the continuing racial unrest on this campus and throughout the United States.

John Edgar Wideman said his recent appointment as a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences can be seen as a personal achievement and used as evidence that sometimes minorities are recognized for their work, although they are usually not. He questions how much progress has really been made toward racial equality.

"[The award] says we have a long way to go," Wideman said. "The reason it's so rare for Afro-Americans is because there are so few in academia."

The fact that the system doesn't utilize everyone is "very wasteful," Wideman said. "With all our problems, we need to use everybody's talents."

"It's not a vindication, but shows how difficult it is for certain groups," said Wideman, who emphasized the importance of seeing the achievement in the wider context of American politics.

"Wideman is regarded as one of the most gifted writers in America today," states the Academy's citation for Wideman.

Michael Thelwell, novelist and professor of Afro-American studies, said Wideman's appointment is "a well-earned recognition of John's career . . . he's one of the toughest, most serious, thoughtful and accomplished voices in American letters.

"The fact that he himself understands and questions the establishment in the context of contemporary American social realists is an indication of that clarity," Thelwell said. "His presence on campus brings honor to the institution and one hopes inspiration to students."

Wideman won the Pen-Faulkner Award for Fiction twice. His novel Sent For You Yesterday, called one of the 15 best books of 1983 by the New York Times Book Review, won the award in 1984, and Philadelphia Fire won it in 1990. In 1991, he was awarded the Lannan Literary Fellowship for Fiction. In 1990, he received the American Book Award for Fiction.

"Anytime I win an award, I feel obligated to take pride and honor and speak out," said Wideman, who pointed out the racial problems on campus.

"It's depressing, because it's the same stuff I saw 10, 20 years ago," Wideman said. "But the students are encouraging."

Turn to WIDEMAN, page 12

COURTESY UNIVERSITY NEWS OFFICE

University English professor John Edgar Wideman has been elected a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Senators seek MIA answers in Indochina

By GRANT PECK
Associated Press

HANOI, Vietnam — War stories of Vietnamese veterans who fought the Americans could provide important clues to help resolve the fate of the 2,265 U.S. servicemen missing and still unaccounted for in Indochina, Sen. John Kerry said Monday.

Kerry, leading the team of three senators from the Select Committee on POW-MIA affairs, asked Vietnamese officials if Pentagon researchers could attend the first meeting of a veteran's association to gather oral histories that might shed light on the missing.

"That would be a very historic beginning of a soldier-to-soldier process of answering questions," said Kerry, who served a tour of duty in 1968-69 as a navy officer on a gunboat in the Mekong Delta. "We are not looking for recrimination. We are looking for answers."

Vietnamese officials with the group applauded the idea of collecting such oral histories, but said they would have to consult with other officials.

Kerry and Sens. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., and Hank Brown, R-Colo., on Monday began a three-day visit to Hanoi with a promise from Deputy Foreign Minister Le Mai to get the "clearest possible answers" to any questions they raised.

Kerry said he carried a letter from President Bush to the Hanoi leadership. Although he would not disclose its contents, he said it was a "sign of the importance of direct contact to get this matter resolved."

Although Kerry did not speculate on how quickly normalization could proceed, he said he had been told that if cooperation on the MIA issue was forthcoming, Bush would want to reciprocate.

He and Brown both warned that the desire of U.S. businesses to enter the Vietnamese market should not take precedence over the concerns about the missing.

Turn to POW-MIA, page 4

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

You, too, could be writing for the Largest College Daily in New England. All it takes is a little bit of motivation and a walk down to room 113 in the Campus Center Basement. Put pen to paper (or head to keyboard) and see your name in print. Results guaranteed.

TRAVEL SMART THIS WINTER!
FROM NEW YORK
Roundtrip / One Way
London $305 $165
Paris $398 $219
Rome $525 $320
Oslo/Stockholm $458 $229
Tel Aviv/Istanbul $639 $329
Guatemala City $390 $205
Costa Rica $430 $225
Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Customs-immigration and departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*in NYC

News from other U's

only by Dan Wetzel and only in the Mass. Daily COLLEGIAN

To join the Dan Wetzel fan club, write to the Collegian at 113 Campus Center, UMass or call 5-3500

Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual FORUM

The GLB Forum lists events of interest to the Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual community. The GLB Forum is compiled by the GLB Issues Editor who can be contacted c/o the Collegian.

Tuesday, November 17

Meeting — The Faculty/Staff Group for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns will meet in the GLB Program Office in Crampton House from noon - 1:30 p.m.

Wednesday, November 18

Pizza — The GLB Grad Student Group will have a pizza lunch at the Program for GLB Concerns' Office in Crampton House, Southwest, from noon - 1 p.m.

Meeting — The Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance will hold its General Meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the LBGA office, 413B Student Union.

Thursday, November 19

Film — The Law of Desire, a passionately erotic film by Pedro Almdovar, will be shown at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center Room 903. Sponsored by the Program for GLB Concerns.

Meeting — The Lesbian and Bisexual Women's Union will meet from 9:30 p.m. - 11:30 p.m. in the LBGA office, 413B Student Union.

Friday, November 20

Social — The Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance will host its weekly coffee social at 3 p.m. in the Campus Center Room 903. Come enjoy coffee and munchies and meet new queer friends.

Sunday, November 22

Cafe — The Program for GLB Concerns will sponsor a Cafe, featuring Erica Wheeler, a folksinger, and Timothy Liu, a poet, at 7:30 p.m. in Hampden Theater. A $3 donation is requested.

Monday, November 23

Brown Bag — As part of the Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Studies Brown Bag Series, John Craig will discuss "Bisexuality, Mythology and Masculinity: Gods, Heroes and Changing Male Roles," from noon - 1:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, 9th Floor.

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day

Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

ASSAULTS

• University police arrested a 19 year-old student Friday and charged him with assault and battery and two counts of assault with a dangerous weapon (a knife and a jagged can). The student was taken into custody at 2:51 p.m. in McNamara Residence Hall.

• A Resident Assistant in Van Meter Residence Hall was assaulted by an individual after attempting to stop a group of unruly males gaining illegal entry into the dormitory on Sunday afternoon. Police are investigating the incident.

• Judicial action and possible court complaints will be sought by police in connection with an alleged assault and battery that occurred between three individuals on Sunday. Police were alerted to the disturbance at 2 p.m. and proceeded to John Q. Adams Residence Hall, where the fight is alleged to have happened.

VANDALISMS & ANNOYANCES

• A derogatory note was discovered in the suggestion box of Crabtree Residence Hall on Friday, according to police. The note was discovered at 10 a.m. and was directed towards a specific Resident Assistant.

• University Police were called to Lincoln Apartments to settle down a large group of people Friday evening. The group was gathered to watch the heavyweight boxing match, according to police.

• Staff members from Patterson Residence Hall discovered racial graffiti on the walls of the mens bathroom on the third floor on Saturday morning, according to police.

• Racial and satanic graffiti was discovered on the walls of a bathroom and the first floor lounge in Dwight Residence Hall on Saturday, according to police.

• A plate glass window was reported smashed in by Staff members at the Franklin Dining Commons on Saturday. Police value the window at $500.

• Sexual graffiti was written on a basement stairwell in Patterson Residence Hall on Saturday, according to police. The graffiti was discovered at 10:45 p.m.

• Felt from a pool table in Leach Residence Hall was slashed and cut away on Sunday. Police estimate the damages to be worth $300.

• A woman reported an annoying telephone call to police on Sunday. Police said the woman received a call from a male who offered her money and then began to ask personal questions.

THEFTS & DISTURBANCES

• University police and Amherst Fire Department responded to an active fire in a soda machine in Thoreau Residence Hall on Saturday. Police estimate the damages to be in excess of $1,000.

• A woman reported a window on her car had been smashed in on Saturday. The car was parked in Lot 12 at approximately 11 a.m. when the damage was discovered, police said. Police estimate the damages to be worth $300.

• A man reported his car was broken into and the stereo stolen to police on Saturday. Police value the stereo to be worth more than $150.

• An unknown vehicle reportedly struck a woman's parked car on Saturday, causing $400 in damages. Police said the woman's car was parked in Lot 49 at 3:10 p.m. when the damages were discovered.

• A woman in Washington Residence Hall reported the theft of her Walkman radio from the lounge on Sunday, according to police. The Walkman was worth $50.

Dahmer's apartment destroyed

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Demolition began today at the apartment building where Jeffrey Dahmer killed many of his victims and kept their body parts.

Campus Circle Project, a non-profit business and community group, bought the building in August and said it was tearing it down out of respect for the families of Dahmer's victims. Grass and flowers probably will be planted on the site.

"It's just an eyesore for the city," said Shirley Hughes, whose son was slain in Dahmer's apartment about two months before Dahmer's arrest last year.

Demolition of the 49-unit building was expected to take about a week.

Dahmer's killing spree was discovered when a man fled from the apartment, a handcuff dangling from his wrist. Inside, police found body parts in boxes, heads in a refrigerator and a freezer and acid-soaked bones in a vat.

Dahmer confessed to killing 17 young men and boys and is serving 15 consecutive life sentences.

Man steals doughnuts, then apologizes

BROKEN ARROW, Okla. (AP) — An apologetic, hungry robber stole a dozen doughnuts from the Sugar House Bakery — at gunpoint.

Bakery employee Ruth Poplin said her first customer of the day Saturday ordered a dozen glazed doughnuts. When she asked for $2.95, the man pulled out a pistol.

"He asked me how much money I had, and I thought he meant how much money I had personally. I told him I didn't have any," Mrs. Poplin said. "Then he said, "Well, I'll just take the doughnuts, then."

She said he told her he was cold, hungry and out of work, and apologized twice as he left.

WATCH-O-RAMA
THE AMAZING WATCH GIVEAWAY
It's Simple...

COME see our amazing collection of over 98 styles of SWATCH and FOSSIL watches just in time for the holidays.

1. Guess what time our mystery watch is set at.
2. Tell us which J•Rich watch you would like to win.

1. I think the time is _____ A.M. P.M.
2. The J•Rich Watch I would like to win is _____

J•RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN

— 4 watches will be given away
— Bring your entry in person to either J•Rich location by 5 p.m. Sunday, November 22nd — Winners will be announced on Tuesday, Nov. 24
— Limit 1 entry per person

191 N. Pleasant St., Amherst • 253-2013 • 22 Masonic St., Northampton • 586-6336
Open 7 days • Thursday nights in Northampton

Local News

Escort Service provides safety

Students increasingly taking advantage of rides

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN
Freshmen Alexandra Mosqueira exits an escort van recently in Central.

By ALYSSA M. OWENS
Collegian Staff

As racial tension grows and violent incidents continue to plague the University of Massachusetts campus, the Escort Service is increasingly being viewed by students as a source of relief and prevention.

Chancellor O'Brien, who has pledged to increase the safety of the UMass campus, offered his help in improving the Escort Service. Campus officials have added another van to the fleet and are planning to install permanent two-way radios in all Escort Service vehicles.

The Escort Service receives between 75 to 100 calls on weekdays and about 100 to 130 calls on weekend nights.

The frequency in use of the Escort Service appears to reflect students' awareness of danger on campus. Virgil Hickmon, a senior Hotel Restuarant Travel Administration major, said, "I started using it when things got crazy on campus with the Black students. I didn't know what to expect."

Hickmon, who had just been dropped off at Southwest, added, "And, it sure beats walking in the cold!"

Today two vans and two student security workers are available for escorting students from 7 p.m. to 3 a.m. seven nights a week. In addition, two patrol cars are used as back-up during peak periods.

Students may call the service requesting an escort between any of the buildings on campus and the outlying sororities and fraternities.

Junior English and secondary education major Trish Wilson, who had asked for an escort from E-Lot said, "I used the Escort Service last night for the first time. My Resident Assident insisted that I call the Escorts, when she heard I was walking to the library.

"It's been reliable. I'll probably continue using it," said Wilson, who said last semester she was "stalked" and chased, while walking on campus at night.

The campus Escort Service at UMass started in 1982, when the Student Government Association sponsored a volunteer escort service. In September 1983 the Department of Public Safety at UMass took over the service. The service only offered walking escorts until 1988, when a vehicle was put into service.

Jennifer Fazzi, one of four head supervisors of the student security department said, "We've done about 50 more escorts a night since we got the new vehicle and did advertising." Fazzi said students can expect at most, a 10 to 15 minute wait before their ride comes.

Fazzi said students don't seem to mind the wait. "We get the same people calling all the time. We've got to be doing something right if they're calling back."

Lawrence G. Holmes, deputy chief in charge of security, said he sees the escort service as one of several recent efforts in improving campus security, which include improved lighting and the installation of help phones.

"We need communication. We need to work together as a campus to see that this community problem gets a community response," Holmes said.

Public Safetly Officer Adolph Pipcyyznski, who does student escorting four to five times a week, said that students speak highly of it.

Julie Caccamise, a junior industrial engineering major said, "I think it's great, so much safer than walking alone at night. I use it between the residence halls. A lot of my girlfriends do, too."

New buildings to cause power shortage at UM

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press

The University of Massachusetts expects to open two new buildings next year on the Amherst campus, but its aging power plant can't push out enough steam to heat the buildings, an offical said Monday.

"The opening of the Mullins Arena this winter will put us near the brink," said Peter Wozniak, director of the physical plant.

"And we'll need more capacity by the time the Polymer Center opens next fall."

Wozniak said the university hopes to add a new boiler to its old steam system at a cost of about $3 million.

"The opening of the Mullins Arena this winter will put us near the brink. And we'll need more capacity by the time the Polymer Center opens next fall."

Peter Wozniak,
director of the physical plant.

He said the boiler should be added by the time the $56 million Silvio Conte Polymer Research Center, named for the late Massachusetts congressman, is completed in December 1993.

The 8 1/2-story building will house laboratories for plastics research.

The 10,000-seat basketball and hockey arena and entertainment complex, built at a cost of $51 million, is expected to be ready for use in February.

The university's heating problems are nothing new, Wozniak said, maintaining it has had plans for a new power plant before state officials — "Since the mid-1980s," he said.

The 22,000-student university has been limping along on an aged coal-fired boiler system, portions of which date back to the 1940s and others to the 1950s.

It gave up for good on a $9.3 million power plant installed in the mid-1970s.

The oil-fired system built on the site of the Tilson Farm on campus was immediately dubbed the "Tilson Powerless Power Plant" by students.

It never worked properly, and after a brief test run the university gave up on its operation for good and sued the designer of the steam line. The case was eventually settled for about $970,000.

The Tilson plant remains vacant and unused, Wojiak said.

The latest plan calls for the university to attempt to persuade a private firm to build and operate a $55 million co-generation plant that would sell steam to the university and electricity to a utility, Wozniak said.

Paul Page, vice chancellor for administration and finance has estimated the new heating plant could be finished by 1998.

Famous journalist visits

Middle East expert Ehud Ya'ari to speak

Ehud Ya'ari, one of Israel's best-known journalists, will be speaking tonight in Mahar Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. on "The Middle East Peace Process in Light of the Recent U.S. and Israeli Elections."

Ya'ari is author of seven books on Middle East politics including Intifada, and Israel's Lebanon War. In addition, Ya'ari is currently working on another book entitled Peace.

From 1975 to 1990, Ya'ari was the head of the Middle East department at Israel Television. In 1987 and 1989 he was Associate Fellow at the Washington Institute for Near East Policy. Currently, Ya'ari is the Associate Editor of the Middle East section of the Jerusalem Report.

As one of Israeli's outstanding reporters and commentators on international politics, Ya'ari has won just about every major award Israel offers in this field. These include the "1991 Israeli Broadcasting Award" for coverage of the Gulf War, the "1982 Sokolov Prize" for coverage of the Lebanon War and the 1978 award from the Israeli Press' editor in chief for coverage of the peace process with Egypt.

Ya'ari received his B.A. in Oriental Studies from Hebrew University of Jerusalem in 1966, and his M.A. in Oriental Studies from Tel Aviv University in 1972.

Ya'ari has covered the "ins and outs" of the peace process and plans to provide the campus community with an enlightening, objective and insightful analysis of this critical moment in Israel's history.

General admission is $3 and free for students. Sponsors include UMass Hillel, UMass Judaic Studies Department and 5-College Hillel.

– ANDREA SPITZER

COURTESY JUDAIC STUDIES DEPT.
Journalist Ehud Ya'ari.

Guggenheim fellow to examine Absolute Zero

The winner of the 1992 Guggenheim Fellowship, a prestigious science award, will be speaking on "Mysteries and Magic Near the Absolute Zero of Temperature" at 4 p.m. tomorrow in Memorial Hall as part of the University's Distinguished Faculty Lecture Series.

Robert B. Hallock, who is head of the University of Massachusetts physics and astronomy department, specializes in experimental condensed matter physics, which is the study of the physical properties and phenomena found in certain types of materials.

Much of his research focuses on the fundamental behavior of quantum fluids, and Hallock is using his Guggenheim grant to study the properties of liquid helium.

Hallock has chaired the Science Day committee at the University for the last three years and wows hundreds of high school students with his demonstration called "A Trip to Absolute Zero."

Hallock uses liquid nitrogen to deflate a balloon and turn a fresh iris into dust — experiments designed to show students that science can be fun.

After receiving his bachelor of science degree from the University in 1965, Hallock went on to earn his master's and doctorate from Stanford University.

From 1972 to 1976, he held an A.P. Sloan Fellowship, in 1977 he was awarded a Fulbright and in 1982 he became a fellow of the American Physical Society.

Hallock has been a faculty member at the University since 1970. He has also been an adjunct professor in polymer science and engineering since 1985.

The Distinguished Faculty Lecture series is responsible for sponsoring lectures by such campus luminaries as Robert E. McIntosh, who co-directs the Microwave Remote Sensing Laboratory, the largest and most heavily supported university program of its kind in the nation.

Other faculty involved in the series are Yvonne Y. Haddad, whose studies of Islamic fundamentalism have brought her much aclaim, and David A. Hoffman, a noted mathematician.

– UNIVERSITY NEWS OFFICE

Gay couples recognized as 'domestic partners'

By MARTIN FINUCANE
Associated Press

CAMBRIDGE — In a move some people considered long overdue, gay and lesbian couples could register at City Hall as "domestic partners" to get recognition and benefits that previously were reserved only for husbands and wives.

"I think it's long overdue and it sends the right message," said Chuck Colbert, 37, a gay activist who registered Monday along with his partner, Jack Wofford, 57.

Under the city's domestic partnership ordinance, which was passed in September, heterosexual couples who aren't married, as well as homosexual couples, can register their partnership by filling out a one-page form at the City Clerk's office.

Registering gives the partners in the relationship the same visiting rights at hospitals and jails as are given to husbands and wives.

The partners also can register at schools to get the same rights as husbands and wives regarding a dependent child.

The ordinance also allows city employees in domestic partnerships to get the same fringe benefits, such as family health insurance, for their partners and dependents as would be available to married couples.

City Council member Alice K. Wolf, who sponsored the legislation, said this city of about 95,000 people, was the first in the state to pass such a law, and the 19th community to do it in the country.

She said that at a time when people are concerned about America's families, "I feel these relationships that act like families, it's important that we support them."

"Let's support love and commitment where it is," she said.

Wolf had no predictions on the amount of same-sex couples who would register partnerships, but she said in other communities that have tried domestic partner ordinances, unmarried heterosexual couples have outnumbered homosexual couples in registering for employee benefits.

Council member Sheila Russell, who opposed the ordinance, said she feared that the ordinance would cost the city more in health insurance payments and she felt the matter should be dealt with at the state level.

"Everybody comes to Cambridge for all these liberal causes because they know Cambridge always passes them," she said.

"I don't think the city of Cambridge should be the only one in the whole Commonwealth to recognize gay unions," she said.

Colbert, a management consultant on sexual orientation in the workplace who served on a committee that studied the new legislation, said it had been a long road from first acknowledging to himself that he was gay to registering at City Hall.

"It's another step in what I think is the ongoing process of coming out," he said.

Mondays are heart wrenching

By DANIEL Q. MANEY
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Here's another reason to hate Mondays: The risk of a heart attack may be as much as 50 percent greater than on any other day.

Not surprisingly, this discovery only applies to people who work.

Researchers from Germany studied nearly 6,000 heart attacks to come to the conclusion that Mondays are even worse than people thought.

"It must have something to do with going from being a couch potato to a working person," said Dr. Robert Zoble of the University of South Florida.

For several years, researchers have been studying when heart attacks occur, because this can provide clues about precisely what triggers them. And that information will help doctors come up with new strategies to prevent heart attacks, the No. 1 killer in the United States and other industrialized countries.

Recently, for instance, other scientists have found that the chance of dying from a heart attack is twice as high during the first two hours after getting up as it is for the rest of the day.

The latest data were presented Monday at the annual scientific meeting of the American Heart Association.

"This points to the role of changing activity levels in triggering cardiac events," said Dr. Stefan N. Willich of the Free University of Berlin, who directed the study.

■ POW-MIA

continued from page 1

Kerry suggested that facilitating an end to the embargo could ease the way for looking into the MIA issue.

The senators held a 2 1/2 hour meeting Monday with officials of the Vietnam Office Seeking Missing Persons, an interagency organization dealing with the question of the missing.

At the meeting, which was open to reporters, the senators sought answers to questions about specific MIA cases and explanations of Vietnamese failure to provide certain information.

The senators asked why there was no documentary evidence about U.S. servicemen acknowledged by both countries to have at one time been prisoners of the Vietnamese, but who were neither repatriated.

Ho Xuan Dich, head of the Vietnam's office for the missing, suggested it had been difficult to compile and keep records in wartime.

■ fire

continued from page 1

pus Center Hotel.

"I smelled something, but I didn't see anything," Auss said.

While Auss packed his belongings, the sprinkler system went off. "That was an indication that I should get out," Auss said.

When it's hot, it's in the Massachusetts Daily Collegian.
The Largest College Daily in New England. Smokin'!

GROCERIES TO YOUR DOORSTEP
Amherst • Northampton
▪ No time or energy to get the grocery shopping done? ▪
▪ Entertaining guests and need groceries fast? ▪
▪ Limited access to transportation? ▪
▪ Weather conditions slowing you down? ▪
Call 586-4795
We Take Orders 24 Hours/Day
Unbelievably Low Shopping and Delivery Prices
Call Today!!!
Listen for our ads on WHMP!
GROCERIES TO YOUR DOORSTEP
The smart way to help get it all done!!!

ANDY'S PIZZA & RESTAURANT
Now Has Calzones
256-8147 -or- 256-8148 • 175 University Drive
Greek Calzone - Tomato, Olive, Feta
Veggie Calzone - Onion, Peppers, Mushroom & Cheese
Peperoni & Cheese Calzone
Chicken Cutlet & Cheese Calzone
Broccoli & Cheese Calzone
These are only a few of the items we offer! Create Your Own Calzone!
All Calzones include both ricotta and mozerella cheese

INSTITUTE for the HEALING of RACISM
An honest and frank dialogue involving all races so that individuals may help heal each other
TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 17
7:00 p.m.
Room 803 Campus Center
Meetings every first and third Tuesday of the month.
Sponsored by the Baha'i Club

- TONIGHT -
LIVE ENTERTAINMENT
With
NEW HORIZON
"HOTTER THAN EVER"
THE 24 YEARS 1968 • 1992 PUB
CELEBRATES IN AMHERST
15 EAST PLEASANT STREET

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Pioneer UMass program director looks to youths' future

He's on the phone, opening a letter, answering a knock at the door all at the same time, and still he gives you full attention as you sit and talk. He greets you with a hearty handshake and a smile. Immediately you feel welcomed, and you feel as if you've known him all your life.

Dr. Benjamin Rodriguez has been director of the Bilingual Collegiate Program since he established it in 1974. Back then it was called "Project 75." The name was supposed to represent the ideal number of Hispanic student enrollment here at the University, "but we've changed that," he says with a proud smile.

He looks at you over his bifocals with 56-year-old eyes that express concern and commitment. But don't be deceived by his age; he moves with the energy of a teenager, and shows true care and dedication when he talks about the Hispanic community, especially the young who will make its future.

His office is lined with awards of appreciation he has received over the years, and he sits and stands and sits again, leaping about the room, gathering information.

"This is my passion," he said about the BCP Outreach Program. "So many Hispanics don't make it, but give us five years and we'll change that."

Dr. Rodriguez knows well that far too many Hispanic students fall through the cracks of a system that needs serious reform, a system that discourages instead of encourages.

According to nationwide statistics, 62 percent of Hispanic youths drop out before high school. And those who go on don't receive the proper curriculum to survive in college.

"We've got to get to them before high school, after that it's too late," he says, shaking his head. "We're going to lose a generation, and we can't allow it."

David
RIVERA

On this day, there's more energy and commotion than usual in his office. This Thursday, 120 eighth graders will be coming from Springfield as part of the BCP Outreach Project. The program exposes young Hispanics to the University and encourages them to look beyond high school.

"These kids are so motivated after they come here, look!" he says, dropping before you hundreds of letters from students, parents and teachers who have praised the program and its creators.

"It brings the University to the community and the community to the University," he says, leafing through the letters.

Dr. Rodriguez and the BCP staff have done what few programs have: they've made a college future a reality for man, who would have fallen through those cracks and been forgotten. He is also very straightforward with the Hispanic communities.

"We can keep cleaning floors and washing windows for the rest of our lives, or we can become the engineers, doctors, and leaders of the future," he tells parents.

Dr. Rodriguez recalls the time he went to speak with parents and a mother started crying because she was so appreciative towards what he and the program were reaching out to do. "Nobody treated her and her child like that before," he said. "We're very excited and we have to be in the field to save this generation."

When asked of the the future, Dr. Rodriguez smiles optimistically. He speaks positively about the program he hopes will create an atmosphere where young Hispanics will take what they've learned and bring it back to their community.

"Right now we've got a spark of motivation started," he said. "Just give us five years and we'll really turn that spark into something big, just five years."

People like Dr. Rodriguez are rare these days. He cares for a community and its future with a zeal that few administrators have. It's that spark he speaks of that makes the BCP and the Outreach Project important. It's that spark he carries that gives young students a chance. And it's that spark that makes him — and people like him — worth their weight in gold.

David Rivera is a Collegian columnist.

The war of musical tastes

Shakespeare said, "Music hath charms that soothe the savage beast." While this may have been the case back when the gentle harmonies of reed instruments and lutes echoed across the land, it no longer rings true, if you'll forgive the pun.

Lori
O'CONNOR

This was an easy assertion for him to make; there weren't any eight-foot speakers assassinating his eardrums with madrigal recordings from neighboring cottages as he attempted to pen the final lines of a sonnet or tragedy. He never watched with open-mouthed awe as two respectable young sires reduced themselves to a heated argument over the merits of old versus new Van Halen. He certainly never worked at a trendy Northampton gift shop where the boogie 'til you drool techno pop is pumped out so loudly that an average of five customers an hour complain of headache-induced nausea.

Shakespeare simply wasn't aware of the universal music formula: varying musical tastes between individual A and individual B plus one musical output device in a given area equals temporary interpersonal relationship Armageddon when compounded by stress and/or alcohol. I've seen it happen again and again, an evil delight taking over when someone realizes that their music preferences are viewed as less than desirable by another. Borders are drawn, lines are crossed, and before you can say "disco inferno" volume knobs are on the move and the battle has begun.

Living in a dorm or an off-campus house seems to lend itself to these types of auditory coup d'etats. There's always at least one musically expulsive person who periodically jangles nerves and raises blood pressure with his Minivan-sized stereo and speakers, placed against an open window to maximize the listening pleasure of the flora and fauna in bordering states. In the spring of my freshman year, someone in the all-male dorm next door played the same particular REO Speedwagon song in this generous manner nearly every afternoon. I had fantasies about seeking out the source of the maddening outburst and administering a Vulcan death blow. I still suffer a minor hysterical reaction every time I hear the song's keyboard intro, and scramble desperately for the tuning dial.

I can't say that I'm not guilty of a certain degree of forcing others to hearken to my own rock and roll canticles. I remember playing one of my father's old Stones albums over and over on my Fisher Price phonograph in an effort to memorize the words to "Ruby Tuesday," until my mother practically threw herself babbling on her knees before me and begged for mercy. From then on I was empowered by the knowledge that she thinks Mick Jagger sings like he has a spear firmly planted in his back. Any minor spats during my formative years were the harbingers of Rolling Stones marathons from behind my bedroom door. My friend Tricia operated in this mode as well. She bought AC/DC's "Hell's Bells" 45 solely for playing during times of punishment, turning it off only when her deeply religious mother downstairs began screeching about militant Bible schools in Siberia and banging on the ceiling with a broom handle.

It's safe to say that we're all musically indiscreet and tweaked at times. My housemate and I share a two-room apartment the size of Jerry's mouse hole, and we tend to be in one another's faces a good portion of the day. Our television reception recently went AWOL and forced us to rely upon radio and cassettes to banish the alarming silence. I think we've grown not only to tolerate one another's musical tastes, but to appreciate them as well.

Last night was a shocker though; I came home early and found my apartment filled with the most frightening collection of sounds since the theme from "The Omen" drove me under my bed in the early 80s. I'm not sure what terrified me more: Kim's music, or the fact that she was wearing her ball python as a four-foot long organic necklace. Perhaps old William was right after all. The scaly little fiend actually looked like he was smiling.

Lori O'Connor is a UMass student.

What's the chancellor afraid of?

I heard an interesting story the other day from my boss. He has been here at the University for years and remembers the chancellor we had before Joseph Duffey. He couldn't recall his name but I don't think many students here would remember him anyway. He did things very differently than our current man on the hill. I heard that once or twice a month on a prescheduled day, he would come down to the other lounge in the Student Union (now the UMass Credit Union) and talk to students. He would spend about four hours answering questions or concerns students had about university policy, his own views, or any other subject pertinent to the University. He brought a couple other advisors who would write down questions he couldn't answer and made sure someone would get back to you on the matter. It was a very informal forum.

This sounds like a bit of democracy to me. I think students feel swallowed up here sometimes, or at least frustrated that their interests fall secondary to the University's mission. I think, especially in times like these, that Richard O'Brien should consider this innovative idea. After all, this is our university and he does work for us. What do you think, Richard: scared of a little democracy or do you want to know how we feel first hand?

Wayne Yeatman
Central

Pinochet is rightly condemned

I was at once saddened, shocked and outraged to read Christopher Rogers' quasi-revisionist editorial, "Pinochet remembered [Collegian, Nov. 10]," which lauded Chilean dictator Augusto Pinochet for his economic legacy in Chile. Rogers, while marginally conceding Pinochet's "violent rise to power" and the "many human rights violations that followed," nevertheless insinuates that his "pav[ing] the way for a stable economic system" exonerates him to some degree and that we should incorporate economic analysis into our perceptions of his regime.

Given Rogers' uninformed anti-socialist perspective, I should not have expected an unbiased, scholarly perspective on this tragic period of Chilean history. However, I was flabbergasted by Rogers' one-sentence dismissal of the regime's "atrocities" followed by a three-paragraph ode to Chile's ensuing economic boom. I concede that a period of relative prosperity followed — for Pinochet's wealthy supporters. However, he conveniently omits descriptions of the transformation of two soccer stadiums in Santiago into concentration camps, and the more than 30,000 human beings slaughtered during the first three years of Pinochet's rule. Pinochet instituted 16 years of terror in Chile; dissent was brutally suppressed and those who dared to speak out against the government often "disappeared" and were never seen again.

What offends me is Rogers' assertion that economic policy is even relevant in the face of such murderous savagery. I invite him to imagine the entire population of UMass, including himself, his friends and his professors, herded into a bloody football stadium and tortured to death. Then imagine that, following an economic boom in Massachusetts, a conservative student in a far-away land writes an editorial suggesting that while we should not condone the killing, those responsible for the bloodshed deserve credit for "paving the way to a stable economic system." How would his loved ones feel reading such an article?

Augosto Pinochet ranks among the most brutal dictators who ever lived, and he has been roundly — and rightly — condemned by all who believe in human rights. Rogers' article displays a horrifying lack of reverence for the victims of Pinochet's regime.

Steve Linberg
Hampshire College

The environment is in good hands

This election captured my attention like none other has, and left me with a variety of impressions. I felt repulsion at the endless barrage of mud slinging. I was shocked by President Bush's brazen disregard for what may well be our most urgent problem by referring to Al Gore as the "ozone man," "a bozo" and "crazy."

"If this guy gets elected we'll be up to our necks in spotted owls with no jobs," he said in one speech. "It's time we worried not only about endangered species, but about endangered jobs," he said in another to voters at a Washington state lumber mill.

This from the man who in the 1988 campaign proclaimed, "I am an environmentalist." During his administration, he set to work continuing the policy of his predecessor: weakening and disbanding environmental protection laws. And selling us down the river.

Worse yet, with this attitude Bush presents a false choice between environmental protection and jobs. As Business Week, an obvious hotbed of environmental activism, put it: "Tree Huggers vs. Jobs: It's Not That Simple." They pointed out that "critics of [Bush's jobs vs. environment conflict] say conventional economic analysis doesn't consider environmental amenities such as clean air or water as assets — or their destruction as debit — when calculating national wealth."

They pointed out that protecting these resources could yield economic benefits that are hard to measure. While regulations may cost jobs in some areas, more sustainable development could stimulate the economy in areas such as environmental products and service businesses, now worth over $120 billion. As Clinton put it, Bush was asking voters to make "a false choice between environmental protection and growth."

The bottom line: the environmental issue no longer concerns only die-hard naturalists (God forbid!), it's developing into an issue of our very survival. Bush was willing to make a flagrantly irresponsible choice between his power and our future. And as a young generation, it's a choice that's particularly vital to us.

I felt anxiety because I knew Clinton, and especially Gore, were our only hope to finally face this unpopular issue. Clinton displayed an air of constructive hope and progress for all of our nation's problems, an honest, refreshing competence.

They're stepping into an era riddled with problems. All of the issues, from the crumbling infrastructure to the deficit to the limp economy, are immensely complex, and the road to their solution will not be easy. Never before have we faced problems of such complexity and importance.

Clinton may find many of his promises difficult to keep, but I can't help but feel that his biggest promise of all would be the most difficult to break: he and Al Gore will do a better job than those they follow.

Richard Hoyer-Ellefsen
South Deerfield

ALL-CAMPUS FORUM
RACISM AT UMASS:
WHAT DID WE DO WRONG?
WHAT CAN WE DO NOW?

MODERATOR: Bailey Jackson (Dean, School of Education)

PANEL:
Sonya Nieto (Education)
Helan Page (Anthropology)
Ron Welburn (English)
Anne MIller (Housing Services)
Al Lizana (Black Students Union)
Jonathan Gladding (Allied Students Against Prejudice)

FOLLOWED BY OPEN MIKE

Sponsored by:

Faculty and Staff for Human Rights and a Responsible University
Allied Students Against Prejudice

In cooperation with the University Administration, including:

Richard O'Brien (Chancellor)
Glen Gordon (Provost)
and the Deans

7:30 PM, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19
SOUTHSIDE ROOM
HAMPDEN STUDENT CENTER

Multicultural Affairs

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Ed. note: The following letter from Massachusetts Education Secretary Piedad F. Robertson was recently sent to the UMass Students for Education (the students who occupied Memorial Hall to protest the celebration of Columbus Day). It should also be noted that, as part of an accord between the University and students of color reached earlier this month, the administration agreed to rename Columbus Day for campus use.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
Executive Office of Education

WILLIAM F. WELD, GOVERNOR
ARGEO PAUL CELLUCCI, LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Room 1401, McCormack Building
One Ashburton Place
Boston, Massachusetts 02108-1696

PIEDAD F. ROBERTSON, SECRETARY

October 30, 1992

UMass Students for Education
Cara Lee Birch
Shyamala Ivatury
Sandra Rose
Alexander Nguyen
Valerie Voorheis
Henry Theriault
University of Massachusetts Amherst
Amherst, MA 01003

Dear Students:

Governor Weld has shared your letter with me. He has requested, that as Secretary of Education, I remain on top of resolutions and issues at U-Mass Amherst and to inform the Governor of the corrective action as it is undertaken by President Hooker and Chancellor O'Brien.

Thank you for sharing with us your concerns regarding the Columbus Day holiday and issues related to the safety and support of women and all minority students at UMass Amherst. Your letters relate pertinent concerns in both a cultural and historical context, and are also highly relevant in view of recent acts of racial intolerance on your campus. My office has been continuously apprised of the situation. Like both President Hooker and Chancellor O'Brien, the Governor and I are deeply distressed by these reports of acts of racism, and encourage disciplinary measures as well as administration to strive to come to understanding through disciplinary measures as well as educational programs.

It is my understanding that the campus administration and the President's Office are working together to come to resolution on many difficult issues including security, racism and intolerance, access to education, curriculum reform and minority recruitment of students, faculty and staff. Educational programs which help members of the University community, in addition to these basic reforms, should elevate the level of understanding and tolerance at UMass Amherst and thereby impact on the understanding that we all have of our history.

Telephone (617) 727-1313 FAX (617) 727-5570

Page 2
U-Mass Students for Education

Again, thank you for your letters. I hope that you will continue to speak out and voice your concerns on these kinds of difficult issues while acting with responsibility and integrity.

Sincerely,

Dr. Piedad F. Robertson
Secretary of Education

cc: President Michael Hooker
Chancellor Richard O'Brien

Nación Puertorriqueña

El 19 de noviembre de 1992 se cumplen 499 años de colonialismo en Puerto Rico y de los cuales he vivido los últimos veinte años. Este colonialismo fue primero bajo dominio español y continua hasta el presente bajo dominio del gobierno de los Estados Unidos. Bajo dominio español nace una nueva raza y a su vez una nueva nación caribeña, la nación puertorriqueña.

Sandra
VALENTIN

La formación de esta nación es fundamentalmente el producto de la fusión de indios tainos, españoles y africanos. Durante este proceso de formación el español se convierte en nuestro primer idioma.

¿Por qué la afirmación de que los puertorriqueños constituimos una nación a pesar de que no somos una república independiente? El hecho de que seamos una colonia de los Estados Unidos no determina nuestra legitima identidad nacional. Puerto Rico no es una república independiente, pero verdaderamente es una nación independiente de los Estados Unidos en el aspecto cultural.

Nuestras raíces no son de origen anglosajón sino proveniente de la contribución de cada una de las trez razas. La contribución indigena esta menos evidente, pero si se hace presente en muchas de las palabras que utilizamos. Los africanos contribuyeron con su admirable vigor fisico, su sentido por el ritmo, su pasión por el color, optimismo y un profundo sentido de alegria por estar vivo. De los españoles tenemos el legado del idioma español, el cual determina en gran medida nuestra identidad nacional.

En términos generales las tres razas

Turn to NACION, page 8

Reflections on language and its subtle racism

Kimberely
BRODERICK

Recently, I went down to New York city to visit some friends. I haven't been in the city, the place of my birth, since last March. New York City hasn't changed much, it's still dirty and overcrowded, and yet exciting and stimulating. As I walked along Broadway reading the theater marquees I mourned my poverty. So much to do and so little money. It was great to be back home, to hear the familiar sounds of sirens, subways, horns honking, jackhammers and the constant refrain of "spare change." It all seemed so familiar, yet there was on thing that struck me - there were so many Black, Latino, and Asian people. As I walked around downtown I couldn't help but stare at all these folks. And as I watched everyone, the smile on my face grew into an outright grin. I thought to myself, "I've been in the Valley too long." I need these doses of reality, these shots in the arm to remind me that I am not alone, that I am not 'other.' And walking along those streets I realized something else - I am not a minority.

With all the discussion lately here at the University of Massachusetts about increasing minority student and faculty representation, it seems like all I hear is minority this and minority that or people of color this and people of color that. I began to wonder about the real meaning of these terms, for the more I hear them the less I like them. My musings on these terms led me to think about how language is used as a weapon of oppression by those in power. We are all familiar with how politicians use euphemisms such as 'limited nuclear strike', the 'underclass' and 'sluggish economy' to disguise the true meanings. What hidden constructs are the terms minority and people of color hiding? What are the implications of our being called minority and people of color?

Taken literally, the term 'minority' implies less than half, but there is another more familiar meaning, a group that is discriminated against on the basis of skin color, religion, ethnicity or gender. It is this latter meaning that concerns us to Black to African-American. These are terms that we have chosen. We have not only recognized the power in words, but also the empowerment in self-determination by a right to that power. It is my conviction that the term 'minority' needs to go the way of colored and Negro . . . thrown out of the language. Language is a powerful weapon, its subtlety lulls us to sleep, seeps into our subconscious until eventually we begin to view the world and ourselves through the terms established for us.

Another term which I find particularly disturbing is "people of color." For all intents and purposes it means "colored people", subtly indicating that the norm is white and we have been colored in, as a child would color a picture in a coloring book. The terms "minority and "people of color" both aim at reducing us to our supposed on essential characteristic: color/race. However, we do not always and only define ourselves on the basis of our skin color. In this society, color has been made to be a determining and delimiting factor in our lives. Nevertheless, the brown-ness of my skin is no more an intrinsic problem to my existence than is the fact that I have two legs. Zora Neale Hurston has remarked," I do not always feel colored. Even now I often achieve the unconscious Zora of Eatonville before the Heigra. I feel colored when I am thrown against a sharp white background." We may feel as though we are minorities in relation to a white norm, but the norm is false.

The key here is that the terms minority and people of color are relational, not inherent.

By defining ourselves in these terms we run the risk of always defining ourselves in terms of whiteness (yes, it would be wonderful if we could all just be people, but none of us reading this will ever live to see that day). It is necessary to come together as people who have shared some of the same experiences. However, if the only way we can make common cause is on the basis of shared victimization (as the intended victims of racism), then we are certainly perpetuating the white supremacy ideology which teaches us that to be "of color" is to be a victim. This notion of shared victimization also implies passivity, helplessness and here, for this interpretation of the term minority, is a social construction formulated by a white racist society. Michael Rusin has described race as "both an empty category and one of the most destructive and powerful forms of social categorization." We could debate the relative merit of categorization, the usefulness of the term race, but that is not my immediate concern here. It is "the juxtaposition of this paradox of empty powerfulness" that needs to be examined, as it relates to our perception of ourselves.

The term minority has been imposed upon us, it is not a term that we have chosen. It implicitly (and explicity I think also) implies that anything other than the norm of white male or just white is somehow inherently inferior. The desire to distinguish on the basis of skin color mandated a need for referential terminology. Differentiation on the basis of skin color is not unique to this society. From the time of the ancient Greeks the color black equated with evil, inferiority, and baseness. White was equated with virtue, goodness, superiority. The association of skin color with inherent attributes of peoples is still a powerful myth in our society. Racial essentialism implies that all there is to be known about us, all that is important about us, can be summed up by the color of our skin color. The question we must ask ourselves is: do we allow ourselves to be defined by a society that hates us? Should we continue to perpetuate racist ideology by the very language we use? For example, in South Africa the white population is approximately 4 million and the black population is approximately 25 million. Yet, blacks are referred to as minorities and the whites as the majority! Clearly, the term has nothing to do with numerical status and everything to do with power (according to the 1990 U.S. census figures, non-whites make up more than 40 percent of the population.) White society has always had the power to define who we are, to define our reality to their liking. This power is exhibited by the very words we use to name ourselves and those around us (i.e. it has been impossible to write this without referring to color). Nonetheless, we are not powerless. In my lifetime, Blacks have gone from being called Negroes/powerlessness. Since we are powerless to change our skin color, we are therefore powerless to change our victimization. A viewpoint such as this, denies the differences among us, and would once again be a racial essentialist view. This will continue as long as we accept that view of social construction of the term "people of color." A racial essentialist view also denies our ability to shape our own lives in a willful and creative manner outside of the realm of whiteness. It denies the fact that our ancestors found ways to construct their identities without reference to white society. These identities were certainly not acknowledged by the society around them, but neither did the destructive forces in society destroy them. As people who have been historically oppressed, as people who are now oppressed on the basis of skin color, we can certainly chose to unite, for whatever reason so desire. But we need to be aware of the implication behind our choices. Our stories need to be told, by our language, not that of those in power.

My point is that we need to be aware of the underlying meaning of our words, of the images they create in our minds, of how meaning is socially constructed to imploded upon us every time we speak. Words do more damage than sticks and stones, let us choose them with care and caution - and where necessary change them.

Kimberely Broderick is a UMass graduate student

■ field hockey

continued from page 16

lation game against Iowa.

"We did lose [to UNC], and I don't remember anything about it. The only thing I remember was that at the end of the game, the team from Iowa made an unfortunate mistake. They called us scrubs, said we were a grass team that didn't deserve to be there.

"You never want to incite the enemy. Their lack of respect for us summoned more energy than I've ever had," said Hixon. "I really took it personally, as did the other members of the team and we stomped them. I mean absolutely stomped them. They didn't know what hit them."

Hixon said she couldn't really compare the 21-1 Minutewomen with their 1987 ancestors.

"They're all so different. I don't really want to compare them to any other team but themselves. The maturity level of this team is very different from many teams that I've had and that might be the separating factor," Hixon said.

"I think the key to this team is that they have been able to adjust to any kind of adversity," Robertson said. "Every player does their part. Each game a different leader has emerged."

"The way the season has gone, I think this team can go far," said Robertson. "We definitely have a chance at Iowa. They're on an even par with us. That's our focus, if we get past that game we've definitely gone farther than any team ever has."

■ nación

continued from page 7

contribuyeron en la variedad que existe en Puerto Rico en la música, la cocina y la apariencia fisica del puertorriqueño. Del último los puertorriqueños somos ejemplos vivientes. No hay un prototipo de puertorriqueño en términos fisicos como quiere dar a entender el estereotipo generalizado que parce existir en los Estados Unidos. Los puertorriqueños podemos tener el pelo rubio u oscuro, marrones o azules y la piel clara u oscura.

En las manos de las presentes y futuras generaciones de puertorriqueños esta la preservación y fortalecimiento de nuestra nación no tan sólo puertorriqueño pero también latinoamericana. La asimilación de nuestra nación a otra significaria nuestra auto-destrucción, el aniquilamiento de nuestro verdadero ser. No podria imaginar nuestra bandera en otra forma o la Borinqueña, nuestro himno nacional, en otro idioma. Estoy orgullosa de ser pertorriqueña. Sangre indigena, español y africana corre por mis venas; verdaderamente lo siento.

November 19, 1992 marks 499 years of colonialism in Puerto Rico, twenty years of which I have lived through. Colonialism in Puerto Rico was initially controlled by Spain and is presently sustained under the control of the United States. Under Spanish colonialism, a new race was born and at the same time a new caribbean nation — the Puerto Rican nation.

The formation of this nation is fundamentally the product of the fusion of Taino Indians, Spaniards, and Africans. During this formation process Spanish became our first language.

Why do I affirm that we constitute a nation even though we are not an independent republic? The fact that we are a colony of the United States doesn't determine our legitimate national identity. Puerto Rico has been forced to become economically and politically dependent on the United States, but is a truly indepedent nation in terms of the distintive culture.

Our roots are not from Anglo-Saxon origin, but instead from the contribution of three races. The indigeneous contribution is the least evident but is present in many of the words we use. The Africans contributed with their remarkable physical vigor, their sense of rhythm, their passion for color, optimism, and their deep happiness for being alive. From the Spaniards we have the legacy of the Spanish language which determines, to a great extent, our national identity.

The three races contributed to the Puerto Rican variety in music, cooking, and physical appearance. There are no specific types of Puerto Rican people in terms of physical appearance. Unlike the misconceptions of people in the United States, Puerto Ricans can be blonde, brunette, have brown or blue eyes, and be of darker or lighter skin color.

The preservation and strengthening of our nation is in the hands of present and future generations of Puerto Ricans. The assimilation of our nation to another would signify our auto-destruction, the annihilation of ourselves. I couldn't imagine our flag in another design or La Borinquena, our national anthem, in another language.

I am proud of being Puerto Rican and Latin American. I share a similiar history, culture, and language with the rest of Latin America. Spaniard, Indian, and African blood flow through my veins; I can truly feel it.

Sandra Valentin is a Collegian correspondent

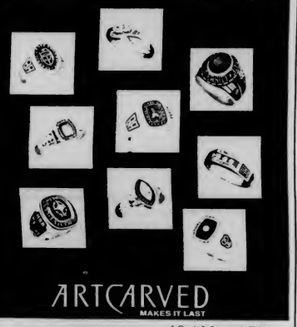
BIGGEST SALE OF THE YEAR
THIS WEEK ONLY • SAVE UP TO $175



ARTCARVED MAKES IT LAST
UNIVERSITY STORE
10 AM to 4 PM
November 16 - 25

Let your voice be heard.
Write for Multicultural Affairs.
Call 545-3500
Ask for Sandra.
19,000 copies daily
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
- TONIGHT -
Coors Light Extreme Dream Ski Party
Featuring
Egan Brothers VIDEO
"THE EXTREME DREAM"
• Free Pizza Slices • T - Shirts
Competitive Edge Giveaways
WRNX LIVE ON AIR
• Drawing for Concert Tickets • CDs
University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

COFFEE SHOP
Free 12 oz. Soda with the purchase of a Sandwich, Burger Entree or Large Salad and this coupon
Coupon valid Mon., 11/16 through Frl., 11/20

Arts & Living

Views from the Outside

By MARK K. ANDERSON
Collegian Staff

Saturday night. You're talking with some random person at a party, and suddenly with no apparent provocation they shoot you a sour look like you just George-Bushed on their shoe. Before you can fumble through the words "What happened?" they've moved to the other side of the room. Was it something you said?

Everyone has had their experiences with Conversation Killers — those uncouth sentiments which somehow manage to sneak past our internal censors and right into the queue of the utterable: "Actually, I only required a straightjacket for two weeks." Or, "You know, it dawned on me today that Compromise really is stoic, tenuous and silent." Or, "Hey everybody look out! I'm kinda like Matlock!!"

Sometimes we stumble into such awkward situations (as in the above) which a more tactful mind-set and more carefully chosen words would have averted. Other times nothing can be done; the subject itself happens to irk and offend those with whom we speak. (This phenomenon crops up occasionally in the outside world and once every seven minutes in Amherst. If you listen closely you can even hear an enraged resident composing a letter-to-the-editor right now . . .)

From personal experience gained in the last few weeks, I know for fact that the entertainment industry is especially rife with the latter category of Conversation Killers. My quarter-century of wise-acreage has seen no greater expression of resentment than in seeking audience with those responsible for cranking out the 1987 sitcom/teenybop flop The New Monkees.

Three weeks ago, with nary a malicious intent (I swear), I sought to explore the nature of an industry that shows genuine fear of new ideas to the point of wearing old ideas ragged. Short of a Carter Country reunion, The New Monkees offered the next best vantage point. (Admittedly a second motivation was generational. Namely, the recycled formulas in question certainly represent one of the more absurd examples of Baby Boomer culture attempting to strong-arm its way into today's youth market.)

A week of pursuing the band's current whereabouts via the music world has already been chronicled. Excepting an interesting conversation with one of the album's producers, most of the time logged was spent collecting cold shoulders.

Chiseling out leads from the television studios and production companies around tinseltown proved just as enlightening and probably turned a profit for Ma Bell. (Well okay, technically the matriarch for the long distance company that carried these calls was Murphy Brown. But who's counting? Both are over-hyped and only got the recognition they enjoy today because of their kid.)

After an afternoon of conversing with human cold fronts that could make it onto Willard's weather map, I discovered to my surprise that The Pre-Flab Four had some big names working on the other side of the camera. In fact, the production team (or members thereof) in addition to spearheading both old and New Monkees episodes had also worked on films like Five Easy Pieces, Head, The Postman Always Rings Twice, Mountains of The Moon, Black Widow, The Last Picture Show and Easy Rider.

Hardly the Cannonball Run II or Son of Kickboxer that one might expect.

Since I was interested in finishing off this albatross of a story sometime before the Armageddon, I knew it would not be trivial to corner these busybodies and confront them about what may well constitute a career nadir.

Many approaches were exhausted. The head-on approach in which one plows through as many studio execs and talent management associations as one can find provided no leads, but did turn up many contenders for Star Search if they ever sponsor a Snippety Personality With Bloated Sense of Self-Worth category. (Then again, homeboy should talk.) The director's alma mater approach in which one phones the director's college's alumni office and poses as his personal secretary did turn up a Beverly Hills street address, and it even provided the man an opportunity to express by proxy his school spirit in the form of a generous grant. How very benevolent of him. (I'm sure he'll want to thank me someday.)

But I still had nothing that would make those touchtone keys sing.

Finally it was time for the insider approach. Thanks to a good friend's connections, Leonard Nimoy's former executive assistant and I did the long-distance schmooze thing. (Granted this is not

Turn to VIEWS, page 11

More than just 'La Bamba': Los Lobos plays Pearl Street

COURTESY DENNIS KEELEY
Los Lobos will be playing Pearl Street tonight to promote their latest album, "Kiko."

By EMILY MARINO
Collegian Staff

It may have taken them eighteen years of weddings, bar gigs, homemade albums and plain old hard work to get here, but finally acoustic Mexican-American music champs Los Lobos will play tonight at Pearl Street in Northampton.

In all honesty, it's quite a thrill to be able to see the group that reached number one with their hit single "La Bamba" (from the soundtrack of the movie with the same name), and has captured an international audience as they perform in our own modest neck of the woods.

Before "La Bamba" fame came their way, the East L.A.-based band released four albums featuring styles ranging from authentic acoustic folk to rock. Deemed a group of musicians who could "play anything, anywhere," Los Lobos experimented with two guitars, bass and drums to create eclectic sounds true to the music of their native land and to the demands of popular American culture.

In 1980 Los Lobos opened for Public Image Ltd. at the Olympic Auditorium in downtown L.A., and set the stage to release And A Time To Dance... in 1983. Four albums later, the band has reached a new pinnacle of musical expression with their latest release, Kiko.

The sixteen songs featured on Kiko create what New York Times critic Peter Watrous describes as "a complex and richly layered album." Watrous adds that the mix of both American and Mexican influences upon the music has allowed the band to "lay out what it means to be outside of mainstream culture and American at the same time."

Excited about the fresh ideas and style that are encompassed by the album, band members David Hidalgo and Louie Perez explain that Kiko exemplifies their best creative, spontaneous efforts.

"The process was different," Perez said. "We just went 'Well, we're ready to do this thing. Let's see what's up.'" The result, he said, includes songs with "an almost childlike pureness to them that was really exciting."

Working with producer Mitchell Froom, Perez said the group focused on creating an album so as "to not let everything that is so non- musical about this business effect exactly what we were doing."

Hidalgo adds that the band approached each song on the album "on its own" in order to "get to the core...and then figure how to make something out of it, how to complement it."

Heralded by Request's Don McLeese as "Los Lobos' Graceland, or even it's Achtung Baby," Kiko promises to be the bands best and most popular work.

Furthermore, playing tunes from this new masterpiece, Los Lobos should most definitely rock the house at Pearl Street tonight, leaving their early days of pastel wedding receptions and smoky, East L.A. dives even further back in the dust.

Los Lobos will play Pearl Street tonight with special guests The Barnstormers. Doors open at 8 p.m. Tickets $17 Adv.

Like, they're talking about like, our like, zip-code generation

Two fearless reporters sound off on the 90210 myth

By CUTTER GARCIA
ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

This is part one of a possibly endless series highlighting the phenomenon that is "Beverly Hills, 90210."

Cutter Garcia: I'm dismayed, Art, I truly am. Have you noticed how one of the finest shows on television has seemed to go steadily down the tubes during the last few seasons? I'm talking of course about that classic piece of joy, Beverly Hills 90210.

Arthur Stapleton: Don't you mean just "90210" Cutter? It is amazing how the writers are trying to change the persona of the characters to appeal to its new found audience. When "90210" caught on fire in this country, we started to see sideburns all over the place, and girls everywhere were going ga-ga over Dylan McKay as well as Brandon Walsh. Even if people had the burns before the show hit, they were now "90210" wanna-bes!

CG: Yeah, well Dylan better keep on growing those hodads of his and comb them right over the top of his head. At the rate his hair line is receding the little girls who are buying Tiger Beat magazine are going to start thinking that it's Capt. Merril Stubing on the cover. I can see it now, this year Pepsi is the choice of the new generation, next year it'll be Minoxidal.

AS: What is even more hilarious is now that sideburns have come back into style, Brandon gets rid of his. Speaking of Brandon, this cool guy went from not wanting to have sex with the first girl he met in his new town to jumping in the sack immediately with his old girlfriend from Minnesota. I've heard of rekindling old flames, but getting it on in your own house with your parents down the hall?

CG: Well this is where we differ a bit, Art. I'm all for having Brandon a sense of adventure because this kid spends entirely too much time in the house. NOBODY spends as much time home as this kid. And when he does finally decide to go out he becomes president of the "Pat Boone Decency Club". Each week a beautiful girl gets hot and bothered for him and wants him to get carnal.

This kid is half naked in a jacuzzi with a stunningly beautiful and obscenely rich girl, who desires nothing more from him than his body, and what does he say?. ."No! I can't have sex with you! It would be a cheap and meaningless exercise in futility! Let's talk about hockey and Minnesota instead!" That isn't real! This kid is 17-

Turn to 90210, page 11

The University of Massachusetts
Department of Theater
presents
Women of Trachis
by Sophocles
a new translation
by Robert Bagg
November 12-14
and 18-21
8:00 p.m.
Rand Theater
Tickets: 545-2511
Fine Arts Center
Box Office

Springsteen makes Hartford his Lucky Town

By ADAM SCOTT ROBERTS
Collegian Staff

Bruce Springsteen
Hartford Civic Center
Nov. 15, 1992

This past Sunday evening, Bruce Springsteen made a one show performance at the Hartford Civic Center. With no opening act, The Boss opened the concert up with "Better Days" from the Lucky Town LP at eight o'clock.

Gone are the "Glory Days" with Julianne Phillips and The E. Street Band. Springsteen tried to leave behind his E. Street days by not singing "Rosalita" (the epitome of the "old" Bruce). Instead, Springsteen focused on some of his more recent efforts by playing his newer songs such as "Lucky Town," "Human Touch," "57 Channels," and "My Beautiful Reward."

Springsteen, long known for giving personal stories before certain songs, took a shot at Madonna's SEX book and Erotica LP, as well as a personal shot at himself. Before singing "Leap of Faith," The Boss told the audience that this song is about his personal sexual fantasies.

"Gee, maybe I'll come out with a book too, and won't title it and I'll sell it for 50 bucks," Springsteen said.

The joke behind it all was that during his Tunnel of Love Tour he was caught in his leopard print skivies with Patti Scafia in South America while still being married to Julianne Phillips.

One of the best reasons to have been at the Civic Center that evening would have been to hear Springsteen sing "Leap of Faith." The whole Civic Center was filled with singing fans that kept their hands in the air throughout this upbeat song.

The crowd roared as Springsteen came to a stand still as he stood in the spotlight. He looked to his left as he had that side of the arena cheering. Then he turned his head to the right and got that side of the arena cheering. Soon, Springsteen had the left, right, and center sections fighting through cheers to get the Boss's attention.

The music resumed as the eager crowd continued loving Springsteen especially when he jumped into the audience while singing "Leap of Faith" and wearing a Santa Claus hat, which played for at least twenty six minutes.

The most anticipated song of the evening was "Born in the U.S.A." As the Boss belted out "Born down in a dead man's town/ The first Kick I took was when I hit the ground/ You end up like a dog that's been beat to much/ Til you spend half your life just covering up..." the audience sang at the top of their lungs the entire anthem. At that moment, there was a sense of patriotism in the air reminding me of the Gulf War. All I could think of is how proud I was to be American.

Springsteen calmed audiences with my personal favorite "The River." This was probably the only time those annoying security guards whith their flash lights didn't have to ask me and my section that had floor seats to not stand on our chairs.

The adrenalin continued to flow when Springsteen brought us back to the 80s with "Cover Me." Everyone sang and Springsteen made sure everyone (including fans with an obstructed view and security guards) were clapping their hands.

The same dance moves from his early 80s concerts, a great light show, and the music (which is why we go to these concerts) are a few reasons why this Springsteen concert was not only the best Springsteen concert I've seen, but the best concert I've seen (Yes, that includes being better than my favorite: Madonna).

The four hour concert came to a close with three encores, including the songs "Born to Run," "Thunder Road," and "Working on the Highway." Bruce Springsteen proved this past Sunday evening in Hartford that he is still The Boss.

AFFORDABLE CONDOMINIUMS AVAILABLE FOR RENT

ONE TWO & THREE BEDROOMS

THE BROOK AT AMHERST GREEN

QUIET CONVENIENT & FLEXIBLE

253-3834

CSPP

SHAPING A NEW GENERATION OF PROFESSIONAL CLINICAL AND ORGANIZATIONAL PSYCHOLOGISTS

The California School of Professional Psychology (CSPP) is educating a new generation of psychologists—psychologists who are improving the quality of life by addressing major contemporary issues and fostering respect for human diversity as they provide psychological services in a multicultural society. CSPP is the nation's leading educator of psychologists of color, currently enrolling 239 ethnic students.

CSPP's four campuses located in Berkeley/Alameda, Fresno, Los Angeles, and San Diego offer Psy.D. and Ph.D. programs in Clinical Psychology, Ph.D. programs in Organizational Psychology, a Psy.D. program in Organizational Development, and a Master's program in Organizational Behavior.

For more information:

California School of Professional Psychology
2749 Hyde Street
San Francisco, CA 94109
800/457-1273

Do you have a comment on an article you read in the Arts & Living section? Think Cutter and Art are intuitive t.v. critics or just losers with lots of time on their hands? Let us know. Send your comments to the Arts Desk c/o the Collegian.

ATTENTION SENIORS!

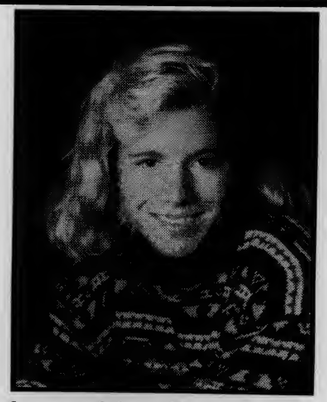
Resumes are still being accepted at Mather Career Center for these employers:

EMPLOYER/ MAJORS	VISIT DATE	RESUMES DUE
Combined Insurance (B) ANY	11/19	11/18
Ford Motor Credit (B) ANY LIBARTS,BUS, GB/FIN, OPSMGMT	12/3	11/30
Mercer Mgmt Consulting (B) ANY	12/3	11/30
Hanover Foods (B) FOOD SCIENCE	12/8	12/4

Bring resumes to Room 200, Mather by due date listed

MBA STUDENTS!
Shawmut Bank of Connecticut is looking for Credit Analysts.
Bring a resume to Room 200 Mather.
Job description can be reviewed there also.
Resume Due Date 11/19

THE MATHER CAREER CENTER
Career Planning and Placement • Cooperative Education • Internships
Fraternity/Sorority Park - on the Orchard Hill bus route. (413)545-2224.
Where Careers Take Off!



Kathie Caldwell – 18 years old

Stroke Victim

Last spring semester Kathie Caldwell, a UMass freshman, suffered a debilitating stroke which left her totally disabled (quadriplegic and unable to speak).

Mortar Board, Alpha Lambda Delta & Golden Key Honor Societies are sponsoring a 3 mile Walk-a-thon to raise funds for the very expensive rehabilitation equipment Kathie needs.

Please Walk for Kathie

November 21, 1992
12 Noon - Start at Baker Residence Hall in Central

Sponsor forms available at: Dean of Students Office/227 Whitmore/UMass • Student Activities Office/Student Unoin Building
Orchard Hill/Central Area Office/B30 Baker • Table on CC Concourse

■ 90210

continued from page 9

years-old! A real 17-year-old boy resembles a dog in heat: clawing and scratching at every unoccupied leg in the room!

AS: Cutter, I've heard of guys only wanting sex, but that is ridiculous. My problem with young Walsh is he knows he is God's gift, and the way he tortured Andrea was demeaning to college guys to say the least. She was infatuated with Brandon, and would do anything he wanted, if the price was right.

Anyway, when he finally gives in to her advances, and decides he wants her, Andrea has another man. Brandon, you loser, this thirtysomething high school student just dissed you big time, aren't you the super stud!

CG: Another problem I have with this show is the oh-so-positive way in which they help to shape our nation's youngsters. Here's what I imagine a typical conversation between the writers would sound like:

Writer 1, "Hey, we've got a problem. What do we do with the total dork loser who hangs out with David? It's time that we move Davey into the cool crowd and dork-boy keeps dragging him down."

Writer 2 "I don't know, how about if we have Dave blow off his life long friend and become a real ass by abandoning him for the much better looking and cooler bunch of kids?"

Writer 1,"Nah, too real. How about if we just have him accidentally kill himself at his own birthday party while playing with one of his dad's loaded guns that he keeps in the desk?"

Writer 2,(a long pause) "Yeah, that's convienent, let's do it. The kids'll love it."

AS: And what about the girls? The reason "90210" gets the male viewership is because of the hot girls. Kelly starts out as a rich bitch who just needs to get any good looking man into bed. She went from a spoiled rich jock, Steve, to a loser with no life, Jake, who lived at Melrose Place. How convenient.

In between, Ms. Taylor went after Brandon, only to be thwarted away by our fearless hero, and a high school kid, Kyle, who was either gay or impotent. Sure, Cutter, this does resemble reality!

CG: The only really cool girl on that show is Donna. Andrea is 326 years old, Kelly is an on again off again backstabbing slut (if it looks like a duck and walks like a duck. . .) and Brenda is a raving and whiny spoiled brat.

Oh don't even get me started on Brenda! Smartest thing Dylan could've done would've been to take her surfing and lose her in a rip tide. I hate that b——. But Donna is cool. She's the only Bev, who'd dare to go out with an underclassman.

Sports columnist Jeff Crofts enters the room.

JC: I have a couple of things to say. I know I've said that anyone who makes character evaluations about "90210" characters is a sad individual, but, boy do I miss Emily Valentine. And I love the way the West Beverly High paper is the only high school daily in America. For pete's sake, their offices are bigger than the Collegian's.

Hey Steve, pass me a finsky for the legacy key, I don't like you, you goldilock looking freak who had the worst line ever when you told one of the twins you scooped, "Let's do it." You are sad, you dunce, I hope your mom is found in the street with a bottle of Mad Dog in hand. I'd stick my boot in her eye . . .

O.K. Jeff, thanks buddy. Let's get back to Donna, Art.

AS: Way to be, Crofts. Show your intelligence by going ballistic on a plastic character like Steve-O. I agree with you, Cutter, Donna is one of the reasons I watch "90210." She was introduced as a blond bimbo who was a ditz. What a way to stop stereotypes, producers! But, just recently, she was diagnosed with a learning disability. Yes, now we know why she was so slow when it came to understanding anything!

CG: She is very cool. I wonder how she got the role though? It probably had nothing to do with the fact that her father is the executive producer of the show. No, it's got to be her incredible acting ability (yeah,that and the fact that daddy signs everyone's paycheck).

AS: I really liked Tori's acting in "Saved by the Bell" as Screech's nerdy girlfriend, Violet.

CG: Wow! We've run out of space and we haven't even scratched the surface! We still need to explore billionaire boys club member and captain of the brood squad, Dylan. Day time D.J. and night time cool guy MC Davey Fresh. The Walsh's seemingly perfect marriage and just what exactly is it that makes the Peach Pit such a cool hang out? All this and more in our next installment entitled, 90210 - Senior Year. So until then, remember - it takes a real man to admit that he watches this show.

■ Views

continued from page 9

slipping the surly bonds of Earth to touch the face of God sort of stuff, but then again, we ain't exactly running The New York Times down here either.) We talked business and rifled through her extensive Rolodex. Educational, yes. Productive, yes. Further leads, no.

Thus after a good portion of a month and a long distance bill that will no doubt make ol' Murphy smile, I was no closer to the current whereabouts of Larry, Dino, Jared and Marty than when I began.

So it was that I found myself on the morning of deadline with the phone number of Fox Television studios in Los Angeles in front of me.

"Yes, I'm interested in this new thing you've got with The Heights — that combination TV show and rock band that Rolling Stone said might just be another Monkees. I'm doing a story on the people behind the scenes and was wondering if you could fax me a cast bio."

Within two hours I had all the information I asked for and then some.

ACRONYMBLE

THE COLLEGIAN CONTEST...
This week: C-U-T-E-R

Remember boys and girls, men and women — the deadline for this week's Acronymble Contest is tomorrow!
The letters are C, U, T, E and R.
Drop off your submissions at the Collegian newsroom or send it c/o the Arts Desk, Collegian via campus mail.
Check out Thursday's This Weekend section to see if you won fame for life and glamorous prizes.

DiGeronimo Brothers VICTORY Super Markets

10 University Drive - Amherst

WE RESERVE THE RIGHT TO LIMIT QUANTITIES. VICTORY SUPER MARKETS ARE NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS.

STORE HOURS: Mon. - Sat. 7am-9pm Sundays Noon - 8pm

Prices Effective thru Friday, November 20, 1992.

And Now Introducing at Our Amherst Victory... BayBank Express 24 And... Quick Pay or CHARGE IT

AMHERST VICTORY COUPON
Wampler Longacre Frozen Self-Basting Tom Turkeys Grade A 16-24 Lb. Average 18¢ Lb.
Limit 1 of this coupon per customer with this coupon and a $25 purchase excluding price of turkey, beer, wine or tobacco products. Coupon good thru Friday, Nov. 20, 1992. THIS COUPON NOT TO BE DOUBLED

Hamilton Smoked Shank Portion Ham (Water Added) 79¢ Lb.

Fresh... Assorted Pork Chops Gov't. Inspected (Limit: 2 Pkgs.) $1.19 Lb.

Gold Medal All-Purpose Flour 5 Lb. Bag 79¢

Domino Granulated Sugar 5 Lb. Bag $1.69

Hood Light or Ice Cream Vanilla 1/2 Gallon Assorted Flavors 2 For $3

2 Liter Bottle Schweppes Ginger Ale Regular or Raspberry •Regular •Diet 79¢ Plus Dep.

Wachusett Potato Chips or Cheese Twists 6-8 Oz. Bag All Varieties 69¢

Maxwell House Master Blend Coffee ADC 11.5 Oz. Can 99¢

Fresh Baked... Sub Rolls At Our Bakery... Pkg. of 4 99¢ Pkg.

U.S. No. 1 Idaho Baking Potatoes 5 Lb. Bag In Our Produce Dept... 99¢ Bag

3 Credit Recycling Class
Educ2-354
Intro To Future Studies
Learn about recycling and other waste mgmt issues from the people who deal with them every day!
WHEN: Tues 2:30 - 5:00
Spring '93 Semester
SCHEDULE #211663
CALL 545-1153 FOR MORE INFO.

■ Wideman

continued from page 1

Wideman said the work students are doing with the administration is important and necessary, yet said he sympathized with the fact that their work must conflict with their studies.

"But any crisis is an opportunity to improve things," Wideman said. "And we should try to set examples because people can change things."

Each of us has a talent and a gift that Wideman says we must pursue, no matter how small or personal.

"The important thing is to be honest and do it well," said Wideman. "It's going to make a better world and you never know when something's going to touch another person."

Wideman said he believes it is important for people to work toward creating a more inclusive society which will create more opportunities for everyone.

"I keep rooting that the young won't despair — do something well and honestly," encouraged Wideman.

Wideman will be participating in a literary reading to benefit the Cummington Community of Arts with Professors John Tate, Valarie Martin and Michael Thelwell, Wednesday night at the Northampton Center of the Arts at 8 p.m.

Heart disease treatment varies for women, Blacks

By PAUL RAEBURN
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Women and Blacks with heart disease get less aggressive treatment than that given White men, but the results are different: Women do worse, and Blacks do better, researchers say.

The reasons for the differences were not clear, but the new studies challenge the nearly exclusive use of White men in research, said Dr. Louis W. Sullivan, the secretary of Health and Human Services.

"Unfortunately, medicine has a long history of ignoring women," Sullivan said.

"Scientists assumed that the male patient is the norm and that research on new medical therapies should be based on the medical needs, metabolism and responses of men," he said in remarks prepared for the American Heart Association's annual meeting.

The government recently launched a "women's health initiative" and opened an Office of Women's Health to try to address the needs of women, Sullivan said.

The findings, presented Monday at the meeting, included:

• Only 46 percent of women who had bypass surgery to relieve chest pains survived at least 12 years, compared with 61 percent of men.

• Blacks were more likely than Whites to survive 30 days after a heart attack, but less likely than whites to undergo bypass surgery and other procedures.

• Forty-three percent of women with heart attacks underwent procedures to examine or widen narrowed arteries, compared with 69 percent of men.

• Women who had heart attacks remained in local hospitals an average of 4.5 days before being transferred to larger hospitals for more advanced treatment, versus 2.4 days for men.

SPACE FOR RENT
By the page or by the inch. Top-ranked college daily with a readership of over 19,000 seeks advertisers to take advantage of effective medium. Call 545-3500

Tonight, November 17, 1992
John Sacco
Master Hypnotist
Performing at
The Hatch
9:00 p.m.
$2.00 Cover Charge

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
$10 HAIRCUTS!
Make an appointment with Liz between 9am and 1pm, and your haircut will be only $10!
Good Monday through Friday.
Expires 12/15/92

COLLEGIAN ADVERTISING WORKS!
The best advertising medium to reach students in the Five-College area.
Reach 19,000 per day.
545-3500

The 1993 INDEX

Class of 1993 Senior Portraits will be taken for the yearbook until Friday, Nov. 20th

Location: Campus Center, Room 174/178

For portrait appointment, call
1-800-724-6440

Order your yearbook now!!
Until Nov. 20th for only...
$25

304 Student Union • 545-0848

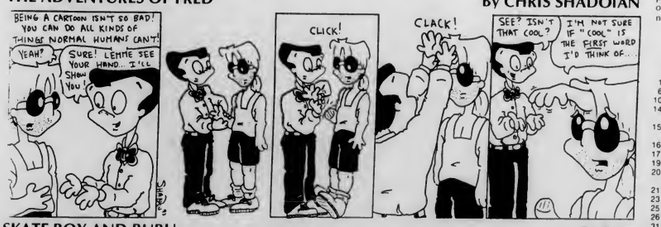
CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

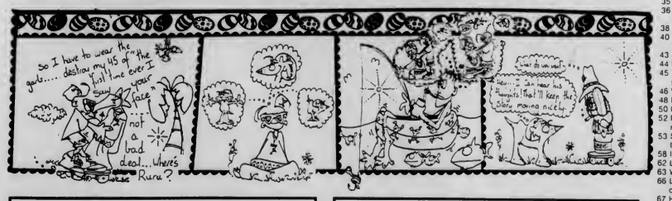
TANGENT By KURT MATILLA

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN



SKATE BOY AND RURU By PITT



THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Quote of the Day

"When I want to really blast one, I just loosen my girdle and let 'er fly."
– Babe Didrikson Zaharias

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Buy only the bare necessities. A sudden romantic fling has more implications than you originally thought. Protect your personal possessions. Give mate a helping hand.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A meeting held behind closed doors could give you an important go-ahead. If money is tight, homemade holiday treats make excellent Christmas presents.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A business proposal gives you a golden opportunity to work with people who will be lucky for you. Correspondence has tremendous impact on your outlook.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Difficult choices require calm deliberation. Do not run off in a direction you have not fully investigated. Clear your mind of confusing thoughts. Love is deep and sensitive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A question about home security or household organization may be on your mind. You can put things in better order. Innovative ideas are surprisingly easy to sell.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your lively and independent spirit is a big plus. You are able to complete work speedily and win higher-ups' approval. Be more aware of a loved one's emotional needs. Show tenderness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Hidden factors connected with your job could be depressing unless you resolve to take a long-range approach. Entertain good friends at home. Talk about your fears instead of locking them away.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Working with someone who is important to you will bring you closer together. Friends have exciting ideas. Be careful not to go overboard. Reckless moves are oil-limits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Remain relaxed and unhurried while finishing up a cumbersome task. Completing old business gives you a new lease on life. You benefit financially from following through on a clever proposal.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Movement or travel is likely today as you search for the exotic. Extra job demands are possible; rise to the challenge. Focus on spiritual subjects tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Honorable, lively, aware people are your allies now. Partnerships prove both intellectually stimulating and emotionally rewarding. Be friendly to newcomers.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A stroke of good luck makes this a memorable day. Show use your talents to best advantage. A romantic relationship deepens.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

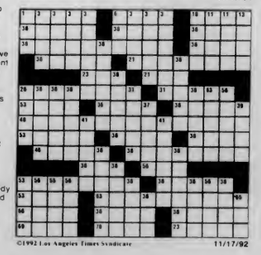
ACROSS
1 Tossed course
6 Swarm
10 Bridge feat
14 Creme de la creme
15 Columnist Bombeck
16 Interlaced
17 Is overjoyed
19 Assist
20 Way up or down
21 Lurches
23 Hiatus
25 Big — Cal.
26 Emphasized
31 Geena, Judy or Mac
35 Gentlemen
36 Enough, to Milton
38 — Rica
40 Gets set straight
43 Not even once!
44 Part of HOMES
45 To the sheltered side
46 Violinist's need
48 Fasteners
50 Kind of soup
52 Restorative resort
53 Stevenson's Island
58 Inventor Howe
62 Lavish amount
63 Wears down
66 Listening devices
67 His Rose was Irish
68 Golfer Pavin
69 Seabird
70 Burden
71 Encampment

DOWN
1 Stitch
2 Tsk, tsk!
3 Spirited melody
4 Alaskan island
5 Plan
6 — Commandments
7 Periods
8 Gushes forth
9 Pillage
10 Booty
11 Ear area
12 Claim
13 Team from Queens
18 Gives a speech
22 Kelly or Jones
24 Pound division
26 Part of NAACP
27 Quoter
28 Long for
29 Serfs
30 Rocker Morrison's group, with "The"
32 Aloud
33 Carpet fiber
34 Beef on the hoof
37 Legal orders
39 Lemon and lime additives
41 Wet blankets
42 Farm machine
47 Of the nerves
49 Royal residence
51 Antilles resort
53 Quaker's pronoun
54 Kind of admiral
55 Merit
56 Church nook
57 Arthurian lady
59 "— Rhythm" Gershwin hit
60 Taj Mahal site
61 Trickle
64 Visualize
65 Color

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

A	S	S	A	M		A	G	R	E		P	A	S	T
S	H	A	N	E		P	O	O	L		O	P	A	H
P	A	L	I	N	D	R	O	M	E		S	P	U	R
S	H	E		T	A	I	L		E	S	T	A	T	E
			P	A	B	L	E	D		P	I	E	C	E
S	P	I	T	I	S		S	A	H	A	R	A
A	L	P	S		A	T	T	A	R		C	H	E
G	O	A	T	E	E	S		E	Y	E	S	H	O	T
A	W	L		A	S	K	E	D		M	I	T	R	E
		E	S	T	E	E	M		O	C	E	A	N	S
B	A	S	T	E		W	O	R	D	E	D
A	R	C	A	N	E		T	A	I	S	M	C	H	I
T	O	E	D		P	R	I	N	C	I	P	A	L	S
O	M	N	I		E	V	O	E		U	S	U	A	L
R	A	T	A		E	S	N	E		M	I	L	N	E

11/17/92



©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/17/92

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Dan Wetzel
Copy Editor ..... Christina Rothwell
PhotoTechnician ..... Chris Evans
Production Supervisor ..... Mike Carvalho
Production ..... Dana Dorman, Kelly D'Amato

Menu

LUNCH
Pizza
Fish Munchies
BASICS LUNCH
Pizza
Sesame Noodles

DINNER
Roast Turkey w/Gravy
Cavatelli Supreme
BASICS DINNER
Roast Turkey w/Gravy
Tri-Bean Casserole

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

Baseball expansion not a smart decision

Mike
DILORENZO

About two weeks ago, NFL Commishioner Paul Tagliabue issued a statement saying the NFL would be delaying its expansion until 1995. Thank God! Can anyone imagine a team worse than the Patriots?

Expansion has been a hot issue the past issue the past four or five years. When the NBA added the Miami Heat and Charlotte Hornets and later the Minnesota Timberwolves and Orlando Magic, it did so under good conditions: the league was, and is, flourishing.

The formula? Combine a sport that features great athleticism with the ability to put people in the seats. Therefore NBA expansion was a low-risk project.

The other three major sports, however, are not ready. Over the past two years, the NHL has added three new teams. Ottawa and San Jose were a combined 2-11-1 as of this writing. Who is going to rush out to see those late season clashes between Winnipeg and Ottawa? Tampa Bay, however, was a respectable 4-4-0.

Granted, it is very early in the season, but the fact that the Lightning are at .500 shows that the talent pool in the league is diluted. The league really should not have expanded when teams like Winnipeg, Hartford, and the New York Islanders have been struggling. The Whalers had to borrow millions from Connecticut just to stay afloat.

Baseball is also expanding at a poor time. The difference between the large markets and the small ones is great. Teams like Milwaukee and Seattle need television revenue to survive, and even at that cannot sign big-name free agents because of money restraints.

Diluting the revenue base can only hurt the game. Not to mention that the ace of the expansion pitching staff could be Marvin Freeman and the big bat could be Bill Pecota. These teams can expect years of futility; Seattler has been in the league since 1977 and have one winning season to show for it.

The other sports should take note of the NBA: when you can't sell out a playoff game (Pirates), can't afford to pay the bills (Whalers), and just can't field a winner (Patriots), the best idea may not be to expand.

Mike DiLorenzo is a Collegian correspondent

SPORTS NOTICE

The University of Massachusetts athletic department has organized a bus trip for the field hockey Final Four in Richmond, Virginia this weekend. Price is $105 and includes round trip bus and hotel accomodations, but does not include tickets to the games. The bus will leave UMass Friday at midnight, and the deadline is Thursday. For more information, contact Margaret Driscoll at 545-3190.

NL expansion draft: real fantasy baseball

Luke
ERICKSON

This afternoon, all eyes of the baseball world will be focused on the NL expansion draft, beginning at 2 p.m., at the Mariott Marquis Hotel in New York City.

"Fantasy Baseball Meets Real Life" is how USA Today's Baseball Weekly described the event in their September 16-22 issue, and I don't think I could write a better headline.

Speculation has been running wild as to who will be drafted, and how the new teams, the Florida Marlins and the Colorado Rockies, will fill their rosters after each team has already spent a $95 million dollar franchise fee.

An explanation of the rules for the projected rosters is as follows:

1) Every existing team will submit a list of 15 players in their organization that are protected, and cannot be drafted.

2) All players who have no-trade clauses, or 10-5 men, players who have been in the majors for 10 years and spent the last five years with their current club, must be projected.

3) Minor leaguers are exempt, unless they have more than three years experience if their first contract was signed at age 19 or older, or, four years experience if they signed before age 18.

Everyone else is subject to the draft, which will be conducted as follows:

1) A coin toss will decide which team selects first, the winner of the flip may choose to have the first pick in the first round, or if they choose to go second in the first round, they will select first in the second and third rounds.

2) The Marlins and Rockies will alternate picks in each round. Each of the existing 26 teams will lose one player per round.

3) At the end of each round, each AL Team will protect four more players; each NL team will protect three more players.

4) In the third and final round, every NL team will lose one player, and after eight AL teams have lost a player, the remaining six will be exempt.

5) Thirty-six players will be chosen by each team, for a total of 72 players. 36 will be taken from each league.

The draft rules are indeed complicated, but they are written to prevent either expansion team from either stealing away 36 prime-time players and prospects, or being stuck with only over-the-hill players and never-weres.

Baseball experts are in agreement that the Florida Marlins may not be as frugal as expansion teams were in 1962, 1969 and 1977. The Marlins are owned by Wayne Huizenga, who has interests in the Blockbuster Video store chains. And so far, by stealing away the Latin American-oriented General Manager Dave Dombrowski from the Montreal Expos, Huizenga seems to want to win quickly.

The offseason has been remarkably silent so far, as all teams anxiously await what will happen at the draft. Most transactions have been money-oriented, either free agent filings, releases, or announcements that salary arbitration will not be offered. The only trade of consequence came on October 26, when the Mets traded pitcher Wally Whitehurst, outfielder D.J. Dozier and a player to be named later, for shortstop Tony Fernandez.

The 1992-93 offseason is also the year of the free agent. It is a situation created by the owners to keep salaries down for at least another three years, when TV contracts are renegotiated next fall, and to allow more prospects to be protected since free agents cannot be drafted, nor can they sign until after the draft.

What types of players will probably go? There will be some aged veterans that clubs don't want to lose, but realistically have to protect future prospects first — players like Jack Morris or Tim Raines. And there will be young prospects that need seasoning, but have failed in their first trip to the show - players like Hensley Meulens, Steve Decker or Anthony Young.

There are of course interesting possibilities. The two teams could trade with themselves for switching positions in later rounds for players, or, the much more interesting idea of trading a drafted player to another team for more prospects.

The possibilities are endless, but this is the stuff dreams are made of. There may be one or two Triple-A shufflers that will actually come around when given the chance to play every day, rather than fill in when the regulars get injured. And a veteran player may just get one more season in the sun.

Luke Erickson is a Collegian columnist

CAN'T AFFORD TO VOLUNTEER?

Consider This:

Overseas Travel PAID

Language Training PAID

Living Expenses PAID

Medical and Dental Care PAID

Student Loans DEFERRED

$5400 CASH TO YOU

PEACE CORPS

All this, and a better world to show for it.
Maybe you can't afford not to volunteer.

PEACE CORPS ACTIVITIES AT UMASS

General Information Meeting
Tuesday, November 17
Campus Center Room 162-75
7:00 p.m.

Contact the on-campus Peace Corps Office at 545-2105
or stop by Draper Hall

X

November 18

■ Holyfield

continued from page 16

Olympics he was labeled a quitter and a tin man (no heart). What people did not know was that before the Olympics one of Riddick's sisters was stabbed to death by a crack dealer/robber, and that one of his brothers lay in a hospital bed, dying of cancer.

Instead of using these tragedies as an excuse, Bowe kept them inside, and offered no excuses. On the way to the heavyweight title, the questions of Bowe's heart and desire were raised again and again. On Friday night Riddick answered those questions with a stirring performance, in which he showed plenty of heart and desire galore.

By not falling into the well-paying drug traps that Brownsville offered, Bowe showed enough will so that it never should have been questioned in the first place. But it was, and it was not until Friday night that Riddick was able to dispel those doubts. As they say, it is better late than never.

Unlike Holyfield, Bowe has the personality that fits the heavyweight crown to a tee. He is a humorous, colorful individual who can be as entertaining as it gets.

Anyone who witnessed Bowe's staredown with Lennox Lewis after the fight on Friday, realize that one thing Bowe will not be as champion, is boring. Memories will no doubt be conjured up of another colorful indivdual who wore the heavyweight crown. His name? Muhammed Ali.

After their battle on Friday, Holyfield and Bowe embraced each other with both new and old respect. The new respect was for each others' great fighting talents, while the old respect was for each others' great characters.

Jeff Crofts is a Collegian columnist

■ men's swimming

continued from page 16

Minutemen some breathing space that they would need later. First place finishes by the Terriers in three of the next four events made for tight going again, but UMass took first and third places in the last event of the day, the 400 m freestyle relay. Antonelli, Osborne, Barrett, and Reich won the race and iced the meet by finishing less than a second ahead of the B.U. team.

UMass' Jeff Wicklund, Sean Clark, Reggie Rasata, and Nubar finished third in the final event.

Jeff Little, Wicklund and John Luviano swept the top three places in the 1000 m freestyle. Jay Peluso, Tim Milbert and Meymaris swept the top three in the 200 m individual medley.

"I think the guy that had the best individual meet," Yarowrth said, "was Greg Meymaris, who snagged third place in the 200 m I.M., and an important third in the 200 m butterfly. Really tough, come-from-behind races. If you want to look at the classic example of a UMass swimmer, in what we want in toughness and intensity, do-anything-not-to-lose, Greg Meymaris did it in that meet."

■ women's swimming

continued from page 16

a time of 4:51.47.

As predicted, Griffith continues to surprise people. She won both the 100 and 200-yard breaststroke events with a time of 1:11.8 and 2:34.58 respectively. Freshman Sarah Baker also swam a personal best in the 200-yard freestyle (2:07.27), which was 5 seconds better than her old best.

"There are a lot of positives that come out of a bad meet, and a lot of things we can learn from it in the long run," said a optimistic Newcomb. "We realize how hard we have to work now on turns and third quarter races."

Newcomb said he's glad that they had an off day against BU than have it against Northeastern next Saturday. "Northeastern is out to get us," said co-captain Kari Edwarsen. "Everyone is going to be up seeing that it's our last meet before the Atlanic 10 Conference meet. We've got a great attitude going into our Northeastern meet.

Now 2-1, the Minutewomen will swim against their arch- rival, Northeastern University, Saturday Nov. 21 at 1 p.m. at Northeastern.

Know it, Love it, Live it.

Collegian.

At 19,000 copies a day, there's a lot to love.

PERSONAL

Nice, Affordable two and three bedroom Condos., seeking quiet responsible residents. Long and short term relationship possible.

Call 253-3834

Understanding Eating Disorders:

Strategies for Friends and Family

Wednesday - November 18
6:30 p.m. - 8:30 p.m.
University Health Center - Room 304

I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?

I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest...Where should she go?

I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid...What can I do to help?

If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.

NBA at the TOP

Don't miss the action!
Celtics v. Bullets
Tonight at 7:30 pm

TOP of the CAMPUS
LOUNGE

11th Floor • Campus Center
UMass at Amherst

Mon.-Fri: 2:00 pm - 12:30 am
Sat.: 5:00 - 12:30 am

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE

CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center

PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

ACTIVITIES

Institute for the Healing of Racism Tuesday 7pm
CC RM 803
All Welcome

UPC General Committee Meeting Tonight 11/17, at 6:00 p.m. in Campus Center Rooms 174-176. All are welcome.

AIRLINE TICKETS

Fly home for Thanksgiving cheeper than ever before up to $100 off. Any fare going anywhere domestic or international. For more info call 516-767-7646

ANNOUNCEMENTS

3 Credit Recycling Class - Educ2 354 Intro to Future Studies. Learn about recycling and other waste mgmt. issues. Spring Semester Tues 2:30 - 5:00. Schedule #211663, 545-1153 For more info

Spanish Speakers
Earn $$$
Need fluent Spanish speakers (Native or Non-native) for psychology reading study. Call Maria 545-0893

Study in Paris w/UMass Boston Program Director meets with interested students CC 804 at 1pm TODAY!

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Nissan Sentra 5 speed AM/FM cassette. Good condition. $1895 253-0725

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

COLLEGE PIZZA

Fall Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $6.00
1 or 2 Toppings Add $1.00
Free Soda with large sub salad or spaghetti
549-6096
549-6073
Must mention this ad!

FOR RENT

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom homes on bus route call 586-4270

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

Live in Northampton Looking for tenants to take over lease of a spacious 3 rm Haven located in lovely downtown Northampton. Rent includes heat only, $50 a month. Lease this house while you can it's hot. 586-3206

One room in 3 bedroom Pufton Apartment Rent 226/mo Plus Available January 1 1993 to June 30 1993 Call Anne 549-7718 in evening before 11pm

Take over our lease at Brandywine, 2 bedroom heat and hot water included, inlcudes free gift! Call 549-0081 avail Jan. 1

FOR SALE

Albinar telephoto lens 135mm Like new condition Bayonet mount $80 BO 545-1028 or 253-2018

MAC SE/30 w/lots of additional software 2MG/80 asking 1800 or BO call 774-2567

Tandy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuals Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

HELP WANTED

BE ON T.V. Many needed for commercials Now hiring all ages. For cassing info. Call (615) 779-7111 ext. T-458

Earn Easy Money!!! Post our brochures around campus and receive commission for each completed application. Work few hours, on your own time. Call 1-800-758-9918 EST

"If you like Pina Coladas," Free Spring Break trips & cash, you can have it all! We are looking for serious students to market our programs. Call Carmine! 800-999-6166 203-978-1564 (T)

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT Make $2000+ per month teaching English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room & board & other benefits! Financially & culturally rewarding! For program Call: (206) 632-1148 ext. J5001

Prof seeks personal care assistance in SDM 12-2:30 most days M-F Salary negotiable Call 549-0117 after 5pm

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SIESTA ask for Bonnie

LEGAL HELP

Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

PERSONALS

Audrey Would you like to talk again. Call me or meet you at the "bench" Tues or Thurs same time L

Happy Birthday Katie Lynch! Love, Roomie #4

Happy Birthday Brooke
Love your 2 roomates
Chris
Laurin

Happy Birthday Laurin
and
Best Wishes
I love you
Love
Chris

Jen Jeneau:
Love you
Big Sis!
LML
Little PHI

Susan, from aerobics class
If I could do anything today
I would spend the day with you.

To my lil sis
Heather C.,
Don't think I forgot you,
I just wanted to save
the Best for Last!!!
LML
Your Big Sis
Rebecca

To The Candle Women I met at the Amerst College Library on 11/9 When can I light your candles again? Respond with another personal
From: The Lighter Man

Tracy K.
Happy Birthday!
Have a super duper day!
Love April & Carrie

ROOMATES WANTED

Female to share large room 167.50 call 665-7604

Furnished bedroom available in Colonial Village. Looking for responsible and mature person. Not a party spot. Call Andy at 253-9880 evenings for interview

Need 3 Housemates M/F Jen 1st 5 min to Campus 549-7619

3 Responsible women
Need housing for Spring semester Desire place near UMass
Call Young-Ni 546-0580 or Jen 4978

Roomate wanted one room available to female. Starts Jan. Five minutes from campus Call 549-5552

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Terot Readings
Call Chris 256-0821

SPORTS CARDS

SportStop Cards
Coming Dec. 1st
Mountain Farms Mall

TO SUBLET

Sublet wanted for wintersession Must be within walking distance to campus room/apartment Call Maria 546-6630

TRAVEL

Save on spring break '93 Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida from $119! Book early, save $$$!! Group discounts!! 1-800-426-7710

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed -- Free cover page, spell check. $1.25/page. Brian 546-1795

Typing - Word Processing
Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations. Laser Printing
Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24hr. turnaround 586-5268.

WANTED

Looking for
2-4 bedroom apt.
For Spring 93
546-0749

Sports

Women's X-C end season at ECAC's

By JASON NASH
Collegian Staff

Larry Bird once said, "A season ended on a loss ain't a season at all." Certainly the words of Larry Legend do not apply to the University of Masachusetts women's cross country team, who ended an undefeated regular season with a fifth place finish at the Eastern Collegian Athletic Conference in Bethleham, Penn., failing to qualify for the National Championships.

"The women were very disappointed, but they have nothing to be ashamed of," said coach Julie LaFreniere.

Kelly Liljeblad finished first for the Minutewomen while just missing qualifying individually for the nationals. Kerry Acre finished second making a jump into the UMass' top five in what was the only good news of the day. Mo Meldrim (third), Becky Johnson (fourth) and Kim Liljeblad (fifth) rounded out UMass' top five.

The fifth, sixth and seventh finish of Kim Liljeblad, Becky Johnson and Julie Moreau was the the main reason for the mediocre showing at the meet. Because of a flu virus the entire team had been fighting for over a month, the heart of the Minutewomen were knocked from their usual second, third and fourth finish.

"Kim and Becky were the sickest out of anyone," said LaFreniere. "On Tuesday people looked better for the first time in a month, but in endurance athletics you just can't come back (to top form) right away."

The overall finish had Providence first, then Dartmouth, Harvard and UConn. What makes the fifth place finish very disheartening is the fact that UMass had already beaten UConn and Dartmouth previously this season. UMass needed only to place first or second for a spot at the Nationals.

"The women got off to a quick start, but started to fade half way through," said LaFreniere. "They gave it everything they had, but in the end they were flat. Ideally we needed another week to get back into it."

Though the season ended on a down note, this team has nothing to hang their heads about. This is the same crew that won the Dartmouth Invitational, the Atlantic 10 Championship and compiled a 6-0 regular season record.

Basketball ticket policy revised

Student activity cards highlight streamlined operation

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts ticket office has announced a new student ticket policy for the upcoming 1992-93 basketball season. The new and improved policy will implement the use of student activity cards, which will drastically cut down the time students wait in line, according to the UMass ticket manager.

Thorr Bjorn, ticket manager for athletics, said the new policy will cut the time students spend in line down by eliminating the need for student verification.

"Last year we needed to look in the book to verify that that students were undergraduates during every ticket exchange," he said. "The activity card is designed to save time when students pick up individual game tickets so that we do not have to repeatedly verify undergraduate ticket status at each ticket exchange. The activity card is designed to be a one-time verification process."

Bjorn estimated that last year students waited for approximately half a minute during each exchange while workers flipped through 3-ring binder verification books. He said that with a student activity card, students could have their ticket in four or five seconds.

"The wait was the biggest concern, and we've taken care of that this year," Bjorn said. "We want to get as many students into the games as possible, and we want to see that each student gets their fair share."

Students can pick up student activity cards on Wednesday, November 18 to save their time on student pickup days. At each ticket pickup there will be two lines — those with valid activity cards and those who need to pick up an activity card.

The first ticket pickup will take place on Thursday, November 19 from 7 a.m to 3 p.m. Every student is allowed to receive one student activity card for free. If the card is lost, the student must pay $30 for an additional card.

Bjorn said that possession of an activity card does not guarantee a ticket.

"Tickets are based on availability," he said. "It's a first come, first serve basis."

In addition, the ticket office will be selling tickets to UMass games at the Worcester Centrum and the Springfield Civic Center. Tickets for the Abdow's Holiday Classic in Springfield are $10 per night. The tourney lasts two nights. Tickets for the UMass-DePaul game in Worcester are $14, and tickets are $8 for the UMass-Cincinnati game.

Holyfield and Bowe: more than fighters

On Friday night in Las Vegas, people not only witnessed a great heavyweight title fight, but also a fight between two great men. Evander Holyfield and Riddick Bowe are great men, at least in my eye they are.

Mike Tyson might have been a helluva fighter, but a great man he is not. Inside the ring Tyson was as exciting as they come, outside the ring, meanwhile, he was as menacing as they come.

It was Tyson's style in the ring that made him such a tough act to follow for Holyfield. People talked about how Holyfield was not a true heavyweight champion, how he won unimpressively against grandfathers and drug addicts.

Jeff
CROFTS

Holyfield did win, however, which was his main objective. Sure he didn't knock out Larry Holmes the way Tyson did, but Evander also did not get convicted of rape the way Tyson did.

Being the undisputed heavyweight champion of the world is a position in which the words role model come to mind.

That is where Tyson failed, with his out-of-ring activities causing him problems, eventually leading him behind bars.

While champion, the big knock on Holyfield was his boring personality. Well, I can think of a lot worse things to be called than boring. Evander might not have been a colorful champ but his Spartan work ethic and fighting heart are two qualities that any kid would do well in looking up to.

In losing to Bowe, Holyfield showed all the qualities that make him such a great man. In round 10, for example, Bowe opened up by beating Evander from pillar to post. Instead of crumbling and calling it a night, Holyfield fought back, and by the end of the round was on the offensive himself.

Then in round 11, Bowe knocked Holyfield down with a big right hand. Again, instead of folding, Holyfield did the opposite, he got back up, held on and fought back against a superior opponent. Although Holyfield lost, he gained more in losing this one fight than he had in winning his three title defenses.

Now on to Riddick Bowe. Growing up in the ghetto streets of Brownsville, New York, Bowe knows what a tough life is. Watching his mother support himself and 13 brothers and sisters, Bowe has seen hard work, and contrary to what many people thought before Friday night, Bowe knows not to quit.

When Bowe lost to Lennox Lewis in the 1988

Turn to HOLYFIELD, page 15

Swimming team boosts record to 2-0 with win

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's swimming team swept the top three places in consecutive events halfway through its meet against Boston University Sunday, and rode those places to a 133-106 win over the Terriers in Boston.

It was the Minutemen's second straight win to open the season. Last Saturday they easily dispatched a weak Vermont team, 152.5-68.5, so head coach Russ Yarowrth was hoping to avoid a letdown against B.U.

"What I was hoping for in this meet," Yarworth said, "besides a win, was to see if the guys were ready to respond to competition that was a little more intense. On the whole we were. I was pretty pleased."

Leading only 56-53 at the halfway point the Minutemen needed a boost, and got it in the 200 meter butterfly, courtesy of a win by Tim Nubar, a second place by Chris Antonelli, and a third place finish by Greg Meymaris. The next event, the 100 m freestyle, was also swept by UMass, this time by Adam Reich, Chris Barrett, and Aaron Osborne.

The 32-6 point total in those two races gave the

Turn to MEN'S SWIMMING, page 15

Women swimmers drops third meet to Boston Univ.

By ROBERT FERREIRA
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team suffered an off day Sunday in Boston University territory. The Minutewomen were defeated by a powerful BU team with a remaining score, UMass 108, BU 191.

"I'm not ashamed that we lost to them," said head coach Bob Newcomb. "I just wish we swam better doing it. We swam a little better as the meet went on, but we were just not in gear."

The Boston University team, belonging to the North Atlantic Conference, won their NAC championship meet last year and finished well at Easterns.

"Having a bad meet against a good team will help us get better over the long run, which is what we are shooting for," said Newcomb. The Minutewomen were missing several swimmers due to illnesses.

Juniors Kate Riddell and Julie Veremey and freshman Jessica Griffith all seemed to permeate the "off day" barrier with concrete performances.

"[Riddell] swam great today," said Newcomb. Riddell swam personal bests in both the 200-yard backstroke, shaving more than 3 seconds off of her time (2:19.37), and the 400-yard individual medley (5:07.78). Veremey landed a solid first place in the 400-yard individual medley with

Turn to WOMEN'S SWIMMING, page 15

Field hockey's 1987 season one to remember

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

On November 15, 1987, the University of Massachusetts field hockey team defied all odds by beating the top two teams in New England in two days and advanced to the NCAA Final Four. That group of overacheivers were the last of head coach Pam Hixon's teams to advance to the Final Four. Until last Sunday.

Exactly five years to the day, the 1992 version of UMass field hockey defeated Penn State 1-0 on Sunday and gained a berth in the Final Four. This year's squad will attempt to go farther than than the 1987 team, or any UMass field hockey team for that matter, when they face No. 2 Iowa at 2:45 p.m. on Saturday for the right to face either No. 1 Old Dominion or No. 4 North Carolina.

While preparing for this weekend's contest against the Hawkeyes, Hixon still remembered the last team that she took to the Final Four.

"What I remember about 1987 was that we struggled early," she said. "There were expectations on the team to be good, and we struggled with that. About halfway through the season we made a pact to just go out and be competitive and not worry about what the outcome would be.

"Each one of those kids back then really pulled themselves together as mature athletes and started to develop the same kind of focus in this year's team, only these guys started from the beginning."

Because the way the NCAA tournament was set up in 1987, UMass had to play in Durham, NH against UNH on Saturday and the No. 3 team in the country, Providence, on Sunday if they won. Friar goalie Sandra O'Gorman had shutout every opponent during the year.

"It was very emotional that weekend," Hixon said. "We just marched. You could sense a certain air of confidence in the team. I felt relaxed and I felt the team was very ready. You could see it in their eyes."

UMass defeated UNH 2-0 and came back the next day to shock the Friars 4-1 and advance to Chapel Hill, NC for the Final Four.

"I remember that battle between the N.E. teams in 1987, unlike this year," said assistant coach Amy Robertson, who was a player on the 1987 team. "I was center back, and you don't normally score many goals from that position," she said. "Against Providence, I intercepted a pass, took it down the field, took a shot, got my rebound and put it in. Once we broke the ice, the flood gates opened, so I felt I did my part."

Overmatched, the Minutewomen faced North Carolina, the number one team in the country, on their home turf the next Saturday in the semifinal game. The Tar Heels beat UMass 3-0, and UMass had to settle for the conso-

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 8

Wednesday November 18, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 49

Kind of sunny today with highs eyeing 40. Shiny happy Thursday.

Local:
Master hypnotist John Sacco makes an appearance at the Hatch and takes students on a "trip" to Mars and the carnival among other locales. Page 3.

Sports:
Meet the man who keeps the Minutemen football players on their toes and well-equipped. Page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
MAKING TRACKS -- Three unidentified students trudge across Metawampe Lawn in the snow yesterday.

Deaths from AIDS are steadily rising

By ROBERT W. TROTT
Associated Press

BOSTON — More Massachusetts residents died of AIDS and AIDS-related diseases last year than ever before, according to statistics released Tuesday by the State Department of Public Health.

Health Commissioner David Mulligan said while the number of reported cases has held steady during the past few years, more deaths have started to occur.

"As the decade of '80s went along, the number of new cases reported each year was rising," Mulligan said. "It peaked in 1989 with 850 cases diagnosed. Now, many have died in 1991. It's the peak years we're hitting now in terms of death."

In 1991, 632 Massachusetts residents died from AIDS and HIV illnesses, up 41 percent from 1990. AIDS was the second leading cause of death for people between the ages of 25 and 44, and the top cause of death for men in that range.

Per 100,000 residents, 130.7 in Massachusetts died of heart disease, and 137.1 died of cancer. The state's heart disease rate of 32.2 percent was slightly lower than the national rate of 33.2 percent.

"Progress has been made on the cardiology side," Mulligan said. "With cancer, it seems that we are on a fairly level plain. Since 1980, cancer really hasn't moved at all through the decade of the '80s."

The 10 leading causes of death among whites were all chronic diseases — heart disease, cancer, stroke, diabetes and other ailments — while the leading cause of death among Hispanics and Blacks included AIDS, prenatal conditions and homicide.

In 1991, 53,011 Massachusetts residents died of AIDS: 25,461 males and 17,550 females. The rate was 461.5 deaths per 100,000 people, a 2 percent decline from 1990 and a 16 percent decline from 1980.

The state's death rate was more than 9 percent lower than the national rate, the department said.

White Bay Staters accounted for 95.8 percent of the 1991 deaths, while 3.6 percent were black, 0.5 percent were Asian and 1.3 percent were Hispanic. Overall, 91.9 percent of the Massachusetts population is White; 5.4 percent, Black; 2.4 percent, Asian; and 4.8 percent Hispanic.

Department spokeswoman Kate McCormack said the 1991 AIDS death toll reflected the number of people whocontracted it in the late 1980s.

Latin American negotiators say progress made

By YVETTE BAEZ
Collegian Staff

Latino students negotiated with members of the administration to re-open the Latin Cultural Center yesterday and two of their four demands will be met, according to student members of the negotiating team.

The Latin-American Cultural Center was closed on November 4, 1991, according to the student negotiators, due to lack of funds and an "inadequate commitment to multiculturalism at UMass." They said the center was closed in conjunction with the closing of the United Asia Cultural Center.

Negotiations resumed after two weeks of meetings between the students and Chancellor Richard O'Brien, Thomas Robinson, vice chancellor of student affairs, Ricardo Townes associate dean of academic support services and Grant Ingle, director of the office of human relations.

David Nunez of the Third World Caucus said, "We appreciate the efforts of the administration and the Chancellor in helping to facilitate negotiations of the issue. We hope it will set a standard for future negotiations."

The University has agreed to move the center from Moore House in Southwest and and to grant sufficient funding for programming and equipment. Negotiators said the University did not say exactly how much funding the center will receive.

Students are working towards finding a new location for the cultural center in conjunction with space management. The members said they are seeking, "a more comfortable and adequate environment that coordinates with our expectations and adjusts to the necessities that our community deserves."

In a memo to Robinson, Townes requested the center receive new equipment including personal computers, a laser printer, a copy machine and a fax machine.

The student negotiators said they are in the process of electing members to positions within the center and the electees will be announced after Thanksgiving break. They said they plan the inauguration of the center will take place some time in December.

The negotiators stressed the center is open to students of all Latino descent. They said their overall goal is unity among Latino students, as well as all other minorities.

"This was a student-organized movement with no faculty involvement," Nunez said.

Gay and Lesbian youth testify

Governor's Commission seeks to answer concerns

By EVE EPSTEIN
Associated Press

BOSTON — Troix Bettencourt says he has to leave home after telling his family he was gay. Matt Flynn was accepted by his parents and his friends, but was initiallly scared to tell them.

Both teen-agers told their contrasting stories at a Statehouse hearing Tuesday before the Governor's Commission on Gay and Lesbian Youth. The panel is examining the problems of gay youth, particularly in light of a national study that found that 30 percent of successful youth suicides are committed by gay teenagers.

"This population of young people that have been silenced, that been forced into the most painful of closets," said David LaFontaine, the commission chairman.

Bettencourt, 18, who is known as Reginald by his family, is now the president of the Boston Alliance of Gay and Lesbian Youth, said he felt alienated in high school, although he was popular, had a girlfriend and participated in school sports.

"The whole time everything was a lie," said Bettencourt, who dropped out of school. "I felt so alone. I had nowhere to go. I had no one."

Finally, Bettencourt said he told a sympathetic priest that he was gay. But telling his own family was a different story.

"My mother went nuts and came at me with an iron," he said. After his mother called police, Bettencourt said he left his home in Lowell and finally wound up in Boston.

Bettencourt's mother, Bernardete, acknowledges that she threatened him with an iron and called the police. But she said their argument had nothing to do with his sexuality, and added that the family was going through a rough divorce at the time.

"I would never reject my son because he was gay. I think there was a lot of confuson at that time," she said.

Flynn, a student at Newton South High School, also felt alienated and scared when he realized that he was gay. He started failing courses at school.

But when he told his adoptive parents they accepted him.

"After coming out at home I realized I felt much

Turn to COMMISSION, page 4

US mounts search for terrorists

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States is mounting an international search, including "Wanted" ads and $2 million rewards, for Iranian-backed suspects secretly indicted for kidnapping and murdering Americans, officals said Tuesday.

The Justice Department has issued sealed indictments against several alleged terrorists identified by U.S. intelligence this year as responsible for killing American hostages in Lebanon and blowing up at least one airliner, said a U.S. official who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

The Justice Department declined to comment on the indictments, first reported Monday by CNN.

One of the sealed indictments is against the suspected killer of either the CIA's Beirut station chief, William Buckley, or Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins, said another source familiar with the indictments, who also requested anonymity.

In addition to Buckley, who died in captivity in Lebanon in 1985, and Higgins, killed by his Shiite Muslim captors in 1988 or 1989, kidnapped American Peter Kilburn was killed in 1986. It was unclear whether his alleged killer was among those indicted.

The Associated Press reported previously that some of the Lebanese kidnapping group, including its leader, Imad Mughniveh, took refuge in Iran last year.

"To bring these murderers to justice, the U.S. government offers rewards of up to $2 million," said one of the ads being placed in U.S. and international newspapers in the coming days. It shows pictures of all three murdered Americans and urges anyone with information to contact the FBI or the nearest U.S. embassy.

Rewards can reach up to $4 million under an arrangement of matching funds from U.S. airlines for information that prevents terrorism against U.S. carriers or leads to the arrest and conviction of perpetrators of airline terrorism.

Also among the terrorists identified by the United States in the last year are those responsible for placing a bomb that exploded aboard a TWA plane over Greece in 1986, sucking four passengers to their death, said the second source.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

The Collegian:
Deep fat fried and really bad for you. Like drinking motor oil. Don't say we didn't warn you.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run each Monday, Wednesday and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Due to space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcement can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian c/o the News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Wednesday, November 18

Meeting — The Debate Club will be holding its weekly meeting at the Debate Trailer, located below Thompson Hall at 7 p.m. All interested are welcome to attend. For more information, please call the Debate Trailer at 545-2055.

Lecture — Professor Robert B. Hallock will give his lecture titled "Mysteries and Magic Near the Absolute Zero of Temperature" at 4 p.m. in Memorial Hall. The event is free and open to the public.

Lecture — Dr. George R. Schneiter, Director, Strategic & Space Systems, Office of Under Secretary of Defense (Acquisition), Department of Defense, will speak on "Implications of Recent International Changes for Strategic U.S. Defensive Programs" at 11:15 a.m. in room SBA 120. This is one in a series of invited talks to the Interdisciplinary course Citizenship in the Nuclear Age (Educ. 250/Physics 250/Pol Sci 250), and the public is invited to attend.

Discussion — A discussion group for children of Jewish-Gentile intermarriage will be held at 1 p.m. in the Hillel House, 388 N. Pleasant St. The event is sponsored by UMass Hillel.

Thursday, November 19

Seminar — BMCP is sponsoring a Career and Entrepreneurial seminar from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. in the Campus Center Room 101. Admission is free.

Discussion and Potluck — Graduate women students and women faculty and staff in engineering, science and technical fields are invited to a discussion and potluck dinner (beverages provided): "Women's Safety on Campus: A Conversation with Public Safety Officer Detective Joanne O'Conner," at 5:30 p.m. in 1033 LGRT.

Puerto Rican Night — Live music at Berkshire and Hampshire dining commons will be held from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. in order to accompany the festive night with authentic food from Puerto Rico.

Presentation — "Images of Turkey: An audio-visual journey to the land of ancient civilization and today's Republic of Turkey," The event will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 904-08. The event is free.

UMass Police Log

Compiled by Michael Day

Recent incidents recorded by the University's Department of Public Safety.

• A fire in the kitchen on the 11th floor of the Campus Center caused the evacuation of the building and an estimated $10,000 in damages Monday evening, according to police. The fire occurred in the vent system of the kitchen at 8:35 p.m.

Amherst Fire Department extinguished the blaze shortly after, and people were allowed back into the building, except for the top floors. Members of the Environmental Health & Safety Staff estimated the damages.

• A woman reported an annoying telephone call to police on Monday. The woman received the call from a man at 11 a.m., police said. The man allegedly asked her to answer a few questions and the woman then hung up the phone.

• University police received a report of a stolen telephone from a student's room in Cance Residence Hall on Monday. The phone is worth $261, according to police.

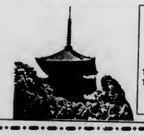
• A woman had her wallet stolen from her coat pocket while she was rehearsing for a play on Saturday night, according to police. The woman reported the theft to police yesterday, valuing the wallet at $200.

• A wallet was stolen from a man's duffel bag while he was studying in the University Library on Monday, police said. Police value the theft at $60.

• A man reported the theft of his bicycle to police on Monday. The bike was in front of Lewis Residence Hall when it was stolen in the early morning, according to police. The bicycle was valued at $25.

• Staff Members from the Boyden Gymnasium reported the theft of a floor drain on Monday morning. The drain was worth $25, according to police.

Run Forever

Meditation. 禅
Mental clarity.
Mystical experiences.
Emotional balance.
Spiritual depth.
It will be with you for the rest of your life.
Learn how.
Now.
A special program for people 18 - 29.


Every Wednesday night
UMass Campus Center
Intro: 7:00-8:00
Advanced: 8:15-9:45
11/18 Rm.911 11/25 Rm.803
11/30 Rm.805 12/9 Rm.803
Event Added!
Dec.2 in Boston!
Free Music Meditation tapes for you!
FREE
taught by The Boston Meditation Society

COFFEE SHOP
Free 12 oz. Soda
with the purchase of a
Sandwich, Burger Entree or Large Salad
and this coupon
Coupon valid Mon., 11/16 through Fri., 11/20

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Family
Wednesday - November 18
6:30 p.m. - 8:30 p.m.
University Health Center - Room 304
I think my roommate has an eating disorder. How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help. How can I convince her to see a professional? Who should I suggest...Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia. She says it's under control, but I don't think it is. I'm really afraid...What can I do to help?
If you're concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.

Local News

Master hypnotist visits Hatch

Takes students to Mars to meet little alien friends

By MARK WENHAM
Collegian Correspondent

Offering to get students "stoned" for free, a self-described master hypnotist visted the Hatch last night, and proceeded to bring adventurous students to Mars.

John Sacco, a trained Hypno-therapist, uses his skills during the day for therapeutic and counseling purposes and at night for entertainment around the world, began the evening by asking the audience to stand up and close their eyes.

Sacco then had everyone imagine that there was a stack of huge dictionaries in their right hand and a bunch of weather balloons attached to their left. When people opened their eyes, most of them saw that their right hands were considerably lower than their left.

From there, Sacco selected a group of about twenty people from the audience to sit in chairs on stage and, in the next six minutes, proceeded to hypnotize most of them. Although some people were apparently unaffected and soon left the stage, a number of others ended up slumped in their chairs, completely relaxed and ready for Sacco's suggestions to guide the next hour of their lives.

Sacco said he was not out to hurt or embarrass anyone, as he took the group of "stoned" students on a very unique tour of their inner universes, to the

Turn to HYPNOTIST, page 10

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

Hypnotist John Sacco enthralls his audience at the Hatch last night.

Meeting sparks discussion on racism issues

By EMILY TATOIAN
Collegian Correspondent

A diverse group of 16 people addressed the issue of racism last night during the "Institute For The Healing Of Racism" bimonthly meeting. The people at the meeting said important targets of racism were education, history and personal close-minded attitudes often found on campus.

Gail Hilliard, a math learning specialist at Holyoke Community College, acted as the facilitator at the meeting, which was sponsored by the Baha'i Club.

As an African-American, Hilliard reflected on her own experiences with racism and its powerful effect on the sufferer.

Hilliard said during Christmastime at Holyoke Community College there were outbursts of racism. She said it tainted the walls of the school causing fear, nervousness and anger.

"We've always had racial tension in this country. If it's in society, it must be in the classroom causing hostility and an unsafe environment for the sufferers," said Hilliard.

In an effort to decrease the tension created by racism, people discussed ways to handle the oppression and stop racism.

English major Cheryl Thompson said, "Well, there are groups that may help, but the most effective action is your personal change and hopefully others will see that change and follow your example."

Munirih Taafaki, a STEPC major reflected on her own experience with elementary education in India. "In my school in India, there was a conscious effort to promote the oneness of humanity," she said.

Taafaki said in school curriculums people fail to see the importance of studying the history of racism, or of recognizing the need for unity.

"We focus on math and English, but my understanding of racism is more integral to our well-being than learning to add and spell," Taaafaki said. She said learning about the effects of racism by the time people reach college is too late.

Sean Maroney, a double major in history and education, said another way to battle racism was to become teachers and show youngsters how to treat each other as human beings.

"It's a lot easier to get a message through to a bunch of six and seven-year-olds than the blank faces you see around here," said Maroney in regard to the recent protest that occurred this past Columbus Day weekend.

Ruhe said it was important to make an effort to change racism everyday. Colon Ruhe, an electrical engineering major said, "If I don't work on myself every day until I am buried, then my kids won't have that base in their hearts."

Program fills health care need

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

Due to the great need for foreign trained health care specialists, the Donahue Institute at the University of Massachusetts is offering a program for professionals and paraprofessionals from the former Soviet Union Bloc and Eastern Bloc countries, according to the program director.

"It's an exciting challenge because there are needs for jobs and needs for culturally-sensitive health care," said Elaine Kenseth-Abel, the program director. "It's meeting needs by meeting needs."

The free re-entry program includes a 35-week advanced course on English as a second language, with job counseling and support services. It also provides credentialing services, including finding solutions to credentialing obstacles, job development services in the health care fields and individualized educational plans to meet licensing criteria in the field of training.

In addition, it provides assistance in looking at employment opportunities in health care, using existing skills and expertise.

The health care needs of the ethnic populations in the Springfield area must be met, Kenseth-Abel said. The skills and expertise of displaced health care professionals can be utilized through the program.

One reason there are few health care professionals in hospitals or clinics in the Springfield area, Kenseth-Abel said, is because people from other countries have difficul-

Turn to HEALTH CARE, page 10

Hometown clubs helped Jews adapt to America

When most Jewish-Americans recall their forebears' welcome to this country, images of Ellis Island and the Statue of Liberty come to mind.

And yet, while these literal entry gates were indeed the first sights of greeting for those fleeing the Old Country, in reality they were probably not the most important.

"A new immigrant arriving here would immediately seek out people from his or her city or town," says University of Massachusetts Professor Hannah Kliger. "Almost always these fellow compatriots would have organized a club which made integrating newcomers to America its main purpose. These landsmanshaftn, they were known in Yiddish, were the real transitional centers from Europe to America."

Kliger, who teaches in both communication and Judaic studies at the University, has become something of a specialist on these landsmanshaftn, is loosely translated "hometown clubs," since the late 1980s.

It was then, while engaged in her ongoing research on ethnic identity within immigrant communities, that Kliger located a long-lost study about landsmanshaftn written during the Great Depression. The two-volume work — compiled by the Yiddish Writers' Group in affiliation with the New Deal-sponsored Works Progress Administration — had languished for over 50 years in the Municipal Archives of the City of New York until Kliger rediscovered it.

"The study had been published in Yiddish back in the '30s, and sections of it had been translated and readied for publication in English as well," Kliger said. "Before the English version could be completed, however, the Yiddish Writer's Group was dissolved and the manuscript was forgotten. I only became aware of it through a footnote."

Now available from Indiana University Press, "Jewish Hometown Associations and Family Circles in New York" serves a dual purpose. Not only does it bring back to life a lost manuscript, through Kliger's insightful editorial additions it offers an intriguing picture of early 20th century Jewish-American life.

While the original WPA study discusses such topics as recreational activities and occupations of lansmanshaftn members, Kliger's introduction gives a history of the Yiddish Writer's Group, and her afterword looks at the evolution of lansmanshaftn since World War II.

Original photographs from the WPA Federal Writers' Project collection, a bibliographic guide to literature on immigrant organizations, and annotated editorial additions by Kliger further enhance the book.

On a purely social level, the pre-war lansmanschaftn were similar to American

Turn to CLUBS, page 4

UMass chemist receives prestigious science award

The National Science Foundation has announced that Lynmarie Thompson, 31, assistant professor of chemistry at the University of Massachusetts, was selected as an NSF Young Investigator, one of the nation's most prestigious science awards.

First given in 1984 as the Presidential Young Investigator Award, the title is bestowed annually on the nation's most promising young researchers. The awards are based on the quality of research and teaching accomplishments and potential for continued professional growth.

Thompson, a biophysical chemist, will receive up to $100,000 per year, for five years, through a combination of federal and private funds.

Only 202 scientists were selected from 1,600 nominations and Thompson was one of only 41 women to receive this year's award.

"This highly selective award is intended to help universities keep outstanding young Ph.D.s who might otherwise pursue non-teaching careers," said Ronald Archer, acting chemistry department head. "Lynmarie is certainly a fine role model for young women considering science as a career."

Archer regards Thompson's work as an important part of developing a new biological chemistry program in his department.

Thompson's research will involve using sophisticated new solid-state nuclear magnetic resonance (NMR)

Turn to AWARD, page 4

COURTESY, UNIVERSITY NEWS OFFICE

Lynmarie Thompson, assistant professor of chemistry at UMass.

commission

continued from page 1

better about who I was," he said.

Flynn also decided to come out to his friends at school. There he was also accepted, and he felt comfortable enough to bring his boyfriend to the school prom. "I found that since coming out I have gained a lot of respect," he said.

Flynn said he has helped by a school and faculty that were particularly sympathetic to gay students. One of Newton North's teachers, Robert Parlin, came out to his students shortly after Flynn did.

Gay students said that it would be helpful to have more openly gay teachers as role models. Jim Lavin, whose son is gay, agreed.

"Teachers need to set an example and I think gay teachers need to come out," Lavin said.

His son, Andrew Lavin, was raised initially by Lavin's ex-wife, who attended a fundamentalist Christian church. Andrew Lavin, 17, said that after he confided in a church youth counselor, he was brought before church members and lectured on his homosexuality.

"This was the most humiliating and embarassing experience of my life," he said.

Andrew Lavin eventually left his mother's Colorado home, and came to stay with father in Boston.

Gov. William F. Weld appointed the commission to study ways to help gay youth, and the commission is holding hearings as a first step. Weld is a strong supporter of homosexual rights, and has appointed openly gay people to positions within his administration.

award

continued from page 3

techniques to better understand basic biochemical mechanisms at the molecular level. She will be specifically looking at how membrane receptors transmit information across cell membranes.

The NMR apparatus works by subjecting a cellular membrane to a powerful magnetic field. The NMR spectrum produced using such a technique can then tell a researcher much about the molecular environment within and around the proteins in the cell membrane.

Understanding the chemistry of individual cells may enable scientists to someday explain the chemical basis of memory and the process of disease at the most fundamental level.

Cellular membranes are composed of lipid and protein molecules. These proteins serve many functions including that of cell surface receptors for such various agents as hormones, viruses and antibodies.

"A big advantage in using NMR to study proteins is that the technique can provide a complete picture of the protein molecule in its native environment and help deduce how the protein performs its function," Thompson said. "However, such studies have been limited to small soluble proteins. New solid-state NMR techniques can provide some similar information about larger protein complexes, such as receptors in their native membrane environment."

Thompson was appointed to the UMass faculty in 1991. The Amherst campus has had 12 Presidential Young Investigators since the program started in 1984.

The University of Massachusetts was the only public institution in New England to have an NSF Young Investigator in this initial round of appointments.

Among Massachusetts institutions, the University of Massachusetts ranks third after Harvard and MIT in the total number of Young Investigators.

Thompson received a bachelor of science degree in chemistry from the California Institute of Technology in 1983. She earned a master's degree and a doctorate in chemistry from Yale University.

—UNIVERSITY NEWS OFFICE

Vietnam War relics given to US senators

By GRANT PECK
Associated Press

HANOI, Vietnam — Three U.S. senators on Tuesday were given fading photographs, flight suits and other sad relics of American servicemen missing from a war that ended two decades ago but left wounds on both sides.

On what he termed "an extraordinary day," Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., and Sens. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., and Hank Brown, R-Colo., became the first American officials to tour the Citadel, Hanoi's equivalent of the Pentagon.

Vietnamese officials also gave the members of the Senate Select Committee on POW-MIA Affairs military logs of downed U.S. aircraft, a U.S. Army survival manual and a flight helmet said to have belonged to Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a Navy flier who was shot down over Hanoi and taken prisoner in 1967.

The visit comes amid rising optimism that the United States may lift a trade embargo and diplomatic freeze it has maintained towards Vietnam since the Communist regime in Hanoi took over U.S.-backed South Vietnam in 1975.

U.S. policy has been that relations with Hanoi will not be normalized until Vietnam offers a full accounting of the 2,265 American servicemen missing in the Vietnam War, including 1,657 in Vietnam.

"My hope is that the President will receive the information that we bring back, and that when we meet with him, he will listen carefully to the arguments for why there ought to be a U.S. response of some kind at this point in time," Kerry said. "You cannot make this a one-way street forever."

Vietnam's leaders, eager to mend ties, recently have handed over thousands of photographs of Americans taken during the war and are providing access to archives, prisons and military bases.

Daschle raised the possibility of reciprocating by providing information about Vietnam's MIAs, thought to number about 300.000.

The two sides must "resolve to bring people together and end the pain and uncertainty relating to our past conflict," he said.

The senators on Tuesday visited Hanoi's Central Military Museum, the government's main despository for items pertaining to the American MIAs.

Museum director Col. Pham Duc Dai said he had two nephews considered missing in action.

In the museum's main hall, Dai also described how he was in a unit that ambushed four Americans in 1967 and dumped their bodies in a river. He then gave his tiny handwritten diary to the senators to copy.

"It's a very sad moment for us to hear about the soldiers being killed," said Kerry. The senators proposed that the Vietnamese gather such valuable oral history systematically.

Dai also gave Kerry, the committee chairman, three large albums of fading pictures of dead and captured U.S. servicemen and originals or photographs of various types of identification carried by American soldiers.

In one album was a snapshot, evidently of a soldier's wife and children.

Kerry also was given a charred book said to be from a crashed plane, along with an apparently captured copy of the U.S. Air Force survival and evasion manual, and several flight suits of downed Americans.

Kerry, who served in 1968-69 as a Navy officer on a gunboat in the Mekong Delta, said he could not help but feel a bit uneasy holding the material that came from comrades captured or killed over 20 years ago.

Earlier Tuesday, the senators made an unprecendented visit to the Vietnamese military headquarters known as the Citadel, from the days when it was military headquarters for the French colonial administration.

clubs

continued from page 3

fraternal organizations such as the Elks and the Masons, Kliger said. Composed of individuals with shared origins in an East European city or town, they offered a place to gather and share conversation.

On a more practical level, however, they were almost like precursors of modern-day welfare organizations, offering such services as health care and credit for those unestablished newcomers who needed them.

"To a great extent the clubs' emphasis on social responsibility arose out of necessity, and yet in part it also arose out a long-established tradition in Judaism," Kliger explains.

"In Jewish communities in Russia and Poland, tending to the needy was expected. If someone couldn't afford the expense of a wedding or funeral, the community was there to help out. The landsmanschaftn transplanted this Old World idea to America," Kliger said.

While the primary focus of the landsmanshaftn was to help immigrants adapt themselves to their new surroundings, many also had ancillary interests, Kliger said.

"Some of these groups were divided along the lines of political affiliations, others along occupational loyalties, others along gender differences," Kliger said.

As Kliger indicates in her afterword, the landsmanshaftn were a New World phenomenon that arose out of Old World customs. An amalgamation of tradition and necessity, they offered a vehicle for transition from the Old World to the New, Kliger said.

In keeping with their role, most of the lansmanshaftn disappeared as Jewish-Americans became integrated into the larger culture. While a small number still exist, focusing their activities on raising funds for Israel and commemorating the Holocaust, the majority are nothing more than a memory, according to Kliger.

— UNIVERSITY NEWS OFFICE

Breakfast Special (8am-10am)
Scrambled Eggs - Home Fries - Toast
$1.49
SUNDAY-FRIDAY SPECIALS
(4:00pm - 9:00pm)
Meatball Grinder $2.65
Italian Dinner Specials
(4:00pm - 11:00pm)
Pizza Slice (Large Cut) 99¢
Large Plain or Pepperoni Pizza with your choice of a pitcher of soda or a pitcher of beer $8.75
Now Through November 24th at
the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

"Do I Have a Case?"
The attorneys at your Legal Services Center can answer fee-paying UMass student's questions on a wide variety of legal problems, including:
Housing, Criminal, University-related, Civil Rights, Consumer, Labor, Family, Personal Injury, and more
"Do I Need a Lawyer?"
The LSC is your first source of law-related assistance. Located in room 922 of the Campus Center, the LSC is open Monday through Friday, 9am to 5pm. Please call 545-1995 or drop by to make an appointment.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

Will University be a PC utopia?

One of the beautiful things about UMass — or one of its horrors — is that deep and constant desire of achieving the utopia of a politically correct campus.

Let's face it — it's the only thing the LBGA and the Republican Club have in common and can be allied about. It's a common goal at the University; it goes from Whitmore's most hidden corners to Butterfield dorm, Furcolo Building, Memorial Hall, the Student Union steps, ROTC, MassPirg, etc.

There is only one thing I have to say: leave conservatives alone. Conservatives always have to understand and respect the radicals' and liberals' rights to be the way they are, but can't they in turn respect the desire and the happiness of a human being of being a conservative?

Evelyn A.
DEJESUS

It is "P.C." to be pro-choice and if you are not you are oppressing women and you are wrong. But it is rare to hear pro-choice people say they respect a woman's decision to have a baby of an unplanned pregnancy. They will not support her either. Can't they understand that their values are different? If that woman feels she is doing the right thing by postponing her plans because of her baby, then let her live, along with her fetus. This is just one example.

One day, a bunch of people decided to take over a building — which, by the way, is always the same bunch of pals. They use the "buddy system" for their performances. Is that what they used to do at home when their parents didn't pay attention to them, didn't give them enough money or didn't lend them their car on weekends?

I bet that if Mental Health Services talks to them for a while they will find out they didn't get enough attention from their grammar school teachers so they vent their frustrations by taking over buildings, screaming and making noise. In that way they call the attention of the press, Whitmore, the governor, the campus and the rest of the world. The point of it is that it works. They get what they want like a spoiled kid with his mother. If the Republican Club takes over a building, will it have the same effect or will the protesters be arrested for disturbing the peace?

Radicals don't know that in UMass they can do and say whatever they want. They can try to change it as long as they want to. This is just a test for the real world. Here they can practice. In the real world they can hijack a plane and take it wherever they want. I'm sure the consequences will not be the same. Remember, this is just a test.

Every time I see a campus tour group I think of my radical and liberal fellows. Do they tell visitors about our common mission? Every day we achieve a little bit more to get what we want in common. We will be happy to achieve a politically correct utopia. But remember: it's just a test.

Evelyn A. De Jesus is a Collegian staff member who tries to be more "PC" every day without forgetting who she is nor her real identity. Peace and Love.

The homeless: to see or not to see

The streets were covered with people: business people, students, punks, artists — every walk of life on each city block. The shadows of dusk creep up your back; the noises of taxis, sirens and the men on the curbs called for you to buy their incense or play their card games. The air was cool, and its brisk wind carried a smell, a mix of perfume, peanuts, smog and dirt — the near sensual smell of New York. I was walking up Broadway towards 4th when the sound of change hitting the sides of a tin can, interrupted the accustomed silence in my head.

"Spare change for a bag of marijuana, spare change for a bag of marijuana . . . " the middle-aged man bellowed. He was standing in front of the revolving doors of Tower Records, clothes tattered and skin brown with dirt. "Well, that's a new one," I laughed to myself as I went into the red neon cathedral of music.

E.C.
THOMAS

My best friend and I were sitting at an outdoor cafe this summer, talking over cappuccino, when our conversation was abruptly interrupted. "It's a bird, it's a plane — it's HOOOOMELESS MAN!" the soiled man exclaimed, as if he was on stage in a Shakespearean play. The people outside the cafe returned to their coffee and those on the sidewalks kept walking as if his exclamation was just another taxi horn. My friend and I looked at each other with uncomfortable smiles and again began talking.

The man again shouted his rehearsed revelation, "It's a bird, it's a plane — its HOOOMELESS MAN!" This time however, he didn't just walk away, he walked over to a couple and began a monologue. "It's homeless man, and you have the once in a lifetime chance of taking him home to feed him, bathe him, clothe and love him!"

The couple appeared to be growing increasingly uneasy, almost nervous, for by this time nearly everyone's attention was focused on them. I wondered in anticipation how the young couple would go about dealing with the situation that had been brought upon them. They smiled at him and gave him a quarter. He thanked them graciously and went to his next performance, across the street.

I was walking through Harvard Square when an older woman passed us with a cart of odds and ends. I thought to myself of the groceries of food I had filled my cart with just the other day. As she passed, she mumbled about the aliens on the antennas across the street and then she laughed, cackling at our inevitable doom. I stared intently at the ground as if I hadn't even noticed her.

When I was out West they were huddled in cardboard boxes; in the South they were on park benches; at home in Connecticut they drive around in 1970 Oldsmobiles as if they were mobile homes.

With Thanksgiving in a week, its disheartening to know that all of these stories won't end with turkey and stuffing; instead maybe a chicken bone from the corner restaurant's garbage.

I remember when I was little how I used to inquisitively stare at the people huddled in dark corners on the street as my mother pulled me along by my hand. Being a child I was unafraid to look them in the eyes, but they never smiled at my gaze.

Now years later I see them ahead of me and either cross the street or fix my eyes down on the pavement. Afterward I feel pathetic and disgusted with myself for doing so, but that never changes the reaction I have the next time I see them. I'm not the only one, though. Most everyone goes through the same drill. Sometimes we give them a quarter, maybe 50 cents — possibly a dollar, with that all too simple toss of the hand.

I don't have a solution to this problem, except to say that it is a problem of epidemic proportions that needs to be dealt with soon. It's nice to know that some of the homeless have such a great sense of humor, but all the same it's just not funny. I think it's time for both us and politicians to stop walking the pavement as if we were blind. Just because we won't look at the problem, doesn't mean that it will disappear.

E.C. Thomas is a Collegian columnist.

Acquiring a disability isn't a tragedy to pity

On Nov. 10, the Collegian was once again the vehicle from which bigotry and ignorance was expressed. The headline read, "UMass student suffered stroke." The ableist piece went on to expound on how once-honor student Kathie Caldwell had become disabled through a stroke. Collegian staffer Kenneth Maisonet detailed the family's "emotional ordeal" in this awful "tragedy," and added telethon-like quotes of pity and condescension.

Acquiring a disability is not a tragedy; it is a fact of life, a normal life experience. The only tragedy is in the systematic oppression of and discrimination against people with disabilities. Nondisabled people are so afraid of becoming disabled that they try to remove the experience of disability as well as the people with disabilities from their reality.

People with disabilities are human. We live full, valid lives. We struggle daily with the barriers the ableist dominant culture puts in our path. We constantly fight the attitude that our lives are pitiful, not worth living. We are a culture, a group the federal government, in the Americans with Disabilities Act, calls "the most aggressively discriminated against minority in America." And yes, Collegian staff, some of us even succeed in breaking all the rules, and defy all the ableist systems that prevent us from living our lives, and are real live students at this incredibly inaccessible ableist institution of higher learning.

Perhaps you've seen us in Bartlett, one of the few reasonably accessible classroom spaces, or maybe you've seen us getting trapped in elevator doors that shut too fast. Have you been aware that the activities you take for granted are forbidden us due to architectural barriers or inaccessible attitudes? Do you have any idea that 15 percent of us are still institutionalized, or that it is still legal to use corporal punishment in schools for autistic children, or that those of us who have managed to get out of or avoid nursing homes may have to re-enter them because of personal assistance funding cutbacks? How dare you write an article about one of my sisters with no knowledge of the independent living movement and only Jerry Lewis attitudes of pity and condescension.

The solution is not to raise money for one person you see as a casualty; it is to educate yourselves on ableism and disability discrimination, to challenge a system that supports genocide of people with disabilities by withholding life-sustaining services, to complain to UMass affirmative action for not hiring staff to implement the Americans with Disabilities Act, to question why you have no blind lovers or deaf friends, to examine your condescending attitudes and ignorance of disabled culture, to allow people with disabilities into your life as living, loving, mistake-making, cranky, happy human beings who have much to offer you and the planet.

Mary Frances Platt
Belchertown

Vet to writer: do some research!

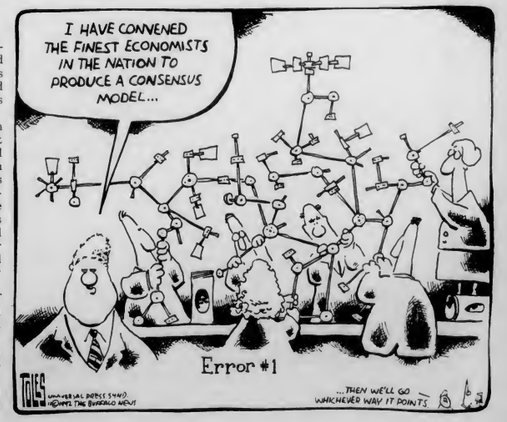
I am writing in response to Josh Reynolds (Collegian, Nov. 12). First off, Mr. Reynolds, as a Collegian columnist you owe a service to the general public to research the subject matter for which you offer your opinion. It is painfully clear that recent United States history and/or veterans' affairs is not your forte.

Let me offer the correct information regarding "Bush's covert altercation with the Iranian navy during the Iran-Iraq war." Operation Praying Mantis took place April 18, 1988. In the weeks leading to this operation, Iranian naval forces had been carrying out hit-and-run missions on commercial shipping in the Persian Gulf and laying mines throughout the region. After the U.S.S. Samuel B. Roberts hit a mine, killing several U.S. navymen and nearly sinking the ship, President Reagan (not Bush) decided to retaliate. An oil rig platform Iran was using as a base for its mining operation was shelled by U.S. Navy ships, then boarded by navy Seals and marines who found a large quantity of mines Iran had been using. In the hours following, two Iranian naval vessels fired upon a U.S. Navy F-14 patrolling in international air space. Two bombers from the U.S.S. Enterprise returned fire, sinking one ship and rendering the other dead in the water. This altercation was, in my opinion, warranted and was covered by all major news sources so it hardly classifies as a covert action.

Veterans' Day was created to honor men and women who served their country not only during "popular" wars such as World Wars I and II, but also forgotten ones such as Korea and the "unpopular" ones such as Vietnam. This holiday is not about government policies; rather, it is for the people who took an oath of honor to defend this country and its policies whether they agreed with them or not. I recently spent just over a month as a patient in a V.A. hospital and saw first hand the sacrifices my fellow veterans have made for this country.

So I say to you, Mr. Reynolds, get out of your dorm room and do a little research before you shoot your mouth off about something of which you have no concept. Take a trip to the V.A. hospital in Northampton and tell the veterans there they don't deserve a holiday.

David P. Sutherland
Northampton



Black Affairs

The Black Affairs Page is a bi-weekly focus page highlighting Black culture, politics and student life. The opinions expressed on this page do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian.

"I am not a Democrat. I am not a Republican. I don't even consider myself an American. If I could consider myself an American, we wouldn't have any problem." — Malcolm X

Reminiscing on Umass

I was talking to a close friend of mine, John Reed, who happens to be an old high school teacher. J.R. (as the kids at Barnstable High School affectionately call him) was so proud to hear that I was trying to help the community hear the voice of the Black students on this campus via the Black Affairs Page.

Kristin
ST. JOHN

J.R. had been hearing about everything that is happening up here on campus and wasn't too surprised. He went on to say that UMASS is going through another revolution up here, as it once did when this campus was his haunt a good 25 years ago.

Giving me the usual "when I went to college" stories J.R. had a good trip down memory lane. But then he started to say something that caught my attention. Back in the late sixties, the Black students on this campus rushed and occupied, overnight, a residence hall and turned it into what is now known as the New Africa House. And how about the Malcolm X Center? The University didn't just bow down and give that space out either. He said that there was a strong unity throughout the minority community when all of this happened, that the University officials knew that no one was about to back down. The students knew what they wanted and weren't playin' around.

Mr. Reed helped me see that there's a new age dawning on this campus. He told me that this is the perfect time to be on this campus. Yeah, I know that there are some eyes rolling, but to be present at a time where the establishment changes for the better is a honor unto itself. Everywhere I look there are people of all colors, backgrounds, ethnic groups and religions trying to work together to bring a change. Sometimes it seems as if everyone is against each other, but, that is what the establishment wants us to think and act upon.

This school would rather have us fight among ourselves and get nothing done than to have this "diverse community" that is written about in those little booklets it sends out to high school seniors.

As students we shouldn't point the finger at other students. But, instead raise our fists in defiance to the University and show the establishment that we are here and ready to fight.

We will show the University that there will be a change, and in the immortal words of Malcolm X, "by any means necessary."

Peace.

Kristin St. John is a Collegian staffer

Return of Malcolm X

Our shining Black Prince has returned. Not physically, of course, but his spirit has undoubtedly been resurrected for the whole world to see. Today marks the premiere of "Malcolm X," the Warner Bros. film directed by Spike Lee.

Martin F.
JONES

Perhaps the most controversial and eagerly anticipated film in recent memory, "Malcolm X" is a culmination of years of a growing interest in the Black nationalist leader who was gunned down in 1965 at age 39.

Many Black activists criticized the film before it even began production. Crying "X-ploitation," they voiced legitimate concerns that Malcolm's image would be tarnished by Hollywood, which has a long history of desecrating the image of Black people.

Then there are the X hats, jackets and T-shirts. Call them a fad if you want, but there is much more to the X phenomenon than fashion. The resurgence of Malcolm X is nothing less than a philosophical revolution that will shake America to her knees.

Malcolm X was born Malcolm Little in Omaha, Nebraska on May 19, 1925. His father, a dedicated follower of Marcus Garvey's Universal Negro Improvement Association, was lynched for promoting Garvey's Black nationalist principles. A bright student, Malcolm eventually dropped out of high school after being discouraged from striving towards his dream of becoming a lawyer. Malcolm later went on to live in the Roxbury section of Boston where he eventually became involved in numerous illegal activities. After continuing this lifestyle in Harlem, New York, Malcolm eventually was convicted and sentenced to several years in prison.

This is the experience that so accurately characterizes the state of Black people in America today. Nearly thirty years after the Civil Rights movement, a significant number of Blacks find themselves at square one all over again. If he were alive today, Malcolm himself would have to say "I told you so."

This is the rage that is fueling the obsession with Malcolm X in 1992. After the Rodney King verdict this past April, today's youth are convinced that this man who was condemned over 25 years ago as a violent hate-monger was right on time when he spoke of only seeing "an American nightmare."

But the young people of today will also see Malcolm X rise beyond their present conditions to become a symbol of Black pride and power. Malcolm's evolution from a convict who educated himself in prison, to eventually serve the national spokesman of the Nation of Islam will serve as a testament to others of similar circumstance to rise up as he did and take control of their lives and their future once and for all.

Martin F. Jones is a Collegian columnist.

Malcolm not a fad

The Malcolm X movie will soon open in theaters across the world. As with any movie, especially by Mr. Lee, don't take everything you see for granted. Read Malcolm X's autobiography and the many other books written about him.

Douglas
GREER

Because of the media hype, it seems that it's vogue to wear an X somewhere on your body. The brother wasn't about being a fad. He was an ideology and one that most people aren't deep enough to understand. European-Americans, for you to wear an X is comparable for a African-American to wear KKK across their chest.

Brothers and sisters, how can you wear a Malcolm X T-shirt and then walk around with a radio in one hand blasting out ignorance that most rappers preach with the addition of a big, fat, fake gold chain around your neck! Grow up intellectually, you're in college now. You're disrespecting what he stood for and making yourselves look like a fool to your peers.

It's bad enough Spike Lee has commercialized Malcolm X, don't help him make one of our most courageous leaders nothing more than style that's in today and gone tomorrow.

Douglas Greer is a UMass student

Malcolm X. COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Mass viewing of Malcolm X

Finally, it's here. Spike Lee's Malcolm X opens today in the Pioneer Valley. The long-awaited film, which has been edited to a mere three hours and twenty minutes, has been the cause of much controversy for the past year. Spike Lee took on the difficult task of bringing us the life of one of the most controversial, powerful and articulate Black leaders. Malcolm X has become a legend to many of us who were not even born before he was assassinated.

The Malcolm X Cultural Center and The Black Mass Communications Project have organized a mass viewing of the premiere. Buses have been chartered, free of charge to transport students to the release. The buses will leave from the Horseshoe in Southwest. The movie is scheduled to begin at 2:00 p.m.

Two buses will take students from Southwest to the AMC Mt. Farms Four Theatres on Route 9 in Hadley. One will leave at 12:45 p.m., another will leave at 1:15 p.m. All students are welcome and the cost is $3.50 for the movie.

Current Events

Wednesday, November 18

Radio — WMUA 91.1 FM Presents "Reports In Color," a weekly report on events in the community of color, from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m., featuring Rick Townes.

Meeting — The Black Student Union will have its weekly meeting at 6:30 p.m. in the Malcolm X Cultural Center.

Thursday, November 19, 1992

Fine Dining — Berkshire and Hampshire dining commons in Southwest present "Puerto Rican Night" with live Latin music and food 5 p.m. - 7 p.m. Sponsored by FAC, AHORA & LeLoLai Tourism Company

Seminar — The Black Mass Communications Project presents "Turning Obstacles Into Opportunity: A Career and Entrepreneurial Seminar" which will focus on building positive self-image and positive self-esteem, motivation and on an educational approach, at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center Room 101.

Attention: A pair of tortoise shell, prescription glasses were found in the Malcolm X Cultural Center. To claim, please contact Maimouna Sam at 546-4985.

Ujima Hair & Fashion Show
To benefit the Shirley Graham DuBois Library, New Africa House UMass Will Be Held Sunday, February 21, 1993 6 p.m. CCA UMass
Auditions for male and female models will be held December 5th and 6th from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. at the Malcolm X Cultural Center.
For more information, please contact Maimouna Sam at 546-4985.
Hair will be done by Helen's Hair'um.
This event is sponsored by the Cape Verdean Student Alliance and the Malcolm X Cultural Center.

What are we being taught in our schools?

In light of the release of Spike Lee's "Malcolm X" movie, the issue of racism must be brought into perspective in the present. Malcolm X dedicated his life to the plight of the African-American in America. He fought to conquer racism, and was killed. Probably because he knew what it would take to lift the African-American race out of the slump we have been in for five hundred years. That knowledge was enough to lead anyone, Black or White to their death.

Yvette
BAEZ

First of all, racism is an ever present nightmare in our midst. The first step to combatting racism is understanding it and acknowledging it as a major problem in the United States and abroad. Next comes the difficult part, finding a cure for a disease that plagues many.

I strongly agree with Dr. Leonard Jeffries when he says the first step is changing the curriculum of education in this country. The foundation of this country, as taught to us, is a strong belief in democracy and freedom and equality for all. In reality, the United States is based on bondage and slavery. Enslaved Africans, properties of "massa," through sweat and tears, made the United States what it is today. The fact that we, as students, do not learn this "history," basically means that we are being taught lies in our schools.

Reeducating oneself is one of the most important aspects in understanding racism and its roots. We must have a total reconstruction, or revolution in the United States will occur. Until then, everything we do will unfortunately be superficial. We must open our eyes and look from the beginning of time to Martin to Malcolm to Clarence Thomas to the present to understand the true magnitude of racism in this country.

Yvette Baez is a Collegian staffer.

Arts

Cinematic masterpieces on HSCN this week

By JAMIE GORNSTEIN
Collegian Staff

Hey there, movie lovers! Welcome to yet another edition of the Campus Cable Connection. This week, there are some really great flicks that you won't want to miss (see Young Frankenstein and The Princess Bride), and a few disappointments that you shouldn't even bother catching (see Jacob's Ladder and Mannequin). Hey, I know lots of people loved Jacob's Ladder, but I thought it was a piece of [expletive]. But, it's my opinion anyway, and you all know I'm never afraid to give my own opinion, right? Right! Now, here are the movies that will be shown beginning Nov. 18.

The Butcher's Wife— Demi Moore, Jeff Daniels, Mary Steenburgen. Notwithstanding the ridiculousness of the plot, the cheesy acting that is definitely not up to Demi's potential, and the hopelessly silly romantic ending, Demi is the worst looking blonde I have ever seen. Speaking on behalf of beautiful brunettes who refuse to dye, she should have stayed au naturale.

The movie stars Demi as a psychic and Daniels as a psychiatrist whose paths cross stupidly through Demi's husband that she ends up dumping for Daniels, only after her husband has an affair with Steenburgen. Whew! Confused? Me, too. *1/2

Creepshow— Lois Chiles, George Kennedy, Dorothy Lamour. Sigh. George A. Romero's screen adaptation of three of Stephen King's short stories is quite weak in comparison to the much scarier original. This one was just plain stupid! Give me a break — a wooden Indian that comes to life, a gelatinous blob that eats teenagers and a hitchhiker that just won't die? The stories don't even work as stories! Should left 'em alone. In my opinion, if anyone wants to make any more movies from Stephen King short stories, they should give "The Mist" from Skeleton Crew a try. Now that's got some definite movie potential! As for this one, pphhlepth! NO STARS!

The Fly II— Eric Stolz, Daphne Zuniga, Lee Richardson. Help! Please! I need to review a good movie, and we're not doing too well here. This movie is, without a doubt, one of the most pathetic money-making-scheme sequels I have ever shelled out money for. Forgive me, I knew not what I did. Stolz is deceased Jeff Goldblum's son who is at first a super genius and then turns into an evil hairy insect (like his good ol' pop). The ad says "Like father, like son." Like, make me sick! Like, overworked, overused plot! Like, NO STARS!

The Grapes of Wrath— Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine. AAAAHHHH!!! I just had a movie reviewer's orgasm just from the title — excuse me! This is one of my Top 10 favorite films of all time. This 1940 classic is based on John Steinbeck's novel of Oklahoma farmers during the Depression. Two Oscars were swept for this enticing drama — DO NOT MISS THIS MOVIE! And I mean it! I know where you live! Just kidding. . .but don't miss Fonda's incredible performance. ****

The Hitcher— Rutger Hauer, C. Thomas Howell, Jennifer Jason Leigh. OOOH! Goooood movie! Very freaky flick about a serial killer who murders his rides — but one manages to escape. Stretches a tad, but there are some intense scenes, including the one where Leigh is tied between two trucks — OUCH! Trust me, you'll call your mom and tell her you believe what she said about never picking up hitchhikers! ***

Jacob's Ladder— Tim Robbins, Valeria Golino, Macaulay Culkin. I was SOOOO excited to see this movie when it first came out, and when I came out of the theater I was just so damn confused! I had to see it another two times just to remotely understand what was going on. It's frustrating, it's choppy, it's inconsistent, and it does no justice to other movies about Vietnam. Go see Platoon or Full Metal Jacket and turn the channel on this puppy. NO STARS.

Turn to HSCN, page 8

A Mardi Gras Night's Dream

Shakespeare's comedy goes on a holiday at Bowker

By KIP MANLEY
Collegian Staff

A Midsummer Night's Dream
Bowker Auditorium
Nov. 18-21

A party-time atmosphere infests the UMass Theater Guild's production of A Midsummer Night's Dream from the very beginning, as Carnival-clothed faeries dance to a conga beat, leiing the audience in the aisles. Shakespeare has flown south for the winter, and given this delightful production, who can blame him?

No deep insights are presented here, no lasting social commentary on gender roles for your brain to chew on. Director Rachel Reinheimer has definitely leaned this Dream in the other direction, towards the broad "wink, wink, nudge, nudge" comedy that was no doubt Shakespeare's original intent.

The Caribbean setting offers us faeries dressed as painted Mardi Gras revelers and Athenian youths as preppies on the beach, all cavorting lustily about a Gilligan's Island set designed by Craig Thomas Daescher. A moment of sheer brilliance is acheived when Shakespeare's abjuration against spotted snakes with double tongue and thorny hedgehogs becomes a lilting calypso lullaby, sung wonderfully by Patty Litzen as Peaseblossom. This occurs early on and the production never quite reaches this height again.

Still, all of the actors came here to have fun, and they do so quite handily. Doescher's Oberon especially stands out, a faerie king delighting in his poetry, and Kelly M. Hines bubbles through the role of Hermia with ease and grace. Steven W. Matulewicz plays Theseus with a slickness that would not have looked out of place in this year's campaign, and Mike McCaughan's Egeus matches him in every oily move and phrase.

The laborers are played very broadly and come off (as they always do) as rejects from a bad Monty Python sketch, making Ben Courtney's portrayal of Nick Bottom look low-key by comparison — and Tom Rhodes should seriously consider dropping the silly voice he has adopted as Peter Quince.

I question the choice to have Elizabeth Leigh Rabkin's otherwise excellent Puck jealous of Titania and so obviously in love with Oberon, and I also wonder at the transformation of Lauren Fobert's Hippolyta from resentful captive in the first act to submissive bride in the last, though that — along with those laborers — is much more a problem of the play itself than the actors.

But why question it? What we have here is a night of pure fun, a cure for the blues of the coming winter. This production urges us to kick back, relax and enjoy the fun, and I for one agree.

"IF THE NEGRO IN THE GHETTO MUST ETERNALLY BE FED BY THE HAND THAT PUSHES HIM INTO THE GHETTO, HE WILL NEVER BECOME STRONG ENOUGH TO GET OUT OF THE GHETTO." Carter Woodson

THE BLACK MASS COMMUNICATIONS PROJECT
PRESENTS
"Turning Obstacles Into Opportunity"
A Career and Entrepreneurial Seminar
By Beryl Irene Bailey, M.S., C.C.C., S.L.P.; and the Minority Management Association

- Building Positive Self image
- Building Positive Self Esteem
- Motivation
- Educational Approach

Time: 7 pm
Place: Rm. 101 Campus Center
Date: Thur. November 19, 1992

FREE FREE FREE FREE FREE FREE FREE FREE FREE FREE FREE

haircuts always $10!
BUCCI
a hair space
215 N PLEASANT ST. AMHERST 256-0733

The University of Massachusetts
Department of Theater
presents

Women of Trachis
by Sophocles
a new translation
by Robert Bagg
November 12-14 and 18-21
8:00 p.m.
Rand Theater
Tickets: 545-2511
Fine Arts Center Box Office

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
The Best in Basketball!
Talk UMass Basketball with Coach John Calipari
-Wednesday • Nov. 18 • 6:00PM
WHMP LIVE RADIO SHOW
- Live Question and answer session
- Meet the Coach and Players
- Exclusively at Rafters

University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

AMHERST LAUNDROMAT
Open 7 days 8am-9pm
Drop-Off or Self Service
Washing Machine Starting at $1
Attendant available all day.
326 College St. (Rt.9) Amherst • 253-5072

PERSONAL
Nice, Affordable two and three bedroom Apts., seeking quiet, responsible residents. Long and short term relationship possible.
Call 253-3834

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
Northampton /Holyoke
584-4112 • 535-1888

■ HSCN

continued from page 7

Lucas— Corey Haim, Charlie Sheen, Kerri Green. I really like this movie! For once, a film that views teenagers as real people instead of flat, static characters. The teens are very true to life and have their own definite personalities. The plot is believable, though the ending is a bit too happy for me. Catch Winona Ryder at her awkward stage as the lovestruck bando. ***

Top Gun — Tom Cruise, Kelly McGillis, Val Kilmer. Okay, who hasn't seen this one yet? Anyone? Well, I'll offer my opinion anyway, since I always do. It's a great film don't get me wrong, but it's a tad bit unrealistic, especially the video game-ish games in the air. Doesn't quite work, ad McGillis and Cruise don't click together. But it is a must see, and it's a definite crowd pleaser. What the Hey, it's free on HSCN, so watch it! If I still lived on campus, I would too. 1/2

Young Frankenstein — Gene Wilder, Peter Boyle, Marty Feldman. OY! Another Mel Brooks film where I just get FHKLEMPT! I feel Coffee Tah-lk coming on . . . Brooks takes the original Frankenstein and makes such a hysterical parody, especially the scene with Boyle and Gene Hackman as the blind man. Of course, any Mel Brooks film is a side splitter, but put this star-studded cast in it and you can't go wrong! ****

The Princess Bride— Robin Wright, Cary Elwes, Billy Crystal. Feel-good film directed by Rob Reiner about a really neat fairy tale told by Peter Falk to his sick grandson, a very young Fred Savage. Wright and Elwes make such an incredible couple — can you believe that she's married to Sean Penn now? Me neither. Crystal is hysterical as always, and the film is just fantastic. ****

Misery— Kathy Bates, James Caan. What can I say? The four star movies abound at the end of my column, I guess. Based on the eerie Stephen King novel about an author and his "number one fan." The plot is amazing, the acting is beyond convincing, and that scene where Bates hobbles Caan is so damn realistic that I screamed. (Of course, in the novel, she chopped his foot off with an axe and then cauterized it with her handy Benz-o-Matic. . .eeeeeew!)*

Movies that are on HSCN but are not reviewed are: Rocky Horror Picture Show, Mannequin, Coast to Coast, Educating Rita, Hear My Song, Naked Lunch, Prospero's Book, Sleeping With the Enemy, and Vincent and Theo.

- TONIGHT -
GREEK NIGHT
Featuring the bands COFFEE and TRAGIC JACK
8:30 • No Cover
TOMORROW NIGHT (11/19)
2 Great Bands From Boston
JOHNNY GROOVE (Mariner Records)
INJURYS (Shady Records)
8:30 • $2 Cover
the Hatch Bar
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

★ ARMY BARRACKS ★
Genuine U.S. & European Military Clothing & Equipment
Largest Surplus selection in New England with the lowest prices
• Dutch and West German Six-Pocket Cotton Field Shorts & Pants $10 - $20
• Mexican Baja Pullover & Blankets (100% Cotton) $12 - $15
• Large assortment of Guatemalan and Mexican goods
• Down Feather Mummi Sleeping Bags & Cover $35 & $50
• Genuine Issue Camo, Desert Tiger, urban Black Six Pocket Pants $26 & $28
• World Flags (3'x5') $10 each 2 for $18 Over 150 Countries
• NATO Field Jacket $20
• Grateful Dead Stickers and T-Shirts
• Large Selection for Book Bags & Duffles
• Levi Shorts Pants, & Coveralls
• Genuine MA-1 Flight Jackets & M-65 Field Jackets
• New & Used Combat Boots $5 to $40
• Ray-bans 40% off
• Special Order Dr. Martins
• Tapestries & Tie-Dye Sheets $15 to $20
• Surplus Leather Bomber & Bike Jackets
LOCATION: Univ. of MASS Student Union Ballroom
DATE: November 16th thru 20th (Mon. - Fri.)
TIME: 9:00 - 7:00 PM
SPONSORED BY: Cape Verdean Student Alliance
M/C • VISA • AMEX • DISCOVER ACCEPTED

Going To Law School, Business School or Grad School
Make Sure You Get Accepted:
SCORE YOUR BEST!

Think of it as CROSS-TRAINING
for the Mind.
At Kaplan, we integrate more different learning approaches than any other program:
• Expert Instructors
• Smaller, Interactive Classes
• Individual Tutoring Sessions
• Computer Evaluated Diagnostic Testing
• Exclusive TEST-N-TAPE® Lab
• Comprehensive Home Study Notes
• Open Days, Evenings, and Weekends
• TEST YOUR BEST GUARANTEE
LSAT MCAT GRE GMAT
For More Information: 549-5780

Winter Session 1993
Yes, you can!
Yes, you can!
So, do it!
Register for Winter Session classes.
Special enrollment restrictions do not apply for Winter Session.
So, if you're a UMass student, all you have to do is just sign up.
WINTER SESSION:
• a unique "mini-semester," just three weeks long
• earn 3 academic credits in only 3 weeks
• over 100 credit courses, including gen. ed. designated classes
Your chance to:
• take a class you couldn't get before
• make up credits
• meet graduation requirements
• lighten your spring course load
DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.
Catalogs available on campus or at the Division of Continuing Education, 6th floor Goodell.
January 4-25

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON

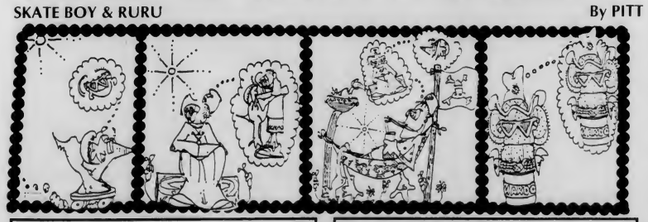
JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

PRICE By PRICE VAN RAY

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

SKATE BOY & RURU By PITT



Today's Staff
Night Editrix ..... Tami Monahan
Copy Editor ..... Michelle Robbins
PhotoTechnician ..... Jessica Taverna
Production Supervisor ..... T. Alan Blagg
Production ..... Theresa Giammattei, Jim Ganley, Jimmy G from N.Y.C.

Menu
LUNCH
Talk O's
Toona Meldz
BASICS LUNCH
Wegetable Tacos
Melting Tunas
DINNER
RoastTopRoundBeefAuJus
Mandolin Chicken
BASICS DINNER
Ratatatatatatat-ooley
Meandering Chicken

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

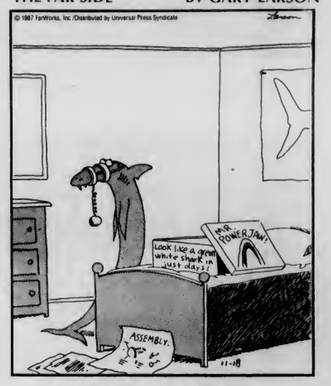
THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON



Products that prey on shark wimps

Quote of the Day
"Minds are like parachutes - they only function when open."
—overheard

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Although the business outlook is good, exercise caution. A conservative approach will impress those in authority. Where romance is concerned, wear your heart on your sleeve.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Teamwork is vital for success. Avoid second-guessing a co-worker. Do not let a set-in-your-ways attitude interfere with a fun evening. Do some last-minute shopping for Christmas.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): It is not difficult to feel restricted by your work duties or family responsibilities. Yet there are new benefits and respect coming your way. A raise is possible.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Abrupt changes at work could cause some uncomfortable moments, but the end result will be new peace of mind. Postpone making any investments until you can get expert advice.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be alert to money-making opportunities; you should score big! Romance has to take a backseat to your work now. Pace yourself to handle the heavy demands of your professional life.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Go with your feeling when it comes to people and plan; you are tuned to prosperity's wavelength! Make the most of a social event; talk business with those who are truly interested.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your popularity rises, thanks to that time you went streaking. Put extra money into your pocket. Use it to pay back a debt to an older and wiser sibling.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The financial picture brightens. Something that once looked hopeless may turn out to be a sound investment. A literary project proves invigorating.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A phone call or letter brings great news, relieving worries over a parent's well-being. Contact with people who work in the background helps you solve a puzzle.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A colleague may have top secret news that you can use. A wish comes true behind closed doors. Your evening promises to be fun and perhaps romantic. Try to play with your budget.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are in the driver's seat where negotiations are concerned. Charge! Your intuition tells you which people and financial deals are best. Take aim for the good life. Make the date!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Act on your instincts when handling financial matters. People who work behind the scenes will share glad tidings. A kind deed wins you a new admirer. Romance is both lively and fun, so don't waste any time!

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

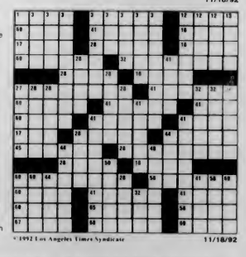
ACROSS
1 Emphasize, with "on"
5 Peggy Lee hit
10 Mitzen
14 Spoken
15 Sierra —
16 Porch feature
17 Truckee River city
18 Available
19 Bellow
20 Chat
22 Northerly Mediterranean winds
24 Spring bloom
26 Gobbles up
27 Bits and pieces
31 Acid test
35 Circa
36 Goose genus
38 Peer Gynt's mother
39 Witty sayings
40 Group of three
41 A first course
42 Butter serving
43 Corpulent
44 Non-1st Jack
45 Stationary machine part
47 Alt areas, at sea
49 Capital on the Tevere
51 Midday
52 Psychiatrist, once
56 Disappear
60 Supersonic sound
61 Gullible
63 A Great Lake
64 "— as a child..."
65 Single-year record
66 Excellent review
67 Make haste
68 Endures
69 Navy diver

DOWN
1 Nonsmoker
2 Width x length
3 Carry on
4 Roman philosopher
5 British silver coin, of old
6 Poetic time
7 Support politically, with "for"
8 Related on the mother's side
9 Abolished
10 Catholic order
11 Wild ox of puzzles
12 Laurel of laughs
13 Salts
21 Part of QED
23 Muddle
25 Fixed gaze
27 Inclines
28 Naval vessel
29 Jake La — middleweight champ
30 Express disdain
32 Native New Zealander
33 Customary
34 Parts of clans
37 Siberian mountain range
40 Station
41 British wrenches
43 Blessing
44 Porch for Plato
46 Mini-quake
48 Fictional forms
50 Yoga position
52 Touch upon
53 Single
54 Small amount
56 Metal containers
57 Dies —
58 Hindu deity
59 Cad
62 Aging vessel

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

S	A	L	A	D		T	I	E	M		S	L	A	M
E	L	I	T	E		E	R	M	A		W	O	V	E
W	A	L	K	S	O	N	A	I	R		A	R	E	T
	S	T	A	R		S	T	A	G	G	E	R	S
			G	A	P		S	U	R
A	C	C	E	D	E	D	O	A	V	I	S
S	I	R	S		E	N	O	W		C	U	S	T	A
S	T	A	N	D	S	C	O	R	R	E	C	T	E	D
N	E	V	E	R		E	R	I	E		A	L	E	E
	R	E	S	I	N		S	A	P	L	E	R	S
			P	E	A			S	P	A
T	R	E	A	S	U	R	E		E	L	I	A	S
H	E	A	P		R	U	N	S		R	A	G	E	D
E	A	R	S		A	B	L	E		C	O	R	E	Y
E	R	N	E		L	A	D	E		E	T	A	P	E

11/18/92



©1992 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 11/18/92

The Collegian.

Everywhere, everyone, everything and everywhichway. Do not attempt to resist.

Just When You Thought It Wasn't Safe To Go Into The Job Market ...
The Mather Career Center Has News For YOU!

Putting it off? Planning to go home next May and then look for a job?

Think again.

Major universities like ours are a magnet for job opportunities in all fields. Employers from all fields actively seek graduating students during the academic year.

Why go it alone?

Using the Mather Career Center ALL YEAR helps you make the most of the job opportunities that do exist.

Here are some steps you can take to make your UMass education work for you:

- ❑ Not sure about what you want to do? The SIGI-Plus values and interest inventory can help. Call our Info Desk, 5-1488
- ❑ Need help with resumes and tips for job hunting the 1993-way? Our resume and interviewing workshops offer real answers. Call 5-4945 for times
- ❑ Developing a list of likely employers? Our Career Library has thousands of names and addresses. Open M-F, 8:30 a.m. - 5 p.m.
- ❑ Wondering if employers have real jobs to offer? YES, they do! Introduce yourself through CAMPUS RECRUITING, our February 10 CAREER FAIR, or drop off your resume for DIRECT RESUME REFERRAL and we'll mail it out for you when employers call!

SERVING YOU AT TWO LOCATIONS: Mather main building in Fraternity/Sorority Park AND 16 Curry Hicks

INTRODUCTORY WORKSHOPS OFFERED 4 DAYS A WEEK

24 HOUR INFO LINE: 545-2224

Come and see us now or after Thanksgiving break!

THE MATHER CAREER CENTER

Career Planning and Placement • Cooperative Education Internships • Community Service

Fraternity/Sorority Park - on the Orchard Hill bus route. (413)545-2224.

Where Careers Take Off!

■ hypnotist

continued from page 3

astounded and hilarious delight of the packed Hatch audience.

First they went to a beach and, seeing someone on the beach that they wanted to know better, called them over and gave them a wet smooch, only to find out that these people had horrendous body odor.

The students who remained on stage said they were in fact hypnotized and did believe that Sacco's suggestions were really happening to them. Afterwards, when they were fully awake again, several of them said the experience felt like it was five or ten minutes long, when it was actually over an hour, and that they did not really remember what had happened.

One of the subjects, Molly Smith, said, "I wasn't aware of the audience. It was really weird. I came here really stressed, but now I feel so good."

Another subject, Tim West, who removed his sweatshirt while he was at the beach, said he did not remember doing so afterwards.

In the course of the next 75 minutes, Sacco took the group fishing on a boat, to a carnival where they licked lollipops that grew to be as big as flagpoles and were laced with hash, which led to very interesting tongue action and to Mars where they made friends with little Martians and floated weightless in space.

When asked what he saw on Mars, one male student said, "Dunes...big-ass dunes," while a female student described her Martian friend as "round, with two little balls and big beady eyes."

In the course of an exceedingly entertaining show, Sacco took his subjects to many other interesting places and had them do many very strange things. It was all in good fun, and if Sacco is invited back next semester, it is highly recommended that everyone interested in a very funny and odd evening show up to see him. He is a talented and kind man, and his show is like nothing you have ever seen.

■ health care

continued from page 3

ties getting accredited as licensed doctors in the United States.

"Here we have immigrants and refugees trained professionally in their country as doctors, surgeons and nurses who could be useful in serving the community," said Kenseth-Abel.

The program is non-denominational and open to all qualified applicants, as space allows. The program is funded by the State Department of Medical Security.

More information may be obtained by contacting Kenseth-Abel or Keri Heitner at the Donahue Institute at 545-0001. The Institute is the service and outreach arm of the President's office at the University of Massachusetts.

- TONIGHT -

KARAOKE

Any Menu Nachos $2.00 9:30 - 10:30

THE 24 PUB CELEBRATES 1968 • 1992 IN AMHERST

•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

When I hear people criticize the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, I just take a deep breath and tell myself that it's... okay. Because doggone it, people like me.

BIGGEST SALE OF THE YEAR

THIS WEEK ONLY • SAVE UP TO $175

ARTCARVED MAKES IT LAST

UNIVERSITY STORE ☆ 10 AM to 4 PM November 16 - 25

TRAVEL SMART THIS WINTER!

FROM NEW YORK
Roundtrip One Way

London $305 $165
Paris $398 $219
Rome $525 $320
Oslo/Stockholm $458 $229
Tel Aviv/Istanbul $639 $329
Guatemala City $390 $205
Costa Rica $430 $225

Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Customs-immigration and departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice.

PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*in NYC

EARN A FREE TRIP!!

Be a Spring Break Rep with Campus Get-Aways

Call Now

800-2-CANCUN

■ Crofts

continued from page 12

get his knowledge across in the most entertaining way possible, and he succeeds.

Not just limiting himself to broadcasting, Vitale is the author of two books, "Vitale" and "Time Out Baby!"

"Vitale" is an interesting book about how Vitale got where he is today and his thoughts on some college hoop luminaries. The glossary of 'Vitalisms' add to the books luster.

"Time Out Baby!" is a fascinating book about what it is like to be a broadcaster like Vitale during the busy college basketball season. For people who are interested in a career in broadcasting/journalism (like myself), "Time Out Baby!" just whets the appetite even more.

My point is this: You can say Vitale is loud and you can say Vitale says stupid things, but you have to say it in a positive way. He gets his points across, he promotes the game (and not himself), and he is fun to watch. He is a P.T.Per.

This next section on an obscure TV sport is dedicated to Cutter Garcia and Scott Newman:

Fishing, all types of fishing are on ESPN. Fly fishing, bass fishing, tuna fishing, deep-sea fishing and ice fishing have all been seen on ESPN at one time or another.

I do not mind fishing, in fact sometimes it can be fun in a very strange way. That is when you are actually doing the fishing, not watching. The art of fishing is something that should be enjoyed when being done, not being watched.

Who, who I said, in their right mind, would watch two old (or at least middle-aged) men sit on a boat saying things like, "Boy, Wally that was sure a tough catch there, how'd ya get that there striper?" or "Now viewers, my choice of reel is the new Maxwell XJS Bombing Reel, it's so sturdy to outlast even the stubbornist bluefish."?

The answer to that question is someone with one hell of a sad life. I know when I get home after midnight, I do not want to watch Wildlife Fishing with Steve Bartkowski (Man, have I lost a lot of respect for the ex-Falcon great). I much rather would see Sportscenter, Baseball Tonight, or even Monster Truck Battle: The Mauler vs. The Crusher.

Instead I have to wait until at least 2 a.m. for Sportscenter while Bartkowkski or some other stiff goes off on a theme like "How to trick tuna onto your line, the right way."

Let people that interested in fishing buy magazines like "Modern Rods," "Cod Digest" and "Marlin Monthly." Do not waste good air time with a variety of fishing shows. A limit of one, maybe none, fishing shows a week sounds good to me.

ESPN is great, in fact I hope to work there some day, but a potpourri of fishing shows is not needed. When the fishing shows are on, ESPN is off.

I have no idea why I wrote about fishing, but I did.

Jeff Crofts is a Collegian columnist who must have a lot of spare time on his hands.

SPORTS NOTICE

The University of Massachusetts athletic department has organized a bus trip for the field hockey Final Four in Richmond, Virginia this weekend. The price is $105 and includes round trip bus and hotel accomodations, but does not include tickets to the games. The bus will leave UMass Friday at midnight, and the deadline is Thursday. For more information, contact Margaret Driscoll at 545-3190.

■ Football

continued from page 12

"Somebody is going to get a steal, a great employee someday," said Hodges.

But for right now, Wilson's job is with the Minutemen, and no one is more pleased with that fact than Wilson himself.

"It's been great, but I'm sad that it's almost over," said Wilson. "But, if it has to end I want it to end in the playoffs."

No matter how far the team goes this season, in the hearts of the players and the coaches lucky enough to have known Ethan Wilson, he will always be a champion.

■ Sukiennik

continued from page 12

Another fast-starting team cooling off of late is Pittsburgh. The Penguins, 12-4-3, are unbeaten both at home and within the Patrick Division. In short, they're taking care of business. Road wins are nice in the NHL, but you've got to win at home and beat your divisional rivals to make the big time. Need I mention Super Mario (22 goals, 28 assists) Lemieux. Wayne who?

Speaking of Wayne who, the Gretzky-less Los Angeles Kings are leading the Smythe at 12-4-2. The Kings, with a league-high 89 goals scored, have three players in the top 15 scorers: Jari Kurri (41 points, second only to Lemieux), Luc Robataille and Thomas Sandstrom. Without Gretzky to lean back on, the Kings' offense has come of age on it's own.

Lastly, they don't play on ice, but the field hockey team essentially plays the same game and the Final Four is nothing to sneeze at. No, Morrissey did not put n up to this: Roll UMass.

Greg Sukiennik is a Collegian columnist.

SPORTS NOTICE

UMass students may pick up their student activity cards on Wednesday, Nov. 18. These cards will be used to speed up the process by which basketball tickets are distributed. Each student will receive one card free, with replacement cards costing $30.

COLLEGIAN

MORE FUN THAN A MONKEY FULL OF BARRELS MORE STICKS THAN YOU CAN SHAKE A RABBIT AT MORE CROTCHETY OLD FOLK IN YOUNG PEOPLES BODIES

Coverage Over Legumes Leeks Egalitarian Governmental Inadequacies And News!

EV-ERY-THING THAT FITS. M.D.C.

Eating Disorder Programs • Fall 1992

Sponsored by University Health Services

• • •

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays and Wednesdays Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

• • •

Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Regency Hairstylists 253-9526
189 No. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA

PERMANENTS $45

Make an appointment between 9am and 1pm with Heather, Liz, or Terri and your permanent will be only $45! Good Monday through Friday.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE

CLASSIFIEDS
– 20c per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center

PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

AIRLINE TICKETS

Fly home for Thanksgiving cheaper than ever before up to $100 off. Any fare going anywhere domestic or international. For more info call 616-767-7646

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

College Pro Painters will be having an information session on Thursday, Nov 19 in room 902 in the Campus Center. Find out about job opportunities from 7-9 pm on Thursday, or call Bernie at 549-9285.

Greeks and Clubs raise a Cool $1000 in just one week! Plus $1000 for the member who calls! And a free HEADPHONE RADIO just for calling 1-800-932-0528 Ext. 65

Need a locker? We have them at OCHO! 428 Student Union

PVOC Oil Coop Purchase home heating oil at reduced cost. Register at OCHO, 428 Student Union or call 645-0985. Save money and stay warm. Coma join now!

3 Credit Recycling Class – Educ2 354 Intro to Future Studies. Learn about recycling and other waste mgmt. issues. Spring Semester Tues 2:30 - 5:00. Schedule #211663, 546-1153 For more info

Spanish Speakers
Earn $$$
Need fluent Spanish speakers
(Native or Non-native) for psychology reading study. Call Maria 545-0693

Subletting over intersession? Place your advertisement free of charge at off campus housing, room 428 Student Union. You may also list over the phone. Call 545-0865

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Nissan Sentra 5 speed AM/FM cassette. Good condition. $1895 253-0726

TRADE 83 Nissen pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs soma work call 549-3662.

COLLEGE PIZZA

Fall Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $6.00
1 or 2 Toppings Add $1.00
Free Soda with large
sub salad or spaghetti
549-6098
549-6073
Must mention this ad!

FOR RENT

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bed room homes on bus route call 586-4270

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

Furnished 3 bedroom house, January or February to June 1st. $700 - 253-7178

Live in Northampton Looking for tenants to take over lease of a spacious 3 rm Haven located in lovely downtown Northampton. Rent includes heat only. 850 a month. Lease this house while you can it's hot. 586-3206

One room in 3 bedroom Pufton Apartment Rent 226/mo Plus
Available January 1 1993 to June 30 1993 Call Anne 549-7718 in evening before 11pm

1 bdrm apt in Puffton. Move in now $434 (includes heat) Mins from campus 549-0460

Take over my lease. One bedroom in Cliffside. $440 including utilities. New appliances. Call Jay 665 8901

FOR SALE

Allbiner telephoto lens 135mm
Like new condition Bayonet mount $80 BO 545-1028 or 253-2018

For sale Ski Boots
Sanmarko CS 155
Stiffness, flex and cant adjustments
Great Condition
Size 11 $80 or BO
Call Allan at 256-8751

Guiter Amp
PV Bakstage 30
$100 Call John 549-0838

1 pair of 7 1/2 women's ski boots brand new Cabers $100

Tendy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Pacs + case and manuels
Call Mitch 549-8761 $450 O.B.O

Tandy 1000 with modum $300 or BO Call Ahmed 256-1064

HELP WANTED

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT
Make $2000+ per month teaching English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room & board & other benefits! Financially & culturally rewarding! For program
Call: (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

JOBS! Do you have excellent communication skills? If so, then UMass telefund is the job for you! Flexible hours, good pay, and great experience, come down to the basement of Memorial Hall for an application or call 545-3509

Went to travel free, earn cash and resume experience? Students and organizations call College Tours to join our team! We have 25 years experience, great prices, hotels and destinations. Call 1-800-959-4SUN

Wanted: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spera time and free trip to Cancun.
Call 1-800-3SUNSTA ask for Bonnie

LOST

Lost brown oriental emulet on string strong sentimental value if found call Kim 256-3084

PERSONALS

Audrey Would you like to talk again. Call me or meet you at tha "bench" Tues or Thurs same time L.

Diene
Hope you had an incredible 20th!
Sorry it's late
Your Siamesa Twin

Happy Birthday to Mergot,
From your bestest friend!
Happy 24th!

John and Brian,
You are the best! See, you made the Collegian after all!
Thanks,
Jessica

Happy 21st Birthday To the twins
From the roomies

Lindo-o-o-o
Congratulations!!!!!!!!!!!!
You finally caught up with your ID!
Love, Your favorite roomies
Melissa and Nicole

3rd Floor Chedbourne
You are the best residents an RA could ever have! Thanks for a great semester. Love Sara

ROOMATES WANTED

Female to share large room 167.50 call 665-7604

Furnished bedroom available in Colonial Village. Looking for responsible and mature person. Not a party spot. Call Andy at 253-9880 evenings for interview

One bedroom available 1/93 to female/s in a 2BR apt. Great location on Bus rt. call 549-5552

Puffton
161.50 EA!
Big room, for 2
Bathroom
Walkthrough closet
549-8390

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Ski Tuning
Sharpening, Waxing
Base Repair
Only $8
Call Allan or Mike at 256-8751

Tarot Readings
Call Chris 256-0821

SPORTS CARDS

SportStop Cards
Coming Dec. 1st
Mountain Farms Mall

TO SUBLET

Sublet wanted for wintersession
Must be within walking distance to campus room/apartment Call Maria 546-6630

Sublet wanted for wintersession w/ possible option to lease for Spring semester in quiet Amherst/Northampton place. Call Ed 546-0758

TRAVEL

Save on spring break '93
Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida from $119! Book early, save $$$!! Group discounts!! 1-800-426-7710

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed -- Free cover page, spell check, $1.25/page. Brian 546-1795.

Typing - Word Processing
Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations. Laser Printing
Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268.

Sports

Lightning strikes in Tampa Bay

Now that there's snow on the ground and it actually makes sense to be playing hockey, it's once again time to take a glance at what's new in the NHL. Barring global catastrophe there will be no snow in Tampa Bay. But making sense never seemed to appeal to the NHL before, so why start now?

Speaking of Tampa Bay, Lightning has definitely struck in Florida, where the expansion club is currently 9-9-2. Of course, playing in the oh-so-competitive Norris Division helps. But hey — they have as many points as the Boston Bruins (20).

Credit where it's due, Eric Kontos (18 goals scored, an NHL-best 38.3 shooting percentage) is leading this cast of misfits and throwaways to a .500 record. That's unheard of in most expansion franchises, regardless of which sport it is.

Greg
SUKIENNIK

The Lightning looks even better when you compare the team's relative success to the torment being felt by 1-16-1 Ottawa right now. The Senators' season is frighteningly reminiscent of San Jose's 80-game exercise in futility last year. They're not bad, they're beyond bad. They can't score (38 goals for, by far the league worst) and they can't stop teams from scoring (97 GA).

Pity Senators' goalie Peter Sidorkiewicz. You thought he had it bad last year in Hartford? El Sid has an .835 save average currently. He's a better goalie than the numbers would suggest, but it's kind of tough to play goal without a defense to take the weight off one's shoulders. Rick Bowness is going to heaven, because he's doing time in purgatory right now.

Sidorkiewicz' former teammates have to be thankful there's a team worse than they are in the Adams Division. Yes, we're talking about the lowly Hartford Whalers, who check in at a pitiful 3-13-1. This team is so bad not even home games can save them (1-8-1), but considering they play in front of empty seats (unless the Bruins are in town), it's not like they really have a home. Cities that missed out on expansion are reacting to rumors of the Whalers moving to their home rinks with one word: "Noooooo!"

Remember the part at the end of the movie of Moby Dick where the great white whale rams the Peoquod and creates a whirlpool that sends the ship and it's crew to a watery grave? That's where these Whalers are headed. They'd have a hard time beating their minor league team in Springfield. Heck, they draw more fans. "And I alone am left to tell thee."

Back in Boston, the Bruins have cooled a bit after a hot start. Monday night's 6-3 loss to Montreal shouldn't worry B's fans, however. First: it's a long season and it's unlikely the team's current lull will last long. Second: Montreal is a much improved team on all fronts this season and the Bruins will have their hands full.

New head coach Jacques Demers has breathed life back into the Habs and it shows. The Bruins are a good team, yet the Habs were able to ring up six goals on them Monday night. An offense that could seemingly strike at will was the hallmark of the great Canadiens teams of the 50s and 70s. I don't need to tell you what that could mean for the Bruins.

Turn to SUKIENNIK, page 11

The man behind the Minutemen

Wilson keeps UMass football team running smoothly

By DAVID FEUER
Collegian Correspondent

At 5'4", 135 lbs., Ethan Wilson won't make any game winning tackles or catch any 60-yard bombs. Yet, when UMass head coach Mike Hodges needs something done right, Wilson is the man he looks to first.

A senior sport management major in his fourth year as a member of the football team, Wilson is neither a defensive back nor a receiver. He is, however, the oil that keeps the University of Massachusetts football machine running smoothly. As head equipment manager for the 7-2 Minutemen, Wilson's job is vital to the team's success.

"He's as fine a manager as I have ever been around," explains Hodges. "To have a manager like Ethan is a tremendous asset to our program."

While far from a glory position, managing has always been a thrill for Wilson who, for medical reasons, was never able to participate in sports while growing up. At five years old, Wilson became the first person to receive two open-heart surgeries during a single operation. Today, he is the world's oldest living survivor of this risky procedure.

"The reason I didn't play sports as a kid was because I couldn't," Wilson said. "So I did the next best thing."

And he has done so with a passion, managing the football, baseball, soccer, and basketball teams at Northampton High before coming to work for the UMass football program his freshman year.

"I liked football the most and the coaches [at UMass] were great in helping me adjust to college," Wilson said. "Right from the start, they made me feel like a member of the team."

"The team is like a family," he explained. "And thanks to the coaches and players, I've become a part of this family."

Equipment manager doesn't come close to describing the numerous tasks Wilson must complete each day in practice and during games, not including the 6 a.m. off-season workouts, which he works voluntarily.

Thirty minutes before each practice, he is on the field setting up, which involves checking and arranging field markers, tackling dummies, and video equipment. During practice, he signals for period changes, assuring that practice time is used effectively and that the players always know where to go. As players move, so must equipment, which Wilson manages to handle in between filming frills and making on-the-spot repairs of helmets and shoulder pads.

On game days, Wilson maintains order on the chaotic sidelines, assisting coaches, making sure players have water and keeping all the equipment in working order.

Before away games, he keeps busy helping with travel and hotel arrangements and taking inventory of the team's travel equipment.

Keeping players like junior co-captain Bill Durkin on their toes is not always an easy task, but Wilson's dedication and eagerness to help the team in any way possible shines through week after week. Even the 6'5" Durkin looks up to Wilson, whom he describes as, "a little man with a big heart."

"I don't know what we'd do without him," Durkin said, "He's a great person and a great friend."

"The players treat Ethan with a lot of respect," Hodges said. "He has always gotten great respect from players and coaches alike...he demands it."

"I've been best friends with Ethan both on and off the field since freshmen year," said junior long snapper and defensive end John Kromenhok, "I have a lot of admiration for Ethan for the kind of person he is and for what he has done for me and for the team."

In his limited spare time, this twenty-one year old enjoys collecting sports memorabilia, reading and hanging out with friends.

"The lasting friendships I've made have been the best part of the job," said Wilson. "Even after I graduate, this team and all the coaches and players will have a special place in my heart."

"This program will have a big hole to fill when Ethan leaves," said Hodges. "It's going to be funny not having him around."

While he has yet to hear from any NFL teams looking to draft an equipment manager. Wilson's post-college plans include football management, but hopefully from the front office, not the sidelines.

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 11

Vitale defended, fishing insulted

Here is my entry into the now weekly TV Sports column:

"Get a T.O. baby!, Get a T.O."

With that I am sure any college basketball fan knows who I talking about. Mr. Dick Vitale himself. Instead of berating the man, I will defend him, Vitale has definitely had his share of critics (for the worst see Sports Illustrated, Norman Chad).

Jeff
CROFTS

Here is a look at three major criticisms against Vitale, and a response to each:

#1: Vitale talks too much.

Yeah, he does talk a lot but that is his job. On television, the color man is the big talker, as opposed to radio, where the play-by-play man should dominate the airwaves. Vitale might be at his best during boring games, because his continuous talk keeps you awake.

#2: Vitale talks in stupid lingo

The terminology Vitale uses is not stupid, instead it is entertaining. Terminology and talk like, "He's a P.T.Per (prime time player) baby!", "He can really shoot the rock", and "Up, up and away, baby!" might sound outlandish, but it makes the game Vitale is covering a hell of a lot more fun to watch and listen to.

#3: Vitale is an egomaniac

Sure Vitale has an ego, but that is not why he is doing what his doing. Name one person as famous as Vitale who doesn't have an ego. Stuck? That is because there isn't anyone. Besides, Vitale is doing what he does not for himself, but for the players and game of basketball itself. Now that is not an egomaniac.

When I first heard Vitale, it must have been some time in the mid-eighties. It was a Michigan-Wisconsin game on ESPN when I first listened to Vitale and his incredible penchant to get riled up and talk at a feverish pace.

Vitale would just go off on tangents when partner Mike Patrick was not describing the action. Dick talked about how he went to dinner with then-Michigan coach Bill Frieder, what they had to eat, so on and so forth.

I wondered to myself, "What the hell does this have to do with basketball?" For awhile, Vitale was nothing but a loudmouthed crazy man to me. But then things started to change.

As I got older, I realized how good Dick Vitale is for the game of basketball. He can relate basketball and its players to anybody, and he knows the game (despite his coaching record with the Detroit Pistons).

When Vitale talks about things like dinner dates with Bill Frieder, he is doing because he tries to bring a human interest side to his viewers/listeners. I know that many people will remember when Vitale stood on his head on ESPN because of a bet he made on the air about Austin Peay.

The fact is, Vitale really does know the game. He knows about the low-post, the high-post, the full-court press, the match-up zone, etc. What Vitale tries to do is

Turn to CROFTS, page 11

STUDENT TICKET PICKUP – '92-'93 BASKETBALL GAMES

Pickup date	Game
Thurs. Nov. 19	Latvia
Thurs. Dec. 3	Central Conn.
Thurs. Dec. 17	Marathon Oil
	Boston University
	George Washington
	Rhode Island
	Temple
Thurs. Jan. 28	SW Louisiana
Thurs. Feb. 4	West Virginia
	Rutgers
Thurs. Feb. 25	St. Bonaventure
Thurs. Mar. 4	St. Joseph's

CHRISTOPHER EVANS/ COLLEGIAN
Danielle Borges, right, Tara Jelley, left, and the rest of the UMass field hockey team travel to Richmond, Va. this weekend to compete in the NCAA Final Four.

Thursday November 19, 1992
VOLUME CII ISSUE 50

Sunny and pleasant, 38 to 42 degrees.

Local News:
Chancellor Richard O'Brien, who will leave his post next June, offers reflections on his experiences as leader of the Amherst campus. Page 3.

This Weekend:
After weeks of hype and controversy, Spike Lee's Malcolm X opened yesterday. Read the Collegian's review. Page W8.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890

University Store may face lease to outside company

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN
Jay Reinheimer, class of 1996, sorts books in the University Store. Some University officials say the Store may be leased to an outside contractor to increase revenue.

By MICHAEL B. PIERCE
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts is investigating the possibility of leasing out the University Store to an outside contractor, according to University officials.

The main reason for considering this was because University Auxiliary Services, which oversees the Campus Center, is facing a deficit of $866,000, according to Board of Governors chair Ben Preston.

Bill Harris, director of Campus Center, said he and Ashoke Ganguli, the director of Auxiliary Services, are looking at short- and long-range programs to meet mounting costs.

"We had to pick up almost $1 million in new costs," Harris said. "And we are paying about $3 million total out of the trust fund over which we have no control."

Harris said he opposed the idea of privatizing the University Store because it would only give the University a one-time, quick infusion of cash.

"We need to do something long range," he said. "A task force has been named to examine the current fiscal situation and develop some resolutions. This solution is best."

The University would contact companies throughout New England and invite them to bid for the University Store contract, according to UMass officials.

Harris said the University Store transfers about 10 percent of its income to Auxiliary Services, while a contracted store would pay about 6 to 8 percent.

Harris also said the employee work force would decrease by about 40 percent with an outside contractor, and this in turn would affect services.

Tom Costello, vice chancellor for Research and Technology at the University of Massachusetts at Lowell, said except for the manager and assistant manager, all the employees were allowed to keep their jobs when their campus store was contracted out to Barnes and Noble.

Costello said their store wasn't contracted out for financial reasons, however.

"We were simply unhappy with the way it was being run," he said. "It didn't even look like a bookstore."

Costello said until about three years ago, newspapers and popular novels weren't even sold at the store. He also said students couldn't get a jump on buying their books at the end of the summer because the store was closed for inventory.

Preston said the store didn't have a problem, but rather Auxiliary Services had a problem because of its deficit and that selling the store's inventory would generate between $200,000 and $300,000.

Turn to U. STORE, page 10

Oxfam begins battle to defeat hunger in U.S.

By JON MARCUS
Associated Press

BOSTON — The famine-relief organization Oxfam, which operates in Africa, Asia and Latin America, is turning its attention to the hunger problem in another region: the United States.

"You don't have to go overseas to find the Third World," said Oxfam's John Hammock. "The Third World exists in the United States, and in urban as well as rural areas."

Oxfam has scheduled fasts and other activities for Thursday to kick off its U.S. initiative. Celebrity-studded "hunger banquets" will be held in Boston, Hollywood, Minneapolis-St. Paul, New York, San Francisco, Seattle and Washington, D.C.

"This is a dramatic way of depicting one of the causes of hunger — "the unequal distribution of food" — said Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio, chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger.

The Tufts University Center on Hunger, Poverty and Nutrition estimated in a September report that hunger has increased by 50 percent in the United States, and that 30 million Americans now go hungry.

One is Michael Stevens, a laid-off laborer from New Hampshire who lives in a Boston halfway house and eats his meals at a homeless shelter.

"If it wasn't for a place like this, I wouldn't eat," said Stevens, 29. "I was desperate. I'd go to a supermarket and have a buffet by covertly taking food from the shelves, eating it in the store, and not paying."

"There are plenty of people that I know who have to do that kind of thing," he said.

Hammock, president of Boston-based Oxfam America, said the organization will provide various forms of development assistance rather than direct relief in the United States, starting in rural sections of the South.

Oxfam, begun in London during World War II, will focus efforts in America on arranging credit for small farmers, providing money and technical assistance for local advocacy groups, organizing mortgage guarantees, and supplying labor to build housing.

"If people look around them, they'll see people who are hurting, in Dayton, Ohio, which is my home town, or on an Indian reservation," Hall said. "It's a hidden problem that occurs in the back alleys and behind closed doors, even in classrooms, but it does occur."

"It may be less proactive, but it's every bit as destructive as the famine in Somalia depicted in stark photographs of children with distended stomachs," he said.

Requests for emergency food assistance increased 26 percent in major American cities last year, according to the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

"We are at the brink of a disaster and it's moving very, very quickly," said Boon Cheena, executive director of the non-profit Berkeley-Oakland, Calif. Support Services.

"We're talking about people who run out of all their money to buy food after about the first three weeks of the month," she said. "They are living on water and bread."

State Dept. officials blamed for search of Clinton records

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press

Washington — A State Department investigation concluded Wednesday that officials who snooped in Bill Clinton's passport files had been trying to help President Bush win re-election.

State Department inspector general Sherman M. Funk, disclosing the results of a month-long probe, said:

"There was indeed an attempt to use the Department of State, the records and the people of the Department of State to influence the outcome of the election."

The two most senior officials held responsible were the assistant secretary of state for consular affairs, Elizabeth Tamposi, dismissed last week by Bush, and the acting assistant secretary of state for legislative affairs, Steven Berry, also disciplined.

As for Tamposi's allegations of White House involvement, Funk said in a memorandum to Acting Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, "We found no evidence that the White House orchestrated an 'attack' on Clinton files."

Funk recommended that "less than 10" department officials be disciplined.

Eagleburger disclosed that he had offered his resignation to Bush because of his distress over the department's political activities before the Nov. 3 election.

"When this thing first developed and before the election, I offered the president my resignation personally. He refused to accept it," Eagleburger said.

He told reporters there were no plans to recommend criminal action by the Justice Department against department officials.

Funk had been asked to determine whether the department initiated the file research in response to the reporters' requests under the Freedom of Information

Turn to CLINTON, page 8

Station taken off air

Housing officials offended by Sex talk

By MICHAEL WEBBER
Collegian Staff

Complaints about graphic descriptions of sex and vulgar language on Orchard Hill's cable radio station WOCH resulted in the station being temporarily taken off the air last Friday, according to Housing Services officials.

The incident that prompted Housing to shut the station down was the recent broadcasting of an excerpt about masturbation from Madonna's new Sex book by a WOCH disc jockey, WOCH Program Director Jay LaPorte said.

LaPorte said the station had previously received warnings from Housing Services Cable Network about the repeated use of vulgarities on the air, and that the Sex incident was the last straw.

According to Assistant Director for Residential Education Anne Miller, complaints from Housing Services staff and student listeners brought the incidents to administrators' attention, and resulted in a joint decision by Housing officials to shut the station down until new guidelines for acceptable material could be set.

"The cable network has a potentially very large audience, including a lot of children, and when you're talking in detail about oral sex and masturbation, a big part of the community would rather not listen," Miller said.

While station officials said they were upset about being taken off the air, executives at WOCH said they feel that Housing's move was justified, and are not protesting the decision, according to Thomas Baiter, general director of

Turn to WOCH, page 10

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
The Largest College Daily in New England

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and operates solely on revenues generated from advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967.

Newsroom
(413) 545-0719

Editor in Chief ..... Dan Wetzel
Managing Editor ..... Brooke C. Wheeler
Editorial Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
News Editor ..... David Massey
Sports Editor ..... Michael Morrissey
Arts Editor ..... Jon Lupo
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editors ..... Yvette Baez & Kristin St. John
Women's Issues Editor ..... Stacy Malone
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Mimi Fellner & Andrea Spitzer
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Sandra Rose
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Inés Vieira
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Tami Monahan

Business Office
(413) 545-3500

Business Manager ..... Joanne Connolly
Advertising Manager ..... Patrick Robblee
Finance Manager ..... Mike Nelson
Circulation Manager ..... Jason Janoff
Subscriptions Manager ..... Cristina Blanco

Production
(413) 545-1864

Production Manager ..... Mike Carvalho
Advertising Production Manager ..... Keith Jedlicka

Professional Staff
Business ..... Maureen Majerowski, Lori Black, Brian Harrington
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

113 Campus Center
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
phone: (413) 545-3500
fax: (413) 545-1592

Video gambling tycoon busted

By JOSE MARTINEZ
Associated Press

BOSTON — A former video game operator accused of bankrolling his lavish lifestyle in California through a video poker gambling ring in Revere on Wednesday was convicted on 17 counts ranging from racketeering to tax evasion.

The U.S. District Court jury deliberated four hours before returning the guilty verdict against Arthur Marder, former owner of Revere Amusements Co.

Prosecutors say Marder paid off local politicians, police officers and crime figures to protect the gambling operation run through a string of bars and clubs in the city just north of Boston.

Marder declined comment as he was led in handcuffs from U.S. District Judge Mark Wolf's courtroom. His attorney, James P. Duggan, vowed to appeal the conviction.

"My client since the first day I met him has maintained his innocence to me and he continues to do so," Duggan said. "I am very disappointed in the jury's verdict, and there will be an appeal."

In his closing arguments on Tuesday, Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael J. Tuteur said Marder used the video poker operation to support his expensive way of life on the West Coast. Marder lived in Palm Springs.

Over a nine-year period, Marder paid $525,000 in rent for a mansion in Palm Springs. In 1986 and 1987 alone, Marder wracked up $170,000 in credit card bills for travel and entertainment, Tuteur said.

According to testimony in the seven-week trial, employees of Revere Amusements left envelopes of money on the bar at Club Caravan for two police officers — nicknamed "Lenny" and "Squiggy."

Last week, police officer Leonard Randall and Lt. John McDonald invoked their Fifth Amendment rights and refused to testify. But former Revere Mayor George V. Colella did testify, denying he ever took money from Revere Amusement to allow illegal gambling in the city.

Marder's company took in about $18,000 a week from the more than 70 machines in Revere. The machines generated more money, but Marder divided the proceeds evenly with the club owners, who also were reimbursed for payoffs to winners, according to documents and testimony.

Wolf ordered Marder jailed pending sentencing, denying a defense motion to let him return to California until his next court appearance.

COLLEGIAN
RANGERS
COLLEGIAN
AIRBORNE
COLLEGIAN
SEALS
IF YOU'VE GOT THE GUTS, WE'VE GOT YOUR PAPER

Wanted: runaway calf

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press

AGAWAM — If there's street smart, then there's farm dumb.

That's probably what you call the neighbor who saw farmer Jim Fenton's lost calf, but mistook it for a dog.

Not one to fret over changing times, the beef farmer turned to radio appeals Wednesday to find his stray steer in the suburban jungle.

"I don't know what would happen to this cow out there without any food and anybody to take care of it," said Fenton's wife.

She said the 4-month-old belted Galloway calf, which was recently weened, slipped underneath the gate of its pen Monday morning and left the Fentons' five-acre cattle farm. That's nearly $500 of restless beef on a journey of self-discovery.

The family notified police to be on the lookout for a lonesome-looking 400-pound black, male calf with a white stripe on its belly. Authorities received at least one homeowner's report of a sighting, but the calf took off before anyone could grab it.

Another neighbor later told Fenton of seeing the animal but taking it in the dark for a dog.

"They're not familiar with this kind of cow around here. This is not expected to be a loose cow because it's not a farming area," Fenton's wife said.

At least not now. Decades ago, many residents farmed dairy cows and produce in Agawam. Now, the town of 27,300 just outside of Springfield acts in large part as a bedroom community for that city and Hartford, Conn., about 25 minutes down Route 91.

In Agawam, the search for the errant steer was under way both by land and air Wednesday.

Fenton was out searching woods near the farm with several relatives and friends.

PARAMOUNT PERFORMING ARTS CENTER

JOAN BAEZ
FRIDAY
NOVEMBER 20TH

BAD COMPANY
FRIDAY
DECEMBER 11TH

ALVIN AND THE CHIPMUNKS
SPONSORED BY TV-22
STARRING IN A CHIPMUNK CHRISTMAS
SATURDAY
DECEMBER 12TH
SPONSORED BY 96-TIC-FM

TICKETS AVAILABLE AT BOX OFFICE (413) 734-5874;
STRAWBERRY RECORDS; NORTHAMPTON TICKET OFFICE (413) 586-8686 OR TICKETPRO PHONE CHARGE AT 1-800-828-7080

GAP JEANS
$19.99

RICH'S
RICH'S ARMY/NAVY & CASUAL CLOTHES
24 Center St., Northampton
586-0275
(Next to the Iron Horse)

COLLEGIAN

Don't Be a Turkey! Gobble Up These Savings at Scott's

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8 A.M.-11 P.M.
Tel: 549-2692
One Battery Flash

BUDWEISER
24-12oz Bottles
$12.99 + DEP.

Rolling Rock
12 pack bottles
$6.99 + DEP.

Glen Ellen White Zinfandel
750ml $6.99
2 For...

Permit NOT Required to Purchase Keg!

Jack Daniels Tennessee Whiskey
750ml
$11.99

Smirnoff Vodka
1.0Ltr.
$9.99

Robert Mondavi Woodbridge
Cabernet Savignon & Chardonnay
$9.49
1.5Ltr.

Quantity Discounts Available

WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
Tele-check for your personal check
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Play all Lottery games here!
FULL SELECTION OF NON-ALCOHOLIC WINE & BEERS

COLLEGIAN

Local News

Road Trip

PHILADELPHIA — For the first time in the history of this space, your faithful correspondent and two esteemed colleagues went on location, to the University of Pennslyvania, to dig up the news.

What we found was Smokey's Bar, which boasts itself as a "Penn-stitution" and according to a regular customer was once mentioned in a speech by former President Gerald Ford.

The real drawing card to Smokey's was the Wednesday night special of all-you-can-eat-and-drink for $6.

Smokey's provided its patrons with an open bar consisting of Lite, Budweiser and Bass Ale and "lower shelf liquors." Some of the lower shelf stuff probably should have been buried under the shelf, but we managed.

The victuals part of the deal left much to be desired (a few Subway subs) but we managed to wash our sorrows away with a few extra pitchers.

It is a great disappointment that Amherst shuts bars down for having more than one person for every 24-square feet of space, while Smokey's is allowed to provide such a service for the Penn students.

Maybe there is something to this Ivy League education hype.

Paper heist

At North Adams State College, a group of students participated in the increasingly popular game of violating the First Amendment of the Constitution.

According to the Berkshire Eagle, a group of thieves swiped nearly the entire press run of an edition of The Beacon, the student newspaper of North Adams State.

The edition contained a page one article reporting the arrests of six students, all pledges of the Kappa Delta Phi fraternity, on drug and alcohol charges.

Several students and officials say they believe the fraternity is responsible for the theft and one women reported seeing the pledges steal a stack of the bi-monthly newspaper.

Holly Halsall, Beacon editor in chief said, "it's very discouraging when you stay up till 2 a.m. working on a paper, and most of the campus doesn't even get to see it."

Also discouraging is when a small group of people attempt to stop the flow of information because they can't handle the truth being told.

NASC President Thomas D. Aceto told The Eagle he would treat the theft seriously even if it turns out to be a prank and he promised strict action against the perpurtrators.

"You're getting awfully close to some First Amendment issues when you start confiscating newspapers, whoever did it," Aceto said.

It is reassuring to find out there is at least one college official who has the backbone to stand up against theft and civil rights violation.

I suggest Aceto come to Amherst as the next UMass Human Relations speaker and a few Whitmore officials show up and take notes.

Others receiving votes

The University of Massachusetts did not make the U.S. News and World Report magazine top 25 list of four year colleges and universities.

The magazine weighed five attributes in compiling its sixth annual list: reputation, selectivity, faculty resources, financial resources and student satisfaction.

The top ranked school was Harvard University and the highest ranked public university was the University of California at Berkeley, which came in at No. 16.

The magazine favors small class sizes and the amount of money spent on each student.

Harvard spend $30,889 per year on each student while California Institute of Technology divies out a whopping $59,532 per student.

The rest of the top ten include: No. 2 Princeton University, No. 3 Yale University, No. 4 Stanford University, No. 5 California Institute of Technology and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, No. 7 Dartmouth University and Duke University, No. 9 University of Chicago and No. 10 Columbia University.

O'Brien cites academics, more multiculturalism as major gains

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Staff

How does it feel to be thrown into a two-year interim term as Chancellor of the University of Massachusetts?

Looking back on one and half years of coping with a 20 million dollar budget shortfall, graduate student strikes, racial tensions, building takeovers and athletic scandals, Chancellor Richard O'Brien said he took the job "because I didn't know what I was getting into."

"I was brought up as an academic and here I am brought into all these problems. Nobody prepared me for many of the issues I would have to deal with," O'Brien said in an interview Tuesday.

O'Brien admits he has endured his share of problems, but also boasts of some successes. He said improvements in the University's budget have improved academics on campus and have moved the University toward becoming a more multicultural campus.

Reflecting on the Graduate Employee Organization's strike last year, O'Brien said he is satisfied with good relations which now exist between the administration and graduate students.

O'Brien said the this year's racial tensions on campus stemmed from problems that have always existed. O'Brien cited increases in minority students and faculty, scholarships for minorities and the re-allocation of funds for the Upward Bound Program as positive steps toward easing racial tensions on campus.

"For me, the most important thing was that despite diverse concerns, it was positive to work with [students]," O'Brien said. "They're a very outstanding group. I really admire them."

O'Brien said he is not just responding to current racial problems, but is concerned with working toward long-term solutions. Although he said he was disappointed with the quality of the federal civil rights report on racial tensions released several weeks ago, he said he feels many issues have been addressed in recent agreements made toward increasing multiculturalism on campus.

"I strongly believe in keeping contact going with students," O'Brien said, defending criticism from students that he doesn't talk directly with them. He said he has frequently met with many different groups of students over the past two years.

One thing O'Brien said he has particularly enjoyed about his job is his involvement with athletic activities on campus. Although scandals in the athletic department have been "unpleasant," O'Brien said the recent successes of UMass sports teams were a result of strengthening the athletic program over the past several years.

"Whatever [the athletic directors] did, obviously they had a role in building one of the best athletic years in the country," according to O'Brien, who said he is a huge fan of basketball.

He said he believes athletics have an important role in student life and deserves more support. He added his two proudest moments as chancellor were two occasions when he recently conducted the University's marching band.

"The proudest title I've ever had is Coach O'Brien. I brought strong support for athletics at the Chancellor's level. I'm pleased to say I changed that," O'Brien said.

CHRISTOPHER EVANS / COLLEGIAN
Chancellor Richard O'Brien

One thing O'Brien said he does look forward to during his term is opening the William D. Mullins Memorial Center. He predicts it will have a huge impact on the University, and said despite reports that the University's power plant won't be able to generate enough steam to heat the building, there will be enough power to operate it.

"[Mullins Arena] is going to be magnificent and wonderful," O'Brien said. "It's the best in the country."

O'Brien, who has a background as a neurobiologist, said he looks forward to going on sabbatical leave next semester, but has no definite plans.

"It will be nice to have the opportunity to read, write and think about what I want to do next," said O'Brien.

O'Brien said the new chancellor who replaces him this June will have to resolve tensions between different ethnic groups and different faculty groups. But he said he believes the campus is in "great shape." He cited an outstanding faculty, a great student body and new facilities being built.

"The supreme target is to activate the nature of direction of the campus in a way to encourage everyone to feel they're sharing in it," O'Brien said.

Snowball incident turns nasty

Tuesday's two-inch snowfall, though short-lived, proved dangerous when a snowball fight resulted in an alleged assault with a dangerous weapon.

UMass Police said they responded to a reported assault involving a knife in the area of Thatcher Way in Northeast Residential Area at 3 p.m. Tuesday. The alleged victim, a UMass student, said a verbal argument over a snowball throwing incident led a 17- or 18-year-old White male to pull a knife from his pocket and tell him to leave the area. The assailant was accompanied by two other individuals.

University Spokesperson Karin Sherbin said it was not a racial incident. The University of Massachusetts Police Community Disorders Unit is investigating.

A snowball fight also broke a window in Crabtree Hall causing $30 worth of damage, police said.

Snowball fights are not new for the UMass Amherst campus. Human Relations Director Grant Ingle said students used to go to Amherst College on occasion for snowball fights until an Amherst College student almost lost an eye four years ago.

Police also reported a car travelling on Sylvan drive slid on the pavement made slippery by the snow and hit a parked car, causing $1,500 worth of damage. No injuries were reported.

Because the snowfall occurred during the day shift, Sherbin said the University's Physical Plant did not need to call in extra workers.

—MARC ELLIOTT

MATT KAHN / COLLEGIAN
HOLY COSMIC FRENCH FRY—UMass was hit by several inches of snow on Tuesday. Despite hopes by some for cancelled classes, campus activities went on undisturbed.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers or cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect those of the Collegian unless otherwise noted.

A cynic tries to be happy

Nihilism, death and social oppression.

They make for great editorials don't they? I love to write about them, but maybe when I start titling my articles after depressing T.S. Eliot poetry its time to cheer things up a bit. So, in the spirit of the holidays and the universal feelings of love and acceptance that accompany them I shall make a list of Things That Make Me Happy. Because as we all know, our purposes in life are to be happy and carefree and therefore oblivious of the suffering and pain all around us.

Nathan CRICK

Sorry. I'm doing it again. Life is really just a red shiny apple filled with a creamy nougat center and jelly beans. Better?

So here it is. The official list of Things that Make Me Happy:

• The absence of George Bush in the White House next year. It makes me think that maybe the American Populous really can think for themselves. Or else everybody just loved the Emmy awards.

• Mint chocolate chip ice cream. . . no, not really. It just seems like an obligation to put ice cream in a Happy category. So ignore that. It makes me feel like Cathy.

• Christmas. I just love the whole spirit of giving and the snow and people ringing bells in front of malls. And watching "Rudolf the Rednosed Reindeer" on TV, to see how he was ostracized because of his individuality and almost abandoned on the Island of Misfit Toys with Charlie in the Box and the rest of the pitiful outcasts from society. It's almost sad when Fuhrer Claus sees an opportunity for exploitation of Rudolf's nose and tries to pawn it off as simply a change of heart while Rudolf buys it hook, line and sinker. The poor sap. But I digress.

• Going back to my hometown. Yeah, right.

• "The Dennis Miller Show." Finally, a program where Henry Rollins could perform and where it actually took some mental capacities to find things funny. Any show that quotes "Apocalypse Now" in its final episode is just too cool. But he got cancelled, of course. Now they probably air "Charles in Charge."

• Watching freshmen scurry around the campus worried about having to eat lunch alone or thinking that the library is on fire because of the steam vents on the roof. It makes me feel so old and wise. "Goessman is over there young lad, now hurry on." Of course soon they'll be just as anxious to get the hell out of here as the six-year seniors, but its always fun to watch the dreamer quality in them violently dashed on the rocks of reality.

• Reading good literature. Gulliver's Travels, Slaughterhouse Five, A Farewell to Arms, 1984, Brave New World. . . okay, forget this one.

• Playing God. Although I have yet to do it, I have found out there is a way you can play God by purchasing "Sid Meier's Civilization." Never underestimate human ingenuity.

• Reading the caption under a picture in a paper called The Daily Texan that has been lying on the newsroom floor for three weeks. It shows a woman being forcibly arrested after clashes involving the Czechoslovakian Republican Party, and the main caption is titled "Bounced Czech." You just have to laugh.

• Walking out into the woods on a clear summer day to enjoy the majesty of nature and to escape the bounds of society. At least while, well, maybe I should stop this Happy item right here.

• My friends. Well, at least those that are still alive.

• Death. Death and misery make me hap-. . .

I'm sorry. I really wish I could buy the world a Coke and keep them company, but Coke makes me belch and I wouldn't want to do that in front of the whole world and make a fool out of myself. The only thing that I know makes me happy is my existence, since if I did not exist I could not very well be happy, could I? I'd just be dust, and where is the fun in that?

But I am happy. Life really is a red shiny apple. If I went around saying that, though, you'd get people thinking they didn't have to try to make the world better, and then what'd you get? Well, I don't know. But it sure wouldn't be a red shiny apple, that's for damn sure. And I'm not about to let that happen, I just want to help preserve the jelly beans.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

Pornography is a useful tool

"Those backwards First Amendment rights?" Who is this neo-Nazi, self-righteous, closed-minded, holier than thou, censoring personification of evil who obviously has no experience with pornography or perhaps was merely the victim of "strict Catholic upbringing?"

I agree with Stephanie Eisenberg's article calling the pornography industry a multi-million (I dare say billion) dollar a year business (Collegian, Nov. 13). My agreement with Stephanie ends there. Then again, this is the editorial/opinion page. I just am afraid that some people might not be as practiced at distinguishing facts from opinion as they should be.

I have seen this publication consistently offer a very one-sided condemnation of an industry which I extol as a very useful tool and worthy of encouragement in this "age of abstinence," or shall we choose to adopt the customary "denial of reality" approach of the hypocrites personified by the Catholic Church (standing ovation here for Sinead) and other similar backward, return-to-the-Dark Ages institutions (remember the Inquisitions: how many millions of women were murdered?). These are the kinds of fools duped by the teachings of the likes of Jim Bakker and Jimmy Swaggart.

The Meese Commission was assigned by the government to investigate and make recommendations on the pornography problem. It consisted of a diversely qualified panel of experts. They were able to say that there was no conclusive evidence linking hardcore pornography to violence against women (can you say "fashion industry?"). The one study that did boast such claims was based on a very slight and temporary increase in aggressiveness among a small number of college males immediately following a forced 20-hour marathon viewing of hardcore pornographic videos and was, as they stated, inconclusive.

Why do the actions of two consenting adults degrade women? As a qualified consumer I can honestly assert that scenes depicting rape, violence, abuse and the "no means yes" scenario are entirely absent from anything I have encountered and I am considered a connoisseur by many. Assuredly some does exist, but everything exists if you look hard enough for it. The purpose of pornography is to entertain, to foster healthy and natural sexual fantasies. Of course all people possess unique perspectives developed through individual experiences. I feel sorry for people who view sex as a disgusting thing and miss all the beauty of it.

Reading all kinds of intricate meanings into simple entertainment seems like a waste of time. I don't classify it as art because it is mass-produced to serve a very specific purpose: to entertain, just like television. People should derive joy from viewing it, and if they don't they can change the channel or just shut it off.

For people who seem unable to differentiate between the reality and the fantasies portrayed in pornography, stay away, please, and keep your mouth shut about things you are ignorant of so the rest of us can enjoy a little escapism from the drudgery of mundane daily life if we choose to. Most importantly, pornography can never be separated from the right to freedom of speech, because when you allow someone else to determine what is offensive that is censorship and you have been effectively silenced.

Jonathan Linder
Southwest

University should end worship of evil

I was in a bathroom in Morrill yesterday. As usual, I was perusing the inscriptions on the stall door, when I saw something shocking: a pentagram with a goat's head in the middle, with the inscription "Belial says hi" underneath

For those not familiar with Biblical lore, the pentagram and goat's head are symbols of the Evil one, Satan, and Belial is one of his most powerful demonic attendants.

I find it absolutely shocking that the University can allow such naked displays of Satanism on this campus. I have also heard of strange rites being performed in the steam tunnels below our feet, and of flickering red lights and chanting coming from the "memorial circle" on Orchard Hill on nights of the new moon. And the altar-like structure behind the Chancellor's house has yet to be explained.

If the University Administration can't put an end to the worship of Evil on this campus, then I and my friends will be forced to take matters into our own hands.

Charles A. Hazlett
Central

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

The powers-that-be trusted me with this column again. Whoa. Turn up the natural gas and light a cigar, it's fun time.

They made a sequel to Home Alone? No wonder Macauley Culkin puts his hands over his ears and screams. Hey, if I were typecast before I hit puberty I'd be distraught, too.

Another reason to scream: a name like Macauley. He should hook up with soon-to-be First Daughter Chelsea Clinton as the "Yuppie Name Couple from Hell." Oh, the fun they could have with their children's names. Lance and Tiffany, anyone?

DC Comment Card du jour: a humble request on the bulletin board at Berkshire DC which declared, "We want a petting zoo!" Really, I don't make this stuff up.

So someone stole Butterfield's Jolly Roger. Of all the nerve. This controversy just gets better by the week. For historical perspective, read about a similar dilemma with a similar name: The Butter Battle Book by the late, great Dr. Suess. Anyone who says Dr. Suess is only relevant to kids is in for a big surprise.

It just wouldn't be the Notes without at least two references to the Voice. That being the second, we can move on.

It's not every day that your workplace has smoke pouring out of it from the top floor. But that's what happened to the Campus Center on Monday night. Apparently, all local units responded, and quickly, to what turned out to be a relatively minor kitchen fire.

Greg SUKIENNIK

Could it be the AFD was here so fast because the Campus Center isn't a Southwest tower and doesn't have false alarms at 3 in the bloody morning every damn weekend?

Last year, when there was an alarm in the Campus Center, we here in the basement were never told. In fact, we found out when we got a call from a reporter from the Springfield Union-News asking, "Is your building on fire?"

The "Who knew?" department: Worker dissatisfaction at the Library? Francis Ford Coppola's overpriced Bram Stoker's Dracula has more style than substance? The DCs serve "turkey" and "gravy" twice in seven days? The Voice says something not-so-nice about the Collegian? President-elect Clinton gets ticked because reporters follow him everywhere? The Spin Doctors blaring out a window on campus at top volume?

Who knew?

Now that the election is over and question 3 went down to resounding defeat, I can't help but laugh when I see those yellow "Red tape? That's garbage! Question 3? That's recycling!" stickers on campus. "You lost? That's too bad!"

My favorite moment on "90210" was when Dylan, in a drunken stupor, told Mr. Walsh that he and Brenda were running away to. . . oops, sorry, wrong page.

It turns out Mary Chapin-Carpenter is not the love child of late singers Harry Chapin and Karen Carpenter. I know you're as disappointed as I am.

Where else but UMass would a backwards picture appear on the front cover of the phone book? This says to me, "We're a screwed-up bureaucracy and we don't care." But hey, let's give it a positive spin — admitting you have a problem is the first step.

Let me close with the wisdom of the immortal Bart Simpson, who uttered these words while taking a bath on a recent "Simpsons" episode: "Sometimes a guy just wants to look his yellowest."

Greg Sukiennik is a Collegian columnist.

Media misses the power, compassion of GLB people

With the election of Bill Clinton and his commitment to ending the ban on gays in the military, the media has written a great regarding sexual orientation. Unfortunately, the national media has depicted the gay, lesbian, bisexual community as either an insignificant minority or helpless victims. The fact that these two dynamics are absent from the community serves to underscore the belief that the national media and the public are wholly ignorant.

While both depictions are disturbing, the latter disturbs me the most. While GLB people are indeed victims of oppression and discrimination, they are by no means helpless. It is the following portrait that the mass media should observe:

Each week, members of the LBGA meet to address the needs of the GLB community at UMass. All of these individuals are either gay, lesbian or bisexual, yet each possesses their own unique attributes. One is an artist, who sees the world from a different perspective than most. Another holds the ability to lead and empower people to empower themselves. And still another has a quiet, confident sense of self and community that is inspiring.

Yet, we all share a common denominator. We have all been through the agonizing process of coming out. We have all seen how the threads of ignorance and fear have woven a pattern of hatred through the fabric of our society.

Matt MALONE

And yet, I say again, we are not helpless. For from this common struggle has sprung an enormously beautiful, far- reaching and powerful creativity and compassion which is virtually limitless. We are not powerless but powerful. From the Back Bay to the Castro, GLB people are seizing this power and changing the world. By emerging from the closet of self denial and hatred, we are affirming our identities and relationships. While we are the victims of oppression, in the most beautiful irony of all, we are liberators of the human heart.

The GLB community is a family. Like all families, there is diversity of opinion. But on the whole, we are committed to eliminating the theft of human dignity which injustice perpetuates. We are committed to challenging injustice anywhere and defending, affirming and supporting the inherent worth of every human being. I would encourage the mass media to depict this aspect of the GLB community, for, personally, I cannot imagine a more enriching set of family values.

The temper of the times, coupled with the power GLB people derive from their common experience, provides us with a unique opportunity to forge a new era in which justice is the presiding principal in human relations; an era in which an individual's personhood is not defined by bigotry disguised as "values."

This is an attainable goal. For, like Jose Carreras, if GLB people were each to have a credo, it would most likely be the final word of the most famous tenor aria Vincero: "I will win."

Matt Malone is a UMass student.

A thank you to the emperor

Being in the same room as Alexander the Great makes one's body tremble with awe. This is the analogy I have toward most of the supervisors of the workplace. They say one thing and mean another. They think they are brilliant, when they only have delusions of grandeur. They think they are maintaining control, when all that exists is a chaotic mess.

Kris K. EARLE

I got fired from yet another mindless job recently, due to the "absentee policy" involved. It did not matter that I had other more important commitments to attend to, such as a friend in dire need of help after his car broke down, a person who had to work overtime and could not afford to bring me back to Amherst for my $5-an hour wages over his 30-plus grand a year job, or the fact that I had a skin graft done on my mouth and was high on drugs for more than a week; what mattered to the emperor is that I had missed three lousy shifts, a total of six hours of work.

Now I had worked plenty of extra shifts to cover for other workers at my job. A total of 11.2 shifts, or 22.4 hours of work. This greatly outdoes the measly six hours I had missed (for you geniuses out there, that is 16.4 hours more). But enough of my mathematics — my point is that I could have been spending my time accordingly rather than partake in the foolish work which is imposed upon us by the great dictators of the world.

Well, where will I now go for work, you may ask? I could always move on up the social ladder of success. I could sell Slurpees. I could wash dishes. I could plunge toilets. I could sell salmon. I could become a traveling fire swallower. Or perhaps I could write The Great American Novel. But I doubt I will do any of these things. I believe I would be wasting my time with such banalities. After all, we all know there will never be a "Great American Novel."

I would like to thank my employer for giving me the shaft. For canning me. For the old heave-ho. For giving me the short end of the stick. For throwing me to the wolves. For using me as a whipping-boy. For making me the scapegoat. For shoving into me a red hot poker and in the same spot as Edward the Second. Thank you very much and may God be with you.

I have said the preceding with both scorn and ridicule. Actually, on the brighter side, it is sort of nice to have that extra 6 hours a week. And to think, the only things I really have to lose are an extra thirty greenbacks a week and the fact that I will not have to stick my hands in toilet bowls unless I am cleaning the one toilet in my apartment. But even then, I can do it with a smile, like the stereotypical women in the usual toilet bowl commercials. Anyway, thanks for kicking me in the butt, Julius! Now it looks like I will have to start working on that screenplay I've been putting off.

It's a darn shame that I will now have to learn how to live without the usual pizza and a case of beer on the coming weekends. Well, those are the breaks. Maybe I will sell my soul. . . nah.

In conclusion, remember to take it cool and take your job seriously. After all, you would not want to be the next victim of the emperors of the workplace. Then again, perhaps it would be for the best. No hard feelings. I am such a "bitter little man."

"Until we meet again. . . "

Kris K. Earle is a Collegian staff member.

UMass escort service is a joke

The escort service here at UMass is a joke. How many women have called and waited 45 minutes in a dark parking lot for them to arrive? How many women have gotten into the car wondering if they are safer here than walking? How many women know the phone number of the escort service? How many women have never heard of the escort service? How many women stopped bothering with it? How many women walk and risk their own safety rather than waste time and energy for the hassle of the minute sense of security the escort service provides?

What is the point of this service if we have to call from a phone in a dark parking lot, wait outside for 30 minutes and meanwhile be harassed by at least one car of sexist pigs yelling out their car windows at us?

I hope those escort drivers know we're waiting. We call them out of fear for our safety and we're left feeling unsafe. Every woman on this campus has the right to feel safe. If we must be escorted around to do it, then so be it.

Every woman on this campus should have access to an escort. The number for the escort service should be on every phone on campus. How are we supposed to feel safe when we cannot find the telephone number when we really need it? We suggest putting stickers with the escort services number on them, just like the ones for the police and fire departments, on the phones.

Eve LaRochelle
Orchard Hill

This letter was signed by 22 students.

Jeffries didn't educate Whites

I am a White student who attended Dr. Leonard Jeffries' lecture Thursday night, and I have a few things to say about it.

In order for anyone to get above, as Jeffries put it, "this muck and mire," there is a need for all people to be educated, not just, to quote Jeffries again, "the brothers and the sisters." Why continue to separate people? Why not educate more people? If the goal is to get the truth across, why does it have to be done through an atmosphere of tension, of division, of — as he himself said — "protest, fear and intimidation?"

I found the lecture very motivational, not only for Blacks but for everyone to re-examine what they have been taught. It was very eye-opening, but if the goal is to educate, to get people to think, why not aim all this knowledge toward all people? This is the only way I see to end the problem of "good White men" continuing the oppression of Black people.

I'll admit that I didn't know many of the things Jeffries brought up about Black history, and that is because I was never taught it. Obviously, if the history books aren't right the curriculum should be changed, and until that time people — all people, not just people of color — have to question, to challenge, things they hear.

The way the speech was put forth, some White people said they felt like they didn't belong there, like the information was not meant to educate them as well as the Black women and men in attendance, and I think that is a shame. If you, Dr. Jeffries, don't even aim your speech towards me, towards the people who need to know the things that you know but don't, how are things ever going to change?

One last comment I have is for the woman who recited her poetry during the opening of Thursday night's talk. You may be trying to unite the Black community in order to accomplish your goals, but by stereotyping White girls you are showing just as extreme a case of racism as you could and you are only adding to the tensions that cause the division in the first place. And perhaps it is "childish" for White people to get upset when they hear something they don't want to hear, but I think if you take a look you will see just as many Black people whining. I think LL Cool J sums it up when he says, "It's not about being Black or White — it's about everybody being all right."

Jody King
Southwest

UMass cyclists have no respect

I am afraid. I am male, six feet tall, about 210 pounds, and I am afraid. I am afraid as I walk to my dorm at night and as I walk through campus in the daytime. I am afraid because it has happened to me before. I have seen it happen to others, and my friends say it has happened to them. If you walk on this campus, you are at risk, and there is no way to predict when it will happen again. What I am referring to utter lawlessness. I say this because there are no laws or rules for the many cyclists here at UMass.

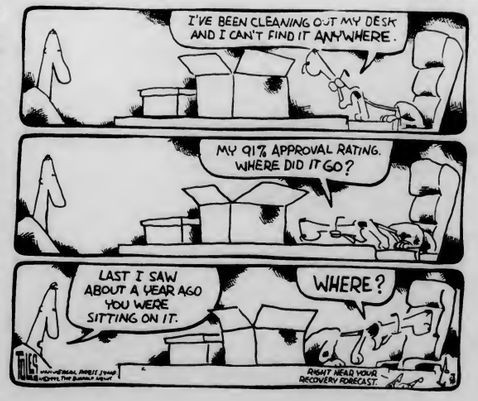
Many students on bicycles have no respect for pedestrians or their safety. If you see me on the street, it is because I don't want to get hit again. I took a handlebar in the kidney once. Two weeks ago I saw a student struck from behind by a pedal in back of his calf; it looked like he was going to need a few stitches. One rainy night a few weeks ago, a friend was walking up Orchard Hill via the path behind Worcester Dining Commons. She was halfway to the top when she looked up just to find a cyclist about to run her down. They collided and both were on the ground. She hit her head, received a concussion, and landed herself in Health Services for a night. In all three cases, the riders sped off without any concern for the damage they had just inflicted.

Many cyclists operate at high speeds and in areas that are heavy with pedestrian traffic. Just a couple of examples: the path leading toward Thatcher in Northeast, where many cyclists travel in excess of 20 miles an hour while dodging people on a path only eight feet wide; the aforementioned Orchard Hill path, with its slope and blind corners, dangerous when dry, never mind when wet; and the northwest corner of the Tower Library, which is very close quarters due to a concrete post and a very large tree.

So what should we do to solve this? Perhaps registration of bicycles by the Department of Public Safety should include a way of identifying the riders, so that those who do cause accidents or ride recklessly through campus can be identified and reprimanded. Also, many sidewalks and paths that are pedestrian-heavy should be made off-limits to bicycles, to the point where bicycles should only be ridden on the streets which conveniently enclose our campus, and on paths through campus that are wider than 10 feet. The non-riding walkways could be marked with red paint dashes on the pavement every 10 or 15 feet, so there would be no mistake of which paths are rideable and which are not. If a rider came upon a non-riding path, they would then dismount the bicycle and walk like the rest of us. If none of this is acceptable then buying bicycle helmets and a sawed-off broom handle would be a solution — for the walkers, that is.

If riders are not going to be responsible, then rules and laws will have to replace the current lack of a system. Bicycles are a privilege on this campus, not a right, and those who neglect responsibility and abuse the right should lose it.

Don Mason
Northeast



Housing seeks to implement room deposit fee

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Staff

University Housing Services hopes to implement a policy in which students will be required to pay $200 deposit each March to reserve their room assignments, according to several members of the Undergraduate Student Senate.

Student Trustee Kevin Newnan said at last night's Undergraduate Student Senate meeting that Housing Services attempted to implement this policy last spring, but it was delayed until this year.

"I don't agree with this policy because Housing's real goal is to make money off the students," said Newnan. He said if students sign up for their room during the spring semester, pay the $200 deposit and then decide to move off campus, they will lose their deposit.

Newnan said he sees this policy as a fee increase, therefore the Board of Trustees has jurisdiction over it.

"The administration may be under the impression that they can implement this policy, but it will come to the Board before it is implemented," he said.

In other business, the Undergraduate Student Senate voted to grant the radio station WMUA $1,500 to publicize a jazz concert which will be preformed in spring 1993.

Dorothy Bennett, chair of the SGA finance committee, said WMUA showed good planning and foresight by coming to the finance committee the semester before the concert.

"The finance committee prefers the Registered Student Organizations to come to us as early as possible if they need money," Bennett said.

Bennett said this will be the fourth annual Magic Triangle Jazz Concert Series. "It is an amazing concert series and it always sells out," she said.

Bennett said WMUA doesn't make a profit off of the concert, which is why its members ask the SGA for funding. "It has worked out well for WMUA to go through the finance committee," she said.

Bennett said the finance committee is given $15,000 to use for programming and support of RSOs. She said the committee gives RSOs loans, short-term funds and grants and also funds events such as lectures and band concerts, she said.

"We provide emergency funding for organizations that didn't receive or get enough budgeting. We also help out newly established organizations," Bennett said.

Newnan said no decisions have been made on whether to privatize the campus book stores. He said Auxiliary Services needs to change the way they operate because they are running up a deficit.

"They either have to trim from the inside by cutting personnel and expenditures or go to outside management," said Newnan.

Newnan said there is a deficit because the state no longer pays fringe benefit costs, which include medical and dental insurance for Auxiliary Services' employees.

Newnan's said his main concern was what privatization would mean to the students. "We need to look at all the options and decide which option will offer students the lowest prices and best service," he said.

Switch To BayBank For Cash With No Fees.

Get Unlimited Free Withdrawals And More With The BayBank Student Value Package.™

Open a BayBank Student Value Package and get cash at more than 750 BayBank X-Press 24* banking machines free of transaction fees! And for a low monthly fee of $5 you'll also get a complete package of banking services including:

- Student Value Checking™ Account which includes 8 checks per month and a companion Savings Account!
- The BayBank Card with X-Press Check.™[2]
- Reserve Credit overdraft protection and free CheckView™ plus a BayBank Visa® or MasterCard® with an annual fee of just $21[2]

To open a BayBank Student Value Package, visit your nearest BayBank office or call 1-800-BAY-FAST* 24 hours a day.

$5 Bonus Offer

When you open a Student Value Package and ask for a BayBank Card, we'll deposit five dollars in your Student Value Checking Account. Just present this coupon at any BayBank office or call 1-800-BAY-FAST before December 31, 1992.

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____ Zip_____
School_____
Limit one five dollar deposit per account.

BayBank®

[1]Charges for transactions at BayBank X-Press 24 Cash* machines and ATMs owned by other banks are additional. A $.75 fee applies to each check after the eighth. To open a BayBank Student Value Package, you need a valid school I.D. or other proof of current student status.
[2]To qualify for X-Press Check, Reserve Credit overdraft protection, and a BayBank MasterCard or Visa, you must be 18 or older and have no adverse credit history. BayBank Credit Card annual fee and APR of 14.90% subject to change.

Member FDIC. Equal Opportunity Lender

Official claims Soviet decline opens way for nuclear reduction

By ANGIE POPOVICH
Collegian Correspondent

There is a more secure feeling among the U.S. public concerning the need for weapons since the collapse of the Soviet Union, according to an undersecretary from the Department of Defense.

Dr. George R. Schneiter, director of the Strategic and Space Systems for the Acquisition in the Department of Defense, spoke yesterday on "Implications of Recent International Changes for Strategic U.S. Defensive Programs."

Schneiter said there is less of a need for nuclear defenses due largely to changes in Russia. "The Russians are now friendly and Bush and Yeltsin have negotiated an agreement which has greatly reduced the number of warheads," Schneiter said.

The reductions will have a great effect on the United States, Schneiter said.

"By the turn of the century we will get rid of many weapons and reduce the number of nuclear warheads to ultimately five hundred," Schneiter said.

The majority of the defense capability will be approximately half submarine-based and one-third in the bomber force, Schneiter said.

He said Congress is working on putting stronger restrictions on underground nuclear testing, especially in Alaska and Hawaii.

Schneiter said former President Reagan spent billions of dollars building up the U.S. defense system.

"Our view of `Star Wars' has calmed down quite a bit," he said. "We are no longer focused on having an astrodome shield around us to protect us from the Russians. The program has been scaled back quite a bit."

"Brilliant Pebbles" is the most controversial program which both Congress and Bill Clinton do not favor. The concept involves a device orbiting Earth with a "kill vehicle" inside to detect small missiles and other small objects.

Since the device would constantly orbit in space, hundreds would be needed to form a beneficial arrangement. Although it is in the early research stage, officials say it would be useful against such weapons as the SCUD.

The ground-based aspect of the national defense focuses on utilizing resources in order to develop early warning devices. It is a program which Clinton favors for development without commitment, according to Schneiter.

The early warning program involves placing radars to detect incoming threats and ground-based interceptor missiles at a number of sites, Schneiter said. "Brilliant Eyes" is another program which helps the ground-based program by holding telescopes ad sensors in space to precisely predict a combination of space and land threats.

U.S. factories can't keep up

By JOHATHAN YENKIN
Associated Press

BOSTON — Despite their improved factories, American manufacturers are having a harder time competing in the global market because demands are changing faster than expected, according to a survey released on Wednesday.

"They're making necessary improvements... but it's not enough," said Jay Kim, co-author of the study and a professor at Boston University's school of management.

The survey, conducted by BU, has been done every two years since 1982. It questioned more than 100 U.S. manufacturing executives in different sectors such as electronics, machinery and consumer-packaged goods.

In more than a dozen categories ranging from reliable products to on-time delivery, the respondents said their competitiveness has slipped since 1990. Ironically, manufacturers have reported gains in factory performance over the past several years.

"The easiest explanation would be that competitors from other regions have had much faster rates of improvement over the last two years, and that U.S. manufacturers have lost ground because they didn't improve fast enough," the study said.

But the authors said there are other explanations. Kim said better factories are not enough and that companies also need to improve how their products reach the customer through distribution channels.

TOC open for business

Fire causes damage, change of menu

By CHRISTINA ROTHWELL
Collegian Staff

Although police estimated at least $10,000 in damages from Monday's fire in the Campus Center, the Top of the Campus Restaurant and Lounge opened for business yesterday, according to a Top of the Campus employee.

Roberta Potter, the TOC's night manager, said there was little damage in the restaurant and lounge. Because the exhaust ducts in the kitchen were damaged, the broiler, fryolator and the grill cannot be used, Potter said. As a result, the TOC has been forced to change its menu.

"Everything looks the same. We are doing a buffet for a couple of days," Potter said. "The lounge is still serving food from 2 p.m. to 11 p.m."

The TOC restaurant is still opened during its regular hours, in addition to still having the meal exchange program with the restaurant and the dinning commons.

"I think we will be ready in a few days [to open as usual]," Potter said. "People are welcome to call to find out what is on the buffet."

Randy Krutzler, a TOC lounge bartender, said on Tuesday the damage was not extensive and the kitchen has been cleaned up.

Forrest C. Davies, manager of Building Services, said there was water and smoke damage in the ventilation system.

"We had a lot of smoke damage and a little bit of water," Davies said.

The "moderately-slow burning" grease fire occurred at 8:35 p.m. on Monday night when a kitchen exhaust fan caught on fire spreading to the ventilation ducts in the 11th and 12th floor, according to fire officials.

As a precautionary measure, the Campus Center Hotel, the Campus Center Concourse, and offices throughout the building were evacuated. Within an hour the fire was extinguished, according to Amherst fire fighter Jim Johnson.

About 20 people in the TOC Lounge were evacuated, while the TOC restaurant is not open on Mondays, said Donna McLaughlin, TOC lounge waitress, who was working that night.

Although the fire caused extensive amounts of smoke, there were no injuries.

FUNNY, YUMMY, PERTINENT
COLLEGIAN

Telefund Office
Jobs Available
Now and for Winter Session
If you possess excellent communication skills, telefund is the job for you.
- Great experience
- Competitive pay
- Flexible hours

- APPLY NOW -
UMASS TELEFUND
Basement Memorial Hall
545-3509

HOCKEY TONITE!

Islanders v. Bruins
Don't miss the action at 7:30 pm!
TOP of the CAMPUS LOUNGE
11th Floor
Campus Center
UMass at Amherst
Mon.-Sat.: 2:00 pm-12:30 am
Closed Sunday

OPEN SUNDAYS! NOV. 22nd THRU DEC. 31st AT NOON
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive

BEER
BUDWEISER $11.99 + DEP CASE OF 24-12 OZ CANS
HEINEKEN & AMSTEL LIGHT 12 PACK BOTTLES $8.99 + DEP
ROLLING ROCK $12.49 + DEP CASE OF 2-12 PACK BOTTLES
MICHELOB, LIGHT & DRY 12 PACK CANS $6.49 + DEP
MOLSON GOLDEN & MOLSON LIGHT $15.49 + DEP CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES
SAMUEL ADAMS WINTER LAGER $4.99 + DEP 6 PACK BOTTLES
PIELS & PIELS LIGHT $7.99 + DEP SUITCASE CANS
BARTLES & JAYMES WINE COOLERS $1.99 4 PACK BOTTLES AFTER REBATE SALE 2.99 MAIL IN REBATE 1.00
COKE, DIET COKE, SPRITE, DIET SPRITE $5.99 + DEP CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS

WINE
WINE OF THE MONTH
ROBERT MONDAVI WOODBRIDGE CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON $4.99 750 ML
GALLO WINES CHABLIS WHITE, BURGUNDY, RED ROSE, PINK CHABLIS, FRENCH COLOMBARD, CHENIN BLANC, BLUSH CHABLIS $6.49 3.0 L
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL $3.49 750 ML
KENDALL JACKSON VINTNERS CHARDONNAY $8.99 750 ML
SEBASTIANI PROPRIETER WINES WHITE BLUSH, RED CHENIN, FRENCH COLOMBARD, WHITE ZINFANDEL, CHARDONNAY, BEAUJOLAIS, WHITE ZINFANDEL $5.49 1.5 LITER
GEORGES DUBOEUF BEAUJOLAIS VILLAGES $5.49 750 ML
FREIXENET CORDON NEGRO BRUT $4.99 750 ML SALE 5.99 MAIL IN REBATE 1.00 AFTER REBATE
BALLATORE GRAN SPUMANTE $2.99 750 ML SALE 3.99 MAIL IN REBATE 1.00 AFTER REBATE

LIQUORS
SMIRNOFF VODKA $13.99 1.75L
SEAGRAMS 7 WHISKEY $7.99 1.75L SALE 12.99 MAIL IN REBATE 5.00 AFTER REBATE
CANADIAN CLUB $15.99 1.75L
BACARDI RUM SILVER & DARK $14.49 1.75L
J & B SCOTCH $24.99 1.75L
SEAGRAMS GIN $9.49 1.75L SALE 12.49 MAIL IN REBATE 3.00 AFTER REBATE
JIM BEAM $11.49 1.75L SALE 13.49 MAIL IN REBATE 2.00 AFTER REBATE
BAILEYS IRISH CREAM $14.49 750ML
KAHLUA COFFEE LIQUEUR SALE 11.99 MAIL IN REBATE 3.00 $8.99 750ML AFTER REBATE
POPOV VODKA $9.99 1.75L

not responsible for typographical errors
OPEN: 9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
• TWO CONVENIENT LOCATIONS •
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS 11/19/92 THRU WEDS. 12/2/92
Full Redemption Center

Clinton

continued from page 1

Act or if administration officials were attempting to dig up damaging information on the Democratic nominee.

Funk said the way department officials conducted the search made it clear that they had not been merely responding to routine requests from the news media. He cited in particular the breadth of the searches undertaken at a suburban records center on Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.

"Never, in our opinion, in the annals of the Freedom of Information Act has there been an FDIA search conducted with such urgency, scope, thoroughness and grade-levels of participants," Funk said.

Main St RECORDS
One of the area's largest selections of Imported, Independant & Domestic Records, Cassettes and Compact Discs
586 5726
213 MAIN ST

SON OF Main St RECORDS
Tens of Thousands of Used, Cut outs & Collectible Records and Cassettes
586 1707
21 STATE ST

NORTHAMPTON

BASHA'S BARGAIN BASEMENT
BUY ONE GET ONE FREE
That Includes Elegant Silver Jewellery, Richly Colored Hand Embroidered Ladies Dresses & Exquisite Hand-Crafted Gifts.
241 Main St., Northampton, MA 01060 • 413-586-6030

安城中國飯店
AMHERST
CHINESE FOOD
WE DO NOT USE "MSG"
• MANDARIN & SZECHUAN CUISINE
• HOMESTYLE COOKING
• FRESH VEGETABLES FROM OUR FARM
• EAT IN OR TAKE OUT
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
• OPEN 7 DAYS • NEWLY REMODELED
MASTERCARD & VISA ACCEPTED
253-7835 253-2813
62 MAIN STREET, AMHERST

Networking.

There are a lot of influential people on this campus. People with connections. People who can get things done. In order to get to know them, you could get involved with a lot of different RSO's – the Republican Club, University Democrats, Cannibis Reform Coalition, the Radical Student Union – or you could be more efficient and join the Collegian.
Rub shoulders with the rich and famous, or at least with the self-important.
The Collegian
113 Campus Center
545-3500

CAFE DICARLO
5-College Student Dinner Special
Choice of:
• Lasagna al Forno
• Chicken Parmigiana
• Shrimp all' Arrabbiata
• Pasta Primavera
Complete Italian Dinner, including choice of entreé, salad, bread, soda or coffee for $6.95, with college I.D.
Sunday thru Thursday 11:30 to 10:00.
Offer expires Nov. 30, 1992
71 North Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA
253-9300

★ ARMY BARRACKS ★
Genuine U.S. & European Military Clothing & Equipment
Largest Surplus selection in New England with the lowest prices
• Dutch and West German Six-Pocket Cotton Field Shorts & Pants $10 - $20
• Mexican Baja Pullover & Blankets 100% Cotton $12 - $15
• Large assortment of Guatemalan and Mexican goods
• Down Feather Mummy Sleeping Bags & Cover $35 & $50
• Genuine Issue Camo, Desert, Tiger, urban Black Six Pocket Pants $26 & $28
• World Flags (3'x5') $10 each-2 for $18 Over 150 Countries
• NATO Field Jacket $20
• Grateful Dead Stickers and T-Shirts
• Large Selection for Book Bags & Duffles
• Levi Shorts, Pants, & Coveralls
• Genuine MA-1 Flight Jackets & M-65 Field Jackets
• New & Used Combat Boots $5 to $40
• Ray-bans 40% off
• Special Order Dr. Martins
• Tapestries & Tie-Dye Sheets $15 to $20
• Surplus Leather Bomber & Bike Jackets

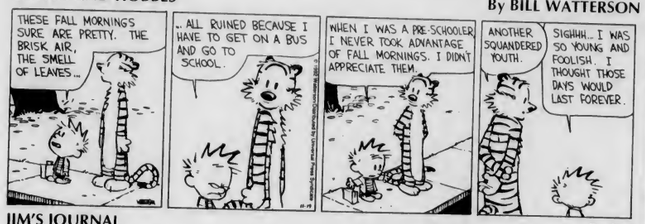
LOCATION: Univ. of MASS Student Union Ballroom
DATE: November 16th thru 20th (Mon. - Fri.)
TIME: 9:00 - 7:00 PM
SPONSORED BY: Cape Verdean Student Alliance
MC ★ VISA ★ AMEX ★ DISCOVER ACCEPTED

WELCOME BACK!
Round Trips from New York Starting at:
CANCUN $ 310
LONDON 330
SAN JOSE C.R. 470
BERLIN 498
WARSAW 625
BANGKOK 949
Taxes not included. Restrictions apply. Fares subject to change & availability. Call about one ways. We issue EURAIL passes on the SPOT!
Council Travel
79 South Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
256-1261

Solutions from your Apple Campus Reseller: The Apple Computer Loan.
"Why should I wait in line at the computer lab when I can own a Macintosh for $15 a month?"
Kevin Campbell
Aerospace Engineering Major
What allowed Kevin to own an Apple® Macintosh® PowerBook™ 145 computer for such a low monthly payment? The Apple Computer Loan.* Kevin knew that owning the power and portability of a Macintosh PowerBook for his full course load and his work in the Civil Air Patrol was a smart thing to do. And the Apple Computer Loan was the smart way to do it: easy application, fast turnaround and low, flexible payment terms. So Kevin went to the only place that offers the Apple Computer Loan, his Apple Campus Reseller.
Macintosh. It's more than a present, it's a future.

UNIVERSITY STORE
CAMPUS CENTER
545-2619
MONDAY - FRIDAY 9AM-5 PM
SATURDAY 11AM-3PM
© 1992 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple, the Apple logo and Macintosh are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. PowerBook is a trademark of Apple Computer, Inc.
*Based on Kevin Campbell's Apple Computer Loan of $2,342.40, his monthly payment was $15 (interest only) as of 10/12/92. Principal payments may be deferred up to 4 years. The interest rate is variable, and is based on the average of the higher of the 30-day or 90-day commercial paper rates as reported in the Wall Street Journal, plus a spread of 5.35% (not to exceed 5.6%). The term of the loan is 8 years with no pre-payment penalty. The total finance charge on every $1,000 borrowed will be $543.38. Each applicant pays a $35.00 non-refundable application fee. Approved borrowers will be charged a 4% loan origination fee. The loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount and repaid over the life of the loan. For the month of October 1992, the interest rate was 7.6% with an APR of 8.85%.

CALVIN AND HOBBES By BILL WATTERSON



JIM'S JOURNAL By JIM

DOONESBURY By GARRY TRUDEAU

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED By CHRIS SHADOIAN

PRICE BY PRICE VAN RAY

SKATE BOY & RURU BY PITT

THE FAR SIDE By GARY LARSON

Quote of the Day

"I should join a club and beat you over the head with it."

—Groucho Marx

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Good things happen for you now. You find out that a friend really is as loyal as you believe. Concerns about your car can be answered by a thorough inspection.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your imagination may be running away with you. Forget your suspicions and stick with the facts and figures. More can be accomplished if you work independently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can have a terrific day if you show the will to work and to get things settled. Do not fail someone to whom you have made a promise. An unexpected bonus is in the works.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The time is ripe to invest in something that really interests you. If you have any doubts, though, it would be best to obtain more data. Consulting an expert fills in the gaps.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Sing and hold hands with your neighbors. Be a friend to all. A stitch in time saves nine. Don't spit into the wind. Don't pay when the milk is free. And the cow jumped over the moon.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A pet project will get the green light today. Go slow to avoid making errors. Stay good-natured, even if your associates do things that irritate you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Travel could be highly profitable now. Romance is on the schedule for those who are single but have their eye on one special person. Be up-front about your intentions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Not a good day to wait for someone else to take the lead. It is up to you to steer your own course. A warm embrace tells someone that you are in his debt.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You see someone in a new, less-flattering light today. Keep your own counsel. Arguing with a person who is in a bad mood is pointless. Storm clouds blow away by nightfall.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): All might not be as it seems at your place of work. Avoid secretive or underground activities. A cooperative attitude helps thaw out a pig-headed associate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Self-pity could threaten to engulf you. It is time to consult a friend who has your best interests at heart. Exercise boosts your spirits and helps restore your self-esteem.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Simple pleasures hold the most appeal today. Set aside more time for meditation. A favorite hobby could lead to a new career. Think about what you would like to accomplish.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

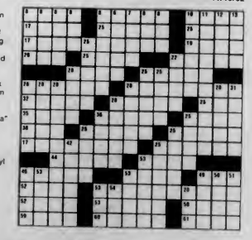
ACROSS
1 Trickle
5 Evidence
10 Marshall —
14 Coty of France
15 Arrowsmith's wife
16 French composer
17 Like a Schubert symphony
19 Dark or Middle
20 "O Sole —"
21 Treats for dobbin
22 Cooling
23 Offspring
24 Short guest appearance for a star
26 Unmerciful one
29 Granados opera inspired by Goya's art
32 Penned
33 Become less green
34 Simple sugar
35 Bulwer Lytton heroine
36 Daunts
37 Indigo dye
38 Snooze
39 Injures
40 — basin
41 Character in 11 Down
43 Caesar and Cassius, e.g.
44 Tennis' Garrison and others
45 Oceans
46 Rubberneck
48 Colorful gem
49 Chatter
52 Spool
53 "— rusticana"
56 Dynamic beginning
57 Praying figure
58 Diane, Cheryl or Alan
59 Skiers' delight
60 — waltz
61 Pontail

DOWN
1 Snare or kettle
2 Painter Guido
3 The scoop
4 Noted architect I.M.
5 Malleable
6 Takes a breather
7 Sounds of surprise
8 Cinnabar, for one
9 Latest rage
10 Flying machines
11 Ponchielli opera
12 Guinness or Baldwin
13 Snoop
18 Lariat
22 Presage
23 Location
24 Struggles
25 Certain votes
26 King of —: Benny Goodman
27 Like a pride
28 Governor in "Fidelio"
29 Whatsis
30 Oriental
31 Merchandises
33 Incursions
36 White House pet
37 Intentions
39 Shock of hair
40 "And — a good night"
42 Bait fish
43 Landed property
45 Bridges
46 Bean counters, for short
47 Nothing, in Nantes
48 Egg shaped
49 Small weight
50 Assistant
51 Beckoned
53 John Law
54 Heavenly altar
55 Certain trains

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

N	A	R	P		F	E	V	E	R		A	S	T	A
O	R	A	L		R	E	G	I	N	A		T	O	R
R	E	N	O		O	N	T	A	P		A	D	A	M
A	L	I	A		T	I	E		S	T	E	I	N	S
			R	E	M	N	A	N	T		L	I	M	O
U	S	A	N	S	E	R	A	S	E		A	D	O	S
M	O	S	A	I	C		A	D	O	U
P	A	T	E		E	F	F		S	P	R	A	Y
S	T	A	I	R		P	A	N	T	A
			A	D	M	A	N	D	O	M
A	L	I	E	N	S		V	A	N	I	S	H
D	O	M		N	A	T	I	V	E		E	N	I	E
U	N	I	T		M	E		P	A	V	E
T	E	A	R		A	S	I	S		S	E	A	L

11/19/92



Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Jason George
Copy Editor ..... Lisa Donadio
PhotoTechnician ..... Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor ..... Seth Kaye
Production ..... Michele Bakis, Janet Riley, Mike Carvalho

Menu

LUNCH
Cheese & Macaroni
Hamburger on a Roll
BASICS LUNCH
Cheese & Macaroni
Humus Veggie Pocket
PUERTO RICAN NIGHT
REGULAR AND BASICS
DINNER
Chicken de Carlos
Spiced Shrimp

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the cartoonists and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian or the University.

■ U. Store

continued from page 1

"Privatizing the store would cut down on service, labor and inventory," he said. "As it stands now, the store is geared toward benefiting the students."

The University of New Hampshire has had a contract with Barnes and Noble for 10 years, and Anthony Zizos, director of business affairs, said privatizing has advantages.

"The biggest advantage is that a contracted company specializes in that type of work, and they have the expertise and know how," Zizos said.

"This could just happen with no say from anyone," Preston said. "And based on the information I have right now, some serious considerations must be undertaken before taking this step."

■ WOCH

continued from page 1

the station.

"Housing just did what they had to do. They had their standards, and we kept violating them," he said.

Claiming that the station until now has had too little policy on what DJs can and can't do, Baiter even suggested the shutdown may be a blessing in disguise, allowing the station to develop long overdue principles and guidelines.

"A lot of the [DJs] thought that just because they were on cable they could get away with anything. This decision will give us time to take a break, sit down with Housing, and establish a structure," Baiter said. "We'll have a better chance of operating as a credible organization now, because before there was no accountability."

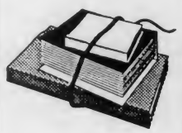
WOCH had been broadcasting 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and had over 100 DJs, each of whom guaranteed themselves a three-hour time slot by paying membership dues of $10 a semester or $15 a year. According to Baiter, this was among the few formal obligations of the DJs.

Miller echoed Baiter's feeling that WOCH had been operating with too few guidelines, and that more structure needed to be established.

"I think there's not enough in writing. There's a large group working at WOCH, and we have to make sure everyone knows what's inappropriate," she said.

A meeting between Housing Services officials and the station's executive board is planned for today, with the problems to be discussed and a set of standards established.

LaPorte said he hopes the station will be back on air by Thanksgiving.



What is a Textbook Buyback?

Three times during each semester the Textbook Annex brings in a wholesaler to buy textbooks from students. Wholesalers are in the business of selling used books to colleges and universities across the country. Therefore, in determining how much they will pay a student for a book they must consider the demand for that book as well as the shipping and handling costs involved in processing and reselling the book. This is why prices vary and indeed change frequently. Generally only current editions have value.

The best time to sell books is at the end of the semester. At that time the Annex will pay 50% of the new price for a book if we have an order for that book for the following semester and we need to purchase copies. If we do not, the wholesaler may make you an offer.

If you have questions please ask the people doing the buyback or the Annex staff. They will be more than happy to answer your questions and give you any tips that may be applicable to your situation.

*A Picture ID is Required for all Buyback Transactions.

When is the next Textbook Buyback?

The mid-semester Textbook Buyback is:

at the Textbook Annex:

Monday, November 23
9:00 am-4:00 pm

Tuesday, November 24
9:00 am-4:00 pm

Wednesday, November 25
9:00 am-1:00 pm

The end of the semester Textbook Buyback is:
DECEMBER 14 - DECEMBER 29

Grand Opening

November 1, 1992

THE MUG SHOT

Create your own Customized mug with your favorite picture or saylngs, or let us take your picture at our Hampshire Mall Location.
A great gift idea for friends, family or anyone.

Create a mugful of memories for a lifetime.

Coupon
Grand Opening
The Mug Shot
Coupon Value is $3.00 toward Purchase of a mug with Student ID.
Coupon Expires December 15, 1992

Winter Session 1993

Yes, you can!
Yes, you can!
So, do it!

Register for Winter Session classes.
Special enrollment restrictions do not apply for Winter Session.
So, if you're a UMass student, all you have to do is just sign up.

WINTER SESSION:

- a unique "mini-semester," just three weeks long
- earn 3 academic credits in only 3 weeks
- over 100 credit courses, including gen. ed. designated classes

Your chance to:

- take a class you couldn't get before
- make up credits
- meet graduation requirements
- lighten your spring course load

DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION

REGISTRATION BEGINS NOVEMBER 14.

Catalogs available on campus or at the Division of Continuing Education, 6th floor Goodell.

January 4-25

■ Scott's

continued from page 12

effects of Philly's nightly all you can drink specials.

• The Shirl's proposal to the Colorado Rockies entailing the acquisition of the entire Red Sox team apparently fell short.

The Shirl, a Thanksgiving tradition.

• It's very close to impossible to have a quarterback controversy on a team that's 1-9, but we thought it was impossible to fumble three times in a quarter as well.

• Their fine season was completed after a tough loss to Hartford, but UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy is still roaming Boyden screaming "Sa-Lad, Sa-Lad." Rudy's Beauties were physically overmatched but battled the Hawks tough, holding a 1-0 lead into the second half. Rudy will lose four key players to graduation, but with his Kiddie Korps in place, there'll be plenty of Sa-Lad next year.

• Maybe Will Herndon could help the Celtics. The Bird Transition has been tougher than expected.

• Dominique Wilkins is certainly back.

• Put UMass Football in the playoffs for the simple reason that they are 230 percent better than anyone predicted.

• Have the NHL PLayoffs already started?

• Keep your feet in bounds, your stuffing on your plate and your eyes on UMass field hockey.

David Scott is a Collegian columnist.

■ Minutewomen

continued from page 12

Massachusetts jumped out to an 11-0 start on the season and were ranked as high as No. 5 nationally. Things were clicking and the Minutewomen were confident. Then they dropped one to Hartford, came out flat and lost to unranked Providence and two games later got beat at Connecticut.

The team was reeling and with some tough games down the stretch, playoff hopes grew cloudy. One coach said he didn't think UMass would make it. He thought wrong.

UMass entered the NCAA quarterfinals at Connecticut as an underdog. The Connecticut press and fans were looking ahead to a big intra-state matchup between Hartford and UConn.

After 120 minutes of play UMass celebrated freshman Rachel LeDuc's overtime goal.

"A lot of people assumed we'd roll over and play dead in that game," Rudy said. "All season people underestimated how much we wanted to win. We surprised them. That's UMass soccer."

A surprise? Not to those that watched all season.

16-4. NCAA quarterfinals.

That's UMass soccer.

Case closed.

Sports Notice

Students can pick up their tickets for Sundays Men's Basketball game against Latvia today at the Curry Hicks Cage from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Students who have not picked up their Student Activity Cards also pick them up at the Cage.

SECOND HAND DANCE COMPANY

DON'T MISS THIS ZANY AND UPLIFTING DANCE TRIO!

Thursday, December 3 and Friday, December 4
8pm, Bowker Auditorium
Tickets: $18, $16
Five-College Students: $9, $8
Children 16 & under: $6

"THEIR HYPERACTIVE, IMAGINATIVE PIECES ARE BOISTEROUS, GYMNASTIC AND RAUCOUS, SOMEWHERE BETWEEN TROT-HOUSE PRANKS, MARTIAL ARTS AND HIGH ART."
- DANCE MAGAZINE

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

CALL 545-2511

COFFEE SHOP

Free 12 oz. Soda
with the purchase of a
Sandwich, Burger Entree or Large Salad
and this coupon

Coupon valid Mon., 11/16 through Fri., 11/20

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian • University of Massachusetts/Amherst
"New England's Largest College Daily"

Classifieds

FOR SALE
CLASSIFIEDS
– 20¢ per word per day for students
– Cash in advance
– Deadline: two days prior to publication
Mon. – Thurs. 8:30-3:30
Fri. 8:30-2:30
113 Campus Center
PERSONALS

- FOR SALE
- PERSONALS
- HELP WANTED
- LOST & FOUND
- ANNOUNCEMENTS
- FOR RENT
- ETC.

AIRLINE TICKETS

Fly home for Thanksgiving cheaper than ever before up to $100 off. Any fare going anywhere domestic or international. For more info call 518-767-7646

ACTIVITIES

Japan-America Club general meeting tonight 7:30 pm CC rm to be announced or ask info desk. All are welcome.

Multicultural Night
Come experience cultures from all over the world. International buffet $5 pre-paid, $6 at the door. Free entertainment. Saturday, Nov. 21 7 pm-11 pm Tickets available Friday on concourse.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bed and Breakfast downtown Amherst 549-0733

College Pro Painters will be having an information session on Thursday, Nov 19 in room 902 in the Campus Center. Find out about job opportunities from 7-9 pm on Thursday, or call Bernie at 549-5285.

Good tunes at The Hatchl
Boston Singer/Songwriter
Michael T.
Dillon, Neil Young, CSN, Beatles, John Lennon, Paul Simon, and more! A must-see for James Taylor fans! Friday 3-6 at the Hatch.

Spanish Speakers
Earn $$$
Need fluent Spanish speakers (Native or Non-native) for psychology reading study. Call Maria 545-0693

Subletting over intersession? Place your advertisement free of charge at off campus housing, room 428 Student Union. You may also list over the phone. Call 545-0865

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 Nissan Sentra 5 speed AM/FM cassette. Good condition. $1895 253-9725

1985 Renault Encore 78K mi new tires, new slicker & tune up $1650/bo Julia at 549-7456

TRADE 83 Nissan pickup for functional motorcycle. Needs some work call 549-3662.

COLLEGE PIZZA

Fall Special
Small Cheese $3.50
Large Cheese $6.00
1 or 2 Toppings Add $1.00
Free Soda with large
sub salad or spaghetti
549-6098
549-8073
Must mention this ad!

ENTERTAINMENT

Magic Mike Magician now booking Children/adult birthday/Christmas
10+ years experiance, ref, avail.
253-4165 UMass student

FOR RENT

Amherst 3 bedroom condo avail Feb. 1st. A room and one bedroom apartment avail Jan. 1st.
Lincoln Real Estate
25 No. Pleasant St. 253-7879

Amherst-Belchertown line 3 to 5 bedroom homes on bus route call 586-4270

Amherst remodeled 6rm 4 bedroom apt on bus route minutes from campus $899/mo 256-0741

Live in Northampton Looking for tenants to take over lease of a spacious 3 rm Havan located in lovely downtown Northampton. Rent includes heat only. $50 a month. Lease this house while you can it's hot. 586-3208

One room in 3 bedroom Pulton Apartment Rent 226/mo Plus
Available January 1 1993 to June 30 1993 Call Anna 549-7718 in evening before 11pm

1 bdrm apt in Puffton. Move in now $434 (includes heat) Mins from campus 549-0450

FOR SALE

Albinar telephoto lens 135mm Like new condition Bayonet mount $80 BO 545-1028 or 253-2018

For sale Ski Boots
Sanmarko CS 155
Stiffness, flex and cant adjustments
Great Condition
Size 11 $80 or BO
Call Allan at 256-8751

Guitar Amp
PV Ballstage 30
$100 Call John 549-0838

Nintendo with Cartridges
4 Sport games
$250 or BO
Call Mark 6-3502

Ski Boots
Raichla size 10
Like new $80/BO
Greg 6-3968

Tendy 200 Portable computer 2 Power Packs + case + manuals
Call Mitch 548-9761 $450 O.B.O

Tendy 1000 with modum $300 or BO Call Ahmed 256-1064

HELP WANTED

Earn Easy Money!!!
Post our brochures around campus and receive commission for each completed application. Work few hours, on your own time. Call 1-800-758-9918 EST

Easy Work!! Excellent pay! Assemble products at home! Call Toll Free
1-800-467-6226 Ext. 598

Free trips and money!!! Individuals and student organizations wanted to promote the hottest Spring Break destinations, call the nation's leader. Inter-campus programs 1-800-327-6013

INTERNATIONAL EMPLOYMENT

Make $2000+ per month teaching English abroad. Japan and Taiwan. Many provide room & board & other benefits! Financially & culturally rewarding! For program Call: (206) 632-1146 ext. J5001

JOBS! Do you have excellent communication skills? If so, then UMass telefund is tha job for you! Flexible hours, good pay, and great experiance, come down to the basement of Memorial Hall for an application or call 545-3509

Typist is needed part time to work on Macintosh computer. Call Reza for an appointment 549-3840

Wented: Travel Reps for spring break. Established company with many years experience. Earn money on spare time and free trip to Cancun. Call 1-800-3SIESTA ask for Bonnie

LOST

An earring containing 7 white stones set in gold shaped as a hexagon. Was lost on Monday sixteenth. Most likely places are at the computer center of campus center. The earring is of great sentimantal value. Findar will be rewarded. Please phone 545-1947 or 548-6357.

Lost brown oriental emulet onstring strong sentimental value if found call Kim 256-3084

Silver Motel Frames - square shaped sunglasses – big reward
David 549-0627

PERSONALS

Girl in blue sweater
I saw you Monday in the Hatch
You smiled, I want to get to know you
I'm tha brown/haired guy in the striped shirt Meet me today at 12:30 in the Hatch

Happy Happy Birthday
Vital
Love
The Evil One

Michael O.
Do you like cornbread?
Sloth is evil

Razzle
You are our only one!
Happy 21st Birthday!
Love,
Kristin & Maureen

Roiend
Happy 21st Birthday
I hope you have blast
and don't get too oblivious
Love,
Your little Sis
PS I owe you dinner

Steph "Sunshine" Randazzo,
Happy 21st Birthday
No Punch for you tonight!
Phi Lova,
The girls down under

ROOMATES WANTED

Female to share large room 187.50 call 665-7604

Great Apartment 5 min. Walk to campus or "downtown"/good equippad and furnished avail. mid December/rent start Jan. 549-8024

Male roomate needed to take over Brandywine lease ASAP or by Jan. 1 $188 Month + utilities Call Jon 549-8584

Nice room in cool house
Jan 1 (NEG) to May 31
Orchard Valley area 230+
Lv. msg for Mike 549-1606

Puffton
161.50 EA!
Big room, for 2
Bathroom
Walkthrough closet
549-8390

2 fun girls needed to share 1 large bedroom in 3 bedroom puffton apartment Great location new rug 549-0939

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need Help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and confidential, caring help. Amherst Carriage Shops, 549-1906

Ski Tuning
Sharpening, Waxing
Base Repair
Only $8
Call Allan or Mike at 258-8751

Tarot Readings
Call Chris 256-0821

SPORTS CARDS

SportStop Cards
Coming Dec. 1st
Mountain Farms Mall

TO SUBLET

Sublet wanted for wintersession w/ possible option to lease for Spring semester in quiet Amherst/Northampton place. Call Ed 546-0758

TRAVEL

Save on spring break '93 Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, Florida from $119! Book early, save $$$!! Group discounts!! 1-800 426-7710

SKI – Intercollegiate ski weeks only $209. Includes: 5 day lift ticket/5 nights lodging (Mountainside condo)/5 days intercollegiate activities (Drinking age 18), sponsored by Labatts, Molson and Mr. Sutton, Canada (Just across the Vermont border) group leader discount Jan. 3-8, Jan. 10-15 and Springbreak '93. Call Ski Travel Unlimited 1-800 999 SKI-9.

TYPING/WORD PROC.

Papers Typed – Free cover page, spell check. $1.25/page. Brian 546-1795.

Typing - Word Processing
Resumes, reports, theses, dissertations.
Laser Printing
Call Rosemary 323-5031

Typing $1/pg 24 hr. turnaround 586-5268.

Sports

Hixon honored with award

Field hockey coach named regional coach of the year

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts field hockey coach Pam Hixon Tuesday was named the 1992 Northeast Regional Coach-of-the-Year as selected by Northeast region coaches.

Hixon has led the Minutewomen to a 21-1 record, a number three ranking and a slot in the NCAA Division I Final Four. UMass meets No. 2 Iowa (19-0) in the NCAA Field Hockey Tournament semifinals on Saturday at 2:45 p.m. The other semifinal will have No. 1 Old Dominion (23-0) pitted against North Carolina (14-6-1) at 12 noon.

The National Championship game will be held on Sunday at 1 p.m. Both the semifinals and final will take place at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond.

This weekend's trip will be Hixon's fourth in her 15 years of coaching at UMass. In three previous appearances in the Final Four, she led UMass to a second place finish in 1981 and two third place showings in 1983 and 1987. Overall, Hixon has led the Minutewomen to each of the last 12 tournaments since the tourney's inception in 1981, the only coach in the country to accomplish this feat.

In her 15 seasons at UMass, Hixon has compiled a 236-64-18 record (.770 winning percentage) and has won two Atlantic 10 Tournaments in 1988 and 1992. Hixon was named the National Coach of the Year in 1981.

This year, Hixon received the A-10 Coach of the year for the third year in a row and fourth in the last five. She is a member of the U.S. National Coaching staff and has been a head coach at six Olympic festivals (1981, 1983, 1986, 1987, 1989 and 1990).

The other regional Coach-of-the-Year honorees are as follows: Missy Meharg, Maryland (Mid-Atlantic region); Char Morett Newman, Penn State (Mid-East region); Beth Beglin, Iowa (Midwest-West region); and Jackie Silar, Duke (South region).

Final Four notes: Both midfielder Colleen Duffy and Tracy Barclay were injured in last Sunday's 1-0 victory against Penn State. Duffy suffered a mild sprain of her left ankle while Barclay broke her nose when hit by a defender's stick.

Believe it or not, Hixon thinks Duffy's injury is worse. "Of course Tracy will play this weekend, but we're watching Colleen carefully because we're more concerned about her. She was on crutches as a precaution [on Monday], and we'll just wait and see.

For the first time in four years, UMass was not matched in Old Dominion's bracket. The Minutewomen have not beaten the Monarchs since 1987 and will only play them if both teams win or lose.

That's Minutewomen soccer

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

At last season's breakup luncheon, University of Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy ended by saying, "This year we kept coming and came back for more. Next year we'll keep coming until the Final Four."

For a man who claims to hate predictions, Rudy couldn't have been much closer to being right on the money.

The 1992 Minutewomen ended their season Sunday at the University of Hartford (in a 2-1 loss) just one break away from proving their coach correct.

In a game which Massachusetts played well enough to win, the team accentuated their strong points — heart, dedication, teamwork and an uncompromising will to win.

"If I had one word to describe this year's team it would be perseverance," Rudy said. "No matter what happened, we fought on."

Senior forward and leading scorer Kim Eynard said, "We played for each other. We didn't have any individuals, just a team."

Case in point, for most of the season Rudy rotated his two All-American caliber goalkeepers Briana Scurry and Skye Eddy. At midseason, with UMass in the midst of a slight funk, Eddy volunteered to play forward and made an immediate impact up front by scoring the game winner against Vermont.

"When Skye went up front it was the turning point of the season for us," Rudy said. "To help the team, she offered to give up something (goalkeeping) which everyone knew was of a great importance to her. Everyone got their priorities together at that point. That's UMass soccer."

Massachusetts went on to win four in a row, including three road games against top ten teams.

All season UMass won because of skilled goaltending, a stifling defense, timely goal scoring and the fact that they usually wanted it more than their opponents. Even when they didn't win, their drive was evident.

Case in point — against Hartford junior forward Colleen Milliken played her best game of the year. She had no goals and no assists but she embarrassed the Hawk defense on a number of plays.

Milliken's not particularly fast, and she's not particularly big, but for 90 minutes she went around, through and over bigger and faster Hartford defenders like they weren't even there.

"Colleen stepped up and gave a big performance right when we needed her to," Rudy said. "She was absolutely terrific. She tore it up. That's UMass soccer."

Turn to MINUTEWOMEN, page 11

Scott's shots

The beard is gone, but the mustache remains as a constant reminder to those of you who doubted the ability of the Cardiac Kids from Foxboro.

The Pats could be driving the Cadi-Zo-Lak to the playoffs with some help from the wild card dealer.

• Our visit to the City That Rocky Built for the Atlantic Ten Minus Two Media Day, provided some early hoop season gems. Throw the Teamsters, some sportswriters and A-10 coaches in the same hotel and the ensuing melee went something like this:

David
SCOTT

• The Cravat King contest could be spinning out of control with new entrants cropping up every day. Coach Cal isn't the only A-10 helmsmen with sweet silks hanging from his neck and regardless of team talent, there's a tight three-way race shaping up in the A-8.

Challenging Cal on the sidelines is UMass alum and Rhode Island coach Al Skinner, who held back nothing with his fancy print, but Skinner could be at a disadvantage as the season "wears" on — he's limited by tie shops in Rhode Island.

West Virginia's Gale Catlett had basketballs bouncing on his neck flag and theme ties are big point-getters, but Catlett too has a disadvantage, namely he's the only guy in West Virginia who buys ties.

• Media Day marked the first leg of Hampshire Gazette sports scribe Milt Cole's Farewell Tour. With stops all across the Eastern seaboard, Milt's Long Goodbye could outdo Kareem's syanara. Of course Milt has a better sky hook than Abdul-Jabbar.

• Mark January 28 on the calender and be in The Cage when Joannie O'Brien's Lady Hoopsters upset pre-season favorite St. Joseph's. You read it here first.

• The throng of scribes surrounding Coach Cal was certainly a sight to see — just ask UMass Sports Information Director Howie Davis.

"I used to have to pay reporters to go over to our table," Davis laughed. The times they are a changin'.

• Give Temple coach John Chaney the award for most poignant commentary at Media Day. His commentary on the state of the A-10, recruiting wars and the condition of Philly in general was truly enlightening.

• The second annual Turkey Blowout takes place this coming Sunday in Montague just around the time the Pats are putting win No. 2 under their belt.

• Let's give some credit to Mike Fagerson, the Johnny Most of UMass Football, for his thoroughly entertaining season-long play-by-play on the AM dial. His bone-chilling "AN-DREW MC-NEILLY," is still echoing in my head, or maybe that's the after

Turn to SCOTT'S, page 11

Field hockey's Ainslee Press import of the year

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

There is simply no way to describe the impact that midfielder Ainslee Press has had on the University of Massachusetts field hockey team.

If she was an automobile, she'd be the import of the year.

The senior transfer from Mississuaga, Ontario has been a leader both on and off the field, leading the team with 25 goals in 22 games. She has given the team experience and maturity that it has needed and will need in the Final Four this weekend when the Minutewomen play Iowa at 2:45 p.m. Saturday at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond.

It was a stroke of luck that Press even came to Amherst, and if not for the decision of the Canadian Olympic team, she might have never come.

Press played four years in Canada at the University of Toronto, winning a national championship. She had been on the Junior Canadian National or Canadian National teams since the time she was 16.

After training hard for the 1992 Canadian Olympic team, Press was the seventeenth woman on a 16-woman squad. She was the last cut on the team, and her disappointment led her to look south at the United States and, eventually, UMass.

"From what I understand, Ainslee was disappointed at not making the Canadian Olympic team," said head coach Pam Hixon. "She was looking for a real change of pace and looking for high competition outside of Canada."

"I've always wanted to play in the NCAAs, and I had one year left of eligibility," Press said. "I sat out last year which meant I could transfer and play right away.

"It was a combination of reasons which led me to UMass. Academically, I could transfer my credits. Athletically, the reputation of Pam Hixon was a big factor. On the phone, I got along with her within seconds of talking to her."

Press has been a great two-way player for the Minutewomen. Not only is she able to score on corners, strokes and in the field, she also has a unique vision of the field which enables her to pass to open teammates.

"I think we were a good team but having Ainslee come in was what we needed to give us the extra punch to add to the team," Colleen Duffy said. "She distrubutes the ball well and she complements the team."

Press leads the UMass penalty corner by acting as the hitter, and is responsible for most of the 19 goals UMass has amassed from the corner. Two weeks ago, she was rewarded with Atlantic 10 Co-Player of the Year.

Time and time again, Press has stepped up in critical points in games to take penalty strokes for the Minutewomen. Her game-winning stroke on the road against Villanova is legendary among her teammates.

"It was double overtime against Villanova, and she made the penalty stroke despite the pressure," said Duffy.

"The game would have ended in a tie and she totally came through," teammate Danielle Borges added. "There was so much pressure but she just stepped right up and made it like there was no problem. It was incredible."

Press has not only helped the team, but they in turn have taught her things about UMass field hockey like the importance of rivalries against Northeastern and Temple.

"That's one of the benefits of this team," she said. "The seniors have really led. They've passed on so much. They make me feel like I played last year, I've felt the pain they've felt.

Although she has only played for Massachusetts for one season, Press has left an indelible impression on her teammates and coach.

"Ainslee is not only an awesome player but she complements the team with how hard she works," said Borges. "She's the best person on and off the field. We don't want her to go back to Canada."

"She a positive influence. She's always very supportive of her teammates," said Hixon. "It would've been great to have her for another five years."

For Press, there are no regrets.

"This will be the ultimate way to end it for me," she said. "As of Sunday, I will be done playing hockey. I won't play again. I'm really happy I'm going to end it with this group of people."

CHRIS EVANS / COLLEGIAN STAFF
Ainslee Press has helped lead the University of Massachusetts field hockey team to a 20-1 record and a birth in the Final Four.

BIM SKALA BIM

Bim Skala Rockin' the Pioneer Valley

By BILL ROGERS
Collegian Staff

Having just finished a recent tour of the U.K., the red-hot world famous seven member band from Somerville, Bim Skala Bim, will be rock skala rockin' the Pioneer Valley tonight at Pearl Street in Northampton.

The group was formed in 1985 with the intent of playing Caribbean influenced dance music (ska, reggae and calypso). Bim is filled right to the top with some extremely talented musicians, including several members who are graduates of some of the best music schools in the country: Julliard, Berklee and the New England Conservatory.

Bim together write and arrange their own music. This allows for a wide array of musical influences to blend into a working mixture that has come to be known as "Caribbean Rock."

The band's 10 track debut album, Bim Skala Bim (Fonograff-1986), is just the tip of the iceberg. Bim holds a collection of more than 50 original songs encompassing a wide spectrum of music. At one end is "Cool Love," a short-but-sweet reggae groove with a hyper-fast version of "Sunshine Of Your Love" at the other end.

Their second album, Tuba City (Celluloid Records) has as much intensity, fire power and variety as one of their many live shows and features ska, reggae and "mutant cross-breeding," which is a distinct musical style invented and used only by Bim. In addition to the band's own music, they also help put out Mash It Up, a compilation of some of the best ska and reggae bands in the Boston area.

Just this year, Bim released Bones, a 10 track album that shakes and rattles down to the very soul with haunting reggae and howling rock colliding with savage ska and screaming boogie. In addition, "Golden Arm" (track #4) was featured in the new Warren Miller ski movie, Extreme Dream.

This distinct sound that has soared to popularity is produced by seven very talented musicians: lead vocalist Dan Vitale, vocalist/trombone player Vincent Nobile, saxophonist/piano player John Cameron, bass player Mark Ferranti and drummers Jim Arhelger and Rick Barry. Together, they have played with such greats as Ziggy Marley and Fishbone. They also played two sold out shows at the recent International Ska Music Festival.

Bim Skala Bim will be rock skala rockin' the Pioneer Valley tonight at Pearl Street in Northampton. Tickets are $6 in advance and can be purchased at Tix Unlimited in the Student Union and the Northampton Box Office (586-8686). The show is open to those 18 and over and will begin at 8:30.

THIS WEEKEND

The zip where everyone is unzipped

By CUTTER GARCIA
and ARTHUR STAPLETON
Collegian Staff

This is part II of a series in which our intrepid reporters are exploring the exciting world of high school life in Beverly Hills, 90210.

Cutter Garcia: I can't believe the responses we've been getting to part one of our series, Art! I knew that we had our fair share of readers but I was shocked at the volume.
Arthur Stapleton: O.K., Cutter, the responses were good, but I think we should delve right into the show, especially last week's episode of "90210." It was funny how the cries of excitement and laughter echoed through the halls of Patterson as Brenda and Kelly were close to brawling. To tell you the truth, I was psyched to see a cat fight.

But, of course, stud-boy Dylan and that clown we met in France, Rick, were the peace-makers. Give me a break!
CG: Yesss! I was in a room filled with guys and when the two couples met at the door we were all on our feet cheering for the two of them to get busy. There's something so. . . about a girl fight. All slaps and scratches and pulling hairs. . . but we were sadly left hanging when they chickened out, thanks in part to that wonderful date-mediator Rick.

What the heck is up with this guy? If I was with a girl I'd dated twice, three months ago, and while going out to dinner we just happened to run into her ex-boyfriend whom she broke up with 27 minutes earlier, and he was romantically involved with her best friend; well I'm sure that my first reaction would quite naturally be, "Hey! Why don't we all just sit down and discuss this over a cup of coffee!" No way! I'd be heading for the hills.
AS: Which is exactly where Dylan was heading at the end of last week's episode. What is this, The Sound of Music? Seeing Dylan rolling around in the grass with a mysterious girl basically shows the reality of this show. Ha! I thought that this guy finally found his sweetheart in Kelly, then the next day he runs away because of his SAT's.

He's so dumb he won't get into a real school anyway! I don't know about you, Cutter, but when I took my college boards, they checked some sort of ID. How can the proctors not remember the Dylan McKay?
CG: I myself had to leave finger prints, a copy of my birth records and a stool sample for verification. But don't worry Arthur, Mr. McKay will build U-HoDads for him when he gets out of prison for his stock violations and all the Beus will end up going there.

Steve will major in Locksmithing, Brandon in Home Economics, Dave in Radio Broadcasting, Kelly in Ornithology (If it looks like a duck. . .), Andrea in Elderly care, Donna in Nepotism Studies and of course Brenda will major in Whining. But it'll all be O.K. because at least they'll be reunited. I can see it now, Beverly Hills 90210 — Freshman Year!". It's a sad, sad world.
AS: Finally, let's talk about our favorite, sad Beverly Hills snob, Brenda. When she first moved from the Twin Cities to the Hills, she was nothing more than a prima-donna. Over the short span of three seasons, however, Brenda has done a complete turn-around, looking and acting like more of a snot than Kelly Taylor ever was.

Brenda's parents pamper her like she is the second coming. No wonder she whines so much. Just like Pavlov's dogs, the Mom and Dad Walsh's react to every whimper of their darling daughter. Hey, Brenda, take advice from the Stones: "You can't always get what you want!"
CG: Out of fairness to Kelly I think we should consider that her training for the Snot crown was hampered by her trying to deal with her mother's coke habit, but as for Brenda — I agree with your observation Art.

In my house, if I was dating somebody that my parents hated and thought was extremely bad for me it would've gone something like this, "If you continue to see her you will be living on the street and eating gum from under desks. End of discussion."

In the Walsh house, however, it's, "Hmmn? She has repeatedly disobeyed us and slapped us in the face with her blatant insubordination. What should we do to punish her? How about if we just send her off to France for the summer and pay for it? I bet that'll teach her a thing or two, little miss smarty-pants!"
AS: Now it is time, Cutter, for the amazing responses you referred to at the opening. First of all, I know, and some of the intelligent people at the Collegian know, that the by-line reads: Cutter Garcia. Still, proving that not all of *U*Mass is intelligent, someone named "Jennyy" from Southwest addressed you as Mr. Cutter.

The writer then told us that Kelly "is a lonely, lost, confused teenager who needs affection." Hey, we didn't say she shouldn't get some lovin', just not from so many people!
CG: I was truly amazed that we had managed to touch such a raw nerve in the student body. The fact was most evident when you ranked on Steve. Jennyy writes, "What is so wrong with Steve? I bet you're just two are just jealous. Yeah, that's right! You're just jealous because all the chicks think he's hot, and I'm safely assuming that you're not!" Well, you know what they say about assuming Jennyy; "When you assume you make an 'ass' out of yourself." I'm sorry your life is so bleak Jenn, but keep staying in your room and watching TV. That ought to help.

Another student named Dan H. said, "I can't believe that you were so harsh on B.H., it's a cool show man! It's the only show out there that I can truly watch and enjoy every week. It's not about being rich, it's about the confusion of being young and alone in the world and the troubles that go along with becoming a young adult. It's a really cool show and I think you'd feel the same way if you just gave it a little bit of a chance."

TURN TO 90210, PAGE 4

"Thank you for your patronage."
The Krupczak Family
4 Seasons
ROUTE 9, HADLEY 584-8174
between Route 47 and 9 Florida Plaza
DISCOUNT LIQUORS • BEER • WINE
KEGS • AND ICE

Sam Adams Ale/Lager 24/12 oz bott. $17.99 + dep.	M/D 20/20 all flavors .750ml $2.00
Becks 24/12 oz bott. $16.99 + dep.	Cisco - All Flavors 750 ml $2.50
MICHELOB 24/12 oz bott. $12.99 + dep.	Purple Passion 1.5 L $3.50
BUD Dry Bar Botts. $11.99 + dep.	ICE!! 10 lbs. $1.00 50 lbs. $4.50
Busch Bar Bottles case $9.49 + dep.	1/2 bbl KEGS!! Natural Lt ..... 32.90 +dep Busch ..... 38.99 +dep Miller, MGD & Lt 38.99 +dep
Olympia 24/12 oz. cans $7.99 + dep.	Plus Many More!! Nobody Beats Our Prices!
Pabst Bar botts. $7.99 + dep.	Jim Beam .750 ml $7.99
American 24/12 oz cans $7.29 + dep.	Carolans Irish Cream .750 ml $8.99
Narragansett 24/12 oz cans $7.29 + dep.	Popov Vodka 1.75L $9.99
Tired of stores with BAD ATTITUDES? At 4 Seasons you'll be treated with gratitude! And . . .	Southern Comfort 750 ml $7.99
WE DELIVER	4 Seasons Vodka 1.75 L $8.99
	VSQ Brandy .750ml $7.99

Prices effective thru 12/2/92 • Not responsible for Typos • VISA MASTERCARD Excluded on Sale Items
HOURS: Mon.-Sat. 9-11 • 10% Senior Discount Everyday
Keg deposits Held Up to 30 Days on VISA, MASTERCARD, CHECK, CASH

"Our True Nationality is Man Kind" H.G. Wells
INTERNATIONAL UMASS STUDENTS ASSOCIATION
MultiCultural Night
NOVEMBER 21ST 7-11PM
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
UMASS AMHERST
DINNER $6 AT DOOR, $5 PRE PAID
FREE ENTERTAINMENT
SPONSORED BY INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS ASSOCIATION

The following PHYSICS COURSES were Inadvertantly omitted from the preregistration guidebook. These courses will be offered in Spring 93.

Course Name	Course #	Time	Location
Physics 117 (PS)	555199	MWF 9:05	Has. 228
Physics 556	562249	TuTh 9:30	LGRT 1033
Physics 390A	560092	By Arrangement
Physics 715	563333	MWF 1:25	LGRT 1334

PIONEER BOWLING CENTER, INC.
2 West Street, West Hatfield
Massachusetts 01088
247-9506
STUDENT SPECIAL
Every night
Call ahead for availability
99¢ per string with 5-College I.D.
Easy To Get To!
A Perfect Night Out For Friends & Dates
300 Club Lounge For Patrons • 21 yrs. w/I.D.

DOMINO'S PIZZA
NOBODY KNOWS LIKE DOMINO'S
How You Like Pizza At Home.
Amherst 256-8911
South Hadley 535-1111
HOURS: SUN-THURS 11AM to 2AM
FRI-SAT 11AM to 3AM
AVAILABLE FOR CARRY-OUT OR DELIVERY
FREE DELIVERY
NOW ACCEPTING VISA DELIVERY IN SELECTED AREAS

LUNCH SPECIAL
GOOD 11AM to 3PM
MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA+ ONE TOPPING+ 2 FREE COKES $5.99
ADDITIONAL TOPPINGS EXTRA ONLY
LARGE CHEESE PIZZA ONE TOPPING PLUS 4 FREE COKES $7.99
ADDITIONAL TOPPINGS EXTRA ONLY

BUY A LARGE CHEESE PIZZA FOR THE PRICE OF A SMALL

MEDIUM CHEESE PIZZA for $4.99 or 2 for $8.99

BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA & GET SECOND OF EQUAL OR LESSER VALUE FOR ONLY $1.99

LARGE CHEESE PIZZA $5.99

WEEKEND HAPPENINGS
Calendar of events in the 5 College Area

COURTESY OF MHC DEPT. OF DANCE
The Mount Holyoke College Faculty Dance Concert will run tonight through Saturday.

THURSDAY

THEATRE — The UMass Theatre Department livens up the Shakespeare classic, A Midsummer Night's Dream as they set this comedy in the Caribbean. Runs tonight through Sunday, 8 p.m. Shows at Bowker Auditorium. $6 general/$4 students. 545-2511.

DANCE CONCERT — Mount Holyoke College Faculty Dance Concert to be held tonight through Saturday, 8 p.m. Performances to be held in the Studio Theatre, Kendall Hall. $5 general/$3 students, seniors and children. Reservations necessary, 586-3100 ext. 2848.

IN CONCERT — Quetzal will produce their exuberant Latin tunes tonight at the Iron Horse in Northampton. 7 p.m. Tickets $8 in advance. 586-8686.

READING — Residential Arts to sponsor an evening of fiction and poetry through "Out of Bounds," a Visual Arts outreach endeavor. The program features original fiction and poetry by MFA students Karen Condon and Frank Johnson, and complements exhibitions scheduled at both Hampden and Wheeler galleries. The reading at Hampden Gallery begins at 7 p.m. and will be followed by a reception. Free.

FILM/VIDEO — Law of Desire, a passionately erotic film by Pedro Almodovar will be shown tonight at the Campus Center Room 903. 7 p.m. Free.

IN CONCERT — Bim Skala Bim, ska/reggae/calyso melody-makers will perform their Caribbean influenced dance music tonight at Pearl Street. With appearances by artists such as Ziggy Marley, Bad Manners and Fishbone under their belts, Bim is more than ready to rock the valley. 18+ fans be there at 8:30. Call 584-7771 for more info/tix.

EXHIBIT — The Barnes Gallery at Leverett Crafts and Arts presents "Global Revisions: A Retrospective." This work by James Powell presents images of past and present flags and maps, and urges the viewer to examine their world view and perspective of location in time and space. The exhibit celebrates National Geography Awareness Week, and will run until Nov. 29. A multimedia presentation and reception will be held tonight from 6-8 p.m. 548-9070 for more info.

THEATRE — The Hampshire Shakespeare Company will present a platform reading of Carrie, a new play by nationally renowned playwrite Jack Gilooley. A discussion will follow the play, which is based on Theodore Dreiser's novel, Sister Carrie. Hampden Theatre, 8 p.m. $2.

LECTURE — "Words and Concepts in the Bilingual Mind" will be discussed by Judy Kroll of Mount Holyoke College. SC Bass Hall 210. 4:10 p.m. Free.

FILM — Corliss Lamont Arts Project, Program 4, "Confronting the War Within" to be presented. Tonight's segment will include two films to be part of this year-long series of events. The Journey, Vol. 5 will present an Australian family discussing media and nuclear industry. Nostalghia will tell the story of a Russian poet studying in Italy who ponders the end of the world. AC Stirn Auditorium, Mead Art Museum. Films start 7 & 9 p.m. respectively. Free.

THEATRE — Those zany folks over at Hampshire Independent Productions present The UnAmericans, an original play about the blacklisting of workers in the motion picture industry during the McCarthy era. Runs tonight through Sunday at HC Main Dance Studio, 8 p.m., $2. Call 549-4600 ext. 226 for more info.

LECTURE — 500 Years of Constructing the Caribbean Lecture Series: "Will the Real San Salvador Please Stand Up — The Columbus Landfall Debate" will be presented by Charles A. Hoffman, Anthropology, Northern Arizona University. HC Franklin Patterson Hall, East Lecture Hall, 7:30 p.m. Free.

FILM— Death in Venice, the story of an aging German composer who finds his dormant emotions reawakened by a pretty young boy. This 1971 Luchino Visconti classic will play at AC's Merrill II, 4 & 7:30 p.m. Free.

FRIDAY

IN CONCERT — UMass grad students of the band Frances Gumm will perform tracks off of their new album tonight at Sheehan's Cafe in NoHo. For more info call the cafe at 586-4258.

FILM — Sherman's March, Ross McElwee's unique documentary odyssey in which a perfectionist walks right onto the screen and into the Civil War South will be shown tonight. Sponsored by Second Sight Film Collective, a nominal admission fee will get you into this brilliant, humorous work. HC Franklin Patterson Hall, 7:30 p.m.

IN CONCERT — One Eyed Jake and Bark Like a Dog will jam, rock and roll at Pearl Street until they can't jam, rock and roll no more. Don't miss this opportunity to hang out with people your mom told you to stay away from. 8:30 p.m. 584-7771 info/tix.

COMMUNITY — Chabad House sponsors a Shabbat Service and Dinner to focus upon "Finding the right one: love and marriage Jewish-style." 6 p.m. Free. 549-4094.

IN CONCERT — The University of Massachusetts Wind Ensemble and Symphony Band will present works by American, French and British composers. Under the direction of Malcolm W. Rowell, Jr., the group will play compositions including Percy Grainger's Colonial Song, Ellen Zwilich's Ceremonies, Darius Milhaud's Suite Francaise, Nicholas Maw's American Games and William Schuman's New England Triptych. FAC Concert Hall, 8 p.m. $8/$4 for students, elders and children. 545-2511.

COURTESY STUDENT VALLEY PRODUCTIONS
MISSION: IMPROVABLE, performing at the SVP Fall Arts Festival this Friday.

DANCE — Dance the night away to golden oldies of the '50s through the '70s as the Amherst College "R" Committee takes you back in time. All 21+ welcome to AC's Valentine Hall Annex from 8 p.m.-12:30 a.m. $3.

IN CONCERT— Texas singer/songwriter Tish Hinojosa brings her Mexican-American roots and spiritual tunage to the Iron Horse tonight at 7 p.m. $8.50 will get you into this rockin' good time, that will also feature early Jefferson Airplanish Knots & Crosses. 586-8686 is the key to knowledge and tickets.

COMMUNITY — A Transformation Vigil will offer an opportunity for healing, to become transformed from victim into a survivor of sexual abuse, assault and harassment. MHC Skinner Green, 7 p.m. Free.

IN CONCERT — Jessel Murray will direct The Smith College Student Orchestra to present a Fall concert. This performance constitutes the first concert of the newly re-established Student Orchestra, which last performed more than a decade ago. Benjamin Britten's Simple Symphony for string orchestra, Franz Schubert's Symphony No. 5, the Coriolan Overture by Beethoven and Eight Russian Folk Songs for Orchestra by Anton Liadov will be performed. Sweeney Concert Hall of Sage Hall, SC. 8 p.m. Free.

STORYTELLING — The Western New England Storyteller's Guild will present "Under the Harvest Moon: An Evening of Shining Tales" with Michael Evans, Tim Van Egmond and Rochelle Wildfrong. These storytellers will read stories of the harvest, the moon, giving thanks, Autumn and season change at the Hooker/Dunham Theatre in Brattleboro tonight, and at the Northampton Center for the Arts tomorrow. Both readings begin at 8 p.m. $7 seniors, $4 children. 367-0101 for more info/reservations.

THEATRE — "Mission: Improvable," UMass' one and only improvisational theatre/comedy to perform their zany, audience-interactive humor at the Student Valley Productions Fall Arts Festival. 8 p.m., Hampden Theatre. Free.

SATURDAY

IN CONCERT — Lucinda Williams will perform songs off of her debut album, "Sweet Old World" tonight at Pearl Street. Rooted in traditional Cajun, Delta blues, country and R & B forms, Williams' music is clear, no-frills, perfectly aimed work that goes straight to the heart. 21+ fans welcome, doors open at 7 p.m. 584-7771.

BOOKSIGNING — Local author/illustrators Eshu Bumpus and Micha Archer will be at Food For Thought Books in Amherst to sign their new book, Animales/Animals: A Spanish-English Activity. Using Spanish and English throughout, the 14 instructional lessons support learning in language arts, science, geography, story writing, art and Spanish language and culture. Blank pages are provided for children's own creative expression. 1-2:30 p.m. Free. 253-5432 for more info.

MULTICULTURAL — A Multicultural night to offer entertainment from different parts of the world as well as an International Dinner Buffet will be sponsored by the International Students Association. Event to run 7-11 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. $5 in adv./$6 at door. Call Martha at 253-0522 for more info.

IN CONCERT — Mark Kross Trio, a Boston-based jazz pianist will do his thing tonight at the Iron Horse in NoHo. 586-8686 for more info/tix or just to say hi.

GALLERY TALK — "Charles Sheeler's Rolling Power and Drive Wheels," by Cynda Benson, NEA Intern, will be presented at SC's Museum of Art. 2 p.m. Free.

FILM — Who's Afraid Of Virginia Woolf, starring Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton will play tonight at MHC's Gamble Auditorium. This tale of tow couples who get together for an all-nighter of bitter exchanges won six Oscars, and is brought to you by the MHC Film Society for a mere $2.50. 7 & 9:30 p.m.

COMMUNITY — ASA Filipino Intercollegiate Dialogue Party. All Five College students invited to MHC's Blanchard Campus Center for a dialogue and social gathering. 10 p.m.-2 a.m., $3/$2 with ID.

IN CONCERT— As part of Student Valley Production's Fall Arts Festival electric and acoustic whiz-band Acoustic Panic will play. 8 p.m. in Hampden Theatre. Free.

SUNDAY

CAFE SERIES — The UMass Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns sponsors a cafe, with a to-be-announced program focus. 7:30 p.m., Hampden Theatre. $3 donation requested.

IN CONCERT — The Springfield Symphony Orchestra Chorus will present a winter recital under the direction of Lucinda Thayer, conductor. For more information call 733-2291.

BENEFIT CONCERT — The Northampton Country Club sponsors a benefit concert for Cindy Krescondo and Nicole Dyson. Survivors of Bill Dyson, who was killed in a plane crash earlier this year, Krescondo and Dyson will receive the proceeds from this all-you-can-eat buffet and concert. Bands The Bombastics, The Big Bad Bollocks, Free Press and Who's Kiddin Who, along with others will perform. $7 admission for this 2 p.m.-midnight event. 585-8779 more info.

GOSPEL CONCERT — "Look Up to Jesus" to be presented by SC's All People's Gospel Choir and the Pioneer Valley Gospel Choir. Contemporary gospel music and spirituals will feature soloists from New York City and Boston. $3-$5 students/$1 children & unemployed. SC Sweeney Concert Hall, 3:30 p.m.

COURTESY STUDENT VALLEY PRODUCTIONS
ACOUSTIC PANIC, performing at the SVP Fall Arts Festival this Saturday.

Trees, not just Seattle scrub

By ROLAND COGGIN
AARON COHEN
Collegian Staff

Sweet Oblivion
The Screaming Trees
Epic Records

The Screaming Trees latest album, Sweet Oblivion may be welcomed with the now common introduction by middle-aged DJs, "another band out of Seattle!" and that's enough to make most people cringe. But the band has put out one of the best pop albums to come out of the city that has given mainstream rock some long needed freshness.

It has been surprising to see the evolution of the Screaming Trees from Sub Pop (definitely not) pretty boys to a radio friendly band that seems more influenced by the Beatles than Black Sabbath. They sounded great on their older albums with the grainy, low-budget production, less structured songs, and occasional unskilled trumpet lines.

The old Seattle sound is still there, but it has been tamed by the production to the point of All-American rock and roll harmlessness. The band can probably put down payments on houses and cars now, but maybe they really are more soft hearted than they look. Either way, it's good to see some more real people on MTV (it's quite safe to say they're not getting their video played because of their good looks).

For any painful experience the Screaming Trees seem to be able to think up two lines that rhyme well enough to shape a whole song. The way that they can sing about depression in the sweetest chorus without gaining much empathy leads to the theme of oblivion; the tone of the album is much less tormented than those of their neighboring bands.

The topics are genuine enough, though to make falling for a poppy song a guilt free experience.(Remember the horror of catching yourself singing Bon Jovi classics?)

The album's first single, "Nearly Lost You," opens with a hook so catchy it would put a dumb look on Paul McCartney's face as he wondered, "Did I write that?" As with most of the album, you'll appreciate this song when you find yourself singing it in the shower after only one listen.

Mark Lannegan's voice is unpolished, yet deep, gentle

TURN TO TREES, PAGE 6

■ 90210

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 2

AS: Wake up, Dan, because we do give "90210" a chance. What do you think these columns are all about? Try to hold back the tears, listen to what we have to say, and next time respond by writing your responses in crayon; a medium through which YOU would express yourself more clearly, and it won't wash away with your tears.

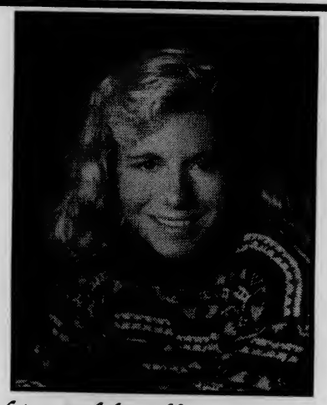
CG: O.K. kids, do the math, it's obvious that while we may not be slaves to the passion that a lot of you feel for the show, we are still watching it. It's a guilty pleasure. Sort of like slowing by a messy car wreck on the highway, you don't really want to look but you have to in order to satiate that sick curiosity within the dark part of your soul.

Thanks for all of your cards and letters! Keep them coming! Art and I want to hear your comments and ideas. Do you agree? Do you disagree? Do you really even care? Send them to: Cutter & Art c/o ARTS Desk UMass Daily Collegian. Stop on down to the offices located in the Campus Center basement and if we like your hodads or your sundresses maybe we'll quote you in our next piece.

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful Newly remodeled Facility • Sunny Greenhouse • Sushi Bar • Beautiful Lounge with Big Screen TV.
Serving Lunch & Dinner 7 days a week • Lunch Specials served daily
"Largest Chinese Restaurant in Hampshire County"
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30AM-10PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS TILL 11PM
WITH COUPON 10% OFF DINING ROOM OR CARRY OUT • DINNER • ONLY
EVERY MONDAY THROUGH THURSDAY IN OUR LOUNGE 4PM-7PM, ENJOY Happy Hour $2.00 Appetizers from our special menu • $1.00 Draft Beer
Delivery Now Available through Delivery Express at 549-0077
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte. 9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte. 9 & University Dr. • 256-8800

AFFORDABLE CONDOMINIUMS AVAILABLE FOR RENT
ONE TWO & THREE BEDROOMS
THE BROOK AT AMHERST GREEN
QUIET CONVENIENT & FLEXIBLE
253-3834

DON'T BE CAUGHT SHORT WHEN YOU GRADUATE!
The Field Experience Program offers you:
✓ invaluable preprofessional work experience
✓ excellent salaries $9 - $14/hr
✓ clarification of career goals
✓ the competitive edge
Positions currently open for the following positions:
Boston Globe -- English, Communications, and Business
Microsoft – CSE, COINS
Arnold Arboretum -- Botany, Forestry, Ld Arch
Fidelity Investments – SOM, CASIAC
Mass Office of Travel and Tourism -- HRTA
Stratus Computer – EE, ME, CSE
We have hundreds of similar positions available. It's up to you to act now!
Planning sessions are offered Monday @ 12:20, Wednesday @ 2:30 and Thursday @1:00 in Curry Hicks. Call 545-6265 for information.
THE MATHER CAREER CENTER
Career Planning and Placement • Cooperative Education • Internships
Fraternity/Sorority Park - on the Orchard Hill bus route. (413)545-2224.
Where Careers Take Off!



Kathie Caldwell – 18 years old
Stroke Victim

Last spring semester Kathie Caldwell, a UMass freshman, suffered a debilitating stroke which left her totally disabled (quadriplegic and unable to speak).

Mortar Board, Alpha Lambda Delta & Golden Key Honor Societies are sponsoring a 3 mile Walk-a-thon to raise funds for the very expensive rehabilitation equipment Kathie needs.

Please Walk for Kathie
November 21, 1992
12 Noon - Start at Baker Residence Hall in Central
Sponsor forms available at: Dean of Students Office/227 Whitmore/UMass • Student Activities Office/Student Unoin Building
Orchard Hill/Central Area Office/B30 Baker • Table on CC Concourse

Patty Larkin delights at the Iron Horse

By BILL ROGERS
Collegian Staff

Patty Larkin
Iron Horse
Nov. 13

How does the saying go? Is it okay to yell fire in a crowded movie house? Or is it movie in a crowded fire house? Whatever it is, you could have yelled fire in the crowded Iron Horse last Friday night because Patty Larkin was sizzlin'.

Larkin took the crowd for all it was worth. For a folk musician from Milwaukee who used to earn her living playing Irish music on the sidewalks of Harvard Square, she impressed the hell out of me. Witnessing the crowd's reaction to every single song she played, it's safe to say that I wasn't the only one who felt her powerful, unavoidable allure.

Larkin's guitar work rang like church bells in the Baptist country of the deep South. Her voice, a remarkably vibrant amalgamation of Shawn Colvin and Janis Joplin, blew holes in the walls with authority.

Larkin's short-but-sweet concert consisted mostly of songs from her most recent album, Tango, but also included occasional covers of songs by fellow folk performers. About half way through the concert, Larkin decided she had to play "Dave's Holiday," a song about fellow folkie John Gorka (he's Dave) that has discovered immense popularity with a broad range of listeners.

In the middle of "Dave's Holiday," Larkin, overcome by the reaction of the crowd, forgot a verse to the song. Did that effect her? No, no, it didn't even phase her, for she's a veteran folk singer. One thing about Larkin is that she really knows how to work a crowd. After, ahem, screwing up, she just cranked out a joke or two about herself and made the crowd laugh and cheer even more.

Needless to say, the crowd was absolutely ecstatic throughout the entire concert. Picture it: Larkin is speaking through an unbelievably powerful system, but can hardly be heard due to the crowd's reaction to her music and jokes. It conjures up images of the Beatles at the Hollywood Bowl. . .downscaled to folk music caliber, of course.

Folk concerts usually force listeners to sit through a monotonously humdrum opening act. Not this one, though. Opening for Larkin were the Billys, a hot folkie duo from Asheville, NC. The Billys, like Larkin, really know how to work the crowd.

Billy Jones and Bill Melanson played songs from their album, The Billys, including "Billy And Bill's House" and "Ooze," to name a few. Discovered by Larkin while down in North Carolina on the Winter's Night Tour, the Billys are genuine crowd pleasers.

Speaking for all those who attended the concert, I say "Job well done." On the other hand, for those who missed out on this chance, please, for your sake, don't make that mistake again.

COURTESY HIGH STREETS RECORDS

Larkin was able to laugh her way through mistakes, rounding out a tremendous performance.

COURTESY HIGH STREETS RECORDS

Patty strummed her way into the hearts of the Iron Horse crowd.

You gotta have Arts. And you gotta have Living. Collegian Arts & Living.

When you've got your Arts and you've got your Living, we've done our job. Collegian Arts & Living. 113 C.C.

AIDS
AIDS is everyone's problem and everyone must educate themselves now! Donate $5 or more and receive our publications. Send name, address, and enclosed donation: $_____
MAIL TO:
THE RUBBERS BROS.,TM
AIDS Education Publications
P.O. Box 431 - UMC, Wilbraham, MA 01095-0431
AIDS Information - Tel. 1-800-745-1057

The University of Massachusetts Department of Theater presents
Women of Trachis
by Sophocles
a new translation by Robert Bagg
November 12-14 and 18-21
8:00 p.m.
Rand Theater
Tickets: 545-2511
Fine Arts Center Box Office

ALLEY OOPS & Miller Lite Live Concert Series present: Lickety Split
Fri., Nov. 20 & Sat., Nov. 21
Alley Oops 525 PLEASANT STREET NORTHAMPTON 584-2491
Get Your Fraternity & Sorority Party Reservations

BIGGEST SALE OF THE YEAR
THIS WEEK ONLY • SAVE UP TO $175
ARTCARVED MAKES IT LAST
UNIVERSITY STORE 10 AM to 4 PM November 16 - 25

Pearl Street Northampton
DANCE CLUB
Wednesday - DANCING WITH DJ JOB
Thursday - WHMP EIGHTEEN & OVER DANCING WITH DJ DENNIS R. WHMP broadcasting live.
Friday - DISCO 2000 with DJ JOB ♦ Free Admission Before 10:00pm ♦ ♦ Free All Night w/College I.D. ♦ ♦ Free pizza courtesy of Foodies ♦
Saturday - THE AREAS BIGGEST & BEST SATURDAY NIGHT DANCE PARTY WITH DJ JOB
Sunday - COMING NOV. 29th-18+ 70's DISCO PARTY WITH DJ DENNIS R.
LIVE MUSIC...
Thurs., Nov. 19-8:30pm/18+/ Record Release Party
BIM SKALA BIM
The Bombastics
Fri., Nov. 20-8:30pm
Free Rock Friday
TEXAS FLOOD
(Stevie Ray Vaughn Tribute)
♦ Free Before 10:00 pm Free All Night with College ID ♦
Sat., Nov. 21-7:00pm
LUCINDA WILLIAMS
Downstairs - 8:30 pm
UMass Night
BARK LIKE A DOG
ONE EYED JAKE
♦ $1 Off Admission w/ UMass ID, additional proper ID required ♦
Tues., Nov. 24-8:00pm/18+ "Jump Around"
HOUSE OF PAIN
Rise Robots Rise
Fri., Nov. 27-8:30pm/Rock 102/ Free Rock Friday
EIGHT TO THE BAR
♦ Free Admission Before 10:00 pm ♦
Sat., Nov. 28-8:30pm Reggae Dance Party
THE EQUALITES
Mon., Nov. 30-8:00pm/18+/ Free Show!
YOTHU YINDI
Thur., Dec. 3-8:30pm/18+/
CHUCKLEHEAD
Duck Duck
Sat., Dec. 5-8:30pm
RIPPOPOTAMUS
Thur., Dec. 10-8:30pm/18+/
THE ZEN TRICKSTERS
Sat., Dec. 12-8:30pm
JOHN CAFFERTY & THE BEAVER BROWN BAND
Tue., Dec. 15-8:00pm/Rock 102/
ARC ANGELS
The Poorboys
Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Northampton Records, For The Record in Amherst; Ticket Pro (800) 828-7080.
10 Pearl Street Northampton • 584-7771

Words and Pictures: Jack the Ripper

By KIP MANLEY
Collegian Staff

From Hell
written by Alan Moore drawn by Eddie Campbell

"From hell."

That's how Jack the Ripper signed off in his anonymous letters to the London police: "From hell, Jack the Ripper." Given the brutality of the murders and the unbelievable grip they hold over the popular imagination even today, it is no wonder that some took him seriously and believed him a demon from hell, or worse.

Worse is definitely what Moore and Campbell would have us believe in their poisonous retelling of the murders committed by Jack the Ripper. When they call it From Hell, they mean us to understand that this is a document from a hell on earth, the teeming bloody hell of 1880s London, the "f—king bedlam," where Jack the Ripper is only the tip of a very ugly iceberg, and the murders are only a fraction of the whole story.

For this is a story, a fiction, make no mistake. Moore and Campbell are not claiming to present the truth about these events at long last. "It doesn't matter who Jack the Ripper was," said Moore in an interview with the Comics Journal. "We're never going to know."

Instead they are spinning a tale about these murders, what caused them, and what effect they had, a tale that they very scrupulously keep from contradicting any of the known facts about the case, no matter how minute.

In this tale, the Ripper is Sir William Withey Gull, Freemason and Physician-in-Ordinary to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and he kills Polly Nichols, Annie Chapman, Liz Stride, and Marie Jeannette Kelly to halt a blackmail plot against the royal family, regarding an illegitimate royal baby.

(Kate Eddowes, regarded as the fifth victim of the Ripper, was murdered after Gull's death; this will no doubt be dealt with in future chapters.)

But as I said earlier, the murders are only a fraction of the story. Though only six chapters have been completed so far, and though only the first murder has occurred, the ripples from this action have already spread to touch such disparate lives as those of Black Elk, Lakota prophet, and John Merrick, the Elephant Man.

From Hell is also notable in that it is the first work of fiction based on the Ripper murders to show us the real people behind the women who were killed. We see their lives and what led them to where they came to rest, and we have seen the effect of the first woman's death on her family and those around her.

Alan Moore has come to be known as "the best writer in comics," and here he out-does himself. The story is told entirely through dialogue, ranging from the Cockney of the street walkers to the elegantly articulate ravings of Gull, always ringing true, never skipping a beat. The story also ranges widely, from the police blotters of the crime itself to Masonic myth to the architecture and history of London, and yet it never gets bogged down in this wealth of detail.

And Eddie Campbell more than rises to the challenge. His urgently sketchy artwork drops us into the teeming masses of London. We see the people as they really were, see the buildings and the carriages, the cobbles and the sewers, the wealth and the poverty. Yet this is no static attempt at photorealism — the art remains loose and fluid, full of nervous urban energy.

It is in the tour-de-force fourth chapter, "What Doth the Lord Require of Thee?" that they achieve a synthesis wondrous to behold. Gull lays out the methods of his madness to his henchman, Netley, on a tour through London, and as the words and pictures together become terrifying poetry, the chilling thesis behind From Hell becomes clear: "You see? Your destiny's inscribed upon the streets wherein you grew: upon the horse you ride each day, you cannot change your mind! Our story's written, Netley: inked in blood long dry... engraved in stone."

The world is such and the times were such that it doesn't matter who Jack the Ripper was. If not Gull, then someone else; if not those five, then other victims. It was bound to happen.

I'll leave you with Alan Moore's dedication:

"This book is dedicated to Polly Nichols, Annie Chapman, Liz Stride, Kate Eddowes, and Marie Jeannette Kelly.

"You and your demise: of these alone are we certain. Goodnight, ladies."

From Hell will run to 16 chapters and is serialized in Taboo, a horror anthology available from Tundra. It is also being collected in its own series, also available from Tundra.

Comic drawn by Eddie Campbell / written by Alan Moore

Scenes FROM HELL

■ Trees

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 4

and surprisingly musical. It is easy to picture him hacking frantically before each take, and the rest of the band sighing with relief when he finds his voice again.

Unfortunately, little musicianship is to be found beyond what it takes to carry Lannegan's lyrics; almost every song is dominated by a chorus and this becomes repetitive.

The Screaming Trees won't change the world, probably not even rock and roll, but they can have the pleasure of knowing that somewhere someone is whistling one of their songs. And that's enough for most musicians.

The Area's BEST CHINESE FOOD & SUSHI BAR
Enjoy the finest, freshest sushi, sashimi, tempura teriyaki and more at Panda East's new Sushi Bar. Also enjoy the finest Chinese Cuisine — Fresh, local specialties, low-priced luncheon specials and banquet facilties for your group or large party.
PANDA EAST
103 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
256-8923 • 256-8924

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
New! American Beer Exciting!
$7.29 case cans
(Quantity Discounts Available)
S.S. Pierce Vodka $8.99 1.75 L
BUSCH bar botts. $9.99 case
J. Roget Champagne $2.49 750ml $26.00 case (12 botts.)
SAM ADAMS Lager $16.99 case
Catamount Amber/Porter/Gold $8.99 12pk/botts.
Miller "Lite" cans $12.49 case
Freixenet Cordon Negro $5.99 750ml
Harpoon Octoberfest $4.99 6/pk botts
Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits
Many More In-Store Specials
All Beers plus Deposit (especially on wines) Delivery Available

WOW
STUDENT FITNESS MEMBERSHIPS!!!!!
One Easy Payment! No Gimmicks!
$139.00 *SPECIAL RATE! September to May
MEMBERSHIP INCLUDES*:
• Tennis • Racquetball • Massage Therapy
• Nautilis • Aerobics(includes step)
• Free Weights • Fitness testing • Sauna
• Basketball • Cardiovascular (Stairmaster®, LifeCycles®)
*Not all clubs feature all amenities Nominal Fee
Comparable Value $400 if paid monthly! You save nearly 50% by paying for your membership on the day you join! Hurry! Act right now & Save!
ATHLETIC CLUBS of AMERICA
659 Amherst Street
SUNDERLAND: (413) 549-3638
(Formerly Winners Athletic Club)

Improv actors stage exciting, free show

By SHAWN MCDONNELL
Collegian Staff

Once upon a time it was an acting exercise, intended to serve as a creative outlet, and assist in the development of live performance skills. But in recent years, the "improv" has become increasingly popular as entertainment for its own sake.

Improvisational theatre is the art of the unexpected — part comedy, part acting, with a great deal of chance thrown in for measure. In it, performers are called upon to create characters, places, or conflicts (even complex mysteries or fairie tales) based only on slight suggestions from their audience. It is a newly popular art form, and one which is constantly growing in appeal. Stage luminaries such as Jonathan Pryce or Peter Cook match wits on the popular cable improv show Whose Line Is It Anyway, and campuses across America are sprouting their own bands of instant-entertainers at an ever-increasing rate.

Never to be outdone, UMass has produced the players of Mission Improvable, a 10-person comedy/acting troupe who have been wowing local audiences with their spontaneous theatrics. An offshoot of Student Valley Productions, the group was formed several semesters ago as an alternative to "usual" theatre. Even among improv troupes, there is nothing "usual" about Mission Improvable.

Of course, many of the most popular, classic improv games are present in their show. "Freeze and Justify" places actors in a series of unlikely physical positions, and forces them to create characters and action which complement their pose; "Mad Libs" allows the audience to place words in the actors' mouths. But much of Mission's comedy revolves around less familiar creations.

In "Conduct a Gripe," the audience presents a group of actors with things to complain about. Their whining and yelling is then conducted like a piece of music, with often hilarious results. In "The Liars Club" contestants are pitted against one another to come up with the most outrageous lies concerning the history of mundane objects (supplied by the audience). There is an even a mock-up of dubbed films, in which the performers must act out according to the lines being placed in their mouths.

"A lot of these games we've made up ourselves," says troupe leader Samantha Smith. Smith is quick to note that although all performers know the game rules very well, anything can happen on stage.

"Rehearsal really just consists of getting a feel for what works on stage."

Mission Improvable has performed at numerous events, but their upcoming show for the Student Valley Productions Fall Arts Festival is only be the second time they have gotten an entire evening to themselves.

"We'll be trying out a lot of new games," says Smith, "and having a lot of fun."

Anyone wanting to join the fun can go to Hampden Theatre, Southwest, where Mission Improvable will be performing Friday night. Showtime is 8:00 PM, and the admission is free.

Legends and punks captured in docu-videos

By KRISTIN TRANFAGLIA
Collegian Correspondent

"Cookool Cookoo!" was all that I could hear while watching Gong Maison, the music video recently released in the United States by Music Video Distributors (MVD). I rarely saw what these fellows looked like, because of all the incessant shapes and colors displayed on my screen while the band was "singing."

The lead singer, Daevid Allen, wore a Peter Pan type outfit and "sang" in a language I couldn't understand, or even hear for that matter. There was just a lot of Instrument playing and graphic showings, which weren't that awe inspiring, and it didn't take my mind off of what I was listening to, which is what I was hoping it would do.

The graphics were shown in dull colors, such as pink or blue. The designs were the same every time they came onto the screen. If that wasn't bad enough, their lighting was just one big light, although there were times when they splurged and brought in a couple of different colored lights. That was impressive.

There isn't much to say about the quality of the film. It impressed me that it was an amateur job. This 80 minute video is the first ever available from Gong, who released 42 legendary albums, according to MVD. The film was shot live at the Fridge in London, May 5, 1991.

The video brought a bit of laughter when a man that looked like a sad excuse for Sam Kinison started playing the violin like a mad man. He played well, but I had to keep checking to see if his pants were on fire. He was moving so fast around the stage it seemed he was in pain.

The lead singer would look at a member of the group, put his mouth to the microphone and yell something like, "RAGGH!" He would do it continuously throughout the video.

I looked away from the screen for the briefest of seconds and my eyes popped out when I looked back and he had returned with an umbrella top on his head. Now, that's where I draw the line. I had to "Gong" it.

"She was purple and now she's a turtle," are the stimulating lyrics sung by one of the many women bands in the video, Girls Bite Back. This 45 minute film, the complete original cinematic version, was shot in 16 mm live in the autumn of 1980. It is one of only a few documentaries of the punk era, featuring live recordings and interviews by "major" female musical artists of the period, including the first three music videos available in the USA by Nina Hagen, according to MVD.

The interviews of the bands consisted of talk about prejudice against women in rock. Now, I'm a woman and I'm not stereotyping them at all. I just don't like them. The bands don't make sense, send a message, or show themselves physically because they're masquerading behind tons of Halloween make-up and weird costumes. The lead singer of one of the bands, I don't know her name, (because this documentary never showed me what the the groups names were) wore so much makeup, that even when she sweat it wouldn't come off. What the women were wearing contrasted sharply with their tough image. All the women bands were crying prejudice, but they dressed as men while hiding behind loads of makeup. I kept wondering if they wanted to make a stand as women, why they were hiding behind that biker-type facade?

I don't think that listening to these bands speak was much more interesting than hearing them sing. Even if I wanted to give a certain band credit, I couldn't because their names were never shown in conjunction with their appearance. However, I will list the bands as shown on the video cassette box: Siouxsie and the Banshees, Girlschool, The Slits and Nina Hagen.

I don't feel that they did not become popular in the main stream because they're women, because there are many famous female groups. It just might mean that the bands stink and they're blaming it on society.

To sum up, there was a bunch of women and men grunting and groaning while gyrating across the stage. Nevertheless, it was contagious, because I too was grunting, groaning and gyrating in pain as I shut the videos off and went to bed.

These videos are available from Video Music, Inc., P.O. Box 1128, Norristown, PA, 19404.

The Undergraduate Student Senate is sponsoring a General Meeting for

ALL GRADUATE STUDENTS

on campus racism and campus solutions

Thursday, November 19,7 pm
Cape Cod Lounge

POSTPONED: please go instead to the campus wide meeting at the Hampden Student Center

Some strategies already in progress:

- working with the Center for Teaching to develop training sessions on racial awareness for all TAs/TOs.
- working with Deans and Grad School to develop new approaches to language barriers for graduate students and faculty
- petitioning administration to create civility class for all undergraduates

TOP TEN COLLEGE ALBUM PLAYLIST

Compiled by DOMINIC BOYD-MAUNJELL

1. Sugar/Copper Blue (Rykodisc)
2. Mudhoney/Piece of Cake (Reprise)
3. R.E.M./Automatic for the People (Warner Bros.)
4. Soul Asylum/Grave Dancers Union (Columbia)
5. Screaming Trees/Sweet Oblivion (Epic)
6. Nine Inch Nails/Broken (Interscope-Atlantic)
7. Suzanne Vega/99.9 F* (A + M)
8. 10,000 Maniacs/Our Time in Eden (Elektra)
9. Peter Gabriel/Us (Geffen)
10. Eugenius/Oomalama (Atlantic)

Shaw Motor Car Rental's
• Late Model Dependable Transportation
• Inexpensive Rates- Daily - Weekly - Monthly
• Mastercard, Visa, American Express
• Must Be 21 Years of Age To Rent
CALL 253-5040
at
312 College Street, Amherst, MA 01004

A masterful and richly emotional 'X'

By JON LUPO
Collegian Staff

Simply put, if you do see just one movie this year, make it Malcolm X. Sure it's a tired and somewhat empty designation, yet if there is a film that could possibly resurrect it, Spike Lee's absorbing masterpiece, Malcolm X, is it.

There has been an enormous amount of hype and controversy surrounding Lee's latest venture, yet the film transcends its own press — this is neither preachy rage nor melodramatic idealization, but rather a rich exploration of a complex life.

Malcolm X achieves what few cinematic biographies even aspire to: it brings its subjects intensely to life, faults and all and ultimately paints a vivid portrait of the man behind the myth.

Malcolm X is a masterful, probing and richly emotional movie experience. From Lee's amazing opening sequence of an American flag burning down to an "X," interspersed with footage of the Rodney King beating, to the ingenious coda with a exultant appearance by Nelson Mandela and an unforgettable closing shot, Malcolm X is a magnificent epic.

It serves textured drama without being cumbersome, at times vividly entertaining, at others solemn and introspective. Anchored by a brilliant performance by Denzel Washington, Malcolm X is both expertly shot and wonderfully acted — it is near-perfect filmmaking.

One of Malcolm X's purest strengths (and there are many) is it's almost poetic rhythm and structure. The film is arranged into four sections, shifting mood and style as each major change in Malcolm's life propels his spiritual and mental evolution.

It displays Malcolm's early life as a larger-than-life hustler on the streets of Boston and Harlem and his redemption in prison through the Islamic faith. It follows his rise to demagogue status and eventual disavowal of his separatist ideals, leading up to his assassination in 1965 at the age of 40.

After the opening sequence, the film begins as an electrifying exercise in pure exuberance. The artful visuals burst with vivid colors, exploding with visceral thrill.

Washington's Malcolm is first a heady street hustler, drifting with his pal Shorty (Lee). Here Malcolm interacts with a seasoned gangster West Indian Archie (Delroy Lindo) and his lovesick white lover (Kate Vernon) with equal ferocity.

It's here where Lee indulges in his most stylish camera moves. He and cinematographer Ernest Dickinson (he also directed this spring's Juice) shoot with loopy zeal, including an extended dancehall sequence that seems to jangle with uncontrollable vivacity.

At first, this seems almost excessive — yet another foray into style over substance. However, it's all part of an intricate foundation Lee builds in order to sort out the man from the misconceptions.

This all becomes clearer as the film progresses. After a botched burglary, Malcolm is sent to prison. When he is later banished to solitary, an ingenious show of light and dark that goes deeper than the staging begins Malcolm's redemption, helped by a fellow prisoner named Baines (Albert Hall).

In another very clever sequence, Malcolm gets his first lesson in imbedded black oppression as he thumbs through a dictionary, comparing the definitions of black and white.

Malcolm immerses himself in the sphere of the Islam religion and finds an enigmatic father figure in the group's leader Elijah Muhammed (Al Freeman, Jr.).

Now the former hustler becomes explosive orator, his condemnations of Whites, Black leaders and the sinful lifestyle turning into a powder-keg of rage. Washington reaches the apex of his performance here, as the striking resemblance between the performer and the his subject becomes engrossingly blurred — it's easy to forget it's a film.

It is also here where Malcolm marries Betty Shabazz (Angela Bassett). Her role is underwritten, but this seems precisely what Lee wants; showing that Malcolm's public firestorms virtually eclipsed his private life.

Malcolm X then once again shifts its direction. A journey to Mecca becomes an almost haunting exorcism as Malcolm re-evaluates his life. Amidst the pyramids of Egypt and the glory of Mecca, Lee carefully and cautiously captures Malcolm's ever-evolving consciousness.

